

3 1761 11895352 0

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2024 with funding from University of Toronto

<https://archive.org/details/31761118953520>

CA2 04
XI
D23

7 1991

57 1991

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly of Ontario

First Session, 35th Parliament

Official Report of Debates (Hansard)

Tuesday 24 September 1991

Speaker
Honourable David Warner

Clerk
Claude L. DesRosiers

Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

Première session, 35^e législature

Journal des débats (Hansard)

Le mardi 24 septembre 1991

Président
L'honorable David Warner

Greffier
Claude L. DesRosiers

Table of Contents

Table of Contents for proceedings reported in this issue appears at the back, together with an alphabetical list of members of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at (416) 325-7400.

Numbering of Hansard

Effective with the opening of the Second Session of the 35th Parliament, Hansard issues and pages will once again be numbered on a sessional basis. Hansard numbering therefore will become consistent with Orders and Notices and Votes and Proceedings, and with other parliamentary publications throughout Canada.

For the last two years Hansard has been numbered according to the calendar year. Under this system, the numbering of issues and pages was restarted with the first issue in the calendar year, regardless of session or Parliament.

Under the new system, the sequence of numbering started in January 1991 will end with the final House and committee sittings of the present First Session. A new sequence will begin on the opening day of the Second Session, and each succeeding session, which will be issue 1 and begin with page 1. Committee reports likewise will be numbered from the first sitting of each committee in a parliamentary session.

Subscriptions

Subscription information may be obtained from: Sessional Subscription Service, Publications Ontario, Ministry of Government Services, 5th Floor, 880 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 1N8. Phone (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 or toll-free 1 (800) 668-9938.

Table des matières

La table des matières des séances rapportées dans ce numéro se trouve à l'arrière de ce fascicule, ainsi qu'une liste alphabétique de députés de l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario.

Il existe un index cumulatif des numéros précédents. Les renseignements qu'il contient sont à votre disposition par téléphone auprès des employés de l'index du Journal des débats au (416) 325-7400.

Numérotation du Journal des débats

A partir du début de la deuxième session de la 35^e législature, les pages et les numéros du Journal des débats seront de nouveau numérotés par session. La numérotation du Journal des débats correspondra donc à celle de Feuilleton et Avis et de Procès-verbaux, ainsi que celle des autres publications parlementaires au Canada.

Depuis deux ans, le Journal des débats était numéroté par année civile. Avec ce système, la numérotation des numéros et des pages recommençait au premier numéro de l'année civile, quelle que soit la session ou la législature.

Avec le nouveau système, la numérotation commencée en janvier 1991 s'arrêtera à la dernière séance de la Chambre et des comités de l'actuelle première session. Une nouvelle série commencera le jour de l'ouverture de la deuxième session et des sessions suivantes : numéro 1, page 1. Les rapports des comités seront également numérotés à partir de la première séance de chaque comité pour une session parlementaire donnée.

Abonnements

Pour les abonnements, veuillez prendre contact avec le Service d'abonnement parlementaire, Publications Ontario, ministère des Services gouvernementaux, 5^e étage, 880, rue Bay, Toronto (Ontario) M7A 1N8. Par téléphone : (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 ou, sans frais : 1 (800) 668-9938.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Tuesday 24 September 1991

The House met at 1332.

Prayers.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

MEALS ON WHEELS WEEK

Mr Miclash: The week of September 22 to September 28 is Meals on Wheels Week across Ontario. In the many communities across the Kenora riding, Meals on Wheels programs help to improve the quality of life for senior citizens and persons with special needs. It allows them to stay in their homes but still receive the care they need to enjoy a healthy lifestyle.

But Meals on Wheels is more than the delivery of meals. It is the visit of a friendly face for many who are unable to venture outside their homes or who do not experience the full enjoyment of town life because they live in the outlying areas of northwestern Ontario.

This Friday I look forward to helping the many Meals on Wheels volunteers of the Dryden Home Support Association who generously give of their time to ensure that seniors and people with special needs receive good lunches and warm dinners on a daily basis.

I would like all members of this House to recognize the most valuable contribution which the Meals on Wheels program and its many volunteers bring to the improvement of community life for our seniors and persons with special needs across the province.

NORTH YORK WOMEN'S CENTRE

Mr Harnick: Yesterday was National Women's Centres Day. I would like to recognize the dedicated staff and volunteers at North York Women's Centre. Women's centres provide a valuable service to our communities. The North York Women's Centre provides essential information, counselling, resources and support services to the women of North York. Too often we overlook the reality that women have distinct needs in society that can only be met through specialized centres such as the North York Women's Centre.

The theme of this year's campaign is Keep the Doors Open for Women. The theme is based upon the chronic funding problem faced by women's centres across the country. This lack of funding threatens the centre's ability to provide the essential services women so desperately need.

In highlighting the undisputed need for women's centres I would like to cite some statistics. The Canadian Centre for Justice statistics stated that in 1989, 119 women were killed within the context of a domestic relationship. One out of 10 women is battered. Violence against women is a terrifying symptom of problems within our society. We must all co-ordinate our efforts to combat this social evil, yet this is only one role of the North York Women's Centre. I trust the government will live up to its election promises of support for women's issues and for the North York Women's Centre.

EVENTS IN DURHAM-YORK

Mr O'Connor: It is with great pleasure and pride that I extend my congratulations to the town of Whitchurch-Stouffville in recognition of its honourable distinction as Music Town, Ontario.

The history of Whitchurch-Stouffville has long been intertwined with music. Music Mania is just one example of the town's affinity for music. Although the music show is termed amateur, it is only amateur in the traditional sense of the word: the performers are not paid; they do it for love. In all other ways the show is of a very high professional calibre.

There are many talented singers and musicians in Whitchurch-Stouffville, from seniors down into the schools. They are all contributing to the present and future in full harmony.

Uxbridge is another fine community filled with the spirit of the arts. This past weekend, the occasion of the fourth annual Uxbridge Celebration of the Arts, was a weekend filled with books, photography, music, film and the works of resident artists. This festival is indeed a wonderful celebration of the arts by the people of the Uxbridge area.

I would like to finish up with a few words about a truly amazing woman from my riding, Heather McAdam. She is one of 12 people chosen by the Ministry of Citizenship for its community action award. There were 140 applications for this award right across the province. It is directed towards people with disabilities who are involved in their communities. Our whole community shares this sense of pride we have that the ministry has recognized Mrs McAdam's efforts and contributions.

WILDLIFE PROTECTION

Mr Brown: I stand in the House to salute the World Wildlife Fund and draw attention to the Endangered Spaces Action Agenda which it has recently released.

The release begins with the statement, "Ontario's failure to protect any significant tracts of wilderness during the past year is jeopardizing the future of the province's wildlife and wild places." In the last year there has been no increase in the area of land receiving protected status.

Since the Premier endorsed the endangered spaces program in August 1990, it would not be unreasonable to expect an immediate statement from the Minister of Natural Resources on whether he intends to respond to the list of action items the WWF says are needed by May 1, 1992: renew funding for the Carolinian Canada program; initiate protection of the Madawaska Highlands; obtain final cabinet approval for the wetlands policy; identify candidate sites to represent at least five site districts; defer logging of identified old-growth forest until protection targets in the old-growth conservation strategy are met.

1340

SCOTT ROSSITER

Mr Runciman: Members will know that last Thursday Ingersoll Police Constable Scott Rossiter was shot and killed in the line of duty.

Constable Rossiter's funeral is this afternoon in his home town of St Thomas, and on behalf of my party and, I am sure, all members of the Legislature, I wish to express our sincere condolences to his wife, Penny, and their two children, Joshua and Erin, other members of his family, and friends and colleagues in the Ingersoll Police Service.

Policing is a dangerous, high-risk occupation at the best of times, but in an environment where crime is escalating at a rapid rate, especially violent crime, Ontario's policemen and women are facing even greater risks and pressures on a daily basis.

This is a sad occasion, but I believe it is important, especially in this House and at this time, that we recognize the challenges facing our police officers in today's Ontario society, and also recognize that the vast majority of men and women in blue are dedicated, honest, conscientious and committed to their communities.

Scott Rossiter, who lost his life in the line of duty, was that kind of police officer.

LITERACY

Mr Dadamo: As the member of the Ontario Legislature representing the riding of Windsor-Sandwich, I am pleased to announce to the members of this House that the Ministry of Education has granted $99,660 to the Windsor-Essex County Literacy Steering Committee for a program to assist laid-off workers to upgrade their skills.

The funding is part of $4.8 million to help workers who need to improve communications, reading, writing, science and basic computer skills. As well, the funding will also allow the Windsor-Essex County Literacy Steering Committee to assess the literacy and basic skills needs of laid-off workers in the Windsor-Essex region and also to help co-ordinate the delivery of the most appropriate training to them.

In closing, literacy and basic skills training are often the first step for people preparing for new jobs or retraining, and it is the goal of this government to ensure that programs of this nature are available to all those who need them.

My congratulations to Pam Pons, who is the executive director of the Unemployed Help Centre, along with her staff, for continuing to assist the unemployed in the Windsor area.

LAND USE PLANNING

Mr Bradley: The NDP has always said that it wants to protect agricultural land from development. In Niagara this is an important issue, as fruit farmers experiencing financial difficulty are offered very high prices to sell their farms to developers.

In February 1991 the Minister of Agriculture and Food announced a task force to look at land use issues in the Niagara region. The task force included representatives of the Niagara agricultural community, a special adviser to the minister and ministry staff. The minister said: "I want to emphasize that this task force has responsibility to bring me action plans. It is not just another study." The task force report was released later in the spring and included the recommendation of establishing conservation easements to protect agricultural land by providing financial support to local farmers in return for a legal agreement not to develop the land.

The government has not yet acted on the recommendations of the task force. Area farmers are angry the task force has turned out to be just another study. In protest, a number of Niagara farmers have put large signs on their farms, advertising land for sale to developers. The regional government is considering relaxing severance restrictions to allow more farmers to sell land for development.

The government must take immediate action to save the valuable farm lands of the Niagara Peninsula. There are rumours that the minister may soon announce a tripartite committee of farmers, municipal representatives and provincial representatives to study the conservation easements proposal again.

Farmers always say that they would rather farm than be forced to sell out to developers. So far this government is forcing farmers to sell out to those same developers.

LIQUOR STORES

Mr J. Wilson: Residents in Beeton have been trying for several years to obtain an LCBO outlet in their village. Local merchants are suffering because there is a tremendous outflow of shoppers who are forced to purchase their alcoholic beverages out of town.

In response to my interventions, a market survey was commissioned by the LCBO, with the results suggesting that a regular LCBO outlet would not be profitable in Beeton. While I find the results of this survey contentious, to say the least, it is my understanding that Beeton would qualify for an LCBO agency store.

The problem is that this government is intoxicated with its unholy alliance with unions. The LCBO cannot offer Beeton an agency store because the former NDP Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations, who is sitting across the House from me today, placed a freeze on the LCBO's plans to expand its agency stores.

This freeze has been implemented solely because agency stores do not employ unionized workers though regular LCBO outlets do. This government has become drunk on its own ideology. There are several communities across Ontario which would like easier access to LCBO products, and unfortunately these communities do not qualify for a regular LCBO outlet and the minister has put a freeze on agency stores.

I would urge this government to stop playing politics with this issue and begin to govern with the interest of all Ontarians in mind.

OKTOBERFEST

Mr Cooper: I would like to extend to all members an invitation to join the twin cities of Kitchener-Waterloo in their celebration of Oktoberfest, the second-largest Bavarian festival in the world.

From a modest beginning in 1969, K-W Oktoberfest has grown to become one of the most successful events in Canada, thanks mainly to the great German heritage of the twin cities kept alive by Kitchener-Waterloo's German Canadian social clubs—Schwabens, Alpine, Transylvania, Concordia and Hubertushaus.

Kitchener-Waterloo Oktoberfest is known throughout the country for its unique spirit of gemütlichkeit, a German word that means everything from good times to warm hospitality. This year in excess of 600,000 happy revellers are expected to visit the area's festhallen and cultural and general events. Last year Premier Bob Rae was a proud participant at the opening ceremonies and the tapping of the keg.

Revellers can sing and dance to the brassy strains of German oompah bands and be entertained by traditional dance groups at any one of the 22 fest halls set up around the twin cities. Patrons can also sample some of the best Bavarian fare this side of the Atlantic—favourites like wiener schnitzel, ribs, roast pig tails and, of course, Oktoberfest sausage and sauerkraut.

Visitors to Oktoberfest will want to visit the famed Kitchener farmers' market and the thriving Waterloo farmers' market. Two special landmarks at speakers' corner in downtown Kitchener are also a must: the 65-foot festival maypole and the glockenspiel, an animated carillon featuring Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. In uptown Waterloo the Oktoberfest heritage timeteller, a charming bandshell with a lively band of beer steins moving in time to an Oktoberfest polka, keeps visitors in a festive spirit. Willkommen.

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY

ONTARIO HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

Hon Ms Ziembra: This government is committed to achieving equity and justice. As part of that commitment it is our responsibility to ensure that the systems and the institutions established for this purpose work.

Ontario was the first province to establish a Human Rights Code, and we must continue to lead the country in delivering protection against discrimination. To this end I am pleased to announce a comprehensive plan of action to address the difficulties which have plagued the Ontario Human Rights Commission. These issues range from the backlog and an inadequate case management system to staff morale. These concerns have triggered a crisis of confidence among the people it was set up to serve.

These are issues which have existed for some time. Past governments have ignored the reports of consultants, pleas of complainants and equity-seeking groups, as well as the advice of the staff of the OHRC. These are also problems which the Ombudsman, Roberta Jamieson, has brought to the public's attention. She made recommendations to address these difficulties.

The chief commissioner and I have spent a great deal of time in serious deliberations on the complexities of the issues and problems facing the commission. We have met many interested groups across the province and with their valuable input, along with the recommendations of the Ombudsman, we have developed a strategy that has vision, specific goals and definite timetables.

The principles of the strategies are: It will enhance the social justice agenda of the government, it will be financially responsible, it will be politically accountable, and most important, it will ensure that the fundamental human rights of all citizens of Ontario are effectively protected.

Moreover, the focus of the strategy is to clear the backlog to address the frustration and anxiety of complainants over the prolonged delay, to strengthen the commission and ensure the backlog does not recur, and to give a firm commitment to a review of the Human Rights Code.

Although there have been some results from the considerable efforts made by the commission to deal with the backlog, we feel that the reduction in the case load has not been fast enough. Therefore we are assigning a 33-person staff of experienced investigators and conciliators from the public service.

1350

This team will be in place by December 1991 and will have one year to complete all unassigned cases over six months old. Priorities will be set so that the most urgent cases get immediate attention. I would like to emphasize that this team will deal specifically with the backlog, thus allowing the staff of the commission to concentrate more fully on the new complaints and assigned cases.

At the same time we are instituting some administrative changes which will improve the health and performance of the commission. A closing time frame for all new cases will be established, as well as an improved case review process that will facilitate fast-tracking of cases. A review will be initiated which will assess management planning functions and set up accountability systems. A more comprehensive manager and staff training program, especially as it relates to customer service, will be developed. We will monitor the progress made within the commission and require monthly reports to ensure accountability.

Implementing this special project will require a one-time funding of $6.4 million over three years: $2.3 million this year, $3.6 million next year, and $500,000 in 1993.

It is very important that this process work, and that is why we have built in the requirement of strict supervision and monitoring. This is a one-time specific infusion of funds aimed at ensuring that the equilibrium of the OHRC is restored.

There will be a special project director to oversee the administrative changes, implement the improved systems and monitor progress. The mandate of the project director will be to ensure that the goals are met within budget and on time. The project director will provide regular reports to me on the status of this project.

In addition we are also naming human rights commissioner Fran Endicott as commission vice-chair. Her valuable experience will assist the commission in resolving the backlog problem and strengthening the agency.

There will be a permanent part-time chief of panel of the board of inquiry. That office will have administrative support and will provide training to panelists. This will result in a more efficient process. I am pleased at this time to announce that I have appointed Ms Maryka Omatsu, a lawyer with extensive experience in human rights issues, to be the first chief of the panel for the board of inquiry.

Recruitment of new panelists will place more emphasis on regional representation and reflect our diverse communities. As well, members will have a commitment to and a knowledge of human rights issues.

The Human Rights Code was last amended in 1981. Our society continues to evolve and the code must reflect current needs of the people of Ontario. Therefore the code must ensure that there will be a system where people's complaints will be dealt with in a fair and an expeditious manner.

Many have voiced clearly the need for a comprehensive review. I share that view. I have initiated a serious dialogue with community representatives in exploring models of participation. I will continue to do so in order to determine what will be the most effective means for community input. I will report back to the Legislature on the details and timing of a code review.

What I have outlined here is the spirit of the continuing commitment of this government to equity and social justice.

The Ontario Human Rights Commission is one of our most important institutions, and it must receive our full support. This government has introduced an antiracism strategy, has introduced the Advocacy Act, and will soon introduce mandatory employment equity legislation. We are confident that this comprehensive strategy will strengthen the protection of human rights in Ontario, and we are determined to provide the leadership to make it work.

HEALTH CARE

Hon Ms Lankin: I am taking this, the earliest possible opportunity, to share with you, Mr Speaker, the Premier, and the members of this House some details of last week's conference of the federal, provincial and territorial ministers that was held in Winnipeg. Much was accomplished at that conference, and I was very encouraged by the commitment and co-operation displayed by all the delegates attending.

As a group the federal, provincial and territorial health ministers have committed to work together to manage Canada's health care system to its fullest potential so that it stands unique in the world at providing the best possible care and an equal standard of care for all our citizens.

To do that we pledged as health ministers to renew our health partnership across the nation. We mean to protect and maintain what we already have and to work toward sustaining and building an even better health system for the future. There is no question that the principles of medicare enshrined in our Canada Health Act must be maintained nationally and provincially, but that cannot be done overnight by a simple act of willpower. However, we do believe that we can begin to address certain aspects now, together. We have identified three fundamental considerations for renewal: preservation of the principles in the Canada Health Act, assurances of adequate funding, and effective management of the system.

The Canada Health Act articulates five fundamental principles of the Canadian health care system: universality, accessibility, comprehensiveness, portability and public administration. The federal government and the provinces and territories are committed to the preservation of these principles. With these principles in mind, dialogue including federal, provincial and territorial ministers of health and finance will be enhanced in order to ensure the future funding of our health care system, to ensure its sustainability in both the health and fiscal context and to provide the best and most viable health care system for all Canadians.

Provision of quality health care to Canadians depends on effective management of the health care system. Because the delivery of health care is a provincial and territorial responsibility, the provinces and territories are committed to provide effective management of the system. This morning I tabled with the office of the Clerk three communiqués that we issued at the conference. I also tabled the national nursing symposium report and a report called Toward Integrated Medical Resource Policies for Canada, informally known as the Barer-Stoddart report.

The national nursing symposium report arises from a national nursing conference held last November. The report was sponsored by the provincial health ministries and is a comprehensive document looking into a number of nursing issues. It offers health ministries, employers, unions, nursing organizations and nurses recommendations on such items as recruiting, education and leadership.

The Barer-Stoddart report, commissioned by the federal, provincial and territorial deputy ministers of health, is a major planning document for health human resources. It is being given wide distribution in a consultation exercise across Canada. Governments, medical schools, hospitals and other health service stakeholders have been invited to comment.

Let me also share, from a second communiqué, some of the steps the provincial and territorial health ministers believe to be essential to strengthen our health partnership. As recommended in the 1987 Future Directions for Health Care Services report, we believe the development of national health goals and objectives should be continued. Several jurisdictions have begun such development, and consensus on national goals is the next necessary step. A national initiative would assist in creating an overall vision and framework. Such a process is required in order to allow for a national readjustment of priorities and reallocation of resources, and it would provide opportunities for Canadians to participate and set important priorities.

The provincial and territorial ministers recommend a national strategy to support research into innovative and cost-effective ways of delivering high-quality health care services across Canada. This strategy would provide for demonstration projects on alternative delivery systems so that an evaluation could be made of their service and the value and the relative impact on costs.

As well, it would support a national health goals strategy, a total quality management strategy and studies to address cost drivers. We believe that quality assurance and total quality management strategies should be expedited throughout the overall health care system. Introduction of these techniques is essential to find out if health care services across the country are appropriate and effective.

In the area of supply and distribution of health care human resources, the health ministers believe that a co-ordinated federal, provincial and territorial effort must be undertaken.

We intend to follow up on the recommendations of both the National Nursing Symposium and the Barer-Stoddart report.

Finally the ministers believe there is a central role for the federal government in assessing new medical technologies. As well, we think efficiencies and cost-effectiveness could result from new strategies in centralized procurement of medical equipment, supplies and pharmaceuticals.

1400

One of the highlights of the conference was that for the first time ever, federal, provincial and territorial health ministers were able to sit at the table with the leaders of four aboriginal organizations and hear their concerns.

I know that aboriginal health issues are, and have been for some time, a particular concern for the Premier and for this Legislature. I am sure all the members will be pleased to know that the health ministers intend to continue to consult on an ongoing basis with these leaders and that provincially I intend to carry on an active dialogue with Ontario's aboriginal groups.

In their presentations the aboriginal leaders pointed out that their understanding of health and determinants of health has always accorded with what we are just beginning to accept from reports of health councils and other organizations. I quote from the presentation on behalf of the Inuit Tapirisat Association: "Health care is tightly bound to issues of social and economic wellbeing. To consider health care as separate from the desperate need for decent housing, adequate sewage treatment, safe drinking water and meaningful employment is simply insufficient."

The presentation went on to highlight the need to establish truly equal partnerships that facilitate the Inuit people in taking control of their own health care. I quote further from the report:

"The transfer of authority over health care to Inuit is only the essential first step to achieving the larger goal of self-care. The medicalization of health care, as well-intentioned as it may be, has slowly eroded our confidence in our own ability to know what 'wellness' is.

"Self-determination in health care means more than a change of managers; it means a redefinition of 'health'—an Inuit definition."

These sentiments, as expressed by our aboriginal peoples, are at the heart of the reforms that we are striving to achieve through our national system. Health care is not health; it is but one of several things that determine our health and wellbeing, but based as it is on five principles of medicare—universality, portability, accessibility, comprehensiveness and public administration—our national system of care is well worth preserving.

On behalf of this government and the people of Ontario, I am committed to the renewal process we began last week in Winnipeg.

RESPONSES

ONTARIO HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

Mr Curling: I am very happy to address and comment on the statement the minister made here this afternoon. It seems to me the minister has come to her senses and knows there does exist a problem at the Ontario Human Rights Commission. I have raised the point here on many days in this House and she has ignored, as a matter of fact denied, that there is such a problem that exists here.

However, there is still some neglect. In her report the minister neglects to mention the poor morale within the commission and the racial discrimination that happens within the commission in many of the offices I visited. I wonder whether she will address that sooner or later.

The minister also denied the backlog that existed. I recall at one stage she said to us that throwing money at these issues would not resolve them. Today she announced she has more money to throw at them.

I remember when my colleague the Honourable Gerry Phillips, the minister of the day then, contributed $11 million to the commission through the ministry. What have they done with that? Will $3 million more thrown at it help it in any way? I do not think so. I think what she has done is quite inadequate.

Nothing has changed. These kinds of patchwork approach measures the minister is taking will not resolve the problem itself. I remembered again when the Ombudsman's report was leaked, and now she is fully agreeable to the things that are said there. I am not quite sure whether she is completely committed to making those changes.

We also told the minister that the code needed to be changed to reflect the diverse culture we have here in Ontario. Now that she has done so and has intended to do so, we hope it is not interfered with by political or party interference itself. We see a lot of ministry interference here; some hint of that nature. We hope it is an independent commission that looks at itself and makes sure to follow the direction of the Ombudsman and the criticism here.

We have been watching the minister very closely because her record and her government's record are extremely poor with regard to human rights. They talk a lot and do nothing. We will be watching very carefully.

HEALTH CARE

Mrs Sullivan: I would like to respond to the statement from the Minister of Health. In a time of constitutional uncertainty, and on this particular day when new constitutional proposals have been put forward, reassuring and underlining the value of the medicare programs and the commitment of the provinces, the territories and the federal government to that, I think is something that is valuable.

I note from the minister's statement that one of the messages all the ministers spoke about was that one of the fundamental considerations for renewal of health care is the assurance of adequate funding. In Ontario, with health care funding consuming more than a third of the provincial budget, it behooves us to participate in initiatives that lead to cost-effective management of the health care system. We are anxious to see what initiatives this minister will put forward in that area. So far the initiatives we have seen include requiring all hospitals that have been waiting for computerized axial tomography scanners to resubmit their applications because the requirements for acquisition have been changed.

I also remind the minister that she and the Treasurer have just carried a very gloomy message to health care providers. It is rumoured that $700 million in her constraints will be put forward, but it is unclear, because the Minister of Health has made it unclear, whether the commitments that have been made to hospitals so far for operating expenses for this year will be cut back. Nor is it clear how hospitals will be able to meet the pressures of their nursing settlement, of the employer health tax, of occupational health and safety provisions, of the Ontario Medical Association decision and pay equity decisions. That uncertainty must be cleared up immediately. The minister must do it right away.

If the minister is interested in providing quality health care, I also want to call on her to withdraw the unworkable and ill-thought-out bill on consent, Bill 109, and begin at the beginning again with appropriate consultation in a process where providers and professionals have a say, and bring a new bill to the House. I suggest that the lack of consultation on Bill 109 is one the minister herself has noted as being one where the intent of the legislation was not met through the policy initiatives and the legislation that was put forward. I ask her to withdraw that bill and come back with a new bill.

ONTARIO HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

Mr Cousens: The Liberals have done it again. They want to throw more money at the problem instead of solving it, and I am just surprised that the member for Scarborough North still has not learned a lesson since he got kicked out of power.

I sit around and look at this Minister of Citizenship and I say shame on her for what she is saying in her report today. She is saying, "Past governments and consultants have not been listened to." Whom has she been listening to? There was a press conference this summer when a human rights reform group came and said: "Let's overhaul the Ontario Human Rights Commission. Let's set up a task force to do something about it." The minister has not listened to anyone except herself. I am afraid she is not listening to enough people. The fact of the matter is that something needs to be done and she is starting to say, "We're going to do it all." I do not think the minister has begun to address the real problem.

Shame on the minister as well when she says her program will be a responsible program financially. That is poppycock. Look at what happened earlier. A task force was set up in 1990 with 10 people to work on it. Their goal was 200 cases to be closed in the first six months and 200 in the next six months. They failed to meet that goal. In fact, they closed only 71 cases in the first six months, a third of the cases.

Here is the minister coming along and adding it up. It comes to about $10 million that this government will have spent in five years towards trying to solve the backlog in human rights. Come on, it is not just money she needs; she has to come along and look at a way of approaching the needs of people in this province and it takes a fresh approach, an overhaul and a royal commission on human rights. It is an issue and a problem, but the minister has come along and given us fancy words again.

She has had several months since this House broke off, and what has she come back with? I have to say shame on the Minister of Citizenship. She has failed to meet the need. She has failed the test. She is failing the people who need that help right now and on behalf of our party I say, why does the minister not get out and let someone else do it?

1410

HEALTH CARE

Mr J. Wilson: In response to the Minister of Health's report to the Legislature today, the minister spoke of health partnership across this nation and a renewed commitment to co-operation and co-ordination among Canada's ministers of health, but I ask her to apply those same principles of partnership, co-ordination and co-operation in this province.

In Ontario today there is very little co-ordination among the myriad of programs administered by her Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Community and Social Services. The minister does not have to look much farther than outside her own office door to see gross examples of lack of co-ordination and co-operation in her own ministry. There are 10,000 children on waiting lists for mental health services in this province. That is a disgrace.

Her government seems to have an agenda of driving private nursing homes out of business in this province. She has not come up with the answer, the solution or the suggestion of how she is going to deal with the frail elderly, for instance, whom she very well may be putting out on the street. She is threatening to close Ontario's chronic care hospitals to save money, but there is no indication from her to this point what we are going to do with the people in those hospitals.

The minister has unco-ordinated government policies and they have resulted in the closure of hundreds of hospital beds. She has put untold numbers of people out of work. They are on the street and they have joined our unemployment lines. She has not co-operated or worked in partnership with the hospitals that have had to close hospital beds. She has simply squeezed their budgets so tight that the only option left for them after all the efficiency studies is to close hospital beds, and it is a disgrace.

Lack of human resource planning in the health care field has resulted in waiting lists for cancer patients, and the same applies in the areas of treatment for persons with head injuries and those waiting for drug and alcohol rehabilitation.

While it is commendable that the minister is working with other levels of government, with her colleagues across the provinces and at the federal level to maintain Canada's health care system, I do however recommend that she apply the same principles of co-ordination, partnership and co-operation in her dealings with health care providers and consumers in her own backyard. The minister should stay in the province for a while and look after the problems here before she goes around preaching to her colleagues across the nation and to the federal government.

ORAL QUESTIONS

BUDGET

Mr Elston: Yesterday the Treasurer of the province confirmed that his revenue flows were spot on his budgetary targets. He told us he was going to abide by his reckless $9.7-billion deficit and has indicated that he has everything under control but his expenditures. That being the case, he then went out of this House and told the media he was hundreds of millions of dollars over his budget in terms of expenditures. Can the Treasurer tell us exactly how many hundreds of millions of dollars his budget expenditures are beyond what his budget said?

Hon Mr Laughren: Perhaps I could clarify for the interim leader of the official opposition exactly the message I was attempting to convey. Perhaps it was not as clear as it could have been. What I was trying to convey was the fact that in this fiscal year, the revenues that Ontario gets from its own sources as opposed to revenues from the federal government were pretty close to what we had predicted in the budget in the spring.

Mr Elston: Not spot on.

Hon Mr Laughren: Well, spot on—okay, I will use that figure if the member likes and if it makes him feel better, but very, very close. On the other hand, if we do not take action the expenditures will put us over the deficit number of $9.7 billion, which we do not want to do.

Interjection.

Hon Mr Laughren: There is nothing secretive about this. It is just the case that we are adding up all the numbers and we know there would be several hundreds of millions of dollars that we would be over what we anticipated the expenditures would be. I think the leader understands a couple of the problems with the welfare case loads and with the solvency numbers for the pension plans. There is nothing mysterious about it. We simply have to engage in some reallocations to make sure we come in with that $9.7 billion.

Mr Elston: I have just one very straightforward question for the Treasurer. Can he tell us how many hundreds of millions of dollars his expenditures are out of control at this particular time?

Hon Mr Laughren: Not a penny of our expenditures are out of control. Perhaps the interim leader does not understand, but I suspect every government and every Treasurer has had to deal with pressures on expenditures in-year. I doubt if there is anything new except that the pressures, I think, are tougher this year because of the recession that we are finding ourselves in and are very slowly coming out of.

I think it is not fair to depict the pressures on our expenditures as being out of control. If we were not going to take action to do something about them, yes, I would agree with him, but we have every intention of keeping those expenditures under control. That is what we will be doing, and it is my intention to make a more detailed statement in the House in the next week or so.

Mr Elston: It is a relatively straightforward question. Yesterday he told us he was abiding by his expenditure plan, which was of some $52 billion. He told us he was abiding by his deficit plan, which was of $9.7 billion. He told us that his revenue projections were spot on. Now can he tell us how many hundreds of millions of dollars beyond his budget's expenditure plan he is currently at, and how many hundreds of millions of dollars he will be required to cut from the current expenditure profile that he sees in his Treasury reports?

Hon Mr Laughren: To be precise, several. I think what members have to understand—and the interim leader at one point in his illustrious political career was Chairman of Management Board, as I recall. I am sure he understands the process that all governments go through as they attempt to contain expenditure pressures, because those pressures will always be there.

There is no precise figure at this point. We are keeping a very close eye on the expenditures to make sure that whatever the expenditure pressures are, we do not allow those pressures to cause us to exceed the $52 billion in expenditures that were projected in the spring budget.

Mr Elston: I had expected the Treasurer to be much more candid about where we were going with their expenditure plan. I was prepared to have a question for some other minister at this point, but I am going back to the Treasurer until he comes clean with us about these numbers. There is no way that he can have an expenditure plan prepared for delivery next week if he does not know exactly how many dollars he is going to be putting to the knife under his budgetary plan. There is no way.

I only ask the Treasurer now to tell me how many does his word "several" equate to in numerical terms when he describes "hundreds of millions" of dollars.

Hon Mr Laughren: I tried to be as precise as I could to the interim Leader of the Opposition and I did say to the member that in the next week or so it is my intention to make a full report to the Legislature when all—

Mr Elston: Only on expenditures.

Hon Mr Laughren: No, on basically what action we are going to take to make sure that we have control of expenditures and they do not exceed what we predicted they would be. There is nothing mysterious about that, and I would put—

Interjections.

Hon Mr Laughren: I will wait for the supplementary.

Mr Elston: Now, having had the Treasurer tell us and confirm that he is abandoning the commitments of his April 1991 budget, will he tell us with whom he is consulting to construct the loser's list around the overexpenditures of hundreds of millions of dollars that he told the press about yesterday and only came to tell the House about today?

1420

Hon Mr Laughren: First of all, we in this government do not make up lists of winners and losers. Let's get that on the record first of all.

I have been saying for at least a month now that there were expenditure pressures building in the province. I did not say anything yesterday that was new; it is what I have been saying for the last month. That is simply a fact. What I did say yesterday that was perhaps a little different was that our revenue projections seem to be spot on, from what we had predicted in the spring.

Mr Elston: Now they "seem to be." You were more categorical yesterday.

Hon Mr Laughren: I would put a word of caution in that the two big numbers that really hurt us fiscally in the last year were the corporate income tax and retail sales taxes. For retail sales taxes, the big numbers come clear in January, after the retail season in November and December. So first of all, it is premature to say that the numbers that appear to be spot on now will always be. I do not know that. And with corporation tax revenues, which are also way down in the last year, we do not get those numbers until about March. But from what we see now, our revenue projections now are the same as they were back in the spring.

There is nothing new in what I said yesterday, other than the fact that our revenues seem to be holding and that our expenditure pressures are building.

Mr Elston: We asked the Treasurer yesterday if he would bring in a new economic statement about the way the province was, and we asked in August if he would do that, since everything has changed, or at least it apparently has changed in some way that they were not able to anticipate last April.

But can the Treasurer today, since he is unable to give us a real view of the entire world, guarantee to us that he will not be asking transfer payment agencies like hospitals and municipalities to pay for the mismanagement of his expenditure program under his 1991 budget by being forced to take less than the amount of money that they need—to quote him in terms of what he said about his last transfer payment announcement—“to commit to the maintenance of current service levels in those transfer payment agencies”?

Hon Mr Laughren: First of all, we have not changed direction from the budget in the spring. We said in the spring what we thought our expenditures would be and what our revenues would be. We have not changed that. We are simply attempting to maintain that. I find it a bit hard to take for the interim leader to stand in his place, who was part of a government that experienced the greatest growth in this province in decades and still ended up with a deficit at the end of its term.

LANDFILL SITES

Mr Cousens: I have a question for the Minister of the Environment on a mounting crisis and one that just will not go away until we find a true solution to it. The minister will be aware that the region of Peel has defied her directive of August 16 ordering it to expand the Britannia Road landfill site. She will also be aware that a series of resolutions were passed by Peel clearly stating that unless the Premier meets with them and unless a number of conditions are met, they will not be proceeding with the proposed expansion.

Will the Minister of the Environment tell this House when the Premier will be meeting with Peel region and what measures are now under way to respond to Peel region's demands?

Hon Mrs Grier: As I am sure the member is aware, the Minister of Municipal Affairs and I had a meeting with the chairman of the region of Peel and the mayors of the area municipalities within Peel to discuss with them the emergency order I had issued with respect to the disposal of waste within Peel. I think what matters to the people of the region of Peel is what is going to happen to their waste in August 1992, when the Britannia site closes. I understand the reluctance of the council of the region of Peel to agree to the expansion of that site, but there is no other choice.

I certainly hope that as we discuss the issues, as we have been, we can arrive at some working agreement and arrangement and that I will have the full co-operation of the region of Peel, and I look forward to that happening.

Mr Cousens: It was obvious that the region of Peel wanted to meet with the Premier. They did not; the Premier did not meet with them. They wanted to have some measures to respond to the questions they had, and it is obvious that the ministry and the minister have no answer to the concerns that Peel has been raising.

The Minister of the Environment also made use of her emergency powers under the EPA with no regard to the impact these expansions and orders would have on the communities involved. There will be no environmental assessment, there will be no discussion, and there is still no long-term landfill site in place. She is now also ordering Durham region to construct a temporary transfer station at a cost of millions of dollars so that it can transport its waste to Keele Valley.

How can the minister stand here today in this House in good conscience and assure the people of the greater Toronto area that she is capable of handling this issue when, after millions of tax dollars have been spent, we are no better off than we were four years ago, either financially or environmentally?

Hon Mrs Grier: I am sure the member will allow me to disagree profoundly. We are a great deal better off than we were a year ago. We have in place within the greater Toronto area a system of waste reduction and reuse that is second to none anywhere in this province, one that is beginning to have a very real impact on the amount of waste that is generated and that is going to landfill sites. We have Metropolitan Toronto suggesting that perhaps Keele Valley will last until 1997 because of the efforts that are being made with waste reduction. We have a government that has a very clear long-term plan and that has begun the search under its Interim Waste Authority for three long-term sites to accommodate the greater Toronto area, sites that will be found under the Environmental Assessment Act. That is a vast improvement over the situation a year ago.

Mr Cousens: We are not environmentally better off; we are not financially better off. The minister may think we are, and that is the dispute that we are going to be having in this House for a long time to come, until she begins to deal as minister with the issues that deal with the environment. We have a crisis on our hands and she and her ministry are just sidestepping it and hoping someone else is going to solve it for them.

Metro Toronto's waste reserve fund once stood at $250 million. It now stands at $100 million. They spent $25 million alone on the Kirkland Lake deal, which the minister vetoed. Durham region's waste reserve fund, which was once $20 million, is now almost broke—$20 million to nothing. Millions of dollars have been spent to expand the Keele Valley landfill site so that Metro, York and Durham regions can transfer their waste there. How many more millions of taxpayers' money is going to be spent on wasted studies, wasted site locations and wasted government policy?

Will the minister commit today to remunerate the GTA municipalities for all the wasted dollars due to her flip-flop policies?

Hon Mrs Grier: Let me tell the member that we agree on one thing. We agree that there is a crisis. I am sure we could agree that that crisis has been around for five, six, seven years within the GTA, but to suggest that there is not an answer to that crisis is entirely wrong.

We have an answer. We have an answer in our policies to reduce the amount of waste. We have an answer in our search for long-term sites under the Environmental Assessment Act. We have a short-term answer, a painful short-term answer, a short-term answer which requires us to take the tough decision to extend the use of Britannia and to extend the use of Keele Valley. That was a hard choice to make. It was not shying away from the crisis. It is a solution to the crisis, and that solution will be successful.

1430

RENT REGULATION

Mrs Marland: My question is to the Minister of Housing. Before I begin, I would like to congratulate her on her re-entry into the cabinet, and as our party's new critic for Housing, I look forward to working with her in her new portfolio.

The former Minister of Housing was very vocal, both in opposition and in government, about his views on landlords who charge what he considers to be excessive and gouging rents. My question to the minister is, as the new minister, would she tell us if she shares this view and what would she be prepared to do in situations where unlawful rents are being charged?

Hon Ms Gigantes: I would like to thank the member for Mississauga South, the Conservative critic for Housing, newly appointed, and give her our congratulations on her appointment.

I will answer her question by saying that I cannot imagine there is anybody who would approve of landlords' behaviour when that behaviour could be categorized as greedy, as gouging; I have forgotten all the adjectives she has suggested. It is very difficult, however, to answer a question in which she says, "What would you do about it?" We have set certain mechanisms in place to produce new rent control legislation, as she knows. I presume she has a follow-up question to that.

Mrs Marland: I have been given a specific example which seems to indicate that there is a landlord who is charging over 100% above the legal rent, and I would like to send this over to the minister so she has a copy of what we are talking about. A rental unit in Toronto was rented in 1982 for $420.22. Based on annual guideline increases, this unit should today be renting for $661.14. However, the tenants are paying $1,325 for this unit. To the best of my knowledge, no applications have been made for increases over and above the guidelines and thus the current rent appears to be 100.5% higher than legally allowable.

Will the minister investigate this situation and what action will she take?

Hon Ms Gigantes: I certainly will look into the situation. I will need a little more information, which I am sure the ministry and the member will help me get, which has to do with the age of the building and whether in fact there had been a notice to the landlord under the rent registry system and so on.

The rent registry system, as members will recall, was started back in 1987, but it was never put into action completely, because there developed a huge backlog under the existing Bill 51. Resources were totally devoted to trying to deal with that backlog. The rent registry system, however, will be in effective use for the large buildings in Ontario, I hope, by the end of this year. Certainly tenants will be in a position then to know what their legal rent is.

Mrs Marland: It is not going to be very difficult for the minister to pursue this particular case, because the brown envelope I received states that the landlord of this building sits with her at the cabinet table. This building, at 964 Avenue Road, is owned by the Minister of Community and Social Services. What action will the minister take now?

Hon Ms Gigantes: The action I will take on any complaint brought forward by this member or any other member will be the same as the action I will take in any other case.

ONTARIO ECONOMY

Mr Kwinter: My question is for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology. Before I ask him the question, I want to congratulate him on his new responsibilities and wish him well.

As members know, the state of business and manufacturing in this province is at crisis levels. Last year there were over 50,000 bankruptcies in Ontario. Last year there were over 250,000 job losses, two thirds of which were permanent manufacturing jobs. Many larger businesses, particularly in the resource sector, are being hard hit. In the Ontario pulp and paper industry, over 3,100 jobs have been lost so far.

Last fall, in a speech to Ontario business representatives, the Premier said, "The NDP believes very profoundly in building the partnership with business through negotiation and discussion." The Premier reiterated this yesterday in his economic renewal statement. Yet on August 7 of this year, the Minister of Labour approved a cabinet document which outlined numerous controversial changes to the Labour Relations Act. The communications plan of this document outlined a detailed strategy for squashing all business concerns, and the most telling passage of this document is where the minister states, "There must be a special effort made to neutralize all opposition from the business community."

I notice, Mr Speaker, you are getting a little anxious. I will tell you that my question to the minister is this: Does he condone these special efforts to neutralize the business community by his colleague the Minister of Labour, and does the minister feel that the neutralization of business is what the Premier had in mind when he spoke about renewed relationships and co-operation?

Hon Mr Philip: The way in which the Minister of Labour is neutralizing business is by listening to it. He has a discussion paper out there. The Minister of Labour has met with the members of the business community. The very fact that the Minister of Labour has amended and changed a number of the earlier proposals in the first draft of that discussion paper shows just how flexible he is and how intently the Minister of Labour is listening.

Let me respond to the former minister's comment that businesses are somehow leaving the province. Let me just say that since I became minister, the Ontario Development Corp alone has created some 1,291 jobs, and indeed since February, 43,000 new jobs have been created. I would be happy to outline just a few of the companies in his own area, if he would care to ask me a supplementary on that.

Mr Kwinter: The minister does not seem to understand the implications of his actions or his responsibilities in this matter.

Let me give him an example. In July of this year, the provincial secretary of the New Democratic Party, Jill Marzetti, sent out a province-wide fund-raising letter. This is what the envelope looked like. It said, "One year later, big business is out to stop us." This is the actual letter. It went out, and I would like to read some quotes from it. It says: "But in our haste to make Ontario a better province, we ran straight into a powerful lobby that does not want us to implement that agenda. The lobby is big business. They are a loud, well-financed opponent of everything that we have done." She goes on to say, "Business is trying its best to stop us from doing the job we were elected to do." She concludes by implying that people must financially support the NDP if there is any hope of overcoming the Ontario business lobby.

Can the minister tell us, in his role—he stated it himself when he was appointed that he would be the champion of business—if in a competing jurisdiction, if we are competing with Buffalo or Quebec or Vancouver or Alberta and a businessman is shown this and it is said, "This is what the NDP thinks of business," what hope has he got of attracting anybody to this province, and what is he going to do about it?

1440

Hon Mr Philip: The business community knows what this government thinks of the co-operation between business and this government.

The plastics industry just signed a memorandum of understanding with my ministry outlining clearly how that industry and this ministry and the workers and the local communities would work together in that industry. That is what the plastics industry thinks of this government.

Let me tell the member what some other people think of this government. The president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce has said that he is not only willing to work with this government, but that he is willing to go with me to meet the major investors in the United States and tell them what a great place Ontario is to invest in.

Does the member want to know what Ford Canada thinks of this province? Ford Canada is in the process of spending $500 million on a new plant in Oakville. That is what Ford Canada thinks of this province and this government.

Does the member want to know what Chrysler thinks of this government? Chrysler has announced it is increasing its capacity at Bramalea. That is what Chrysler thinks of this government.

Does the member want to know what is happening in Windsor? There is an extra shift on in Windsor. That is what is happening. I will take him around this province and I will show him how this government is working with industry to create new high-tech jobs, high-paying jobs and new joint ventures with the business community in this province.

That is what this government thinks of this.

AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE

Mr Tilson: I have a question for the Minister of Financial Institutions. An Angus Reid survey conducted earlier this month and released today indicates that 75% of Ontarians want the NDP government to keep its promise to restore the right of innocent auto victims to sue. This government promised to allow them to sue for loss of past, present and future income, plus pain and suffering.

There is now evidence today to suggest that the minister and his government are leaning in a totally different direction, that they plan to lower the current threshold tests, but allow innocent victims to sue for pain and suffering only, and not for their loss of income, long-promised by this government. Will the minister confirm that his officials have indicated this direction, and if true, will this result in an even further loss of rights for those victims than has been witnessed under the previous Liberal administration?

Hon Mr Charlton: I welcome the member as my new critic and hope we have a long, enjoyable relationship.

Having said that, let me say first of all that my officials did not indicate anything. There was an announcement made by the Premier and by myself on September 6 of this year that very clearly set out the answer to the question the member is raising today. We made an announcement that we intended to proceed with significant reform of the auto insurance system, including major product reform, that included benefits reform, financial-loss benefits, indexing and removal of caps and tort for pain and suffering. That is what the announcement said on September 6. That is what was discussed with the media at the scrum after September 6. That is what has been discussed on several major media outlet shows since that time. This question is three weeks old.

Mr Tilson: Is the minister telling us that he is going to allow for loss of income for economic loss? If that is the case, that is fine, because that is not what I understand his officials have been saying.

Certainly part of the uncertainty and confusion resulting from this issue is created by his government's own process since its luxury resort deliberations. The minister was told today by representatives from the Committee for Fair Action in Insurance that the only non-governmental representatives to his working group, a group working to create his new plan, are from the insurance industry. That is all. Victims' rights, medical rehabilitation and advocacy groups are only to be consulted some time in the future. He is not consulting them up to this point.

This is from a government that makes hollow commitments to the consultative process. Once again, the government seems to have made a decision before its so-called consultations have begun. The government's process is a sham. It is worse than the Liberals ever were. I expect its new bill is already at the printers. Why does the minister not open up his working group to include participants from the other interest groups and not just from the insurance companies, which have probably drafted the bill for him?

Hon Mr Charlton: The member is incorrect on all counts, and the group which held the press conference this morning was in fact ill-informed. There are several working groups which have been set up with industry. They are not drafting anybody's plan; they are consultation groups. My ministry, myself and my staff started consultations in the middle of last week with the very groups the member is referring to. The group which had the press conference this morning happens to be meeting with the minister this Friday afternoon. The consultations are ongoing. No decisions have been made about the precise definition of the threshold or any of the other parts of the package, because it is a package that has to be worked out in pieces that fit together. When the consultations are finished, this minister will take responsibility for making an announcement on behalf of the government once it has been approved by the cabinet, not by working groups set up in the industry.

LANDFILL SITE

Mr Duignan: My question today is to the Minister of the Environment. Last May 15 in this House, I asked the minister about a proposal by Reclamation Systems Inc to create a private landfill in the Acton quarry site, a site which most people in my riding oppose and which they pay 3% of their local taxes to fight in the courts. At that time, I also asked the minister whether she would ensure that no environmental assessment hearing would take place if the site is found to be environmentally unacceptable. Could the minister please update this House on where these proposals are?

Hon Mrs Grier: I am glad to have an opportunity to do that because I certainly am aware of the honourable member's interest in this particular proposal and the interest of his constituents. I think he had a petition with 12,000 names on it that he presented to this House in the spring. As members will be aware, Reclamation Systems Inc has applied to create a landfill site in the Acton quarry. The application has now been reviewed by the various ministries and that review is almost completed within my ministry. I am glad to be able to tell the member that.

Mr Duignan: The minister has spoken in response about a government review on this landfill proposal. Will she please tell the House when she plans to release this document and whether she can ensure this House that no hearing takes place if the site is found to be unacceptable for a landfill site?

Hon Mrs Grier: The next phase after the document has been reviewed by the various ministries and by my ministry is for it to be released for public comment. I hope that can happen very shortly.

With respect to the second part of the member's question, as to whether or not I can declare the site unacceptable for a waste disposal site, I think the member is aware, as are other members of this House, that the company has a right, under the Environmental Assessment Act, to proceed to a hearing if that is its wish.

1450

TIMBER MANAGEMENT

Mr Ramsay: As the Minister of the Environment knows full well, the Ontario Environmental Assessment Advisory Committee submitted a report to her in June that we still have not seen. This is a report that included hearings on three timber management plans in northeastern Ontario in the Ranger Lake area. The minister knows for sure whereof I speak. We have not seen the results of this report yet.

I would like to remind the minister of, and just read back to the minister, a commitment the Minister of Natural Resources made to this House on 7 May. He said: "I have made assurances to the tourist operator who is interested in the particular outcome of this EAAC hearing that we will put things on hold. At this particular time I do not see any reason why we should change that assurance."

I was wondering if the minister stands by this assurance today in this House.

Hon Mrs Grier: I am not prepared to comment on the details of what the Minister of Natural Resources has said, but I am certainly familiar with the report from the environmental assessment advisory committee to which the member refers. I have had discussions with respect to the recommendations of that report with my colleague the Minister of Natural Resources and I hope to be able to release some decisions on that very shortly.

Mr Ramsay: We have a problem here, because we have an advisory committee to the Minister of the Environment and we have not seen this. This is under wraps, so we do not know what those recommendations are. But in the members' gallery today we have George Nixon, who is the tourist operator who asked that this be examined. According to Mr Nixon, logging roads have penetrated this area and harvesting commenced in this area last summer. Yet we have not seen the report and we have not seen those recommendations.

The Minister of Natural Resources has given us assurance that this would not happen. Is this an environmental-assessment-sensitive government or not? What is the recommendation of the ministry and what is going to be the future of the harvesting in this area?

Hon Mrs Grier: This is indeed an environmentally sensitive government and, contrary to other governments, it is a government in which all ministers take the environment into account when they make their decisions. My colleague the Minister of Natural Resources has discussed with Mr Nixon the particular situation with respect to that request for a full environmental assessment.

Interjection.

The Speaker: Order.

Hon Mrs Grier: As I am sure the member is aware, the reports of the environmental assessment advisory committee are made public at the time the minister's decision is rendered. I assure him I intend to follow that practice.

Mr Scott: There goes your credibility. Timber!

The Speaker: Order.

Mr Scott: The member for St George-St David?

The Speaker: The member for St George-St David.

Mr Scott: I just wanted to know, Mr Speaker.

The Speaker: We know you are here.

MARKETING BOARDS

Mr Villeneuve: My question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Food. Yesterday he made remarks in committee during the emergency debate on the farm income crisis. We do have a major crisis on our hands. He told us he fully supports article XI of the GATT and his two parliamentary assistants also said he and his government support that.

The minister knows the marketing board system works because the boards are allowed to determine a fair price based on the cost of production, the true and real and proven cost of production. Now, if he really supports marketing boards, can the minister explain why he threw out and overturned the price determined by the broiler chicken marketing board and imposed a reduction of 12 cents per kilo? How can he substantiate both issues?

Hon Mr Buchanan: The member, if he was to look at the facts a little more closely, would find that I did not overturn the price. It was the tribunal that upheld a 12-cents-per-kilo reduction in the price of chicken. It was not the minister. There was an appeal to me to do something about that. That appeal is pending in my office.

Mr Villeneuve: The Farm Products Appeal Tribunal is under the minister's direction. He appoints them, and if they do have the power to set the price, then forget about marketing boards. The minister is supposed to be supporting them. If they have that power, let's forget about boards.

John Core of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board said yesterday: "Unless marketing boards have effective border controls, restricted production and cost-of-production-based pricing, forget about the boards. Any one of those components destroys them."

It is under the minister's direction. What does he intend to do about what his appeal tribunal did?

Hon Mr Buchanan: Clearly with supply management the intent is to control the supply from the producers' side so they have a sense they are producing the required amount of any given product for the market. That is one side of the marketing board concept. The other side is they have some sense of control over pricing. The different commodities have different systems depending on whether it is milk, eggs, chicken, etc.

The member across has identified a problem in terms of a rollback using a process that has been in place that we helped to reinforce recently. In August, we came up with a new way of working with an agreement to price. The tribunal, which is part of that process, upheld the processors' request for a rollback. That is unfortunate. It indicates, perhaps, that the board does not have enough clout, if you will, to set the price. That is something there is room to look at and examine to support and enhance the chicken producers' right to set prices.

COLLÈGES DE LANGUE FRANÇAISE EN ONTARIO

M. Bisson : Ma question est pour le ministre des Collèges et Universités. Comme on le sait, le gouvernement a annoncé dernièrement la création possible de collèges francophones ici en Ontario. J'aimerais savoir à quel point on se trouve dans les négociations avec le gouvernement fédéral.

L'hon. M. Allen : Comme le député de Cochrane-Sud le sait, un des faits saillants à l'égard du niveau de participation de la communauté francophone dans l'éducation postsecondaire est que c'est en général de 50 % relative à la population générale non francophone.

En comparaison, aux niveaux élémentaire et secondaire, depuis qu'on a développé un réseau d'écoles francophones, on a trouvé un niveau de participation presque égal au reste de la population. Donc, pour le relancement de l'économie et aussi pour l'équité sociale pour la communauté francophone, j'ai suggéré le commencement de pourparlers avec le gouvernement fédéral visant le financement de l'expansion d'un réseau collégial pour les francophones ici en Ontario.

M. Bisson : On connaît un peu la situation du gouvernement fédéral qui se trouve avec son système de finance et aussi un peu l'attitude qu'il a prise envers les provinces et envers ses responsabilités. Est-ce que le ministre a une idée à quoi s'attendre des négociations avec le gouvernement fédéral ?

L'hon. M. Allen : Comme le sait le député, nos circonstances fiscales sont assez difficiles. Donc, il faut avoir des pourparlers avec le fédéral concernant le partage du financement d'une telle initiative. Quant à nous, il est très important que ce soit une initiative conjointe, provinciale et fédérale, pour le bon succès de cette initiative collégiale ici en Ontario.

ASSISTANCE TO FARMERS

Mr Mancini: My question is for the Minister of Agriculture and Food. Yesterday, during the agricultural hearings at the standing committee on resources development, the minister confirmed that he would be meeting on September 30 with the Essex county drought committee, which is made up of local Essex county farm leaders. I am sure he has been fully and properly briefed as to the severity of the financial crisis facing Essex county farmers due to the worst drought in over 40 years. Is the minister making plans to free up resources within the Ministry of Agriculture and Food to help drought-stricken farmers survive for the next farming season?

Hon Mr Buchanan: I was in Essex county last weekend to personally have a look at the severity of the situation. I recognize that it is severe and there will be assistance required. I think I mentioned yesterday, in response to a question, that we are looking at a package we are putting together which will address the needs of people in agriculture, grains and oilseeds as well as the drought situation in Essex.

Mr Mancini: I want the minister to be very clear to the House and to the farmers of Essex county, parts of Kent county and other portions of southwestern Ontario that have been severely affected by the drought. He is working on a plan to provide assistance, I assume, to all farmers in Ontario because of their high input costs and low commodity prices. But the problem I speak of is different from the one I just described and I want to make sure we are talking about the same things.

The farmers who are coming to the meeting on September 30 are going to want more than public relations, a coffee and a handshake when they leave. They want to know whether or not the plans the minister is working on are going to be separate and over and above the other assistance he is promising farmers in Ontario. I want to bring to his attention the fact that his parliamentary assistant has already promised such assistance over and above the regular assistance the minister is now working on. Can we be clear on what the minister is going to do, please?

Hon Mr Buchanan: I have tried to make it clear for the member that we are interested in addressing the situation in general, and specifically the drought situation in Essex-Kent, which I might add also touches other counties. It is most severe in Essex-Kent, but it does touch on other counties in southwestern Ontario and southeastern Ontario as well.

The challenge we face—and I put this question to the producers and the farmers I met last weekend down in Essex county—is if I had X million dollars, how would I distribute that to the people who are affected? In other words, we need a mechanism to know, given a certain amount of money, how we might distribute it to those people who need it most. At first the producers said, “That’s a silly question,” and after we discussed it for a while, they realized that there was a difference of opinion, at least three or four different ideas, as to how that money might be distributed.

I would ask the honourable member if he has ideas, because we have not yet determined how that might be done. It is very complicated and I do not want to take up the time of the House to talk about the different options, but I would be interested in talking to the member about his preferred option for assistance for people in the drought situation across the province.

1500

HEALTH LEGISLATION

Mr J. Wilson: My question is to the Minister of Health. The minister should be aware that many legitimate concerns have been raised recently regarding her government’s consent-to-treatment legislation. While we would agree, and I think all members would agree, that a degree of advocacy on behalf of patients is good and necessary, it is clear that her bill as it is worded will cause more problems than it can ever hope to resolve.

I want to know how the government can justify spending an additional $30 million to implement this legislation, if it were to pass—this legislation that is so riddled with holes—at a time when tax dollars are very scarce indeed.

Hon Ms Lankin: I will address the member’s question particularly with respect to the consent legislation itself. I think he is at this point mixing two issues with respect to the advocacy legislation that the Minister of Citizenship has brought forward and the consent legislation that the Ministry of Health has responsibility for, although there is a very clear interrelationship between the two pieces of legislation.

You will know, I am sure, Mr Speaker, that in reports in the newspaper there have been some concerns raised with respect to the provisions of the legislation in terms of the drafting. Some of the things that have been suggested by some critics of the legislation as concerns areas that would give rise to concern on the part of any government. It certainly is not the intent of the legislation. I have asked people within the ministry in the legal drafting branch to take a look at it, and they feel the concerns are not factual in terms of the basis of the actual wording of the legislation. But I am more than willing to take a look at that.

As the member knows, we are going to committee hearings on this and we are certainly open to hearing those kinds of comments and criticisms. In the meantime, I will take a look at that even before we get to committee and if I can offer any assistance or amendments or advance notice of that to the committee, I will do that.

Mr J. Wilson: The minister knows very well I am referring to her piece of legislation, Bill 109. She should be aware that this legislation is going to create another incredibly large layer of bureaucracy, another pile of government red tape, and it is going to serve as an impediment to health care professionals in carrying out their present duties.

Dr Moran, a dentist who performs facial construction at the Hugh MacMillan Rehabilitation Centre, which is a centre that caters to the needs of disabled children, maintains that the legislation will result in treatment delays, which in turn will mean even longer lineups for the people of Ontario who need health care services.

The Premier speaks so very often, and often eloquently, about social justice. But where is the justice when we know that the minister’s legislation will hurt the very people it is intended to help? Is the minister prepared, as she should be, to withdraw her consent-to-treatment legislation and replace it with a bill that addresses the real need we all know is out there?

Hon Ms Lankin: Again I have to say to the member that he is wrong to lump the two pieces of legislation and to say to me that I know very well he is talking about my legislation. I know very well that he is talking about the Minister of Citizenship’s legislation with respect to the advocacy function and with respect to what he calls creating a structure and a group of people to deal with that.

With respect to the consent legislation, I take very seriously the concerns that have been raised. The government has no intent of bringing forward legislation that would cause further delays that would cause those sorts of problems. I am not sure in fact that the legislation does that, but I have heard the concerns that have been raised. I spoke this weekend with the author of a report who was quoted in the newspaper article that was in the paper yesterday. I take very seriously those concerns. I have asked for that to be reviewed and I will be moving on that. If there need to be amendments, if there needs to be restructuring, we will do that.

SEXUAL ASSAULT

Ms Poole: My question is for the Attorney General. Last month the Supreme Court of Canada struck down the rape shield provision of the Criminal Code, which restricted the right of defence lawyers to question women about their sexual history. The ground was that this provision infringed the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

The federal government has indicated that it plans to enact new legislation, but so far we have seen nothing in this regard. Just last week the Toronto Star reported that a new trial has been granted to a man previously convicted of sexual assault because he was prevented from questioning one of the victims about her claim of previous sexual assault.

Already the fallout from the Supreme Court decision is becoming apparent. I would like to ask the Attorney General what he is prepared to do to protect victims of sexual assault from undergoing further ordeals because of the ruling.

Hon Mr Hampton: I thank the member for the question. She perhaps does not know that earlier this summer the Minister without Portfolio responsible for women's issues and I met with a number of women's organizations from around the province. I attended a justice ministers' conference in Yellowknife, where I spoke directly to the Honourable Kim Campbell, the federal Minister of Justice, and gave her our advice and the advice of several women's organizations in Ontario as to what kinds of amendments to the Criminal Code might be advisable and as to what other measures the federal government might undertake with respect, for example, to judicial appointments and judicial education. So to this point we have acted as directly as we can with respect to dealing with the root of the problem, which is fundamentally the section of the Criminal Code which was struck down by the Supreme Court of Canada decision.

Ms Poole: Certainly we recognize that it is the duty and responsibility of the federal government to deal with changes to the Criminal Code in order to effect protections for women in this regard. However, on August 27, the Attorney General and the minister responsible for women's issues held a press conference at Queen's Park in which they stated unequivocally that the NDP government is prepared to act to lessen the effects of the Supreme Court decision.

I believe the Attorney General made two statements: one, that he was prepared to take steps to train and sensitize crown attorneys, for instance, and two, that he also proposed that experts on sexual stereotyping testify in every serious sexual offence trial to ensure that judges understand what is expected of them and understand what women are up against in the justice system.

While I recognize that the federal government has a part to play, so does the Ontario government. What I would like to ask the Attorney General is why he has not acted on these two recommendations he had put forward.

When are we going to have action and when is he prepared to protect the women of this province?

Hon Mr Hampton: I can inform the House that the Ministry of the Attorney General has already hired the services of a consultant who is at this time designing a program to sensitize and deal with issues of sexual stereotyping as they relate to crown attorneys and their work. We have also under way discussions with the provincially appointed judiciary with respect to courses for them dealing with sexual stereotyping and other sexist issues in the court system.

Finally I can advise the House that on a case-by-case basis, we will call expert evidence to deal with some of the sexist issues we find in the court system. I want to point out to the member, however, that fundamentally this is an issue which the federal government can and must deal with legislatively. Once we see what they are doing legislatively, we will be better able to tailor our response to deal with what they have not been able or have been unwilling to deal with.

1510

COURT SYSTEM

Mr Harnick: My question is to the Attorney General. In the month of February 1991, 2,000 claims were issued in the Toronto Small Claims Court. The Attorney General has expressed the opinion that this is the most important court we have, yet we have a court, which normally has a complement of 13 full-time judges, for the last year only having eight full-time judges in place. There are five vacancies and there are no appointments on the horizon.

The court also runs with the anomaly of having a $1,000 jurisdiction outside of Metropolitan Toronto and a $3,000 jurisdiction in Metropolitan Toronto. The court is the people's court. When is the Attorney General going to provide us with the necessary changes to make that court work?

Hon Mr Hampton: I thank the member for his question. First, he inquires as to when appointments can be made to the Small Claims Court. I want to inform him that as a result of changes made in the legislation by my immediate predecessor in the office of the Attorney General, the province can no longer make those appointments. The Small Claims Court is now a court to which federal judges must be appointed, and we are not in a position to make those appointments at this time.

The member indicates that there is a problem with respect to divergent jurisdictions within the Small Claims Court, that it is $3,000 within the city of Toronto and $1,000 outside of the city of Toronto. I agree with him that this is a serious problem. I can say to him that is a problem that has existed for some time, that existed throughout his government which originally created that problem and that existed through the former government's reign. As soon as we have the opportunity to finish our review of the Small Claims Court, we will be doing something about it.

Mr Harnick: I beg to differ with the Attorney General that he cannot make those appointments. The Small Claims Court judges are not section 96 judges, although they are in the General Division. They have been lumped into the General Division of the court, and it is interesting to note that section 96 judges are protected by judicial immunity. Small Claims Court judges do not have that immunity. The provincial court criminal judges have judicial immunity under the Courts of Justice Act. They were grandfathered; the Small Claims Court judges were not. We now have eight full-time Small Claims Court judges and numerous part-time judges who are sitting in courts without statutory immunity. I beg to differ with the Attorney General that he cannot appoint judges. He can because he is not appointing section 96 court judges.

The Speaker: And your question?

Mr Harnick: When is the Attorney General going to protect the judges who are now out there who do not have statutory immunity? When is he going to make the necessary amendments to this court that has over 2,000 cases a month coming in to one court alone in the city of Toronto?

Hon Mr Hampton: Again I would ask the member to read the legislation carefully. As the legislation now stands, we can no longer appoint provincially appointed judges to the Small Claims Court. We can appoint deputy judges. However, I am sure the member knows that around the province there is some controversy as to the extent to which we should utilize deputy judges. We would prefer to proceed in an orderly manner when we are prepared, which I hope will be some time later on this fall. I think we will be able to respond to all of these issues as indeed former governments should have done.

MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BUSINESS

Mr Cooke moved that Mr Sola and Mr Mancini exchange places in the order of precedence for private members' public business.

Motion agreed to.

COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTIONS

Mr Cooke moved that the following substitutions be made to the membership of the committees of the House:

On the select committee on Ontario in Confederation, Ms Carter for Ms Gigantes; Mr Drainville, who shall be Chair, for Mr Silipo;

On the standing committee on administration of justice, Ms Carter for Ms Gigantes; Mr Cooper for Mr White;

On the standing committee on estimates, Mr O'Connor for Mr Ferguson; Mr Farnan for Mrs Haslam;

On the standing committee on general government, Mr Marchese for Mr Duignan;

On the standing committee on government agencies, Ms Carter for Mrs Haslam; Mr Marchese for Mr Silipo;

On the standing committee on the Ombudsman, Ms Haack for Mr White;

On the standing committee on public accounts, Mr White for Mr Cooper;

On the standing committee on regulations and private bills, Mr Farnan for Mr Ferguson; Mr White for Mr O'Connor;

On the standing committee on social development, Mr Wessinger for Mr Silipo.

Motion agreed to.

PETITIONS

FRENCH-LANGUAGE SERVICES

Mr H. O'Neil: I have a petition which I would like to read and also have presented to the Lieutenant Governor. It is a petition from approximately 400 people from my riding. It talks about Bill 8, and I present it, not that I agree with what is said within the petition but because I believe that those people within my riding would like to be heard. Therefore I do it for that reason.

The petition reads:

"To the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"We, the undersigned, beg leave to petition the Parliament of Ontario as follows:

"Whereas it is the duty of a free people to constantly guard and, if necessary, defend those freedoms; and

"Whereas the French Language Services Act elevates one linguistic group into lawful but unjust privilege over 95% of all Ontarians; and

"Whereas the French Language Services Act had since November 18, 1986, been implemented in secret without the public being aware of its implementation, in which access has been denied to the public and even to the elected members of this assembly; and

"Whereas such implementation is plunging forward at enormous cost while health care, police and fire protection, municipal grants, education and the environment are experiencing cutbacks in funding; and

"Whereas no minority can expect for long to enjoy the advantages of a law that shows such reckless disregard for majority sensitivities; and

"Whereas the views of the majority of the citizens of Ontario were not represented on November 8, 1986, as only 55 of the 125 elected members of the Legislative Assembly were present to vote,

"Therefore, to preserve patience and goodwill, in the name of justice and for the love of harmony, we implore this House to repeal the French Language Services Act, Bill 8, at the earliest moment."

As I say, I present this on behalf of those people, but I certainly do not agree with the contents of this petition.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

Mr Carr: I have a petition signed by approximately 250 residents from the Oakville and Burlington area.

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the Queen of Canada has long been a symbol of national unity for Canadians from all walks of life and from all ethnic backgrounds; and

"Whereas the people of Canada are currently facing a constitutional crisis which could potentially result in the breakup of the federation and are in need of unifying symbols;

"We, the undersigned, respectfully petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to restore the oath to the Queen for the Metro Toronto police officers."

1520

ORDERS OF THE DAY

INCOME TAX AMENDMENT ACT, 1991

LOI DE 1991 MODIFIANT LA LOI DE L'IMPÔT
SUR LE REVENU

Ms Wark-Martyn moved second reading of Bill 83, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act.

M^{me} Wark-Martyn propose la deuxième lecture du projet de loi 83, Loi portant modification de la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu.

Hon Ms Wark-Martyn: This bill, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act, implements the Treasurer's budget proposal of April 29, 1991, to increase the personal income surtax rate. The surtax rate will change from 10% to 12% of Ontario income tax in excess of $10,000 for the 1991 taxation year. This increase will add $60 million in revenue for 1991-92. The surtax rate for the 1992 and subsequent taxation years will be 14%. The tax system is now more progressive because it ensures that people with higher incomes pay a greater and more equitable share. Taxpayers with taxable incomes of more than $84,000 will be affected.

I would like to add that an amendment made to a regulation under this act will implement the Treasurer's announcement to enrich the Ontario tax reduction program. This program greatly benefits people with lower incomes. Effective for 1991, the $200 supplement provided for each dependent child age 18 or under and each dependent with a disability will be raised to $350. This means that a single parent with two dependent children earning up to $22,500 will no longer pay any personal income tax, as the tax reduction will eliminate the Ontario tax payable.

This change will result in the reduction or elimination of Ontario income tax for approximately 700,000 low-income taxpayers. This is the largest enrichment made in the history of the Ontario tax reduction program. These measures are a clear demonstration of this government's commitment to a fairer tax system.

Mrs Y. O'Neill: I am pleased to rise this afternoon to discuss Bill 83, the Income Tax Amendment Act. This legislation implements the NDP's announcement in its 1991 budget of increasing the provincial income tax surcharge. This amendment to the Income Tax Act is part of a package of 11 tax increases contained in this budget to engender $1 billion in new revenues.

In its April 29 budget the government announced that effective July 1, 1991, the income surtax rate in Ontario will be increased from 10% to 14% of Ontario income tax in excess of $10,000. This increased tax will affect Ontario taxpayers who earn more than $84,000 per year and will generate $60 million in additional revenue this year and $90 million in subsequent years.

There are some fundamental questions that we must ask ourselves and this government about the direction of taxation policies. Are some measures to redistribute taxes which will provide revenue income for the government, such as those being contained in Bill 83, different? They are being made now. Other tax incentives, called fair tax incentives, are being put off until some unknown time in the future after the report of the NDP commission. This government seems to have put comprehensive tax reform so far back on the burner that it has completely lost sight of the promises made to Ontario taxpayers during election 1990 and many times since. All we hear about the NDP tax commission is that this and that have been referred to it.

The most devastating aspect of the taxation and spending policies of the 1991 budget, of which Bill 83 is part, is the legacy of high debt and higher future taxes which will have to be borne by the governments which follow this one and, more important, by each and every Ontarian and Ontarians yet to be born. I do not have to remind anyone in this chamber that the Treasurer has projected three more years of consolidated deficit in excess of this year's deficit. Lord only knows what that is going to turn up after the questioning we had in this House today.

The budgetary plan of which this bill is part will require at least $5 billion in new taxes over the next three years. It leaves us to wonder whether it is an intention of this government to raise the rate of the surtax or to lower the taxation level at which such a surtax would kick in in future budgets, thus forcing a larger and larger number of Ontarians to pay the debts incurred by this government's policies.

As members know, we in the Liberal caucus conducted our own budget review tour last spring. During that most interesting process, of which I was a part, we heard a number of Ontarians voice their concerns regarding the tax increase contained in this budget. Day after day, city after city, delegation after delegation had the same message. In fact in the minister's own riding, Jack Masters, the mayor of Thunder Bay, shared with our committee his concerns about the provincial debt and the loss of Ontario's top credit rating.

Mr Masters stated that the loss of the credit rating increases borrowing costs for all municipalities, including Thunder Bay, and drives up their costs, which municipalities cannot control. Is this an example of the municipal-provincial partnership this government says it is trying so hard to foster and is indeed setting up bureaucratic structures to support?

The recognition that high deficits must eventually be paid through higher taxes is something that was brought forward to our budget tour over and over again. The people of Ontario, the people who walk the streets and run the businesses and pay the bills in this province, understand that.

Every person in Ontario knows why taxes such as the income surtax are going up. This government has announced that it will be looking at another $700 million, at least, in spending cuts. We can only conclude the taxes are not going up because we are going to get new services; they are going up to pay for mismanagement and policy decisions that this government is wrongly pursuing.

The conclusion we are left with is that taxes are going up for really no reason, with no focus. This bill would not be necessary if the NDP were better able to manage Ontario's economy. This bill is before us today because the NDP government has allowed the province's unemployment rate to go up to 10%, putting it above British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

The unemployment rate in this province has increased by 60% since the NDP took office, indeed a large drain on this province's revenue. Perhaps the Minister of Revenue will tell us that unemployment is not the NDP's fault, indeed not her government's fault. She would like us all to believe that the recession is to blame or that the federal government is the most convenient scapegoat. But I would ask the minister to justify the tax increase we are debating here today not in terms of whom she can pass along the blame to, but in terms of the economy and the province's revenue requirements.

When every other province in Canada posted a decline in unemployment rates between April and June 1991, Ontario was the exception. When the number of Ontario's unemployed not only does not decline, but in fact is still increasing in those two months I have mentioned, how does the Minister of Revenue explain the need for revenue initiatives such as Bill 83 unless she will admit that her government has fallen short of the expectations of the people of Ontario?

The Premier is right when he goes to the first ministers' conference in Whistler and slams his fist on the table and says Ontario is a have-not province. A have-not province indeed: The NDP has seen to it that in a very short time Ontario has become an NDP province, a have-not province. That is why it needs to raise new revenue to pay the bills and that is why this legislation is before us today.

1530

I could go on to list other economic statistics: bankruptcy rates up over 66% from last year; over 95,000 manufacturing jobs have disappeared in Ontario between January and June of this year, according to Statistics Canada; the number of layoffs that are due to plant closures, 66%, has more than tripled the numbers we experienced in the recession of 1982. But the recitation of the fiscal failures of this NDP government are too long for me to detail at this time.

However, it is clear the Minister of Revenue has been given her marching orders to find some fast cash. Indeed, revenue collection is a priority of this government and she is following those orders in this bill. In the meantime, other important structural issues in her ministry which would stimulate the economy, thus reducing the need for new taxes, have been put on the back burner.

There seems to be no rhyme or reason to the NDP tax policy, except that it is making easy decisions today and putting off the hard decisions until tomorrow and beyond. Revenue is a top priority, but is it well placed by this government, I ask, and so do most Ontarians?

Mr Sterling: I want to say at the outset that my party will be opposing this bill, as it will be opposing all the tax legislation which has been introduced by this minister, including Bills 83, 84, 85, 86 and 130, which we will be debating over the next few weeks.

We are opposing this legislation because we believe the citizens of Ontario have been taxed and taxed and taxed. This was started primarily by the former Liberal government when we saw some 33 tax increases, which increased revenues by some 123% or 130% over a period of five years. You would think the new government would have learned from the defeat of the former government that you cannot go on taxing for ever without some political consequence.

This income tax increase follows a precedent that was set by the former government. I believe that when the former government took over in 1985 the personal income tax rate was about five or six points less than it now stands in terms of the Ontario tax rate. It was down, I believe, at that time around 47% or 48% of the federal tax. Over the past five years it has risen about a point a year, going from 48% to about 53%. So those people who are earning in the high income bracket, whom this particular amendment affects, are now paying 5% more of their income than they were back around 1985-86.

In addition, the Liberal government in 1985 started to charge a surtax. It started at 3% on federal tax over $5,000. It then jumped to 10% provincial tax over $10,000, so it did not affect those people who were paying federal income tax between a $5,000 and $10,000 rate. These figures, when you start throwing them all together and you do not have a piece of paper in front of you explaining what they do, are somewhat confusing, and I realize that. But the bottom line now is that those very high income earners who are earning taxable income around $84,000 are now paying about 49% of the $84,000 in taxes, either to the provincial government or to the federal government, but the total package is costing them 49% of their taxable income.

The problem with this is that one can argue that the rich should pay more—I do not disagree with that particular philosophy—but there comes a breaking point in every person's desire to earn more income. There used to be a story before Margaret Thatcher and the Conservative government took over in Britain, I believe in the late 1970s or early 1980s. In socialist Britain at that time, there was a very marked difference in how people looked at people who were more fortunate in society. The story went that in the United States if a person saw another person driving by in a Cadillac, the American would say: "I'm going to get a Cadillac some day. I'm going to work hard enough. I'm going to be able to get a Cadillac." The story went that in Britain a person standing on the street in London who saw a Rolls-Royce go by would say, "I'm going to bring the person who's driving that Rolls-Royce down to my level." That is the problem with continuing to increase income tax rates over a period of time, which we have experienced in this province in particular.

The experience, I believe, of many of the European jurisdictions has been that they no longer can raise personal income taxes without damaging their ability to compete in the European common market. I understand that very socialist countries like Sweden have dropped their personal income tax rates dramatically in the last four or five years, because what they found was happening to them in Sweden was that the engineers, the scientific people, the mathematicians, the people who generate the basic wealth in their country were saying, "I don't need to work in Sweden; I can go to Germany," or, "I can go to France," or, "I can go to another country where the personal income tax rates are lower than in my country." Part of the decision of people who are in the work world, of course, is related to the financial remuneration for what they put out at work.

People who are in the legal profession or in the civil service or perhaps teachers, perhaps certain other kinds of professions, do not have the ability to go from one jurisdiction to the other without changing their qualifications in order to take up their profession somewhere else. But generally speaking, those professionals are people who are, I admit, very important to society, but are people who receive, either directly or indirectly, payment through tax revenues and are not generators of primary wealth like the engineers, the scientists, the young and bright entrepreneurs who can sell their services and their skills not only in their own jurisdiction but can sell them in any jurisdiction they might choose.

1540

This is happening not only in Europe, but in our very own jurisdiction. I can remember well meeting a constituent in the small town of Greely in the township of Osgoode, which is just south of Ottawa, during the last election, talking to a highly skilled technician who was involved with equipment that was used in terms of control of airports. He was able to sell his skills either in Ontario. He could sell his skills in any part of the United States, and people in the United States wanted him to go there. He said to me that he liked living in Ontario and Canada, but the fact of the matter was that enough was enough and that he could get the same quality of life in a state of the United States and have more after-tax income for him and his family to spend on what they desired.

I also have a personal story that is involved in this. I have a sister who lives in Minneapolis, and my sister and her husband were very successful in their own right. Her husband was the vice-president of a very large food processing company—Pillsbury—and was in charge of all the production facilities for Pillsbury in the United States. At one point he was in charge of all their research and development.

But my sister Jackie and her husband John had five children. Some of them were born in Canada as he moved around to various places during his career. All of those children have gone through university at this stage, some of them obtaining post-graduate degrees, two from Harvard. None of them, unfortunately, is back here in Ontario, although they have a great affinity for Ontario and Canada. The options for them are so much greater in the United States, not only in terms of what they can receive for the services they can render, and I think there are three engineers in that family, but their after-tax income is so much greater.

What will be thrown back at me by the socialists will be, "Yeah, but they don't have health care, they don't have the education programs that we have here." I say to them, it is a lot of hogwash for these kinds of young people, because they can buy better health care down there than we have in Ontario, because the health care that they have down there they can gain access to when they need it, because young people who are skilled, people who are entrepreneurial, who are bright, can get the same benefits because they are recompensed or they are given enough money to go out and buy those kinds of things.

You might say, "Well, that's fine and dandy, but you know, we have to tax the people who are doing well much more than the people who are doing not so well." But you have to remember that even though we are taxing the income of these people at 49%, almost 50% now, of what they are earning in their next dollar, they also pay a great many other taxes in addition to their income tax. They are paying provincial sales tax, they are paying GST, they are paying any number of other kinds of taxes that they are going to get hit with if they buy anything larger than a very small car. I think a Sprint is the only car that does not have a gas guzzler tax on it. They are going to get caught with that as well.

The problem here, in terms of our opposition to this tax, is that we are not objecting to a 2% or 4% increase on a surtax, which will only add a very small amount to the total tax bill of these individuals who are doing quite well in our society; it is the cumulative effect of the former Liberal government, of raising provincial incomes taxes over the last five years by a percentage each year that is bringing us to a situation where the cumulative effect of all the taxes on the very bright young people and the very bright technical people is for them to say: "Maybe I should look at another option. Maybe I should look south and take my skills south because I can go there and the tax load on me will be much less. I can buy the social services the Ontario government provides to me because I'll have more income to purchase those services and overall my family will be better off in a financial sense." In many cases they will be as well off as here in terms of quality of life.

I think another point that is extremely important to point out is that the federal government recognized this problem with rising income taxes. When they put forward their tax reform proposals, which included the GST, they dropped the level of income tax the federal government was collecting, in order to give more incentive to people at all levels of taxation rates to work harder and earn even more, in order to drive them to be more productive in our society, in our province and in our country so that we could all enjoy the benefits of that hard work, even including the person who had put out the effort.

Part of that tax reform proposal was supposed to be, "We're going to put a general sales tax up"—the GST, which was very unpopular, as you know—"but we're going to give you this break on income tax." That was supposed to be the tradeoff. Unfortunately the federal government gave the break about two years before the GST, the provinces raced in and scooped up those income tax points and by the time the GST was introduced, everybody was paying what they formerly paid in income tax, and the federal government got blamed both ways even though it was the provinces who added the points. All members have to do is to look at what actually happened.

Interjection.

Mr Sterling: If members get the facts, they can see that is the truth and that is what happened. When we talk about the overall tax percentage any individual has to pay, a greater portion of that now is a provincial bite versus a federal bite than was the case five years ago. This continual increase in personal income tax has got to stop in terms of what is happening within our province and in our country.

We have heard anecdotal evidence that many people are moving to the United States.

Only two weeks ago when you, Mr Speaker, as part of the caucus of the Progressive Conservative Party, and all my colleagues went down to Brantford and stayed at a local Best Western hotel, not like a resort at Honey Harbour, where the New Democratic Party stayed, but in a modest hotel in Brantford where we had our caucus meeting—

Interjections.

Mr Sterling: We, being a party that is concerned about the expenses we pay—

Interjections.

1550

Mr Sterling: I thought that would wake them up. One morning Mr Harris, myself and several members of my caucus went out to meet a most interesting business near Paris, Ontario, which just happens to be in the riding of Brant-Haldimand. The fellow who was running that business was a civil engineer who had come from Alberta about five or six years ago and set up a company on the banks of the Grand River. He employs 35 people, half of whom are professionals. They have developed a machine and system in which they have world leadership. I believe the name of this firm is Highway Products International. This machine is contained in a truck and sells for between $500,000 and $750,000.

It takes a $15,000 truck, puts computers inside this truck, puts television cameras inside this truck, and an operator can drive it 90 kilometres an hour down the road and that truck will measure the contour of that road within 1.5 millimetres. It will record every inch of the surface of that road on a TV camera. This is important in terms of the maintenance of the road surfaces of developed countries. Ontario has actually bought two of these trucks. They have sold about 23 or 24 trucks. Sweden is the only competitor to this individual and has sold about six machines.

The people working there are very, very skilled and highly technical. The president, Don Kobi, and his wife run the firm. They pour just about all the profits back into research and development; therefore, every cent that is taken out in tax from that very successful operation basically prevents them from putting more money back into their business in terms of research and development. He told a group of us, with a reporter present, that he was going to open a sales office in Buffalo, New York. His interest in opening this office in Buffalo was in order to obtain a better sales presence in the United States. He made no bones about it.

He said if the NDP government of Ontario continues to spend and tax as it now has done in this budget, he was going to have no option but to move. He said: "I love Ontario. I'm a Canadian; I've always been a Canadian. I think Ontario is a terrific province but it's going to chase me, my company and my employees out of this province and out of this country because I can't compete, I can't keep my research and development at the level I need to be able to keep it at. I need to pay my people very well because they're very skilled people. I won't be able to pay them and have the government taking half their paycheques or nearly half their paycheques when they can look across the border and get a job with any number of employers in the United States, which has lower tax rates than here. I won't be able to compete."

I think that is a sad reflection on this government in terms of its continued policies of spending more and requiring greater tax increases, not only the one we are facing today, which is relatively minor in relation to the kinds of taxes we are going to face in this province over the next four years, as has been indicated by the Treasurer of this province.

I want to conclude by saying that we strenuously oppose any tax increase within this budget. We hoped that a year ago this new government would have come in with a very cautious approach to spending. This government did not take our advice. It went out and said it was going to spend more money even though we were in a recessionary period, and now we have heard over the last two, three or four weeks it is in deep trouble. Now it is going to have to slash expenditures. It is going to have to cut spending when we told it a year ago it should have started at that time.

This government has given to the civil service of Ontario a 14.3% rise in its salary operating budgets. That means while the rest of Ontario has been suffering, the government has raised the numbers within its ranks, expanded the number of people it has hired and increased their salaries while other people are losing their jobs. We only wish the government had taken our advice a year ago and it would not have found itself in the tight spot it is in at the present time.

We expect this will not be the last increase to income tax for people in Ontario, but we suggest to the government that if it continues to raise income taxes and other taxes, it will force people who have the mobility to move out of this province to sell their professional services in other parts of North America, Europe and other countries. We believe very strongly that penalizing any levels of income by raising income tax levels is no longer an accepted method of dealing with raising of revenue.

Other countries which are looking to the global market and which understand that the most valuable resources within their country are their best engineers, their best technicians and their best scientists, who can sell their assets other ways, have said, "We're going to drop income tax rates and gather our revenues in some other ways."

I would not have made that argument five, six or seven years ago, but the economy of the world has changed dramatically in the last four or five years, and those who do not compete in the global economy in terms of their tax structures and their productivity are going to end up with a population with a much lower standard of living because they will have lost the people who are creating the wealth. Last week I travelled to Cuba with a number of my friends in the Legislature.

Interjections.

Mr Sterling: Yes, I did, and I was proud to go and I was proud to pay my own way there and back. I paid my own way, as three other members of the Conservative caucus did and four members of the Liberal caucus did. The Cuban government paid for our hotel and our meals, which cost about $300. Our plane ticket cost about $500.

It was a tremendous experience. I was only saddened by the fact that there were six New Democratic Party members who had signed up for the trip who were told at the very last moment, "You can't go even though you put your money out for a ticket." They were told this at the last moment. Even though during all the negotiations the Premier knew that all parties had agreed to go and were willing to pay our way—it was not going to cost the Ontario taxpayer one red cent—the Premier insulted the country of Cuba by pulling his people back off this trip at the very last moment. I think that was a terrible insult to the hospitality of the people of Cuba and I do not think he should have done that.

1600

Quite frankly, I was hoping they would come to see the disastrous effects of a socialist country. I really wish the NDP members had been there, because the people of Cuba are suffering from the effects of a socialist government that has been in power for 32 years. I know the people of Ontario would never give the socialists a 42-year mandate, as they did the former Progressive Conservative government, because there would not be anything left of the province if it ever went the way of Cuba.

Basically what has happened over the last 32 years, in terms of my judgement, having been there and having met with many of their officials and in talking to many of the people on the street—who are willing to talk with people quite freely, which was a little bit unexpected by me—is that the government has provided better education and a better health care system for the people of Cuba than they had prior to the revolution. But what has also happened over those 32 years is that there has been no wealth creation. Nothing has worked that has been run by the state, where it has been able to create real wealth for the country.

Fidel Castro finds himself in the position now of having cash reserves of about $100 million. That is what it costs to run our health care system for one day. That is what his total cash reserves are at this moment. It does not leave much in terms of dealing with the situation with the Soviet withdrawal from Cuba.

Over that period of time, the Cuban government let the infrastructure of the country fall down. People cannot get water; they get water for six hours a week. They get gas for one day a week. When you drive through the streets of Havana, you smell charcoal. People are cooking with charcoal because there is no gas or energy to heat their food. Several times during our meetings with officials, the lights went out. Blackouts were quite common.

What this government has to learn is that you cannot continue to provide social programs without paying attention to the creation of wealth within your country. That was driven home so graphically, in a desperate way, in the country of Cuba. Even though I quite frankly believe that Fidel Castro and those who were in the revolution—we met some of them in Cuba—were quite genuine in wanting to improve the lot of the people of Cuba, what they have done now, in effect, is to take the people almost back to their position before the revolution.

They have increased or improved some of the services which the people are now receiving. You have to line up for an hour to get a loaf of bread, and each individual is entitled to one loaf of bread per month. You have to line up for an hour to get a litre bag of milk, if you are lucky enough to get one. If you have lots of pesos, and you get paid about 200 pesos per month which is the average salary, the pesos do not buy anything. There is nothing in the stores, absolutely nothing, except in the tourist hotels where they take, ironically, American cash.

What has happened in Cuba should be a good lesson for these people. I really do wish the six NDP members who had signed up for the trip had come, because I think they would have come back here as raving capitalists. I think they would have come back here and said to the Premier: "Hey, you've got to stop this socialist spending. You've got to stop spending your money all over the place. You've got to pay attention to creating wealth in your country. You've got to encourage the entrepreneurs. You've got to encourage the skilled people to get active in the marketplace. You've got to give them a chance. You've got to leave them alone in order to be able to undertake the process of building wealth in your country so you can spread that wealth around as a country to the people at the low end of the totem pole."

I have spoken for a short period of time this afternoon on this bill. As I indicated to members, the specific part of it is rather small, but we have heard during the last campaign and during this past year from so many businesses saying, "It keeps inching up on us: the 2% health payroll tax, a little higher income tax, a little more of this, a little more of that." What happens within the political sphere is that governments try to get away with shoving the rate up a little bit each year. Eventually the cumulative effect of all these tax increases pushes people and companies like those owned by Don Kobi in Paris, Ontario, over the brink and out of the country.

It is not just Don Kobi who loses because he can no longer live in this province. It is not only those engineers, scientists, mathematicians, who would not go with him who would lose. It would be the Ontario taxpayer who would lose, because businesses like his, which sell 75% to 80% of their product outside this country, create a tremendous amount of wealth for the rest of us. That wealth gets distributed around this country and around this province in various and different ways.

We vehemently oppose this tax increase, as we opposed the other four or five tax increases which have been introduced by this government. We tell this government to bring its act into place, to start showing the business people, the people who make the wealth, that it is serious about fiscal responsibility, that it is going to give them a chance to earn the wealth to pay the taxes. Then it will gain their trust and their confidence. Until they do that, they are not going to turn this recession around and they are not going to get back the good jobs we have lost, because those good jobs are gone for ever.

We firmly believe this government has not yet turned the corner in terms of fiscal responsibility. These tax increases would be unnecessary if this government were fiscally responsible in its spending.

1610

Mr Huget: I rise today in support of Bill 83, An act to amend the Income Tax Act. I am proud to speak to these amendments, as they provide for changes to the regulations that will see the largest enrichment to the Ontario tax reduction program in its history. I congratulate my colleague the Minister of Revenue, and indeed the government of Ontario, for their commitment to improving the fairness of the tax system.

Through these amendments, this government will implement a program to benefit the people of Ontario at the lower end of the income scale. For the 1991 taxation year, supplements now provided to families for each dependent child age 18 and under and for each dependant with a disability will increase to $350 from $200. This enrichment will benefit 115,000 Ontario citizens claiming supplements for dependent children and for dependants of any age who have disabilities.

This tax relief for people with low incomes will bring to 700,000 the number of low-income taxpayers who will have their Ontario income tax reduced or eliminated. In simple terms, it means that a single parent with two dependent children and earning $22,500 per year will no longer pay Ontario income tax.

Our government is committed to improving the fairness of the tax system. Coupled with these increased supplements to low-income taxpayers, the minister is also proposing to increase Ontario's income surtax. We are implementing a more progressive tax system by ensuring that those taxpayers at the upper end of the income scale pay a more equitable share of the tax burden. The amendments in this bill will see the surtax raised from 10% to 14% of Ontario income tax payable in excess of $10,000. This surtax only affects taxpayers with incomes of $84,000 or higher. Implementing this increase to the high-income surtax will add $60 million to provincial revenues. This rate increase is the first increase to the surtax since 1988. For the 1991 taxation year, approximately 3% of Ontario taxpayers will be affected.

Bill 83 reflects the importance the government of Ontario places in its belief that the people of Ontario need a fairer tax system. These amendments will directly help the people of Ontario who need it most. Low-income taxpayers and families will pay less Ontario taxes with the passing of this bill.

I wholeheartedly support this initiative of our government to support the people of Ontario who most need the support and to implement a tax system that brings a little more fairness to all the taxpayers of Ontario.

Mr Conway: I would like to take this opportunity to join the debate on the second reading of Bill 83, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act, seeing that it is one of the revenue bills that flows from the new government's April budget. I have enjoyed the comments earlier today from everyone, from the minister through to my friend the member for Carleton, who always inspires me in these matters.

I want to talk about the bill, about some of the issues that attend to it and the broader questions of taxation in the current climate. I say this and I offer my comments on the basis of having spent probably the best summer I have spent in a decade, almost all of it at home with my constituents. I have not had that experience, as I say, in about 10 years, and I have come back refreshed and enlightened in many respects. So I want to put my comments today, in relation to Bill 83, in the context of my own constituents in rural eastern Ontario, where I can assure you, Mr Speaker—I do not need to assure you because I know we represent largely the same kinds of electoral districts. I do not mean to suggest that it is like downtown Ottawa or downtown Toronto. But in rural eastern Ontario, on the basis of my fairly lengthy canvass—in the non-political sense of that word—in the summer of 1991, taxes are certainly on everyone's mind.

I would say to members that in my county of some 36 municipalities we have just had county-wide market value assessment, and there are not words in the English language to convey the passions that policy has evoked.

I might begin by just commenting on that tax policy, because I have been going to tax revolt meetings virtually every week of the last two or three months, and invariably at these meetings I am called upon for some comments. Where market value assessment is concerned, as a theory, I have no difficulty. I can make the case for market value assessment I think as well as anyone, I dare say anyone in this assembly—though I am not bragging; I think there are many people who could do it well.

But the theory of market value, as powerful as it is, and it turns squarely on those time-honoured principles of fairness and equity, takes on a rather different quality when you are in a room with people, many of them senior citizens, who are getting 200% and 300% and 400% tax increases. That tends to focus the mind and qualify the theory in a way that certainly leaves an impression.

I guess that is the fun of politics. As the elected officials, we are the ones who get to go and speak to the impact of theory in action, and it is a very illuminating and exciting possibility. If members would like, I know I see some of the very good officials from the Ministry of Revenue here, and I would be quite happy to invite them or any of my friends in the government to come to the meetings that will undoubtedly go on through the fall. You have to get there early, because they tend to fill up very quickly.

It is amazing the things one encounters, to see these senior citizens, and when I tell them that this good government will provide, what, $600, $700 by way of relief—I mean, I have got all the arguments, but gee, it just does not seem to win the day, because the 300% and the 400% increase kind of makes a point.

As I say, I support market value, absolutely. But with those wars on my mind, I turn to the question of Bill 83.

I should also betray another conflict of interest in this sense, because I do not disagree at all with the arguments that were advanced by the minister and, I believe, the member for Sarnia around progressivity, surely suggesting that those—not progressivity, but the argument that I think a traditional socialist and a traditional Liberal and a Progressive Conservative would accept is that any kind of fair tax policy must turn on the principle that you pay according to your ability to pay. I say that mindful that we have now in the land an element that does not subscribe to that, an element within the traditional confines of conservatism. But my conflict of interest is because I have long accepted and still accept that principle, that if you have got it you should pay.

I have heard the speeches. I have made some of them, though not nearly as often nor as eloquently as my friends opposite. But I want members to take what I have to say in light of the experience I have had in the last year. That is, you are looking at someone, a single person, whose taxable income 15 months ago was roughly some $80,000 and is today about $50,000. So now I have had—

Mr Bisson: Don't you feel upset about it?

Mr Conway: Not at all. That is the point, I say to my friend opposite. In a way that I would not have thought possible when I was sitting back in those university classes when we used to debate this, I am not unhappy at all. In fact, I now look and I say to myself what a fool I was. When I think about the life I have led over the last 15 months, I have never had a better time and words cannot convey the personal support I offer to my friends, particularly in the executive council, across the way, because whatever that is, that extra $30,000 or $35,000, boy, I will tell them—

Mr Bisson: You work for it.

1620

Mr Conway: Oh, do you work for it, in ways that I will not ever forget and in ways that I might never, ever want to embrace.

The point in this is that when members make the argument, "Let those who have pay," the assumption, of course, is that those who are prepared to do all of those things will continue to do those sorts of things to earn that kind of income, whether it is income as we earn it here or dividend income or whatever else.

I must say that on the basis of my own experience, quite frankly, the most interesting thing for me in the last year is taking a $35,000 pay cut and hardly noticing. I noticed, there is no question, but it is not a very great difference. I am not complaining about that. I certainly am not complaining about it in this instance. But I reflect on my own personal experience with the progressivity of the tax code, and I say to myself, when I think of the quality of life I now enjoy, why did I ever willingly lead that life for five and a half years?

We know there are all kinds of reasons, but there is a psychology that I think tends to get lost in much of the discussion around taxation, because there is the assumption, and here I think my friend the member for Carleton is right, that people will continue to go out and risk their capital, or whether they are in the labour union or in the business organization or a cabinet minister or whomever, they will be prepared to work that 100-hour week, to put their families in jeopardy, their health in jeopardy and God knows whatever else, just so we can tax at an ever-increasing margin that extra effort or that extra risk.

I think we had better all begin to think upon and reflect upon that concept. I know I am, and maybe I am the ultimate yuppie. At 40, I have discovered things like quality of life and what that means, really.

Ms S. Murdock: Typical 40.

Mr Conway: Typical 40, perhaps.

Interjection.

Mr Conway: Listen, I intend to be around a long, long time, not here necessarily, but my gene pool suggests it, I say to the Attorney General.

I just want to put that out to start with.

Hon Mr Hampton: Sean, you were here when I was in university.

Mr Conway: That is apparently true, and when I look at the pension scheme that was organized by my predecessors, apparently I am going to have to stay here a long, long time, because I could never justify my entitlement under the current conditions to my beleaguered taxpayers, in the here and now at least.

Hon Mr Hampton: You were not saying that a year ago.

Mr Conway: Oh, yes, I was. That is why I was always so popular at the Board of Internal Economy.

Hon Mr Hampton: That was then, this is now.

Mr Sterling: We all do not get elected at 21.

Mr Conway: That is right. We all do not get elected, as my friend the member for Carleton says, at a very young age.

My point, though, is that on the basis of my summer experience, the issue of taxation is very much on my constituents' minds, and looking at the provincial press I get the impression that it is on people's minds everywhere, and of course the issue of taxation is not unconnected to the question of expenditure.

Here I do not intend to rethrash a lot of old straw, but I do think some observations are in order, and they are the following.

To begin with, all politicians, irrespective of their ideological proclivity or their party's stripe, are more interested in spending money than taxing for it. I know I am, and I have not met anyone here over the 16 years it has been my privilege to be a member who would give lie to that observation.

I was very interested. I thought the previous speaker, the member for Sarnia, was very to the point, but he began his speech by talking about what this tax measure would do in terms of providing a lot of relief, in other words, the kinds of benefits that it would make possible. Then of course the speech wound up by saying that this will draw out another $60 million from the hides of Ontario taxpayers.

The issue for me increasingly is, how are politicians going to cope with that contradiction which is out there, that contradiction being, "I want more services, and particularly more of the high-cost services, but I want my taxes to be lower?"

An hon member: Therein lies the rub.

Mr Conway: Therein, as the member says, lies the quandary and the contradiction.

I thought it interesting the other day. I was driving someplace within the constituency and CBC news reported that Statistics Canada has just completed its, what, diennial survey of household income, and as I remember the news clip—and I might be in error; I do not think I am—in the decade of the 1970s, according to that report, Statistics Canada found that Canadian household income had risen by something like 23%. In the decade just ended, Canadian household income had moved virtually not at all. It remained static.

If that is true, and I have got to believe it is true, there is a powder-keg there for all of us in politics, because of course that rising tide of expectations is running into a wall of whatever, taxation, but the sense—and one certainly gets this from the opinion-making middle class—that their kids may not be as well-off as they have been is everywhere in the land, and they are beginning to point fingers. They are beginning to point fingers in a way that is going to cause the political establishment a great deal of challenge.

I thought it absolutely amazing last night to watch that New Brunswick election, and I watched it from start to finish. According to the CBC Fredericton desk, last night in the greater Fredericton area, in the counties of York, Sunbury and the city of Fredericton, something like 44% of the population voted for the Confederation of Regions party. Some 40% of the voters in greater Fredericton voted CoR. I am talking from the experience last year of an electoral district, North Renfrew, where they got 20%, and it was something to behold.

Last night, in the analysis of the entrails, so to speak, the analysis of those results, it is quite clear who was voting for the CoR party, very clear who was voting, and it is a very different kind of person voting for CoR than a lot of people might imagine.

I do not see any evidence to suggest that trend is going to stop. I am not saying for a moment that we ought to cower and take our marbles and go to another forum, not at all. It is going to be interesting, for example, to see those people now getting into the Legislature and putting some kind of consistent program before the voters. According to the analysis last night, part of the appeal of CoR was, “We’re going to cut taxes and we’re going to deliver services more efficiently.” I happen not to believe that was the reason CoR did as well as it did, and in many of those Fredericton ridings it did phenomenally well.

The issue for me in this bill is, how are we going to manage our resources in a way to cope on the one hand with the debt that is out there, and on the other with all the expectations people have of government?

I am not going to say for a moment that when I look back over our five and a half years in office we were the acme of perfection, because clearly we were not. It is true what the Tories say of the Liberals, that we did tax, and we taxed considerably, because it was our view, imperfect as it may seem to them, that if we were going to do some of the things, particularly in areas like health and the environment, we had to pay for them. The debt load we saw was sufficient to make us think that we had better start paying now if we were going to consume now, which is not my view of Keynesianism at all.

But I recognize, and we had around our cabinet table many discussions about: “God, do you really want to go home and defend something like the tire tax? Do you really want to go home and defend this increase in the income tax? Do you want to go home and defend this increase in the gasoline tax?” I will tell members that it was not decided easily, but almost always we opted, I think rightly, for more investment in these areas. We were prepared to take the hit we took at the time, and with very considerable effect, largely to the credit of the Conservative Party in the general election of last year, over the cumulative effect of our tax-and-consume policies in the mid-1980s.

1630

I would say in deference to an aside made by the minister of business in the new government, my good friend the member for Etobicoke-Rexdale, that we governed during a period of time of very considerable buoyancy in the economy. Much of our program, to be frank, was funded by growth. The new government is faced with a very different set of economic realities. I do not feel at all embarrassed about anything we did, in the main, in relation to the New Democrats because I do not ever remember anything but, “It’s not enough,” and, “It’s too late.” The Tories were in a somewhat different position.

I want to say something about my friends in the Conservative Party, particularly the Taxfighter from North Bay, whose riding is very near to mine. I tend to read the North Bay Nugget a great deal. I pick up the Nugget almost every week and there is the Taxfighter calling for yet more expenditures in North Bay. What he wants to spend on the hospitals in North Bay and area alone would certainly rattle most of the tax levers I can see that are available to any provincial finance minister in Ontario.

Here I want to say to my friends in the Conservative Party what I would say to people in the Reform Party and the Confederation of Regions party. If what they want to do, I say to the real Tories and their cousins in CoR and Reform, is to cut, that is a perfectly fair offering. They should not be embarrassed about that. But I think they have to be honest about that. For example, in Ontario some 65% of all expenditures fall in three categories, as I remember them: health, welfare and education.

If they are going to do something substantial on the expenditure count—by the way, I think we are all of us going to look carefully at the expenditure side. Not because any of us is going to want to; it is not a natural instinct for most politicians to look in that area. Who among us has ever found any kind of lasting constituency out there for tax-cutting?

I love my friends from Colin Brown’s old gang. Most of these people did very well by government. They accumulated their millions and then they went on to form things like, “God, we’ve got to do something about public expenditures.” I always want to look at those old accounts of London Life in the halcyon days of the 1950s and 1960s when Colin Brown was king of the roost. Boy, my memory is that people like Colin Brown did very well by government in those happy days. I was talking to a friend of mine in Fredericton this morning about a few of the people who got elected to the Legislature last night on the CoR program. I gather a couple of those people are very near and dear to government, know it very well and have had a very positive relationship with government spending.

So I come back to my main point. The Taxfighter is a good fellow. He is a smart man. He was on a school board. He has run an organization. He knows only too well what is involved. In the interest of the contemporary political debate, I think the Taxfighter, as do the rest of us, owes it to a much more sceptical and a much more informed electorate to indicate in some detail what he is going to cut and how he is going to do it and with what impact and effect.

The great benefit of the New Democratic Party coming to office in Ontario, it seems to me, is what I call its aiding and abetting the maturation of the political process in Ontario. By that I simply mean that now all the major parties in Ontario have had an experience in government. I have no little sympathy for what my friends have been through in the last few weeks. I bet they would love to get their hands back to about June 1990 and be able to rewrite the Agenda for People with a view to, "My God, we might some day have to deliver on some or all of this." We all know what happened, and I want to say to them they are not the first group to which this has happened. I suspect we are all going to be served—that is, the community will be served—much more effectively over the longer term by dint of that experience.

But I hope, I say to my friend the member for Carleton, that all of the politicians here or those who aspire to come here are now going to be much more careful and candid as they put together their electoral manifestos, because people are going to expect that (a) they have thought about what it is they are offering and (b) they have—

Interjection.

Mr Conway: I am quite proud to say to my friend the Attorney General that when I look back over the five and a half years of our experience, by and large, I think we had a relatively good record. I will be mischievous and say I do not think we had a situation, from an ideological point of view, that was as exquisitely embarrassing as the retreat from Delawana. The government's Dunkirk will be Delawana and it will be that insurance policy. I understand why the government did what it did and I congratulate it for it, because I think it took guts. I am perfectly up front. I think it would have been absolute madness for the government to have done what it said it was going to do.

But I come back to the point of my friend the Attorney General. I am hardly objective on the subject, but I do not think my copybook is blotted, blotted as it is, by anything quite so spectacular as the retreat from the commitment on public auto insurance.

Now I want to come back to my other point, that in the new politics surely as an elected assembly or as parties we have an obligation to say to the taxpayers that if we are going to spend money, we are going to tax for that money. Now we have another alternative, and the NDP has I think taken about as maximum advantage of that option as it is possible to conceive, and that is of course to put it off and pile it up as debt.

Let me say before I am misunderstood here that the government has three choices. Everyone knows what they are. You can raise taxes, you can cut programs, you can borrow the money, or of course, as the former Chair of Management Board would say, you can do a careful mix of all three.

Hon Mr Hampton: You left out Ronald Reagan.

Mr Conway: The Attorney General makes a point about Ronald Reagan. Let me say something about Reagan. I am halfway through Haynes Johnson's wonderful book called Sleepwalking Through History. If members have not read it, it is a look at the Reagan years. We all laugh at Ronald Reagan, and I am disposed to laugh at him too because he is not my kind of guy. I think if I were in the United States I would be a Democrat.

But before I laugh too loud at Ronald Reagan, one of the things I would be thinking is that Ronald Reagan devastated the FDR coalition, absolutely wrecked it. What happened to all those Democrats in places like Chicago and particularly in the upper middle states? All of those people who were the backbone of the Democratic party are now what are called Reagan Democrats. So I might want to laugh at the Gipper, but in my business it is the electoral calculus that counts and I might just find that after all the laughing I was standing with substantially fewer clothes and that much of my audience had left home and gone over to the Gipper's sideshow. It is interesting to see why they made that switch.

Hon Mr Hampton: Doesn't that seem like the federal Liberals in Quebec?

Mr Conway: Listen, absolutely. I come back to my own experience in the last election campaign; 20% of the people in my riding voted for the Confederation of Regions candidate, many of my friends, most of my neighbours as it turned out. That was a very interesting experience.

The Acting Speaker (Mr Farnan): May I bring the member back to the topic of the day. I would also remind the Attorney General that he will also refrain from interference and allow the debate to continue on topic.

1640

Mr Conway: There are three options: tax, cut, borrow or some combination of two or three. The government put a budgetary plan before the province and the Legislature four and one half months ago that raised some taxes. I do not think it cut any program. It indicated that over a period of four years it was willing to raise the borrowing by roughly $35 billion.

I do not quarrel with some borrowing, because I do not think there was any government—Frank Miller in 1983, on a budgetary plan of many, many fewer dollars, I think contemplated a deficit of something like $3 billion. Any Tory who tells you they would not have borrowed any money is forgetting what happened in 1982-83. I do not fault Frank Miller as much now as I might have then, because I understand from my experience in government what happens when revenues start to collapse.

I would simply say to my friend the Minister of Health, my current worry is that I think the budgetary plan, carefully thought out, is coming off the rails. We are going to hear more about that in the next few weeks, and I hear from the exchanges in the daily question period that expenditures are several hundreds of millions of dollars above where they had been projected, for a lot of good reasons I can anticipate.

But Bill 83 asks us to support taxation, and this bill will pass, because of course the Legislature has a majority of members who have committed their loyalty to the current government.

Interjection.

Mr Conway: How else do I think about the member for Oakwood and the member from Welland? I mean, do not push me on that. I am trying to be fair.

The point I want to make is that we are going to have to, I think, as elected officials—again I speak only as the member from Renfrew—but what message do I bring from my constituents to this? It is simply this: “We have had it, Conway. We have had all the taxes that we can stand and we do not want any more.”

As I say, what are those taxes? Quite frankly, this tax is not going to affect a great number of people in my constituency. There certainly are a number. Most of the people I represent are well, well below those income levels. I have unemployment rates now that I have never seen in the 16 years I have been a member.

In places like Barry's Bay and west Renfrew county, the resource economy has collapsed. There is not any work for hundreds and hundreds of people. That is a function of a lot of things. It is an international condition, it is a function of our dollar, and it is a cyclical industry, the forestry industry.

But understand when some logger, who might be earning a gross income of $25,000 or $27,000 or maybe $18,000, picks up the paper and sees what? Or, more importantly, gets the mail. In the Barry's Bay paper the other day, the headline was “1992 Hydro Rates to Increase by 27%.” I simply say to my friends opposite, a 27% increase in hydro.

I just picked up the mail before coming in here this afternoon, and I see another one of my constituents, a small business person, writing, saying 40% increase in his workers' compensation rate, 40% increase in his WCB rate. His gasoline tax is going to increase by 30%.

Interjections.

Mr Conway: Listen, I do not know what it is. I am just the member from Renfrew. I am telling you what my constituents are saying, and they are saying that they have had enough taxation. I have got some news for them. There is going to be more, and it is going to come from not just a New Democratic government. But do not believe the Liberal or the Tory or the CoR or Reform candidate who says, “Elect us. We are going to reduce taxes.” I am from Missouri and I am very, very sceptical of that.

One of the reasons that cannot and probably will not happen is that if you look at the provincial budget, some 40% of it—probably more if you count that part of the social services budget that relates to health—has to do with health services.

Our population is aging at a significant rate, and we know that most of the health services are consumed in the last years of one's life, so we are heading into a couple of decades where our population is going to age significantly, and that is going to mean one thing. The pressure on the health and social service budgets is going to grow significantly. Just to hold on to what we have got, paying no regard to the demographic changes that are at work out there, is going to put enormous pressure on whomever sits in that chair as Treasurer or the Chair of Management Board or the executive council.

I say to some of the asides offered just a few moments ago by the very distinguished members of the Treasury bench, the ministers of Health and Housing, that listening to the people—and is that not the cachet? Is that not why we want a constituent assembly? Listen to the people. Well, I am one of their elected officials and I am here to tell the government what the people of Renfrew are saying.

They are saying: “We've had enough. We think your market value assessment is a hell of a lot less than is offered. Spare me the theory. All I've got is the 300% increase in my property taxes; hydro rates going up by 12%, 15%, 27% and I don't have a job; gasoline taxes going up by 30%.” They say, “I read in the Ottawa Citizen, ‘This is to conserve,’ and I agree. I'm a farmer living in Ross township. Now you tell me which OC Transpo bus I'm supposed to take. Tell me which TTC streetcar comes through rural Wilberforce.” They are right. A 30% increase in gasoline taxes. So people in Renfrew county can do what? They have absolutely no choice but their car and their half-ton truck.

That is what the people say and I am not unsympathetic to that. I understand there is another side. I am not going to offer them cuts in many of those taxes because we have got to find the revenue somewhere. But that is what is on their minds. My friend the member for Carleton rightly draws our attention to what are we doing as a community to create the new wealth. Because the old wealth, certainly in my part of the province—what has been the source of economic activity in the main in a place like Renfrew county? It has been forestry and agriculture. From the perspective of 1991, those two sectors are in dire straits, to coin a phrase, and people are losing their jobs. They are losing their farms. Not all of the jobs will be gone for ever, but many will. There is no question.

So what are we doing by way of economic and tax and energy policy to create an environment where somebody who might be earning $95,000 or $125,000 might actually think about taking some of that reserve capital and risking it to create a small business in Killaloe or in Combermere or in Chalk River or in Beachburg? Because if we do not create a climate where those people are prepared to do that, then the Bill 83s of the world are going to be entirely redundant.

I must say the assumption of this province over the last 25 or 30 years, largely the post-war period, has been that growth will see us through. I think we have all come to understand that there may very well be some limits to growth that are going to impinge very directly on a prosperity that has been taken for granted, not just by governments and by the élites in this province but by the community at large.

I hope I am not going to be Cassandra-like in imagining tough days ahead but I do believe we have to understand that we must create a climate—and tax policy is absolutely essential to this. The members know the old line used to be, “Make the rich pay; tax them,” in those great speeches by David Lewis and Stephen Lewis. I guess the good thing about this is that it will catch both Stephen and Michele and it will not catch me. It will certainly catch Stephen in spades, depending on what kind of corporate arrangement he has—Stephen Lewis, that is.

But I remember those days when Stephen Lewis would just bring this assembly to the edge of its collective seat by talking about making the rich pay, and there was Ed Broadbent and David Lewis on the corporate welfare bums. Very powerful stuff until you get to the actual responsibility of office and someone says to you, “The trouble with capital is it’s highly mobile.”

1650

The member for Carleton may have lots of money and he may be the guy we may want to encourage some investment in Carleton county, but he has the option, of course, of just going either across the Ottawa River into another jurisdiction or not too many miles down Highway 16 to another country. It is like this Sunday shopping business Mr Speaker. In Pembroke we sit on the edge of the inter-provincial bridge and what do you think is the first thing that is at the other side of the interprovincial bridge? It is one of these wonderful Quebec stores that provides an array of services, including wine, beer and liquor.

When you give people any kind of alternative and you let the market work, it is an amazing phenomenon. I am always amazed at what I see at that store when I drop by occasionally, just to see that it stays within the bounds of Quebec provincial policy. But if we do not create the new wealth, we are not going to have bills like Bill 83 to worry about. There is some real evidence, as the member for Carleton suggests, that we are having a real struggle in creating that new wealth.

I want to say, as I think about taking my seat, that we have something called a Fair Tax Commission. I want to encourage all the members of the NDP to do what I know they will do, and that is to take an active interest in the Fair Tax Commission. I am going to say something that may be a little bit impolitic and almost rude. I went to fill in one day not too long ago on the standing committee on agencies, boards and commissions, literally just to fill the chair because they were short of people, and in came a certain Neil Brooks, whom I had never met before. I do not even think I have heard of him. I do not know what his academic credentials are, but undoubtedly they are significant.

But I have never in 16 years left a hearing, and I did not say anything. For once in my life I just listened. If ever I heard a Loony Tunes, it was that day. I went home thinking, “Wow.” I remember those Liberals, and of course they are just Liberals and we know that New Democrats are better, tougher, more ideological, more vigorous. But Delawana, of course, I say to the member from Orono, has left me wondering.

I thought to myself, “Do you remember those days in 1981 when poor old Allan MacEachen, himself a former professor of economics, brought in a federal budget to clean up some loopholes and touch the bases of fairness and equity?” I am not an economist but I am a politician, and I watched what happened. It was something to behold. The best part of that—not the best part of it. It was difficult listening to Liberal members who had to go to the Rotary Club and explain what Allan MacEachen and Stuart Smith and whoever else were about. Oh, they got quite the hearing. It reminded me of those market value meetings that I go to, because I know the logic. The theory is excellent—fairness, equity; no question about it. It is just, as I say, that the sound of it is appreciably different from the feel of it.

I am just here listening to Neil Brooks. I am not like some of these other people over here. Those people have won the responsibility of office and they have a right to do what they want to do, and we have a right to oppose responsibly, but I keep getting letters and I keep hearing it everywhere that, “We want to do this and we want to do that, but we’re going to have to be guided by the Fair Tax Commission.” I am just sitting here thinking, who is the driving force at the Fair Tax Commission, the man who I gather the government wanted to make chairman but could not, for some reason I cannot remember at the present time? Neil Brooks?

I am going to say to those people over there, because they are the front line, as the Minister of Health would say the primary care givers, the first line of offering and the first and last line of defence, that I have a feeling they should probably keep a very careful watch on Neil Brooks and what he has to suggest, because the great difficulty in a modern responsible parliamentary government is that there is so much going on that you cannot keep track of it. It is very complicated, so at some point you are going to get some new taxation theory applied to tax law. That is going to land on the heads of people in Orono and Gooderham and Point Edward in a way the government might not have understood, but it is going to have to explain it because everybody is going to fully expect that it was the architect of this in some reasonable, if not in some intimate, detail.

I simply want to take this opportunity to say to my friends opposite, beware the Fair Tax Commission, not because it is not a good idea, not because there are not good people on the commission—I believe there clearly are—but because I gather that Neil Brooks is a guiding light, and on the basis of just one two-hour experience, I have to say that that, more than anything else, would make me do what I know I will never do, which is think about picking up and moving on.

In summary, I say about Bill 83, that taxation is the end of the day for all of us, and my friends opposite have chosen to make the richer pay. That is not something that in theory a Liberal who knows something about liberalism can oppose, so I will oppose it as part of the budgetary plan with which I do not agree. But the day and the hour of reckoning is fast approaching. One of my government colleagues who is sitting in this room this afternoon is hours away from some very difficult phone calls, apparently.

We are going, not just because of the economic situation, but the changing political times—I repeat, 40% of the people in greater Fredericton voted CoR. Members opposite know who that is, of course. That is a substantial element of the New Brunswick public service. That is who voted CoR last night. You do not win Fredericton North in a walk and not have a substantial public service vote.

Now this may be just an aberration, but I suspect it is not. I suspect the fundamentals of politics, as those of us who have been around the business for 15 or 20 years, are changing as we speak, and one of the fundamentals of that change focuses upon taxation. I am told by analysts and sociologists that the yuppies are a very different breed than their parents. I should not call them yuppies—the boomers. The boomers have a totally different attitude around these questions of taxation and services, and I know my friend the Minister of Health is in that category.

One of the things, apparently, that the boomers are saying is that they have a much more defined limit as to what they will stand in terms of taxation than their parents had, so I simply make the point that we are not going to be able to continue as we have, though no one should believe anyone in this assembly who tells you he or she is not going to raise taxes. That is a deception of a laughable kind, and I cannot believe anybody would believe it any more. My friends opposite should remember they have a budgetary plan that has a number of assumptions that I would challenge as being too optimistic. With all of that, five months ago, they opposite realized that they were going to have to borrow $35 billion over the next four years, if all goes well, and early returns suggest it is not going well.

I suspect that when we get into January and February, the retail sales numbers are going to look very different from the projections. That is going to be a function of a number of things: very sluggish confidence in the economy at the present time; cross-border shopping, which is not something we want to talk about today, I suppose, but surely there is no one over there now who privately does not understand that for the pure economic health of the province, and particularly border towns like Sarnia and Windsor and Prescott and Kingston, and even those areas back of the front, like in my area, Renfrew and Brockville and Pembroke, cross-border shopping alone is going to attack those revenue projections in a way that we are probably going to be made painfully aware of in three or four months' time.

If everything goes as well as all of the optimistic assumptions of the budget of April 29 calls for, we are still going to double the provincial debt, a debt accumulated over 125 years, in but four. Government members all realize what that is going to do to the Treasurer 10 years from now.

Now we all hope that growth and a variety of other things make that unnecessary, but we are getting quickly to the point where our real options are being focused in a very narrow, painful way.

1700

I repeat, as I conclude my remarks, the people of Renfrew, who are increasingly out of work and who, quite frankly, want the services—they want the health care, they want social assistance for those in need of that service, they want better highways, they want all of those things—have had it with taxation. They have had it with hydro rates that are two and three times inflation, WCB rates that are up 40% this year over last, school boards—do not get them going on the subject of school boards, because, of course, a lot of these people are people with jobs.

If you live in Renfrew county, who are the people in these troubled times who are in good shape? Well, there is Conway. He is at the Legislature and he is earning $55,000 or $60,000 and he is in out of the cold for four or five years. There are the teachers, the nurses, the doctors and, yes, the public service. There is no great desire to be unfair to any of those people. And I might add the people at Ontario Hydro and Bell Canada; I think in some ways those are probably the two best categories of people for many of the folks in my area.

The unemployed logger in the west end of Renfrew county who has been out of work for months is now out of unemployment insurance, is having a hard time getting any kind of social assistance, has four kids, has a mortgage, is looking at gasoline prices going up 30% and looking at hydro rates on which he is wholly dependent because, of course, there is no natural gas in the neighbourhood either. There is no natural gas for 50 miles. They are looking at the daily press and they see the teachers are not happy, the nurses are not happy, the public servants are not happy, the transit workers are not happy, and they say to me: "But those people have jobs, and I know there are all kinds of grievances that attend to that kind of employment, but they are earning I hear in the paper $40,000, $50,000, $60,000 and $70,000. I have no job, and you tell me that my property taxes are going up, my hydro is going up, my everything is going up. Government-imposed taxes everywhere are going up 5%, 10%, 15%. Well, I don't have it to give."

I make all of the arguments about, well, we have to have good health care and we have to have—they say: "We don't disagree, but don't you understand? I have no job. Worst than that, I have no prospect of a job. I read in the paper and I heard on the news the other night that government has an energy and an environmental policy that is going to make any kind of job here in the resource and agricultural community virtually impossible."

I go to Deep River, a town of 5,000, and of course they look at the government's plan and say: "Well, there's no more nuclear power." That might be good news everywhere, but in this town of 5,000 people, that is the job. That is the General Motors of the north end of my county, and they are not unmindful that they may in fact face a grim future by dint of provincial government decisions.

But forgetting the individual pieces of that, the summer of 1991 sends me back here with a very clear mandate from the people of Renfrew county that they expect all of us to do a better job of managing the billions of dollars they have provided us with. I guess they also expect—and this is a very difficult issue—that 130 people in three different political parties are going to be able to find a broader public interest in a better way than we have been able to do in the last few years.

I think they expect—my words, not theirs—that maybe we are going to somehow begin to stare down some of the political action committees that have driven much of this budget over the years. Whether any of us has sufficient backbone and resilience to do that remains to be seen. You are talking to someone who lost some of the significant battles so I am not altogether sanguine about anyone's ability in 1991. It is interesting watching the President of the United States trying to deal with one of the really powerful ones at work in Congress. Boy, it is going to be interesting to see how that gets resolved.

But, you know, on behalf of the unemployed and Ed Broadbent's ordinary Canadians whom I represent, the people who do not have these good jobs, the job that the member for Renfrew North has, you know, the one that pays the good salary and has the good—the person who works as a clerk in the shoe store in Pembroke, the person who works in the lumber industry, the person who is a farmer, boy, they are increasingly feeling left out. They are not prepared to take it much longer. By “taking it,” I mean just more after more after more taxes and a sense sometimes that some of the state monopolies are not even available to deliver the services they absolutely require.

Where this leads us, I do not know. It leads me to conclude my remarks today by saying that it is always a pleasure to engage in one of these debates.

The Acting Speaker: The member for Victoria—my apologies. The member for Carleton.

Mr Sterling: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker, and I forgive you for your mistake. I do not know if this is the first time you have sat in the Chair, but I would like to, on my own behalf and on behalf of my party, congratulate you on your appointment as First Deputy Chair.

I do want to say that I believe that the member for Renfrew North has become a Progressive Conservative. I really think that his speech today was an acknowledgement of the fact that he has learned over the last five years as government and the one year of the New Democratic Party government that there is going to have to be another way, and the people in my party have now consistently said that those people on the lower end have to be protected, that the interest groups represented by powerful people, powerful unions and powerful interest groups, will have to be turned back at some point in order to be able to help the person who does not have a job or who has a job which pays very little money, and we agree with him wholeheartedly on his remarks on that part.

I want to say at the very end of it that the taxfighter from North Bay, the member for Nipissing, the leader of the third party, makes no apology in fighting for his hospitals and his schools in his area in terms of government programs that are available to the rest of the province and will continue to fight for them.

Mr Drainville: I must say that in listening to the comments that have been made by the member for Renfrew North I have to agree with him at least on one point that he made and that is that we live in a time of expectations. The other day when I was speaking to a number of business people who had joined the tax revolt in my riding, I had an opportunity to speak with them about some of the difficulties of finding the kind of balance we had to as a government in terms of expenditures and in terms of programs and in terms of taxation, and it was interesting that at the end of our discussion one of the people who had been speaking to me about the need to cut taxes and cut them to the bone came up to me and said: “You know, there is a part of Highway 35 that we need repaving on. It needs to be redone because we are having some problems with that part of the road. There are a lot of potholes, a lot of problems.” I turned to him and I said, “Don't you realize that it's rather incongruous that you're here to speak to me about cutting taxes and in the same breath you're saying that we have to have a new road?”

In fact this kind of doublemindedness, if you will, is very much part of the political climate today. I want to affirm some of the things that the member has said because it means that we in this place—and I do not mean just the government, by the way; I mean each one of us as members of this House and as people who are taking leadership in public life—have to deal with this doublemindedness. We have to deal with it not only in terms of the decisions that we make but also in the process of talking to people about what real expectations can be in the 90s. I think we all, not only the people in our ridings but also even in this House, have to understand that the expectations of what we can do in public office today in representing the interests that are there are sometimes too great. So we need to look at those things and we need to address them as carefully as we can.

1710

The Acting Speaker: The member for St Catharines.

Mr Bradley: Thank you, Mr Speaker, for the opportunity to take a couple of minutes to comment on the comments that were offered by the member for Renfrew North. I think he has portrayed for the House the revenue circumstances faced by this government, as they exist in this province, and why this government has to have this kind of revenue. It is most unfortunate that when they were counselled to do so some period of time ago, during the budget debate in particular, obviously they did not scrutinize each of the ministries carefully the way they should have.

Obviously they have to go through that now when they are involved in a constraint process. At that time, had the Chairman of Management Board, along with the Treasurer and those who sit on the Management Board, carefully looked at the expenditures of each of the ministries to determine which programs could be postponed, which programs that perhaps have been on for 10 or 20 years may not be useful in the context of the 1990s and which could be phased in at a different rate—they did not do that as successfully as they might have. As a result there is a scalpel now in the hands of the Chairman of Management Board which must cut wildly the expenditures of various ministries, which are obviously out of control, which have not been looked at as they should have been. The member for Renfrew North has stated the necessity of doing so on an ongoing basis for a government, so it is not faced with these crises.

I was also taken with the fact that he pointed out that this is seen as yet another tax on people. The only people in here who make $84,000 are on the other side, the government side of the House, but I guess there are many people in our society who make that who help make this province tick, and yet another tax is what is going to drive them out of Ontario.

Mr Cousens: In some respects it is fun to listen to the member for Renfrew North, because he is without a doubt one of the most eloquent of spokespeople for the Liberal Party in Ontario. I think he brings to light a number of issues we should all be reminded of, but one thing he did not talk too much about was when he was in power and in a position to hold back the spending of the government, to give counsel to the then Treasurer to try to get them as a government not to have as many tax increases as they brought in. What we see now is almost a penitent coming to the House saying: "Here you are raising the taxes. How dreadful this is."

I would like to remind other people who might be taking a moment to watch this House to reflect that the Liberals were very diligent in increasing taxes for the four or five years they were in power. For the first year they were in power they had all the support from the NDP, but then afterwards they were consistent in jacking them up and jacking them up.

Part of the reason this government is dealing with a deficit and some high-spending bad habits is that it began during the regime of the David Peterson government. People do not talk about David Peterson that much around here any more, but I do not want members to forget about him because he and his group of Liberals who ran this government during a time of prosperity did not put any money away for the tough days we are in now. This government came to power with empty coffers. We saw that during the election last summer when the former Treasurer proposed that there was going to be a surplus, and then what did it turn out to be? A huge deficit, so here we have one of those situations. I hope the member for Renfrew North will now come forth in his time for rebuttal.

Mr Conway: Just three points, the last one first: If the member for Markham had been here for the whole speech, I think he would have heard some time ago, when I did talk about some of the experiences I had—I can be even more specific. As I say, I well remember most of these battles I lost, arguing a fairly tough line about teacher pensions, the farm tax rebate, the municipal transfers of a couple of years ago. I not embarrassed to say that I lost most of those arguments. I was badly beaten up by some of the political action committees and some of my colleagues in cabinet. That is the fun of politics.

I do not say that everything we did was correct. I wish I had some of it to do over again, but in the main I think our record is not a bad one. It differed in some respects from some others. My view was that if you were going to consume at the rates people seem to want—and as Minister of Education I faced members from places like Markham, I think, with pressures for capital spending, and actually quite legitimate requests from my friend, but that did not change the fact that we had to go to Management Board and get tens and tens and tens more millions of dollars. I simply want to make that point.

Interjection.

Mr Conway: My friend the member for Carleton says I have become a Tory. I am not, although on certain economic areas I guess I do have a natural small-c conservative instinct that is part of coming from the Ottawa Valley, a sense of self-reliance. We have never enjoyed the kind of high tide of economic prosperity that is taken for granted in places like Ottawa and the industrial heartland of central and southwestern Ontario.

But I am not a Tory. Fundamentally I am a large-L Liberal, because I firmly believe that in this wonderful Upper Canada of ours, between the strident extremes of Conrad Black and Judy Rebick, there can be a moderate, sensible, progressive way.

Mr Cousens: It is difficult to follow an act like that, and to call it an act is really to begin to say when people are watching politicians, is it any wonder our reputation is so low? Is it any wonder they come along and say, "You know, I'd trust a car salesman more than you guys," because of the flip and the flop that goes on from when members are on that side of the House to when they are on this side sitting on the humble front benches.

The people of Ontario are not as stupid as some of us would make them out to be. I have to say that and correct a point. There is nothing about my friend the member for Renfrew North that is stupid. The man is a very wily, wise politician, but at this point he has what you would call a problem with his memory. Inasmuch as I have the floor and I can get back at him now, I am anxious that he consider—

Mr Bradley: The enemy is over there.

Mr Cousens: Oh, no. The people of Ontario have to remember they have two enemies, one of the past and one of the present. The sins of the one of the past are still being lived through today. What the Liberals did has created an awful lot of the problem we now have.

Mr Bradley: More money for Markham schools, more hospitals.

Mr Cousens: My memory on these things is very acute. I was here and I saw it. At the time my community of Markham was indeed one of the highest per capita incomes in the province. What these guys and those people have done is to take us and cut us down. We are having a tough time surviving, especially with the kinds of taxes and the problems we are having.

I want to correct one other thing. Whenever someone comes from a community that is growing as fast as we have been and asks for money for schools, hospitals or services, begs, gets on his knees and does all the grovelling he is supposed to do for them, it has to do with the fact that he is dealing with an ever-growing community. People say, "You're going to go there," but then they do not build the infrastructure, the roads and the services and yet they are getting all the tax dollars from these people moving into these high-growth communities.

When I come along and have to sit here meekly while someone says, "Markham is always on the grab"—he did not say it just like that, but it would appear that Markham is always looking for something—it is because it is growing so quickly, so therefore we need Highway 407 and thank goodness the member's government approved Highway 407 and this government is continuing it.

We need schools because our children, over 33% of them in the public system and over 50% in the separate system, are in portables. We are dealing with the need for the total infrastructure that goes into the building of a new community. We are talking about a community that has gone from the last census of about 70,000 to over 150,000 people today. We are there looking for the needs of our community, and every member of this House will do the same thing.

The problem we have is that there is only so much money to go around, and we are dealing with that whole problem now where those who have money are going to have it taken away from them again by this tax that is being proposed and will carry. The likelihood that the amendments the member for Carleton will bring forward will carry is not high at all. It is not likely that any member of the New Democratic Party will agree with what I have to say. They will follow their whip. They will vote according to the way the whip tells them to vote. They realize that it is a confidence vote and that if the government loses this important bill, it will have to go to the electorate. And the electorate today might not say the same thing that it did on September 6, 1990.

1720

I want to just make one final comment. The member for Renfrew North brings an awful lot to this House. I have to say it is good to hear him on his feet again, because he has had a lot to say over the years, and I would hope that he will continue this conversion process that he is on now. Even in his final words, he said, "I am a small-l and then a big-L Liberal." He was not sure whether he was a true Liberal or not and he was fighting with himself over just how big or how small the L was. I happen to know he is still a Liberal; he is sitting in the front bench. But he is also responsible for the huge taxes that his Premier, when he was in cabinet, brought forward and for the lack of leadership and financial responsibility that was part and parcel of why the Peterson government fell on September 6. The people of Ontario resented the taxation levels. They resented the failure that was brought to bear by virtue of their economic policy, or lack thereof, and the people of Ontario have spoken. I just do not think they should forget about the damage that was done by David Peterson and his followers during those years.

The funny part of it, though, is that if you start looking at the seven provincial budgets tabled from 1985 to 1991, five of those budgets have imposed tax increases or new taxes on the people of the province, with the only two exceptions during that seven-year period falling on election years—a marvellous coincidence. By the time election years come along, I think, the way this government is going, we will be so poor in Ontario that it will not have any more money to take away from the people.

Like the Liberals before them, the New Democrats believe the Ontario taxpayer is nothing but a milch cow to be squeezed at their convenience. Like the Liberals, the New Democrats find it easier to hike taxes than to make tough decisions on spending controls. The 1991 budget imposes an additional $1 billion in new taxes, with the biggest hit on the consumer taking the form of increases in gasoline taxes, and also this tax that we are talking about today in the House.

It sounds like a very small bill, Bill 83, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act, and like many bills in this Legislature, it does not take up an awful lot of space for reading. There is a blank page in the back. It is written in the standard way in which we now deliver our bills. It was presented on April 29, 1991. When it was tabled for first reading in the House, our caucus stood up and forced a vote on it. We disagreed with it. We felt it was a bad move for this government to be taking and we continue to feel that way now. The explanatory note and the act itself are short and brief, but what it will amount to is a $60-million increase to the coffers of the province of Ontario this year and $90 million thereafter on an ongoing basis: $90 million a year coming in from those people who are generally now making around $84,000 a year.

What this bill proposes to do is to take just a percentage of that amount in excess of $10,000 that they are paying in provincial income tax. For some people it does not amount to an awful lot of money; for others, it will amount to a great deal of money. For a person who is married with two children, total income of $100,000, with an RRSP contribution of $5,000—that is a total income of $100,000—this tax for this year will amount to $149.10. So people say, "It's not much." But it is the accumulation of all these taxes that continue to hurt the people who are driving the economy, who are making things go, that is continuing to undermine their confidence in themselves and in their ability to get ahead. On the one hand, you have inflation that is taking away their funds, and on the other hand, you have a government that continues to take it away.

What we have to face up to is that the people of Ontario now want to stop having the increase in taxes. They want to see a government that is in control of its budget and its spending. They want to see a government that is going to have a plan for the future that does not dig a bigger hole for ourselves and for the individual taxpayer. They are anxious that a government will stand up and truly be accountable.

What I feel right now is that we have a government that fails to understand the kind of damage it is doing to individuals across this province. First of all, it is a government that does not understand that the economy has to have a boost of confidence from a government that knows how to instil that confidence in business people. It does not do that, so business people are moving out of this province. They are in a position where they are saying: "Well, why stick around? I am worried about the future of Ontario."

So here we are in one of the toughest times in the economy of our province, certainly tougher than what I remember in 1981-82 and certainly tougher than many, many people have experienced. Young people are now coming on to the market in a position to buy a home, establish themselves, and then, because of the recession we are in, they have been forced to sell their home. On the main street of one of my communities, a young couple had bought a nice home. It was worth over $650,000. When the wife lost her job—

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: I am sorry, but that is the cost of property in some of our communities; $400,000 was the average price of a home in my community just a few years ago. So this young couple, with a home valued in excess of $650,000 and the mortgage and the carrying costs that go into that, was then forced—the husband then lost his job, and so they could not maintain their mortgages. Finally they had to forfeit on their house. The house went up for a forced sale. It went up for sale for around $400,000. Someone scooped it up. They are now out of a house. They are still unemployed. You are talking about a couple facing tremendous hardship in our age.

With this recession that we are into right now, we are dealing with many, many people who had jobs a year ago. Their jobs gave them a sense of comfort for the future. They felt a certain amount of security in their businesses. They were making a good dollar, they were able to pay their taxes and they were able to have a style of life consistent with the kind of income they were making. The number of people today who have had to cut back significantly because either the husband or his spouse has lost their job; the number of people today who are no longer confident that there is a future for them, especially since the income they are bringing in is now insufficient to deal with the costs of education for their children, the clothes, the gas, the car, their overhead, their insurance—all those things have forced them into a box they cannot control.

There are the number of people who are selling their homes in our communities, certainly in York region and, I think, to the south of us in Metropolitan Toronto, who are not able to maintain the level of expenditures that they did in better times. They are moving out, moving down, moving into another way of life, trying to find a house or a home a little bit farther out from Metropolitan Toronto, and then they will commute and come back in. Tough, tough times.

When a recession like this comes to haunt a province as much as it has ours, you are really looking at a situation where you would look for leadership from a government that says: "We're going to try to instil more confidence. We're trying to get the economy going. We're going to try to pull ourselves out of this recession so that those people who are unemployed, those people who are having tough times, will have an opportunity for the future." I hear nothing from this government that talks about job creation. I hear nothing from this government that is giving the kind of leadership that is going to cause people to say, "Look, there is a reason to stay in Ontario."

The very day that the Treasurer brought down the budget—April 29, I think it was—the Governor of North Carolina was visiting the Royal York Hotel here in Toronto. He sent an invitation to a number of the high-technology firms from northeast Metropolitan Toronto to come and meet with him so that he could talk about the opportunities in North Carolina. A number of my constituent companies went down to that meeting, and a number of them have decided to pull up roots from Ontario to go to the United States of America, because they see much better value for their dollar, a much better investment by their company, a much better future for them by being located in the United States of America than in York region or in Ontario.

1730

Mr Stockwell: An exodus.

Mr Cousens: So there is an exodus going on. I thank the member for Etobicoke West. There is an exodus, and it is a serious problem, because we are losing companies that structurally have something to offer our whole province and the economy. It is tax dollars lost, it is jobs lost, it is people's loss of confidence, and this recession is being fueled in part by the kind of leadership being given by this government.

I have to believe that free trade has contributed in some significant way to the loss of jobs in our marketplace, and yet there has not been the kind of investment in jobs and business by this government that I would have expected. We knew there would be some adjustment to be made with free trade, but neither this government nor the federal government has taken the initiatives to help make sure business has the confidence for the future. In fact, the lack of confidence is a major issue.

The beautiful story of Mary Poppins has to do with this. There is one little part in there about confidence in the banks. When confidence in the bank disappears, the bank is in major trouble. The same thing applies with a government in a province. If people lose their sense of confidence in the economic viability of the place where they are living, then something begins to crumble. Therefore, we are seeing it with people who have money to invest in Canada. They look at Ontario, and when they see a social democratic government in power here, with the kind of policies that are being initiated by it, they decide, "We'll go elsewhere." In fact, many have said over the last several months that Quebec is a more favourable place to invest than Ontario. I find that a tremendous reversal of what it was several years ago. People could not wait to get out of Quebec to come into Ontario after 1981 or 1982, and now we are seeing a swing back into Quebec.

Why is it that we are not creating the climate and the environment for business that gives them an optimism? One of the things this bill is doing is taxing them, and it is just putting an extra load on them so that there is less disposable income for them to come along and invest in other things.

I do not think there is any doubt that the people of Ontario are frustrated by the economic policies of the federal government as well. When they look at the federal government and the Ontario government, they cannot separate one government from the other, because both governments are building huge deficits for themselves. Those deficits are where you end up paying the interest off in the future and not really getting rid of the principal debt. That is what we are doing.

Because we have such large debt growing here and the federal government has such large debt, we then end up having to do several things to the Canadian dollar. The Canadian dollar ends up going far higher than it should be to allow us to be competitive with other markets. We have now an 88-cent dollar on the American dollar, and what it is doing is eroding that opportunity for trade between Canada, or Ontario, and the United States of America.

We also see people worried about the high interest rates, which were so high for so long. They are coming down to a level now that people will be able to carry their debt a little bit better, and maybe that is one of the things that is going to help the province. By virtue of the fact that interest rates are coming down, that will help the province to carry the large $9.7-billion debt promised in the budget of April 29. We all know that debt is going to be much more than that now. Grant Devine—I do not know how he can divine it for Ontario—says that the debt for Ontario could well exceed $14 billion this year.

However high it is going to go, we are talking then about a monetary policy for this country that says we are going to be paying off debt, that we are not going to be able to pay for new programs, that today we are living beyond our means, so therefore we are going to be in a position that we will become suppressed, repressed and put down.

This is not the kind of budgetary document in Bill 83 that leads to an optimistic future for our province. It instead leads to a further reason for people to say: "Why work so hard? Why put in the extra hours on my job if I am going to end up having to pay out all that much more money to pay taxes?"

This tax revolt is becoming an increasing concern to all of us. Indeed, one of the members just a moment ago was saying how there is a tax revolt coming in his own riding. I think we are all seeing it. People are saying, "We're going to blame it on the municipal councils," and you get municipal councils where you have had a certain spend-free attitude for a while, and the public is saying: "We don't want to have increases in our local taxes. We're not prepared to continue to pay that." What will happen is that an increased number of people start to withhold their tax payments. How will our municipalities continue to run?

It is a dangerous symptom of a malaise in our society, of people who are so unhappy with the way in which government is taking a larger and larger share of their wealth and using it for other purposes. I have to believe that this is leading to a cycle of despair and defeat and depression and is part of the very sick feeling that is within the minds and hearts of people in Canada today. They have lost that sense of confidence in all politicians to really give the kind of leadership, the economic leadership, the fiscal leadership, that is going to help make this a strong country for the future.

I know it is compounded by the whole constitutional debate, and, with the federal government coming down with a paper today there will be a chance for us all to begin to think how we can hold ourselves together as a country, with a new definition of who we are and how we will work together, with increased responsibilities for the province and somewhat diminished responsibilities in certain areas for the federal government. These are part of the changing times we are in.

But within that, if the province is going to have increased responsibility and we are going to become more the economic giant of what goes on in this country, then I think we must begin now to face up to the problems we are going to create for ourselves with the kind of deficits we are creating today, with the kind of attitudes we are creating in the public at large, who are saying: "I pay all these taxes, and what do I get for it? Your bureaucracy gets larger. The government gets bigger I pay out more and more I have less and less. The harder I work, what am I getting for it?"

When is tax freedom day? It is now in the middle of July. So half the year is spent by a great number of people just paying their taxes before money is left over for the rest of the year to go on disposable income for the things they need: their house, their rent, their clothing, their heat, their food, their whatever, their entertainment.

The number of people in our country today who are facing tough, tough times is not decreasing; it is increasing. The number of people who will be paying this tax is decreasing over what it was a number of years ago, because what we are seeing now is less people who are holding down the high jobs that were paying over $84,000 a year. Many of those people who were making that kind of salary are now out of work, out of luck.

There is not any kind of program for them. Workers who are unemployed at that level, we would say, "Hey, they're white-collar; they've got enough saved up." They are in trouble financially. They would like to be paying their taxes. They resent the amount of taxes they have had to pay, and maybe that is just part of the problem this government has got to face up to.

Let's begin now to see what the government response should be rather than increase the taxes. There are many other ways in which this government can respond to the challenge of the 1990s than just by saying, levy more taxes. We are talking about a billion dollars in additional taxes this year that will be levied because of these tax bills.

But what else do we see the government doing? We have not seen any leadership by this government in cutting back on its spending. Mind you, now the new R-word has come out, and when they were up drinking Georgian Bay water at the Delawana, we heard for the first time from the lips of Pink Floyd the possibility of restraint. I look forward to seeing what he is going to do in restraint.

The fact of the matter is, it was not part and parcel of the budget of April 29. This government did not at that time give any signal to the people or business or the world that there was going to be restraint within this government. Not a chance. This government was in the business of increasing its spending on a social program, it was expanding the civil service, it was expanding its departments.

Look at the number of people in this government, especially in the House, who are members of the government side of the House, who have parliamentary assistantships, the size of staff they have got. Look at the way in which they have built kingdoms around themselves, all of which takes money. This is a government that has been excellent at spending money on itself.

1740

The Premier has just added a new public relations person to his staff. Is that coming out of the New Democratic Party coffers or is that coming out of the coffers of Ontario? A public relations expert for Mr Public Relations himself. What we are seeing is someone who is going to help print out more press releases, more propaganda, more of the kind of stuff that people are getting sick of from government. What they want to see is something that is going to show it has a proactive stance for the future, that this is a government that has a plan that is going to take us somewhere. If this group in the Legislature today can point out a number of the cutbacks that have been taken by the government and the kind of money that has been saved by it, I would be most pleased to hear about it.

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: When the honourable Minister of Health, in her wise counsel, has a number of points to make, I would be glad at some point to yield the floor so that she can outline all the ways in which her government has saved money. There are not many, if any, mentioned in the government's budget. I will give her a chance to come and comment on that. Where is the incentive for business? How can we as a province have such a strong social agenda? The pendulum has swung one way. We have a social conscience and a social need, but where is there on the other side something that is going to help business to fuel itself, to get going again? Do not undermine the confidence of the business people.

Look at the Board of Trade of Metropolitan Toronto, look at the Markham Board of Trade, look at the chambers of commerce across the province. They are all genuinely worried about the direction this government is taking and they are seeing a government that is going to be intrusive, a government that is moving in on them, a government that is going to set regulations and make changes that are going to make it more and more difficult to have a business thrive in this province than in any other jurisdiction.

It is going to discourage outsiders from coming into our province to invest, because they do not see in this province the climate for business to prosper and do well. What will happen in fact is that we will become uncompetitive with the neighbouring jurisdictions and so it will become easier for people to go to Buffalo, to the United States, or to Quebec or some other place, or maybe even hold off doing something until three or four years from now when the Premier and his government are no longer in power in Ontario. The fact of the matter is, this government is making Ontario uncompetitive. Ontario ceases to be a place where people want to do business. We are seeing places like General Tire in Barrie closing down and 900 jobs disappearing in Barrie alone. How many other jobs supporting those 900 within the community? Probably 1,800 jobs as well? What have we got? Close to 4,000 jobs disappearing in Ontario.

When do we see a reaction from this government? Not until after it happens. I remember a number of years ago when in the town of Midland RCA was closing down its TV factory. What happened? They were making the pictures then. The member from Simcoe East was there at the time. Months before that happened, the member was involved with that community, trying to find other purposes for that plant, trying to find other buyers, and they found them. It was not by accident the plant changed ownership. It did not close down and disappear. What are we seeing in this province? At General Tire 900 jobs disappear. Why?

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: Are you saying they should close down? I think it is terrible. I think it is wrong. The honourable member is saying they should close down. I do not think you have any respect for people if you are starting to say that.

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: If you are going to interrupt, stand up and speak at the appropriate time rather than just interrupt. Mr Speaker, you should be putting him into his place, because if he is going to say these things—

Interjections.

The Acting Speaker (Mr Villeneuve): Order, please. Would you kindly address your remarks through the Chair. It might create a lot less antagonism.

Mr Cousens: I do not want to create any antagonism, but if the member is going to make stupid comments, he should stand up and say them so people can hear them. If in fact they cannot stand the heat of the kitchen, then maybe it is time there was an election now so the people of Ontario understand that the New Democrats really do not want to stay around any more, because we do not want them there any more. I think the kind of taxation they are bringing in right now is deleterious to the long-term future of Ontario, and the short-term future. There is no way I will support them.

If members opposite think it is a good thing, it is probably because they do not know anyone who is making $84,000 a year. The fact of the matter is there are many people who are making that kind of money and they are hurting today, and they are hurting with a lack of confidence because they just do not know where it is going to go. Their jobs could be gone tomorrow and what those members are doing is making it more and more difficult for them to survive.

This government is not holding the line on anything. They are not holding the line. They are just saying, "Hey, we're just going to continue with our agenda." Their agenda is very much something that is on the plate. We are going to be dealing with it. I have a confidential document, a paper setting out the proposals for strategic directions for the government's first term. It is a document marked "Confidential." It was prepared for the New Democratic government. Somehow or other, I happen to have a copy of it. It outlines a number of the things this government is doing.

First of all, this government says it has a number of strategic objectives. It includes: "The new international economic reality requires that Ontario's economic strategy change or Ontario will emerge from this recession with a lagging economy and seriously reduced quality of life. There must be a real economic strategy and this must be achieved through a new understanding and co-operation among business, labour, community organizations and government."

They are high-sounding, good words, but when you start having the New Democratic government coming along and having a fundraising campaign that says, "We're doing it and government is under pressure from business and business is really hurting government," instead of a good relationship developing between the government and business, it is putting a bigger and bigger wedge between business and government.

We are talking about a government that says out of one side of its mouth that it wants to have an improved quality of life and out of the other it is coming along and saying: "We're going to tax you more. We're not going to set an example of restraint, but by virtue of our taxation, you yourself will be forced into more and more restraint." Here is the government's strategic objective.

Another one is that Canada is experiencing a serious crisis of unity in constitutional arrangements. They go on to say, "The low credibility of the federal government has an impact on all governments, including questions of integrity." I wonder why this government talks about the federal government's lack of credibility so much when in fact this is a government that should be dealing with its problems. Instead of doing that, they are very quick at passing the buck.

Yesterday, when the Minister of Agriculture and Food was asked a very important question about the very serious agricultural problems this province is encountering, what does the Minister of Agriculture and Food stand up and say? He blames the federal government for it.

When we had the Minister of Energy being taken to task for the Power Corporation Act, what did he do? He goes and blames a government back 10 or 12 years ago, going back to 1978. Come on. The government should accept the responsibility for where it is.

Their paper goes on to say, "Federal-provincial and intraprovincial relations, including financial relationships, will demand substantial attention from the provincial government." It sure does. What we have to do, and it can happen with the new constitutional hearings where we will go through through the federal government recommendations that have been tabled today, is get rid of the intraprovincial tariffs that exist. There are more barriers to trade among our provinces than there are between Ontario and the United States south of the border.

Let's find ways so that we can work together as a country, yet I venture to say there is more opportunity, as we deal with these issues, for the government to throw stones about other people's actions or lack of actions than accepting responsibility for what it is supposed to be doing.

One of the other things in the economic strategy that this paper points to is, "Specific tax and wage measures to reduce income disparities and promote equity that together might comprise the elements of a social contract." I really do not know what this government can do to reduce income disparities if in fact one of the methods is to tax the rich. That is indeed what this bill is doing today. Bill 83 taxes people who are making in excess of $84,000, and what that does, what the government is starting with that kind of bill, is reduce the income disparity that is really part and parcel of what a person's income is all about.

1750

The document goes on with a lot of words, and what I am concerned with is that the actions of this government do not begin to touch upon the way in which a solution can really have a long-term impact. What I would like to do is look at some of the things other jurisdictions are doing instead of having a tax on more of the personal income that individuals have.

When you look at what Newfoundland did in its 1991 budget, for instance, that budget contained restraint measures which cut the 1991-92 deficit from a projected $200 million to $53.8 million. Among the things that the government in Newfoundland has brought about is implemented government-wide reductions in salary and operating budgets. Did the members opposite hear that one? Government-wide reductions in salary and operating budgets.

Did that happen here? No, we had some salaries increase by as much as 20% in the province of Ontario in this fiscal year. We have got the chairman of the board of Ontario Hydro looking for a $400,000 remuneration. That is $400,000, from what was he making before as a deputy minister? Maybe $100,000, $120,000, so a fourfold increase. What kind of an increase does that amount to?

In Newfoundland, they eliminated 1,300 permanent and 350 part-time and 350 seasonal positions through the broad public sector. How many positions—

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: What did the honourable member say? That they are all on welfare? Is he saying that they should go on welfare? I am trying to get what the honourable member is saying.

What I am seeing the government do is eliminate a number of permanent positions and part-time positions from the budget of the province of Newfoundland. What I am really suggesting, back in 1981 to 1985, a period in which I was present in this House on the back benches on the Tory side, there was a certain amount of cutback. I think 7,000 civil servants were eliminated through attrition during that period of time.

There is a way in which it can be done, and it is a responsible way. It all hurts, but there is a sense in which you say: "Hey, we are not going to add new programs. We are not going to add new people. We are going to try to do more with less." I see companies doing that now, where they are having a terribly tough time and they have over the last couple of years reduced the number of people, yet they have continued to have the same objectives for large sales and productivity.

In Newfoundland, they eliminated 500 vacant positions in government departments. What do I mean by that? Five hundred vacant positions; in other words, they were jobs that were empty. Instead of filling them, they did not fill them. They were allowed to stay empty. They reduced the executive and management positions in the public service by 10%.

How much has the cost for each ministry increased in the last year since the New Democratic government came into power? When we went to estimates and looking at the Ministry of the Environment, we saw a significant increase in the number of dollars for overheads for the ministry because of the extra people who had been added by the new minister, more than my honourable friend the member for St Catharines had.

Look at the other one, the number of assistant deputy ministers in every ministry. Every ministry now has far more ADMs than it ever had two or three years ago. That seems to be a new way of having a larger and larger bureaucracy, and it is eating away at the costs of doing government business. It is as if there is an unlimited amount of money to spend on government.

The fact of the matter is Newfoundland, which many people laugh at—I do not laugh when I start seeing the kind of responsible leadership they have taken in Newfoundland. They understand that they have got to move to live within a balanced budget. Now during a time of recession it is tougher to do that, but at least they are taking concrete action that leads to reduced government spending. Not this bunch. This bunch continues to spend more and more and more. It is just out of sight.

In Newfoundland they imposed a one-year wage freeze on the public service and deferred for a one-year period negotiated salary increases for all bargaining groups. The Newfoundland government adopted this restraint program in part because of the concern that an increase in the deficit would result in the province's credit rating being downgraded and in the province having to absorb higher borrowing and debt financing charges as a result.

Mr Stockwell: Listen to this. Exactly what happened to you.

Mr Cousens: So what has happened to us? Where is our credit rating? Where has it gone with the kind of abysmal leadership that is being given by Pink Floyd and the Bob Rae government? Our deficit is increasing. The credit ratings have been chopped down for this province. If it continues in the bad way in which it is now, I venture to say our credit rating will be slashed even further because of the lack of prudent economic planning that this government is failing to give.

In Nova Scotia, we saw a budget that was also hard to deal with for the New Democrats, but they imposed a two-year wage freeze for all civil servants, provincial and municipal politicians, judges, employees of crown corporations, among others. They eliminated 300 positions from the civil service. In Nova Scotia, they delayed implementation of the province's pay equity program for a two-year period.

What happened? We continue to add civil servants and we are continuing to plow ahead with pay equity as if there is not any kind of recession on right now. We continue to say: "Hey, we're bargaining on. We're marching on." But the fact of the matter is there is only so much money that can be spent in order to maintain these initiatives, and the public at large is saying: "Stop. Hold back. We're into a crisis right now. This recession is hurting all of us, so why don't we in this province give the kind of leadership that we could and should?"

In Saskatchewan, the PC government's 1991 budget cuts spending in 14 government departments. They eliminated 600 civil service jobs and they committed the government to balancing the budget by 1994.

Mr Huget: What is their debt?

Mr Cousens: I do not have their debt exactly. I am sorry. It is nothing close to the percentage of debt that we have got, and in fact, since I will be coming back tomorrow, I will have a chance to—the honourable member asked me for their debt. Saskatchewan's debt for 1990-91 was $361 million. They will have it down to $265 million in 1991-92 and they are looking to get it—it does not take it to the floor for the future, but in 1990-91 the debt in Saskatchewan is $363 million. You are talking about a significant amount of money to them. It is all relative to the size of the province and your ability to pay the bill.

What I would like to point to is the fact that the member for Nipissing has a number of recommendations in order to approach this issue. Instead of increasing taxes, he went and brought in a number of recommendations. I will not read them all, but they would be in lieu of Bill 83, which is going to hurt the people of Ontario.

Number one, he said that the government of Ontario should neither increase taxes nor introduce any new taxes in the 1991-92 budget—no new taxes, no increase in taxes—the member for Nipissing, the tax fighter and a person who will continue to fight taxes and has the integrity to fight them.

The second thing he would do is his government would freeze its 1991-92 direct operating expenditures at the previous year's level; freeze things at that level, just sort of put a hold on it so that everything has to be done within the limits of what is really set aside. Do not continue to spend money you do not have. Do not continue to spend money you have to borrow. Hold on to it and try to live within your means. How can people continue to live beyond their means the way this government does? What a terrible example.

The next point that he made was that the Legislative Assembly freeze its operating budget at the 1990-91 levels for the fiscal year 1991-92. There is a sense that he is saying by freezing it, you also freeze the expectations that people have from government so that they will not continue to say: "I want more. I want more." There is a sense in which they know there is going to be someone up here, down here, wherever Queen's Park is relative to where you are at sea level, that there is going to be someone who says, "I am going to be saying no for a while because we have got to put this House in order so that we can ready for the future in a proper way."

It is not the way, to increase taxes on those who are making money and adding to the economy of the province. By taking that money away from them, it means there is less disposable income for them to go and spend it back into our communities.

The honourable Speaker indicates that it must be getting close to the hour. I would move adjournment of the debate.

The House adjourned at 1800.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor/Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon/L'hon Lincoln M. Alexander, PC, QC/CP, CR

Speaker/Président: Hon/L'hon David Warner

Clerk/Greffier: Claude L. DesRosiers

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Committees/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des comités: Smirle Forsyth

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Journals/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des journaux: Alex D. McFedries

Sergeant at Arms/Sergent d'armes: Thomas Stelling

-
- Abel, Donald (Wentworth North/-Nord PC) government whip/Whip du gouvernement
- Akande, Hon/L'hon Zanana (St Andrew-St Patrick ND)
Minister of Community and Social Services/
Ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires
- Allen, Hon/L'hon Richard (Hamilton West/-Ouest ND)
Minister of Colleges and Universities, Minister of Skills
Development/Ministre des Collèges et Universités,
ministre de la Formation professionnelle
- Arnott, Ted (Wellington PC)
- Beer, Charles (York North/-Nord L)
- Bisson, Gilles (Cochrane South/-Sud ND) PA to Minister of Northern Development and Mines, PA to minister responsible for francophone affairs, Vice-Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/
Ap du ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines,
ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones,
vice-président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario
au sein de la Confédération
- Boyd, Hon/L'hon Marion (London Centre/-Centre ND)
Minister of Education, minister responsible for women's issues/Ministre de l'Éducation, ministre déléguée à la
Condition féminine
- Bradley, James J. (St Catharines L) opposition House leader/
Chef parlementaire de l'opposition
- Brown, Michael A. (Algoma-Manitoulin L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on general government/ Vice-Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales
- Buchanan, Hon/L'hon Elmer (Hastings-Peterborough ND)
Minister of Agriculture and Food/Ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation
- Callahan, Robert V. (Brampton South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Président du Comité
permanent des comptes publics
- Caplan, Elinor (Oriole L) Chair, standing committee on social development/Présidente du Comité permanent des affaires
sociales
- Carr, Gary (Oakville South/-Sud PC)
- Carter, Jenny (Peterborough ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre
des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales
- Charlton, Hon/L'hon Brian (Hamilton Mountain ND)
Minister of Financial Institutions/Ministre des Institutions
financières
- Chiarelli, Robert (Ottawa West/-Ouest L)
- Christopherson, David (Hamilton Centre/-Centre ND)
PA to Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/
Ap du Trésorier de l'Ontario et du ministre de l'Économie
- Churley, Hon/L'hon Marilyn (Riverdale ND) Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ministre de la
Consommation et du Commerce
- Cleary, John C. (Cornwall L)
- Conway, Sean G. (Renfrew North/-Nord L)
- Cooke, Hon/L'hon David (Windsor-Riverside ND) Minister
of Municipal Affairs, government House leader/
Ministre des Affaires municipales, chef parlementaire du gouvernement
- Cooper, Mike (Kitchener-Wilmot ND) deputy government whip/
Whip adjoint du gouvernement
- Coppen, Hon/L'hon Shirley (Niagara South/-Sud ND)
Minister without Portfolio, chief government whip/
Ministre sans portefeuille, whip en chef du gouvernement
- Cordiano, Joseph (Lawrence L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on social development/Vice-Président du Comité permanent
des affaires sociales
- Cousens, W. Donald (Markham PC)
- Cunningham, Dianne (London North/-Nord PC) Progressive
Conservative chief whip/Whip en chef du Parti
progressiste-conservateur
- Curling, Alvin (Scarborough North/-Nord L) opposition deputy whip/whip adjoint de l'opposition
- Dadamo, George (Windsor-Sandwich ND) PA to Minister of Transportation/Ap du ministre des Transports
- Daigeler, Hans (Nepean L)
- Drainville, Dennis (Victoria-Haliburton ND) PA to Minister of Municipal Affairs; Acting Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/Ap du ministre des Affaires municipales, président suppléant du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération
- Duignan, Noel (Halton North/-Nord ND) Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative, coprésident
du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire
- Elston, Murray J. (Bruce L) Leader of the Official Opposition/
Chef de l'opposition officielle
- Eves, Ernie (Parry Sound PC) Progressive Conservative House
leader/Chef parlementaire du Parti progressiste-conservateur
- Farnan, Mike (Cambridge ND) First Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Premier vice-président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
- Fawcett, Joan M. (Northumberland L)
- Ferguson, Hon/L'hon Will (Kitchener ND) Minister of Energy/Ministre de l'Énergie
- Fletcher, Derek (Guelph ND) PA to Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ap du ministre de la Consommation
et du Commerce
- Frankford, Robert (Scarborough East/-Est ND)

Gigantes, Hon/L'hon Evelyn (Ottawa Centre/-Centre ND)
Minister of Housing/Ministre du Logement

Grandmaître, Bernard C. (Ottawa East/-Est L)

Grier, Hon/L'hon Ruth A. (Etobicoke-Lakeshore ND)
Minister of the Environment, minister responsible for the greater Toronto area/Ministre de l'Environnement, ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto

Haeck, Christel (St. Catharines-Brock ND)

Hampton, Hon/L'hon Howard (Rainy River ND) Attorney General/Procureur général

Hansen, Ron (Lincoln ND) Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs; Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/Président du Comité permanent des affaires économiques et financières, président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi d'intérêt privé

Harnick, Charles (Willowdale PC)

Harrington, Margaret H. (Niagara Falls ND) PA to Minister of Housing/Ap du ministre du Logement

Harris, Michael (Nipissing PC) leader of the Progressive Conservative Party/Chef du Parti progressiste-conservateur

Haslam, Hon/L'hon Karen (Perth ND) Minister of Culture and Communications/Ministre de la Culture et des Communications

Hayes, Pat (Essex-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (agriculture)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (agriculture)

Henderson, D. James (Etobicoke-Humber L)

Hope, Randy R. (Chatham-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Community and Social Services/Ap du ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires

Hugot, Bob (Sarnia ND) PA to Minister of Energy/Ap du ministre de l'Énergie

Jackson, Cameron (Burlington South/-Sud PC) Chair, standing committee on estimates/Président du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses

Jamison, Norm (Norfolk ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology, responsible for small business/Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie, délégué aux Affaires des petites entreprises

Johnson, Paul R. (Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings/Prince-Edward-Lennox-Hastings-Sud ND)
PA to Minister of Revenue/Ap du ministre du Revenu

Jordan, W. Leo (Lanark-Renfrew PC)

Klopp, Paul (Huron ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (food)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (alimentation)

Kormos, Peter (Welland-Thorold ND) Chair, standing committee on resources development/Président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources

Kwinter, Monte (Wilson Heights L)

Lankin, Hon/L'hon Frances (Beaches-Woodbine ND)
Minister of Health, minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ministre de la Santé, ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale

Laughren, Hon/L'hon Floyd (Nickel Belt ND) Deputy Premier, Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/Vice-premier ministre, Trésorier de l'Ontario et ministre de l'Économie

Lessard, Wayne (Windsor-Walkerville ND) PA to Minister of Colleges and Universities/Ap du ministre des Collèges et Universités

Mackenzie, Hon/L'hon Bob (Hamilton East/-Est ND)
Minister of Labour/Ministre du Travail

MacKinnon, Ellen (Lambton ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative

Mahoney, Steven W. (Mississauga West/-Ouest L) chief opposition whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition

Malkowski, Gary (York East/-Est ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

Mammoliti, George (Yorkview ND) PA to minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ap de la ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale

Mancini, Remo (Essex South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on general government/Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales

Marchese, Rosario (Fort York ND) PA to the Premier, PA to Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Ap du premier ministre, ap du ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales

Marland, Margaret (Mississauga South/-Sud PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on estimates/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses

Martel, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Sudbury East/-Est ND) Minister of Northern Development and Mines/Ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines

Martin, Tony (Sault Ste. Marie/Sault-Sainte-Marie ND) PA to Minister of Education/Ap de la ministre de l'Éducation

Mathyssen, Irene (Middlesex ND) PA to Minister of the Environment, government whip/Ap de la ministre de l'Environnement, whip du gouvernement

McClelland, Carman (Brampton North/-Nord L)

McGuinty, Dalton J.P. (Ottawa South/-Sud L)

McLean, Allan K. (Simcoe East/-Est PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Vice-Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux

McLeod, Lyn (Fort William L)

Miclash, Frank (Kenora L) opposition chief whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition

Mills, Gord (Durham East/-Est ND) PA to Solicitor General/Ap du Solliciteur général

Morin, Gilles E. (Carleton East/-Est L) Deputy Speaker and Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Vice-Président et Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Morrow, Mark (Wentworth East/-Est ND) Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman; Vice-Chair, standing committee on administration of justice/Président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman, vice-président du Comité permanent de l'administration de la justice

Murdoch, Bill (Grey PC)

Murdock, Sharon (Sudbury ND) PA to Minister of Labour/Ap du ministre du Travail

North, Hon/L'hon Peter (Elgin ND) Minister of Tourism and Recreation/Ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs

O'Connor, Lawrence (Durham-York ND) PA to minister responsible for the greater Toronto area; Vice-Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/Ap de la ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto, vice-président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi d'intérêt privé

- Offer, Steven (Mississauga North/-Nord L)
O'Neil, Hugh P. (Quinte L)
O'Neill, Yvonne (Ottawa-Rideau L) opposition deputy whip/
Whip adjointe de l'opposition
Owens, Stephen (Scarborough Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Financial Institutions, government whip/
Ap du ministre des Institutions financières, whip du gouvernement
- Perruzza, Anthony (Downsview ND) PA to Minister for Skills
Development/Ap du ministre de la Formation professionnelle Philip, Hon/L'hon Ed (Etobicoke-Rexdale ND) Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology/Ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie
Phillips, Gerry (Scarborough-Agincourt L)
Pilkey, Hon/L'hon Allan (Oshawa ND) Solicitor General, Minister of Correctional Services/Solliciteur général, ministre des Services correctionnels
Poirier, Jean (Prescott and Russell/Prescott et Russell L)
Poole, Dianne (Eglinton L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Vice-Présidente du comité permanent des comptes publics
Pouliot, Hon/L'hon Gilles (Lake Nipigon/Lac-Nipigon ND) Minister of Transportation, minister responsible for francophone affairs/Ministre du Transport, ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones
- Rae, Hon/L'hon Bob (York South/-Sud ND) Premier, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Premier ministre, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales
Ramsay, David (Timiskaming L)
Rizzo, Tony (Oakwood IND)
Runciman, Robert W. (Leeds-Grenville PC) Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux
Ruprecht, Tony (Parkdale L)
- Scott, Ian G. (St. George-St. David L)
Silipo, Hon/L'hon Tony (Dovercourt ND) Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet/Président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement
Sola, John (Mississauga East/-Est L)
Sorbara, Gregory S. (York Centre/-Centre L)
Sterling, Norman W. (Carleton PC)
Stockwell, Chris (Etobicoke West/-Ouest PC)
Sullivan, Barbara (Halton Centre/-Centre L)
Sutherland, Kimble (Oxford ND) PA to Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet; Vice-Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs/Ap du président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement, vice-président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques
Swarbrick, Anne (Scarborough West /-Ouest ND)
- Tilson, David (Dufferin-Peel PC)
Turnbull, David (York Mills PC)
- Villeneuve, Noble (S-D-G & East Grenville/S.-D.-G. & Grenville-Est PC) Second Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Deuxième vice-président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
- Ward, Brad (Brantford ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology with responsibility for trade and technology/
Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la
Technologie et délégué au Commerce et à la Technologie
Ward, Margery (Don Mills ND) PA to Minister of Government Services/Ap du ministre des Services gouvernementaux Wark-Martyn, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Port Arthur ND) Minister of Revenue/Ministre du Revenu
Warner, Hon/L'hon David (Scarborough-Ellesmere ND)
Speaker; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président, coprésident du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire Waters, Daniel (Muskoka-Georgian Bay/Muskoka-Baie-Georgienne ND) PA to Minister of Tourism and Recreation;
Vice-Chair, standing committee on resources development/
Ap du ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs, vice-président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources Wessinger, Paul (Simcoe Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Health/Ap de la ministre de la Santé
White, Drummond (Durham Centre/-Centre ND) Chair, standing committee on administration of justice;
Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman/Président du Comité permanent de l'administration de la justice, vice-président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman Wildman, Hon/L'hon Bud (Algoma ND) Minister of Natural Resources, minister responsible for native affairs/Ministre des Ressources naturelles, ministre délégué aux Affaires
autochtones
Wilson, Hon/L'hon Fred (Frontenac-Addington ND) Minister of Government Services/Ministre des Services gouvernementaux
Wilson, Gary (Kingston and The Islands/Kingston et Les Îles ND)
PA to Minister of Culture and Communications/
Ap de la ministre de la Culture et des Communications
Wilson, Jim (Simcoe West/-Ouest PC)
Winner, David (London South/-Sud ND) PA to Attorney General, PA to minister responsible for native affairs/Ap du Procureur général, ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires
autochtones
Wiseman, Jim (Durham West/Durham-Ouest ND) PA to Minister of Correctional Services/Ap du ministre des Services correctionnels
Witmer, Elizabeth (Waterloo North/-Nord PC)
Wood, Len (Cochrane North/-Nord ND) PA to Minister of Natural Resources/Ap du ministre des Ressources naturelles
- Ziemba, Hon/L'hon Elaine (High Park-Swansea ND) Minister of Citizenship, minister responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux
Relations interraciales

COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

STANDING COMMITTEES/COMITÉS PERMANENTS

Administration of justice/Administration de la justice

Chair/Président: Drummond White

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Mark Morrow

Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Robert Chiarelli, Derek Fletcher, Evelyn Gigantes, Charles Harnick, Irene Mathysen, Gordon Mills, Jean Poirier, Gregory S. Sorbara, David Winninger

Clerk/Greffière: Lisa Freedman

Estimates/Budgets des dépenses

Chair/Président: Cameron Jackson

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Margaret Marland

Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Hans Daigeler, Will Ferguson, Karen Haslam, Paul R. Johnson, Wayne Lessard, Dalton McGuinty, Lyn McLeod, Anthony Perruzza, Gary Wilson

Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Finance and economic affairs/

Affaires économiques et financières

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Kimble Sutherland

Members/Membres: David Christopherson, Norman Jamison, Monte Kwinter, Gerry Phillips, Norman W. Sterling, Chris Stockwell, Barbara Sullivan, Brad Ward, Margery Ward, Jim Wiseman

Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

General government/Affaires gouvernementales

Chair/Président: Remo Mancini

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Michael A. Brown

Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Gilles Bisson, Dennis Drainville, Noel Duignan, Margaret H. Harrington, George Mammoliti, Bill Murdoch, Yvonne O'Neill, Ian G. Scott, David Turnbull

Clerk/Greffière: Deborah Deller

Government agencies/Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair/Président: Robert W. Runciman

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Allan K. McLean

Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Robert Frankford, Bernard Grandmaitre, Karen Haslam, Pat Hayes, Dalton McGuinty, Tony Silipo, Chris Stockwell, Daniel Waters, Jim Wiseman

Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Legislative Assembly/Assemblée législative

Chair/Président: Noel Duignan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Ellen MacKinnon

Members/Membres: Mike Cooper, Robert Frankford, Norman Jamison, Margaret Marland, Irene Mathysen, Carman McClelland, Gilles E. Morin, Hugh P. O'Neil, Stephen Owens, Noble Villeneuve

Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Ombudsman/Ombudsman

Chair/Président: Mark Morrow

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Drummond White

Members/Membres: Alvin Curling, Joan M. Fawcett, D. James Henderson, Peter Kormos, George Mammoliti, Bill Murdoch, Margery Ward, Paul Wessinger, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer

Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Public accounts/Comptes publics

Chair/Président: Robert V. Callahan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Dianne Poole

Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Sean G. Conway, Mike Cooper, W. Donald Cousens, Christel Haeck, Pat Hayes, Paul R. Johnson, Ellen MacKinnon, Lawrence O'Connor, David Tilson

Clerk/Greffière: Tannis Manikel

Regulations and private bills/

Règlements et projets de loi d'intérêt privé

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Lawrence O'Connor

Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Will Ferguson, Derek Fletcher, Leo Jordan, Ellen MacKinnon, Frank Miclash, Tony Ruprecht, John Sola, Kimble Sutherland, Jim Wilson

Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

Resources development/Développement des ressources

Chair/Président: Peter Kormos

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Daniel Waters

Members/Membres: Ted Arnott, John C. Cleary, George Dadamo, Bob Huget, Leo Jordan, Paul Klopp, Sharon Murdock, Steven Offer, David Ramsay, Len Wood

Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

Social development/Affaires sociales

Chair/Présidente: Elinor Caplan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Joseph Cordiano

Members/Membres: Charles Beer, Christel Haeck, Randy R. Hope, Gary Malkowski, Tony Martin, Lyn McLeod, Stephen Owens, Tony Silipo, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer

Clerk/Greffière: Lynn Mellor

SELECT COMMITTEE/COMITÉ SPÉCIAL

Ontario in Confederation/

Rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération

Acting Chair/Président suppléant: Dennis Drainville

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Gilles Bisson

Members/Membres: Alvin Curling, Ernie Eves, Evelyn Gigantes, Charles Harnick, Margaret H. Harrington, Gary Malkowski, Irene Mathysen, Steven Offer, Yvonne O'Neill, David Winninger

Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

SPECIAL COMMITTEE/COMITÉ EXTRAORDINAIRE

Parliamentary precinct/Enceinte parlementaire

Co-Chair/Coprésident: David Warner

Co-Chair/Coprésident: Noel Duignan

Members/Membres: Dianne Cunningham, Remo Mancini, Kimble Sutherland

Clerk/Greffier: Smirle Forsyth

CONTENTS

Tuesday 24 September 1991

Members' statements

Meals on Wheels Week	2461
Mr Miclash
North York Women's Centre	2461
Mr Harnick
Events in Durham-York	2461
Mr O'Connor
Wildlife protection	2461
Mr Brown
Scott Rossiter	2462
Mr Runciman
Literacy	2462
Mr Dadamo
Land use planning	2462
Mr Bradley
Liquor stores	2462
Mr J. Wilson
Oktoberfest	2462
Mr Cooper

Statements by the ministry

Ontario Human Rights Commission	2463
Ms Ziemba
Health care	2464
Ms Lankin

Responses

Ontario Human Rights Commission	2465
Mr Curling
Health care	2465
Mrs Sullivan
Ontario Human Rights Commission	2466
Mr Cousens
Health care	2466
Mr J. Wilson

Oral questions

Budget	2466
Mr Elston
Mr Laughren
Landfill sites	2468
Mr Cousens
Mrs Grier
Rent regulation	2469
Mrs Marland
Ms Gigantes
Ontario economy	2469
Mr Kwinter
Mr Philip
Automobile insurance	2470
Mr Tilson
Mr Charlton

Landfill site	2471
Mr Duignan
Mrs Grier
Timber management	2471
Mr Ramsay
Mrs Grier
Marketing boards	2472
Mr Villeneuve
Mr Buchanan
Assistance to farmers	2472
Mr Mancini
Mr Buchanan
Health legislation	2473
Mr J. Wilson
Ms Lankin
Sexual assault	2474
Ms Poole
Mr Hampton
Court system	2474
Mr Harnick
Mr Hampton

Motions

Private members' public business	2475
Mr Cooke
Agreed to	2475
Committee substitutions	2475
Mr Cooke
Agreed to	2475

Petitions

French-language services	2475
Mr H. O'Neil
Oath of allegiance	2475
Mr Carr

Second readings

Income Tax Amendment Act, 1991, Bill 83	2476
Ms Wark-Martyn	2476
Mrs Y. O'Neill	2476
Mr Sterling	2477
Mr Huget	2481
Mr Conway	2484
Mr Drainville	2488
Mr Bradley	2488
Mr Cousens	2489
Adjourned	2495

Lists of members

Members and their responsibilities
Committees of the Legislative Assembly

TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Le mardi 24 septembre 1991

Question orale

Collèges de langue française en Ontario	2472
M. Bisson
M. Allen

Listes des députés

Les députés et leurs responsabilités
Comités de l'Assemblée législative

Deuxième lecture

Loi de 1991 modifiant la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu, projet de loi 83,	2476
M ^{me} Wark-Martyn
Débat ajourné	2495

58 1991

58 1991

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly of Ontario

First Session, 35th Parliament

Official Report of Debates (Hansard)

Wednesday 25 September 1991

Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

Première session, 35^e législature

Journal des débats (Hansard)

Le mercredi 25 septembre 1991

Speaker
Honourable David Warner

Clerk
Claude L. DesRosiers

Président
L'honorable David Warner

Greffier
Claude L. DesRosiers

Table of Contents

Table of Contents for proceedings reported in this issue appears at the back, together with an alphabetical list of members of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at (416) 325-7400.

Numbering of Hansard

Effective with the opening of the Second Session of the 35th Parliament, Hansard issues and pages will once again be numbered on a sessional basis. Hansard numbering therefore will become consistent with Orders and Notices and Votes and Proceedings, and with other parliamentary publications throughout Canada.

For the last two years Hansard has been numbered according to the calendar year. Under this system, the numbering of issues and pages was restarted with the first issue in the calendar year, regardless of session or Parliament.

Under the new system, the sequence of numbering started in January 1991 will end with the final House and committee sittings of the present First Session. A new sequence will begin on the opening day of the Second Session, and each succeeding session, which will be issue 1 and begin with page 1. Committee reports likewise will be numbered from the first sitting of each committee in a parliamentary session.

Subscriptions

Subscription information may be obtained from: Sessional Subscription Service, Publications Ontario, Ministry of Government Services, 5th Floor, 880 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 1N8. Phone (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 or toll-free 1 (800) 668-9938.

Table des matières

La table des matières des séances rapportées dans ce numéro se trouve à l'arrière de ce fascicule, ainsi qu'une liste alphabétique de députés de l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario.

Il existe un index cumulatif des numéros précédents. Les renseignements qu'il contient sont à votre disposition par téléphone auprès des employés de l'index du Journal des débats au (416) 325-7400.

Numérotation du Journal des débats

A partir du début de la deuxième session de la 35^e législature, les pages et les numéros du Journal des débats seront de nouveau numérotés par session. La numérotation du Journal des débats correspondra donc à celle de Feuilleton et Avis et de Procès-verbaux, ainsi que celle des autres publications parlementaires au Canada.

Depuis deux ans, le Journal des débats était numéroté par année civile. Avec ce système, la numérotation des numéros et des pages recommençait au premier numéro de l'année civile, quelle que soit la session ou la législature.

Avec le nouveau système, la numérotation commencée en janvier 1991 s'arrêtera à la dernière séance de la Chambre et des comités de l'actuelle première session. Une nouvelle série commencera le jour de l'ouverture de la deuxième session et des sessions suivantes : numéro 1, page 1. Les rapports des comités seront également numérotés à partir de la première séance de chaque comité pour une session parlementaire donnée.

Abonnements

Pour les abonnements, veuillez prendre contact avec le Service d'abonnement parlementaire, Publications Ontario, ministère des Services gouvernementaux, 5^e étage, 880, rue Bay, Toronto (Ontario) M7A 1N8. Par téléphone : (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 ou, sans frais : 1 (800) 668-9938.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Wednesday 25 September 1991

The House met at 1330.

Prayers.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

HUGH McDONALD

Mr Daigeler: It is with great sadness that I am paying tribute today to Hugh McDonald, a valued member of my community who passed away last Sunday after a short illness.

A lawyer by profession, Hugh had a long and distinguished record of public service in Nepean. From 1968 to 1976 he was a commissioner of Nepean Hydro and its chairman. In 1978 he was elected alderman and served in this function until 1985. From 1985 to 1989 he was a member and, for some time, chairman of the Nepean Police Commission.

Hugh served in the Royal Canadian Navy from 1946 to 1956. After graduating from Osgoode Hall Law School in 1960, he became the first lawyer to open a private practice in what was then the township of Nepean. He was a long-standing member of the Nepean Kiwanis, Delta Chi and the Upper Canada Law Society.

Hugh McDonald had a very keen interest in local, provincial, and federal politics. His advice was always valued and his help much appreciated. Nepean and Ottawa-Carleton have lost a great citizen. I am sure the House will want to join me in extending sincere condolences to his family.

LAND REGISTRATION

Mr Jordan: The people of Almonte, Carleton Place, Ramsay, Pakenham and Arnprior are growing more impatient every day as this government fails to provide answers on the proposed closure of the Almonte land registry office.

The Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations had assured me that Almonte was to be reviewed, and she would see, personally, that unanswered letters would receive replies. Letters in May received no replies until late summer. I am saddened to say the replies were flawed and unacceptable because they were based on a flawed analysis.

The government fails to realize that Almonte's $1-million registry office, which just opened in June 1990, services not only northern Lanark but parts of west Carleton and Kanata. The area is one of the fastest-growing in eastern Ontario.

Essential information was considered when a three-year study was done prior to building this $1-million building, which opened, as I say, one year ago.

The people of Lanark-Renfrew will hold the minister and this government responsible for the outcome of this review.

POLICE SERVICES

Mr Sutherland: I rise in the House today to give recognition to the outstanding work of police officers across the province.

Law enforcement is multi-faceted work. Part of it is spent educating the public: making them aware of certain dangers; advising them of better ways. Enforcement, of course, is the other aspect. Police officers respond to a variety of offences, from the Highway Traffic Act to more serious crimes against persons and property.

Policing has been described as hours of tedium and pain-taking work, interspersed with moments of extreme tension and stress. Ontario is fortunate to have some of its finest citizens serving us in provincial and municipal police forces.

Many of us are guilty of not taking the time to appreciate the work our police forces do. Maybe it is a sign of how well they do their jobs that we do not even notice. We take for granted that our society is a safe haven for ourselves and our loved ones, particularly in our small communities, but police officers know that it is their work and dedication that keeps our system running smoothly in an ever-changing world, and sometimes they are the first to pay the ultimate price for our freedom.

It is with great sadness today that I offer my condolences to the family, friends and colleagues of Constable Scott Rossiter, who was killed in the line of duty last week in Ingersoll. He had moved to Ingersoll because he wanted to serve a smaller community where he could be closer to the public.

Constable Rossiter is the second Ontario police officer to die this year; OPP Sergeant Tom Cooper was killed last July near Kenora. In total, 10 Canadian police officers have died in the line of duty in the past five years. All of us should take time to reflect and remember and honour the men and women who serve us in our police forces.

WATERFOWL HUNTING

CHASSE À LA SAUVAGINE

Mr Poirier: Today is the first day of the annual waterfowl hunt in southern Ontario. This is an event which is little different than it was last year or the year before last. However, the same activity is very different in the United States. This is the first year in which a ban on the use of lead shot for waterfowl hunting has been enforced nationally.

When ingested by wildlife such as geese, ducks and swans, lead shot is a toxic substance which results in plumbism, better known as lead poisoning.

The United States hunt will use alternatives such as steel or tungsten shot, which do not cause lead poisoning when ingested by birds.

It was estimated in the late 1980s that over 3,600 tonnes of lead pellets were fired annually over and into the wetlands of North America. In the United States alone this resulted in the death of between 1.6 to 2.4 million birds out of an annual migration of 100 million birds.

The eating of only a few pellets when foraging in a pond can kill waterfowl. Since proven alternatives exist, a province-wide lead shot ban for the hunting of waterfowl is overdue in order to stop this senseless slaughter.

Le gouvernement néo-démocrate se doit de bannir l'utilisation du plomb lors de la chasse à la sauvagine. C'est le moindre à faire pour protéger les oiseaux et l'environnement.

1340

NURSING HOMES

Mrs Witmer: This government continually speaks about its commitment to the principles of equity and fairness, yet in its policies towards the funding of nursing homes and municipal homes for the aged it is practising discrimination and inequity.

The per diem subsidy for municipal homes is 32% higher than the subsidy for privately owned nursing homes, despite the fact that the residents of both of these long-term care facilities have the same needs and are provided with the same level of care.

I recently had the opportunity to visit one of the nursing homes in my community, the Chateau Gardens nursing home in Elmira, and I was impressed by its dedication to providing a high standard of care for its residents. The hard reality, however, is that their dedication is greater than their resources and that they will be forced to make staff cuts if this government does not take action by October 15.

This crisis at Chateau Gardens is not an isolated incident. Sixteen homes have gone into receivership, and more will follow if the government does not change its funding policy.

I believe the private sector has an important role to play in assisting the government in providing long-term care and I believe that all residents of this province are entitled to receive the same high level of care.

I would urge the Minister of Health to meet with the representatives of Chateau Gardens to discuss their financial problems and to take action to eliminate the funding gap, which has widened over the past six years.

UNITED WAY CAMPAIGN

Mr Hope: I hear so many discouraging words these days about corporations and their employees not being able to work together. Well, I have an example to counter that theory right in my own riding of Chatham-Kent.

Earlier this week, labour and corporation dollars filled the United Way kitty in my riding to kick off this year's fund-raising drive. The two accounted for almost $224,000 raised in the first day of the campaign. That is almost 25% of the United Way's $1-million goal for Chatham-Kent in a single night.

My former employer, Rockwell International, may have been tough at the bargaining table; however, Rockwell pledged $10,000. Meanwhile, its employees, whom I represented, came through with $7,000.

But there were many other employers and employees who had made the mercury in the United Way thermometer boil. Union Gas, our biggest corporate citizen, helped the cause with $38,000, while its workers kicked in an additional $29,000.

Workers at Navistar were good for a whopping $40,000, while the corporation kicked in $15,000.

This is just one prime example of how corporations and workers co-operate to meet the better needs of their community. I think with the future of this government and the future of workers and corporations, we can achieve successful goals and a prosperous Ontario.

ONTARIO HYDRO RATES

Mr McGuinty: Bill 118, which proposes amendments to the Power Corporation Act, poses a serious threat to the ability of Ontario Hydro to fulfil its primary responsibility to the people of this province. That responsibility is to provide us with power at cost.

If Bill 118 becomes law, our hydro bills will be increasing in order to pay for the cost of any directive issued to Ontario Hydro by the government. What is particularly frightening is that Bill 118 will no longer require that these directives be related to Hydro's exercise of its powers and duties under the Power Corporation Act.

This change in our Hydro law will open the floodgates for the NDP government to fund any of its social or regional economic development programs through Ontario Hydro. This government's intention to use Ontario Hydro in this way is made clear by the track record it has established in the cases of Elliot Lake and Kapuskasing.

Hydro's chairman has predicted double-digit increases in hydro rates each year for the next four or five years. These predictions were based on the premise that Ontario Hydro would continue to supply power at cost. We can only speculate as to how much higher our Hydro bills will be in order for us to cover the costs of the social programs Ontario Hydro will be forced to fund.

Our caucus opposes Bill 118. When this legislation goes to committee for public hearings, this government will quickly learn that the people of this province will not tolerate any action by this government that will threaten our supply of affordable electricity.

ALTERNATIVE FUELS

Mrs Marland: There are pressing environmental reasons to develop alternative fuels for vehicles: 40% of the smog in our cities results from motor vehicle emissions which are also implicated in global warming and the deterioration of the ozone layer.

Since last Friday I have been driving a natural gas vehicle which is being lent to me by Consumers' Gas. Compared with gasoline and diesel fuel, natural gas significantly reduces harmful emissions. Natural gas is also a plentiful Canadian resource. Natural gas is available at 40 service stations in Ontario. As well, a refuelling appliance can be installed for convenient fill-up at homes which are heated by natural gas. Dual-fuel systems are available so that drivers can flick a switch to change to gasoline in areas where natural gas is not readily available.

There are economic benefits from converting a vehicle to natural gas, which can lower fuel bills by up to 50%. The Ontario government offers a sales tax rebate of up to $1,000 on newly purchased vehicles which have natural gas systems installed. There is also a federal government taxable grant of $500 to offset conversion costs. It is estimated that installation costs are paid within a few months in fuel savings.

I would encourage all Ontario drivers to give serious consideration to switching to alternative fuels. It is a little thing each of us can do for the environment while reducing our driving costs. I add that in my opinion all governments at all levels should have their fleet vehicles using alternative fuels.

CANADIAN FOOTBALL LEAGUE

Mr Morrow: I rise today to remind the members of this House and the residents of Ontario about the struggle faced by the Canadian Football League, especially the teams in Ottawa and Hamilton. The teams west of the Ontario border receive either direct grants or tax breaks from their provincial governments, but the three Ontario teams receive nothing.

At the present time the Ottawa Rough Riders are under the ownership of the league and the Hamilton Tiger-Cats have been running in the red ever since a new owner took ownership in 1989. The originality of three downs, a 110-yard field, wide-open and high-scoring football must receive some support. The NFL, better known as the No Fun League with its boring, low-scoring, overexposed hype, must be put in its place.

The taxpayers of Ontario built a palace for the Toronto Argonauts and support the facility through advertisements in the dome by many ministries, but the support of the other two Ontario teams is nil. The Ontario Lottery Corp should advertise in both Hamilton and Ottawa, plus I suggest that it be investigated if a non-profit organization such as the Canadian Football League can be allowed to obtain some sort of lottery licence to assist in the survival of these two teams.

It is now time that the members from Ottawa and Hamilton get together to make sure the two franchises are operating on a level playing field with the rest of the teams in the CFL.

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY

ALCOHOL AND DRUG TREATMENT

Hon Ms Lankin: I rise today to announce details of our plans to expand addiction services in Ontario, a measure first announced by the Treasurer in his April budget.

Last year Ontario paid $51.3 million for 3,700 residents to receive addiction treatment in the US. It is unacceptable that taxpayers here should be providing annual subsidies amounting to almost $6 for every man, woman and child in Ontario to profit-driven residential treatment facilities outside of our borders. The cost of treatment at a residential centre in the US averages $12,000 a month. Equivalent hospital treatment in Ontario costs about $5,600 and community-based residential care costs about $2,600. Outpatient treatment in Ontario averages about $400 per month.

We can give Ontarians in their home province more of the high-quality treatment they need for much less than we have been paying to out-of-country facilities.

Today I am announcing new funding of $9.4 million a year to expand addiction services in Ontario. We are adding this to the $56 million that the ministry already has in its community mental health budget. We expect this effort will allow almost 24,000 people to receive a full course of addiction treatment in Ontario each year. Thousands more will be aided in expanded facilities such as detoxification centres.

The new aid for these people comes at a cost of about $1 per citizen of Ontario, not the $6 we sent outside our borders last year. This funding will stay in our province.

1350

The expansion I am announcing has four parts:

First is $4.1 million a year for residential and non-residential treatment programs. It is in these programs that addictions are broken and lives are reclaimed.

A mixture of programs is important. Outpatient treatment is often preferable for an adult, providing help with much less disruption to work and family life than would happen during an extended stay in a residential setting.

On the other hand, young people are often best served in a residential centre away from an environment that may be feeding an addiction.

For these reasons, funds will be allocated to a mixture of programs based on recommendations from district health councils which know best the particular needs of their communities. The Ministry of Health has issued a call for proposals. The councils will be asked to respond before the end of 1991.

The second component is $300,000 a year for the Addiction Research Foundation to run a registry of addiction services. This new registry will allow Ontario's network of 34 local assessment and referral agencies to refer people readily, on a family doctor's instruction, to available addiction programs throughout the province. Those agencies can begin using the registry on October 2.

The third part is a $3-million increase to the annual funding of assessment and referral centres. The centres already provide services to 18,000 people a year. With this funding they can increase staff and boost that number by 25%.

The fourth component is an increase of $2 million annually to detoxification centres.

These services are on the front lines of addiction help and this funding will increase their combined capacity by more than 50%. We are working with an executive committee of directors of these centres to determine which services need expansion and where new services are required. The amount budgeted for the expansion to addiction services for the remainder of this fiscal year is $6.4 million. Specific allocations are yet to be determined because they are dependent on recommendations coming from our district health councils.

Meanwhile, as I announced in August, provincial health insurance on October 1 will begin to cover the full cost of out-of-country addiction treatment when appropriate care in Ontario is unavailable and where prior approval has been obtained. Those who must go outside the province will be directed to treatment centres with which my ministry has negotiated a payment schedule. Those negotiations are proceeding as I speak. Those who choose to go elsewhere will be entitled to funding at the OHIP rate of $200 a day.

The increases I have just announced will cut substantially the numbers of people who need to go outside our borders for help with their addictions. We will have a clear indication of the exact numbers once the many expansions are in full operation in communities across the province.

I am not claiming a cure-all. More work needs to be done. For example, the member for Yorkview and parliamentary assistant to the minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug policy recently completed a tour of the province in which he examined the way Ontario deals with addictions. I understand his report will soon be released.

I also wish to underline that payments for drug addiction services represented only one quarter of the total out-of-country hospital services we were billed last year. We will be making other announcements in the future about other measures to use health funding more efficiently in Ontario to reduce out-of-country payments.

Today's announcement is a good step forward. It is an example of the kind of cost-effective management the nation's health ministers committed themselves to in Winnipeg last week. Our government is determined to use health dollars wisely and to provide the best services possible to Ontarians in their home province.

RESPONSES

ALCOHOL AND DRUG TREATMENT

Mrs Sullivan: On occasion this place can be shown to be a kinder and gentler place. Perhaps my response to the statement of the Minister of Health is one of those occasions. We welcome the minister's announcement of the expansion of addiction services programs and the increase in funding, $6.4 million in this fiscal year and $9.4 million on a full-year basis, and think it is an announcement to be applauded.

More than a year ago the last government announced its proposals to reduce the use of out-of-country treatment facilities and replace those with services in Ontario. The minister's statement today takes a slightly different form in the specifics than our approach did, but we concur with the view of the minister that as many Ontarians as possible should have access to treatment in Ontario without the stress and disruption and additional cost to the system that out-of-country treatment provides.

We hope the savings that are accrued in the funding mechanism changes from out of the country to in-country will be redirected to providing services here. We like the emphasis on the community-based services and believe the addition of the registry the minister has announced will assist providers in ensuring appropriate access to the mix of treatment that is available.

Last November the advisory committee on drug treatment chaired by Garth Martin presented a comprehensive report called Treating Alcohol and Drug Problems in Ontario: A Vision for the 90s. This report is a comprehensive one, as I have said. More recommendations that are included in this report are not addressed by the minister today. We hope she will address those soon. I have to remind the minister that close to a year has gone by since this report became available. The minister has said that more work needs to be done. We concur with that view and we are looking forward to further announcements.

Mr Ruprecht: Mr Speaker, on a point of personal privilege: In the parliamentary—

The Speaker: If the member for Parkdale would take his seat, can we stop the clock for a minute. You are utilizing the time allotted for responses. If this could wait until after your party's response time, it might be helpful.

Mr Ruprecht: I will wait.

The Speaker: Further responses?

Mr Bradley: I can get up and talk about something.

The Speaker: It is your time.

Mr Bradley: When the member was making this point to the Legislature, I was waiting patiently to hear somewhere in her announcement whether she was going to announce a new CAT scanner for the Niagara region, because she knows the need. I have talked to the people locally in my area who are involved with drug and alcoholic addiction and they would say that of course this is needed.

People in the Niagara Peninsula have had to go to the United States and some people have gone as far south as Texas and other places where people are advertising their services. I will put it kindly. I know the Minister of Health and members of the standing committee on public accounts have been extremely concerned that these people have been almost recruited to go to the United States at a great cost.

The fact is that the services we provide in this country in many circumstances are equal to the services provided there. We have in the Niagara Peninsula a group that has come together specifically in my city of St Catharines to look at all the services and see where there is duplication and who is doing what best. With the additional funding we are going to see for this program announced by the Minister of Health today, I think they will be in a better position to deliver those services.

Those of us who served on the standing committee on public accounts had the opportunity to hear witnesses from a variety of fields who indicated the genuine need here, the good services that are available here and the underutilized services. I am not suggesting an advertising campaign by the government, but I think the Ministry of Health would want to be involved in encouraging people to look very carefully at our own facilities here in Canada.

I know the people in the Niagara Peninsula as well would say that with the lineup now of some six months for a CAT scanner while there are dogs and cats that are able to get services up in York region, those people hope that the Minister of Health would rise in this House on some occasion very soon to announce permission for a second CAT scanner to be installed in the Niagara Peninsula so that the same service that is available to many other communities in this province will be available to us.

1400

Mr Eves: First of all, I would like to start by applauding the minister for the announcement she made today. I do not think there is any secret that we need additional drug and alcohol rehabilitation treatment programs and facilities in Ontario.

The minister previously announced that a committee would be established to review applications of those Ontario residents who require treatment outside the province of Ontario, where that treatment is not available within the province. This committee, as I understand it, would review those applications and then would okay or not okay, as the case may be, treatment in other places.

I would be interested in receiving a report from the ministry with respect to the status and the success of this committee, because I am concerned, as I believe everybody should be—and I am sure the minister is as well—about patients who require immediate or emergency treatment and concerned that this treatment is not delayed by some bureaucratic red tape.

The last point I would like to make with respect to the announcement today is that we really have the need for a comprehensive needs assessment in Ontario with respect to drug and alcohol treatment and rehabilitation programs to figure out what we do have, what is needed and what we can afford to do in the most appropriate fashion on a province-wide basis. Obviously we do not have nearly enough, or all these people would not have been going to other jurisdictions to get the treatment they so sorely need. And of course the Ontario taxpayer ultimately ends up paying for it.

Mr Harris: I just want to refer to one part of the minister's statement, page 2, where she says, "On the other hand, young people are often best served in a residential centre, away from an environment that may be feeding an addiction."

I agree with her and I think many experts agree with her that the appropriate solution for some is not necessarily appropriate for others, but there is considerable expertise in the province in long-term residential care, particularly for youth who are chemically dependent.

I want to say this to the minister. We have, I think, about 40 or 50 beds available in the province. I do not have the figure at my fingertips; it is not very many. However, while we have such a dearth and a shortage, and many have had to go out of province to seek this type of help in breaking long-term dependence, we have shut down in the Nipissing-Parry Sound region a facility that proved effective at a cost far below that of virtually any other facility in the world for providing this very type of program: the Vita Way farm. It is not just for the benefit of those, really, from Nipissing or Parry Sound, but indeed from the province, because it is a residential setting with a view to removing young people from the environment where they live to help break those habits and lifestyles that are part of chemical dependency.

There has been a very, very talented group from the Nipissing-Parry Sound region which has been pleading with the government not to let this program die—not to say that some of the other studies in other areas are not necessary, but that the minister should not let this facility, should not let this expertise, should not let this type of program die while we go on with years, it looks like, of study.

I would ask the minister if she would look at the proposal that is before her ministry and Community and Social Services as well, because it is involved with this as well, for an existing facility with existing expertise at a cost far, far less than any other facility or any other program I have seen around the world, and one that has been working very well. Let's not allow this to fall through the cracks while we sit and wait for new, grandiose schemes where we will have to build them all anew.

Mr Jackson: Ontario is about to lose one of its only three lithotripters in this province. In a meeting I had with the minister on Friday last I raised it with her. Time is running out. We are still sending working people from Ontario to Buffalo, New York, for this treatment, and yet we are about to ship this machine out of this province. I would hope that the minister would consider that in the same context as her announcement today, to make sure that these services are here in Ontario for Ontario workers.

EXPO 98

Mr Ruprecht: On a point of personal privilege, Mr Speaker: In a parliamentary democracy the members must have the right to question the government as to how it spends the taxpayers' money. This right has been abrogated by the Minister of Tourism and Recreation. On a number of occasions he has mentioned to the press that he will be supporting Expo 98 with $1 million; on another occasion, for $500,000. We have to know, in terms of having a statement in the House, how the minister will spend the money, and have no other recourse but to ask you, Mr Speaker, to—

The Speaker: Would the member for Parkdale take his seat. The member may know that he does not have a point of privilege; however, it does sound like subject material for question period, which is soon to unfold.

VISITOR

The Speaker: Before we begin question period, members may wish to welcome to our midst, seated in the members' gallery east, a former member of the assembly and indeed a former leader of a party, Mr Michael Cassidy.

RENT REGULATION

Hon Ms Akande: On a point of privilege, Mr Speaker: Yesterday serious allegations were made by the member for Mississauga South. I owe it to my government and the people of Ontario to set the record straight.

I understand that the rent review services branch of Ontario's Ministry of Housing will be investigating this matter, as it would any allegation concerning units, and naturally I will assist them in every way that I can.

I purchased the duplex with my brother, David Shepherd, in 1984. Immediately prior to the purchase, the building had been so extensively renovated and altered that in fact two new units had been created. At this time, it was possible under section 128 of the residential properties act to renovate a unit so substantially as to create a new unit and to set a new rent without application to rent review. This was in accordance with applicable legislation, dependent on the amount of money spent on a renovation and/or the nature of the work done.

The renovation at 964 Avenue Road was extensive and costly. The cost was more than 25% of the total cost of the building and the land. Renovations included modernizing and updating the heating, electrical and plumbing, reconfiguring the interior, adding a second bathroom to each apartment and rebuilding and reconfiguring the kitchens. It was common practice at the applicable time to assess such an expenditure per building as a new unit, in accordance with applicable rent review legislation, and new rent was set without application.

After the renovations and the purchase were completed, one unit, the lower, had an initial rent set of $1,000 per month. The other unit was occupied by the co-owner, David Shepherd, who of course did not pay rent. In subsequent years, the rent of the first unit, the lower, was increased in accordance with the rent review percentage guidelines. In 1989, I purchased my brother's share of the building. Because the building's second unit had been occupied by an owner-occupier and had no applicable rent history, the second unit's initial rent was set according to the requirements of the legislation.

When I was appointed to Ontario's cabinet, the Premier determined that my ownership of this duplex was not in conflict with his conflict-of-interest guidelines.

The Speaker: I take that to be a point of personal explanation by the member, and it is duly noted.

1410

ORAL QUESTIONS

BUDGET

Mr Elston: I have been pursuing the Treasurer for the last couple of days to find out exactly how far out of whack his already reckless $9.7-billion deficit is. I wish that he could help me out today. I have been poring over his 1991 budget, which talks about his $52-billion-plus expenditure side, plus his $9.7-billion deficit projection. Having not known yesterday how many hundreds of millions of dollars he is off his $9.7-billion deficit, can he tell us today if he knows how many hundreds of millions of dollars his deficit is out of control?

Hon Mr Laughren: I will say to the interim leader of the official opposition yet again that the deficit is not out of control, nor are our expenditures out of control. We, as a responsible government, just like any responsible organization, whether in the private sector or the public sector, must keep a very close eye on expenditures during the year. I have said again and again that we are determined to keep control of our expenditures so that the very thing the member implies is happening will not happen. We are determined that we are going to keep control of our expenditures so that we do not exceed the deficit number. We will work very hard, to the best of our ability, to make sure this does not happen.

Mr Elston: I have both the budget and the paper that he released just last month, which says that not only are his revenues on target—or, as he describes them, “spot on,” whatever that means—but that his operating expenditures are almost exactly right; in fact, in total, his deficit is down just last month by some $5 million.

Now, here we have both the prime minister of this province and the Treasurer running around since this paper has been released, saying: “We must cut back on our expenditures. We must cut, in fact, hundreds of millions of dollars.” Can the Treasurer tell us, as he is unable to tell us exactly how many hundreds of millions of dollars he is cutting, what has happened since just last month, when everything was, to use his words, “spot on,” to make sure that in fact some catastrophe has occurred in the last 30 days? What is going on?

Hon Mr Laughren: The first-quarter results to which the leader refers dealt with the period of time from April 1 to June 30, the end of the first quarter. At that point, it did not look to us as though the expenditures that we are now concerned about were going to be as high as they now appear to be. That includes things such as the rapidly increasing social assistance case load. There are some shortfalls in making up the deficiencies in the two major pension plans, the teachers' plan and the Ontario public service pension plan, and there are some costs associated with the rather open-ended health care system we have in this province. As we continued to monitor those numbers during the summer, after the publication of the first-quarter finances, it came clear to us that they were going to be higher than we thought they were going to be and that we had better take action to control them.

The other component, of course, is that while we feel our revenues coming from Ontario sources appear to be the way we projected they would be, or very close, we do not know—the history of Ottawa is rather an erratic one in terms of the revenues it gives us in the form of, for example, the provincial income tax revenues. The member's government remembers how erratic those payments were. They would be out as much as $1 billion in a year. So we have to be very careful about managing our expenditures.

Mr Elston: The honourable gentleman just mentioned the B word. I wonder if that is close to the hundreds of millions of dollars that he is out.

I wish to ask him about something that is very intriguing to me. He has indicated there are obviously massive problems with the funding for both the teachers' and the public servants' pension plans. He has mentioned that both yesterday and again today. Since he will not identify the margin by which his reckless $9.7-billion deficit is in jeopardy, can he tell us and define for us precisely how much the teachers' pension plan and the Ontario public service pension plan are out of line, so that we can start getting bits and pieces, one at a time, line by line?

Hon Mr Laughren: First of all, I should clarify for the member that when I said the B-word, the billion word, what I was saying was that the federal government's payments to the previous government of the province were out by about $1 billion in one year. That is why I raised that as an area that is erratic and difficult to predict.

Mr Elston: They're not quite spot on.

Hon Mr Laughren: No, they are not spot on with their numbers. I can tell the member that.

The member asked me about the deficits of the teachers' and the public service plans. The member will remember, I think, that going back to 1989 there were changes made in the legislation governing those two plans.

An hon member: By whom?

Hon Mr Laughren: By the previous government. At that point it was felt that the deficit of the teachers' plan was around $4 billion, the actuarial deficit, and of the public plan $1.9 billion.

Mr Elston: It was never that low.

Mr Conway: The teachers and the NDP said it didn't exist.

Hon Mr Laughren: No, that is not true. This was under the previous government. This was back in 1989.

Since then, an initial evaluation of the plans has increased the deficit on both those plans. The deficit on the teachers' plan went from what was originally thought to be around $4 billion to $7.8 billion. Now that does not have to be made up all in one year. I think the member appreciates that. In the public service plan, the deficit has increased from $1.9 billion—that was in 1989—to about $2.5 billion. There is, by the way, no relationship between the partnership worked out between the government and the teachers—

The Speaker: Could the Treasurer conclude his remarks, please.

Hon Mr Laughren: —dealing with this increased deficit.

The Speaker: New question.

Mr Elston: I am somewhat surprised. Mr Philip was to have been here today. I have just been advised now that he will not. Is it true that he will not be here today? Is Mr Philip not going to be in?

Hon Mr Cooke: We will check.

Mr Elston: Okay, Mr Philip is not going to be in. The Premier is not here. Let me then follow along to the Treasurer, since the Treasurer is here.

It seems to me that while we wish the Treasurer could talk to us about an increase in the job market in the province, what he has done is make a lot of work for a lot of people like me who are trying to figure out what the magnitude of his problem is, but it is like pulling teeth, one at a time—very, very difficult.

The Treasurer has now talked about the teachers' pensions, to which I suspect he will be requiring teachers to contribute, and he nods his head yes. Can the Treasurer now tell us what other lines are causing him serious heartburn as he looks at the sanctity of his $9.7-billion deficit?

Hon Mr Laughren: Besides the opposition, he means.

I have already alluded to the matters that are causing us a problem besides the deficits in the teachers' plan, which really do go back some time and are not the result of anything that was done in the last year or even the last two years. That is simply not the case. I have referred already to the increase in the social assistance case load. That is directly a result of the recession and the severity of the recession in this province. I mentioned some of the health-related issues, such as OHIP and the Ontario drug benefit plan, and the home care costs as well.

Those are the major issues, although just the other day we learned that the cost of firefighting in the province is up substantially this year over what it was expected to be. As a matter of fact, it is higher than it has ever been. So there are a number of issues that are problems that are causing us heartburn, as the member would put it, because of the pressures they are applying on us in managing our expenditures.

Mr Elston: Yesterday I asked the Treasurer to identify who would be on the losers' list. Today he has talked about pension plans being a problem. He has just now enumerated at least three areas in the health care sector which will be the subject matter of expenditure pressures.

Hon Mr Laughren: I didn't say that.

Mr Elston: Just a minute. He said he did not say that? He did say that, okay? He nods in agreement. The health sector is causing him tremendous discomfort with respect to expenditures. Can he tell us that he is not going to cut away from funding for hospitals and for home care, which look after the social and health needs of our seniors and the public in general? Can he declare that there will not be a touching of the health budget with respect to his cutbacks?

1420

Hon Mr Laughren: First of all, I will say that I will not make that decision anyway. We have in this government a Health minister who is in complete control of her ministry.

I think that the leader of the official opposition, though, would recognize that when we are under the kinds of pressures we are now with our expenditures, we look across the entire government for ways in which to manage our expenditures in a better way and a more judicious way, and we intend to do that, but I am not standing here in my place today and announcing where those expenditure management actions will be taken. That will be done and I will be making—I have already said I will be making—a further statement next week.

Mr Elston: As I said, one tooth at a time. Now we know the pension plans and the teachers will contribute to the government's mismanagement. We now know that the health care budget will also be sacrificed to deal with their mismanagement. Can the Treasurer tell us, while Ontario is involved in such a need for the creation of new jobs and retraining of people, that he will not touch the budgets of both Education and Colleges and Universities, which are needed to get us ready to come back from the doldrums of this economic recession and also from the problems which have been created by the uncertainty of his administration and his lack of expertise when it comes to dealing with provincial budgets?

Hon Mr Laughren: I think the member should stop trying to get me to pull another tooth at a time by his questions. I am not going to start making a list of where constraints will be effected. All I can assure the member of is that they will be done in a way that is as equitable as possible and in which ministers themselves will have a say and an actual part in determining where those constraints will take place.

VISITOR

The Speaker: Will you stop the clock, please? Before continuing, members might like to welcome to our midst and seated in the member's gallery west, former member of the assembly and also minister of the crown, Mr Jack Riddell.

RENT REVIEW

Mrs Marland: My question is for the Minister of Housing. Yesterday I brought to her attention an example of an apartment that was once an affordable unit and is now no longer affordable. I am quite happy to await the details of her investigation before I comment further on that example.

We on this side of the House have expressed concern with the rent control system now for several years. The current rent review system is not creating more affordable units and it is a bureaucratic quagmire, I think the minister would have to agree. Would she also agree with our party's proposal to undertake a cost-benefit analysis of a shelter subsidy system for tenants in Ontario?

Hon Mr Cooke: Why don't you apologize for what you did yesterday, Margaret?

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. I am asking the members to come to order.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Just when everything was running so smoothly. We can continue with question period, provided that people can remain calm and that questions can be placed in an orderly way. The Minister of Housing had the floor. Would she please continue.

Hon Ms Gigantes: It obviously would help if the honourable member opposite would ask her question and not refer to items which will generate some noise and discussion around here.

Mr Eves: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: That sort of comment from the minister is totally inappropriate. What precipitated this discussion was the flim-flam coming from the government House leader. If he would shut up, we would all get along with our business.

Interjections.

The Speaker: I ask the house to come to order. Before this degenerates any further—

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. If the members cannot come to order, we will have to take a recess.

Interjections.

The Speaker: I ask the members to come to order. The members are capable of a more calm and reasoned approach to our public business, I know that, and I ask now that all of you attempt to do so. Would the Minister of Housing please respond to the question and the question only.

Hon Ms Gigantes: Perhaps it would do well if I reminded people that the question was apparently about the member's desire to see us invest as a government in a cost-benefit study of rent subsidies as a means, it seemed to be suggested, of producing more rental housing in Ontario. It was also implied in the question that of course rent control measures somehow were destroying rental supply.

I would point out to the member, first of all, that in provinces, states and other jurisdictions which do not have rent control systems or indeed rent review systems, the problem of increasing rental supply continues apace. It is very comparable to the kind of problem we have had here in Ontario.

Second, I wonder if, as the Housing critic, she has had time yet to familiarize herself with the joint study undertaken by the Ontario union of co-ops—I have forgotten its name because I am new to my portfolio—with the Ontario Non-Profit Housing Association. That indicates that the cost of the kinds of measures that she might like to substitute for rent control would be about $1.2 billion annually. Does that satisfy her need for a cost-benefit study?

Mrs Marland: The current rent review system is costing taxpayers in excess of $40 million, and I remind this minister of that fact. The government, in its attempt to build every new affordable unit in this province, will spend over $875 million in non-profit operating subsidies by 1993-94, with a mature annual Ministry of Housing budget of $1 billion, an increase of over 300% from the ministry's 1985-86 budget of $243 million.

Given the amount of money that the minister's government is spending on housing, why will she not look at alternatives, rather than simply adding new rules to the existing system?

Hon Ms Gigantes: The legislation which we have brought to this assembly is legislation which we hope very much will lead to a simpler and more effective method of rent control, and in fact the moneys that will be invested—the member opposite cites $40 million—look very cost-effective to this minister when compared with the fund which would be required to provide the alternative which she is suggesting, which is rental subsidy, which would, according to the best estimates made in Ontario, cost $1.2 billion annually, and we would not have any stock to show for it once we have paid that annually.

1430

Mrs Marland: I do not know what this minister's interpretation of "simple" is, except perhaps something I would be better not to refer to. The fact is this minister is going to be spending in excess of $1 billion, and yet she is apparently not willing, by this response, to look at alternatives. We are simply saying that given the amount the government is spending, we would like to see a system that protects tenants and landlords and, more important, targets assistance to those who absolutely need it. Will the minister not agree we should look at a shelter subsidy system?

Hon Ms Gigantes: The member will know that in fact we have put out a consultation paper which we have asked Ontarians to have a look at and respond to. She certainly is welcome to put her opinions into the ministry, as I am sure she will, by the method of question period over time. We have asked Ontarians to think about the relative benefits of providing non-profit co-operative housing, community-based housing of the kind that we have invested a lot of money in and that we think is providing both good housing and employment for people in these times.

I would ask her also to consider putting in her views, if she still feels the best way to provide for people who are having trouble in the private market in housing is to provide rental subsidy. Let us know. All Ontarians are invited to take part in this consultation. We would be glad to have her views, along with everybody else's, and we are certainly going to look at them all.

ASSISTED HOUSING

Mr Harris: My question is to the Minister of Housing too. She is involved with the federal government and with others and billions of dollars in trying to provide housing. Each year another $100 million, $500 million, $1 billion is added. The problem gets worse. That is why we are striving for solutions to help people, not subsidize bricks, mortar, Layton, buildings, developers.

One of the reasons for that pertains to my question to the Minister of Housing. Last week, Toronto city council voted to back out of the proposed Ataratiri housing development unless the province agrees to cover expenditures above the already promised $800 million. Three years ago, when the Liberal government announced this project, estimated costs were $444 million. At that time I said, "It is unrealistic," that the government had failed to plan for land acquisition, for infrastructure, for environmental considerations. I said, "The costs are unrealistic."

My worst fears have been realized. The Urban Development Institute predicts the minimum cost over 10 years will be in excess of $2 billion. There is a point where affordable housing is no longer affordable, and we are now beyond that point. Each of the 7,000 units is now estimated to cost $250,000 per unit. Does the minister intend to waste even more money by covering further expenditures for this project?

Hon Ms Gigantes: I believe the leader of the Conservative Party understands it was not this government which undertook to take a look at the development of a total community on the Ataratiri lands. In fact, with hindsight, I would say his views at the time, if he is quoting himself correctly, were probably accurate. The land was bought at a time when it was very dear, relatively speaking, and we are now in a situation where the value of that land is lower on the market. In fact, the whole housing market is very different from the way it looked back in 1987.

However, those lands are mainly now in public ownership, through the agreement with the city of Toronto. Certainly we will be working with Toronto to make sure the best possible use is made of them. We are working hard on that to make as reasonable and practical plans for the future as we can.

Mr Harris: It will cost $2 billion for 7,000 units. The taxpayers of Ontario cannot afford any longer for this government to now make up its mind. I agree it was a Liberal government that embarked on this path. It does not matter if it is a Liberal or socialist government, or semisocialist government. When governments intervene where they do not belong and pretend they can handle the marketplace, this is what happens.

The minister received environmental evaluation reports last March. At $3 million an acre, $237 million has been spent on expropriating land, a ludicrous amount for severely contaminated land. Each day now that the minister delays costs $60,000 interest to the project debt. Today $2 million a month provides shelter subsidies to 8,000 needy families in existing private sector houses. How many more taxpayer dollars is the minister going to waste on this project before she makes up her mind one way or the other, where she can now help 1,000 more needy families today by working with the private sector in a shelter subsidy program?

Hon Ms Gigantes: Let me assure the leader of the Conservative Party that when we are working away on this project, we are looking at all the alternatives. I am sure he would wish us to look at all the alternatives. That is precisely what we are doing.

Mr Harris: If the minister sells the property today, she would get some of the money back and cancel the $60,000 a day in interest. If the minister put up that money, she could help 8,000 families today and for ever, 1,000 more than she is going to help with this project.

We know there is a great need for affordable housing in Toronto. Nobody, I hope, can stand up in this house and call a unit affordable that costs $250,000 to build. Private developers like CN Rail have been waiting five years for permission to build more than 5,000 units of housing near Spadina Avenue. They have agreed to build 2,000 units of affordable housing at not one cent's cost to the taxpayer.

It is time for the minister to refuse to extend guarantees on this project, on the loans, to cut the losses from this white elephant and to take that money and help real people who need help today in getting decent housing for themselves. Will the minister agree to cut this white elephant loose and put that money to helping people today?

Hon Ms Gigantes: The implied solutions to the housing problems which are confronting thousands of people in and around the Toronto area and across this province that have been suggested through the questions raised by the Conservative Housing critic and the Conservative leader really are a strange mishmash when they suggest (1) that we should dump rent controls, (2) that we should simply sell all the lands at Ataratiri without a second thought, without looking at alternatives, at this point in the land market situation, and (3) we should give that money to people to go out and look for rental housing they can afford. The member opposite says this will go on for ever. This is all going to be spent in one shot, as far as I can understand what he is saying. This is a very mishmashed kind of solution. I hope they will both take the time to sort out their ideas and put in some positive suggestions to our housing policy framework consultation.

LABOUR DISPUTES

Mr Offer: I have a question to the Minister of Labour. Earlier this week the minister castigated any suggestions of interference in the collective bargaining process. In fact, just last Monday he defended his government's refusal to intervene in the TTC strike and told this House that the NDP government got the people and the drivers back to work as quickly as possible and that this was achieved without destroying the collective bargaining process.

I am wondering if the minister could help us out on this side of the House. How can he reconcile his refusal to intervene in the collective bargaining process during last week's TTC strike with the precise pay ceiling that was given to his former colleague and Council of Regents chair, Richard Johnston, who is currently negotiating with the service staff of the province's 23 community colleges? How can the minister reconcile those two divergent activities?

1440

Mr Bradley: There it is. No flipping it away. You can't pass this one off.

Hon Mr Mackenzie: I am going to refer this to the Chairman of Management Board of Cabinet.

Hon Mr Silipo: Let me say to the members opposite it is quite appropriate that I be the one who answers this question.

Mr Bradley: No, it's—

The Speaker: Order, the member for St Catharines.

Hon Mr Silipo: In terms of any discussions that have happened, I have been involved in those. Let me just be very clear with the member opposite and the members of the House. We have not intervened in the collective bargaining process. We have had discussions with the folks in the colleges sector, as we have had with other public sector employers and unions, to indicate to them the kind of fiscal reality we are facing and asked them that they keep that in mind in their negotiations.

Mr Offer: I am quite amazed that the Minister of Labour refuses to answer a question dealing with the whole issue of collective bargaining and what his position is and how he can reconcile his position, instead of throwing it off to another minister.

However, I think the minister will be aware that the Treasurer is refusing to tell the people of this province what the magnitude of this government's overspending problem is. He is refusing to be upfront with this Legislature. I would like the minister to contrast the statements of the Treasurer with the comments made by his assistant deputy minister, who stated, "It would be wrong for the government not to let the people know what our circumstances are." All we are asking for is some consistency.

What kind of rules is the minister playing by? Is it okay to increase the salary of the civil service and the doctors at the sacrifice of the men and women who work at the community colleges? What is the minister's position in terms of those issues?

Hon Mr Silipo: Let me remind the member that the Treasurer has clearly indicated he will be making a statement in the House next week detailing some of the information the members have asked for. I will also be making a statement in the House next week following on some of those issues and dealing with questions of public sector bargaining.

As I have indicated, there is no inconsistency in the statements that have been made. As we head into the next year, there are some fiscal realities we are facing. There will be an impact within the question of salaries and wages, which we have discussed with our unions informally, which we have discussed with the public sector employer groups and which we will need to continue discussing with people in trying to arrive at a solution.

LABOUR LEGISLATION

Mrs Witmer: I have a question for the Minister of Labour. As he knows, the Canadian Federation of Independent Business released a survey in June of this year which found that when workers were asked if they would rather belong to a union, 57% responded no while only 37% responded yes. I have been receiving correspondence from individual workers who are concerned about the labour law reform proposals. They are indicating to me that they do not want to join a trade union. However, they feel this legislation will not allow them an opportunity to express their desire not to join.

Does the minister agree that his present labour law reform package supports the rights of trade unions at the expense of individual rights? What changes is he prepared to make to ensure that the individual rights of each worker are preserved and protected?

Hon Mr Mackenzie: No, I do not think it interferes with the rights of workers at the expense of trade unions.

Mrs Witmer: That is a very simple answer, but I can assure the minister that employees and workers throughout this province are fearful because his labour reform proposals will make the certification process easier by lowering the level of support for automatic certification to only 50%. His proposals will provide access to an employer's premises and employee lists, his proposals will eliminate the obligation to collect the $1 union card fee and his proposals will also take away the individual employee's voice in the certification process through the elimination of petitions.

If unions are given more rights, as this legislation seems to indicate, they should also be given more responsibilities. Why has the minister not proposed the introduction of a representation vote in all cases so that each affected individual can democratically express his or her choice on unionization?

Hon Mr Mackenzie: I am surprised. I thought the member's position was the status quo. I have no difficulty at all with the benefits to Ontario of workers having the right and being able to organize into a local union. I think that has been one of the strengths of this province.

I would point out to the member that we do not have a set position or a recommendation as yet. We are developing a discussion paper which has not gone out for discussion purposes as yet. There are a number of options on that paper, and when it is ready it will go out and we will hear what the people think of it.

FOREST MANAGEMENT

Mr Martin: My question is for the Minister of Natural Resources. With the new initiative of his ministry to protect old growth, there were many concerns raised about cutting that was already scheduled and approved in the candidate site of Galloway Lake. Could the minister please indicate to the House what his action has been to date on this concern?

Hon Mr Wildman: The member for Sault Ste Marie is quite correct. Many environmental groups have raised concerns about the cutting in the previously announced protected area of Galloway Lake. However, we have been able to accommodate those groups' concerns by ensuring that the east Galloway Lake area will be protected from harvesting while the conservation strategy for old-growth forest ecosystems is being developed.

The initiative that protects this area was developed in discussion with some of the environmental groups and the decision enables us to ensure that the criteria for the old-growth candidate sites are met and that we are able to connect the east Galloway Lake area with two other areas previously identified, the Bliss and Quinn lakes areas, so that we have a total protected area of 6,000 hectares. I think this protection of such a large area while we develop the old-growth ecosystem strategy is an indication of the recommitment of this government to the protection of old growth in the province.

Mr Martin: I would like to commend the minister on this sound environmental initiative. I would further note, though, that as a northern member I have great concern as to the impact decisions like this may have on the forest products industry. Could the minister please indicate what the situation for the industry is as a result of this direction?

Hon Mr Wildman: I know the member is concerned about the forest industry in his area and jobs in the area of Sault Ste Marie, but I can assure him that the decision that was made in conjunction with the environmental groups enables us to protect the old growth in the east Galloway Lake area while at the same time ensuring that in the west Galloway Lake area there is timber available for harvest and renewal that will support the local forest industry and protect jobs and ensure the viability of the forest industry in the Sault Ste Marie area.

1450

ONTARIO HYDRO RATES

Mr Conway: My question is to the Treasurer, the member for Nickel Belt. Having regard to the government's new emphasis on the first order of importance of economic renewal, can he help me understand how it is that Ontario Hydro rates that will be increased minimally by 12%—and in many parts of northern and eastern and southwestern Ontario where there are not the economies of scale those rates of increase are very likely going to be 13%, 14% and 15%—how those kinds of increases are going to stimulate and assist our recession-ridden Ontario economy?

Hon Mr Laughren: I think the member understands very well that any time you have an increase in the costs of doing business, it makes it more difficult to do business. I think that is a given. At the same time, I do not think any of us expect that Ontario Hydro can internalize the very substantial costs of what has been a large nuclear expansion program in this province. We know that well over half of the components of that increase are the cost of Darlington and, quite frankly, the costs of some of the inefficiencies in the nuclear generating stations.

No one likes to see increases of a double-digit nature in Hydro rates, but at the same time I do not think there is anything that can be done about it because those costs are there and Ontario Hydro needs the revenues to pay for them. It is as simple as that.

Mr Conway: In his statement on Monday the Premier decried the collapse of the rural economy. I say to the Treasurer that I represent rural, small-town eastern Ontario where my communities of Pembroke and Eganville and Cobden are wholly dependent in the main on electricity. They hear Hydro say that not just this year will the bulk power rate be increased by at least 11.8%, but that this will be the order of the day for the next three to four to five years.

When you take that statement from Hydro and add that to the energy and hydro policy of this government contained in the endlessly fascinating Bill 118, I ask my friend the Treasurer, given what he said and what the NDP has said over the years about their objection to regressive taxes, what do they say to the unemployed loggers and the beleaguered farmers of the Ottawa Valley who look to this essential service and realize that they are going to face rates of increase probably in the 12% to 15% and perhaps 20% range for as many years as this government is likely going to enjoy this mandate?

Hon Mr Laughren: I would ask those people to take into consideration the fact that these are increased costs that Hydro simply must pay. Second, we should all be happy with the fact that this government is attempting to move away from our reliance on nuclear power and to implement some conservation measures so that in the future we hope that by not having such a reliance on a very expensive source of power, these things will not happen. That is our goal.

ONTARIO HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

Mr Cousens: I have a question for the minister responsible for the Ontario Human Rights Commission, the Minister of Citizenship for the province. On June 6 of this year I met with the chairperson of the Ontario Human Rights Commission and learned at that time that she had a great deal of faith in the new case management system.

As of October last year, $3 million was set aside for 10 investigators to take some of the more difficult cases in the backlog. In the first six months, instead of solving those 200 cases that were assigned, 71 cases were closed and then in the next six months there were another 200, so 400 cases were approached and of that in the early while they were not very successful.

Yesterday the minister announced $6.4 million towards the whole backlog problem we have in human rights cases in Ontario and she was going to bring on 33 extra investigators for a time. She has also brought on a new vice-chairman and a new chief of the board of inquiry. I have a very simple question. How can this minister or this government justify spending close to $10 million of taxpayers' money on a system that is not working?

Hon Ms Ziemba: First of all, I would like to bring to the honourable member's attention that $3 million was not added to the OHRC last October for a 10-person case study review. What actually happened is that $3 million was put to the OHRC in 1989. Our $6.4 million is one-time funding to eliminate the backlog, one-time funding that will be spread over three years to make sure that the system works properly, that we have a healthy effect on this team, that we look at staff training and that we look at management training, and I think that this is a good investment.

Mr Cousens: The goal was 200 cases in the first six months and only 71 were resolved. That was not much of a record. It was a dismal failure. It is obvious the system is not working. The commission's staff admits the system is not working. The Ombudsman has now said the system is not working. The minister herself stated in the House on June 11: "Obviously, last year the increase of $3 million did not address the backlog...it did not make a difference. We just saw an increase in the backlog and that is how it was."

In the minister's own words, the system is not working. Why does she insist on recklessly throwing money at this problem and adding more bureaucratic layers on a system that is not working. Where is the money going? What is going on over there? Why do we not have a complete overhaul of the Ontario Human Rights Commission and solve the problem once and for all?

Hon Ms Ziemba: First of all, the system has not worked. The member is absolutely right. The Ombudsman did come back and say that we needed to make some substantial changes. I would like to ask the member—

Interjection.

Hon Ms Ziemba: No, we are not throwing money at it. What we are doing is putting in a system with 33 new people who are going to have a project director who is going to report monthly to us to tell us what is happening. There is accountability. There is fiscal responsibility.

I also would like to ask the member, while we are doing this project and code review—and we are going to do a code review—is the member going to go back to his constituents, is anybody in this House going to face those constituents and say: "No, we are not going to address your rights and your human sufferings. We are just going to leave and abandon you"? I do not think I am going to do that.

The Speaker: New question. The member for Lincoln.

Mr Hansen: My question is for the Minister of Agriculture and Food—

Mr Cousens: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: Can she not answer the question?

The Speaker: Order. The member for Markham understands our system about posing questions and that there are responses. We do not necessarily call them answers.

Mr Cousens: I could at least answer her question.

The Speaker: The system does not work that way. The member for Lincoln with his question.

Mr Hansen: I received a letter here—

The Speaker: The member for Durham East with a point of order.

Mr Mills: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: This afternoon a number of people in here have referred to members and ministers by their names, and just now the member for Markham called the minister a "her." I object to that. He called her a "her."

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. I would ask the members to come to order. I would ask that all members refer to others as members of the House or as ministers of the crown and not refer to each other's surnames or any other names. The member for Lincoln.

ASSISTANCE TO FARMERS

Mr Hansen: I received a letter here from Roger George, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture.

This is a badge I am wearing: "No support, no farmers, no food."

I have a question of the minister. The farmers are pleased with his recent announcement of a $93-million interim payment for the gross revenue insurance plan, which will partially address the financial—

Interjections.

1500

The Speaker: Order.

Mr Hansen: Can the minister tell us when the remainder of these much-needed safety net benefits will flow to Ontario farmers?

Hon Mr Buchanan: The $93 million that the member refers to is an interim GRIP payment which is for the 1991-92 crop. Normally that payment would not flow until 1992. The interim payment which will start to flow in mid-November represents between 35% and 50% of the payment expected, depending on the commodity. The balance will go to producers in two other payments, another interim payment in the spring, with a final payment probably going out late next summer or fall.

AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE

Mr Scott: I have a question for the Minister of Financial Institutions about automobile insurance. I understand he may be hesitant to answer our questions, but I thought perhaps he would be able to answer the questions of his own supporters.

On September 10, Mel Swart, a former member of this House, the dean of the House, I think, at one time, gave an interview to the St Catharines Standard about the government's flip-flop on automobile insurance. He pointed out that the central part of the automobile insurance plan on which the government had run in not only 1987 but 1990 had been part of the NDP's policy since its creation and part of the policy of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation party long before that.

He said that he had received calls from a tremendous number of NDP supporters across Ontario, because he had devoted much of his career to the advancement of this policy. He said he thought the Premier was wrong, that the decision of the new government, in which he had such confidence, was—and these are his words—"a very bitter disappointment and a very serious mistake." He was also concerned, he said, particularly because the decision made on automobile insurance, "shows how the government may handle other important policies in the future."

If the minister will not answer us, what is the answer he gives to Mel Swart and his supporters?

Hon Mr Charlton: Perhaps it is useful that the member for St George-St David has raised this question here today, because it gives us the opportunity to deal with it. The Minister of Financial Institutions, the member for Hamilton Mountain, does not say anything different—

Interjections.

Mr Scott: I am not the slum landlord. That is the slum landlord.

The Speaker: Would the minister take his seat for a moment.

The member for St George-St David, we are attempting to re-establish a tone in here in which we can all have a calm and reasoned approach to the public business. The Speaker and others would appreciate your co-operation in that manner, and perhaps you will withdraw the remark that was made.

Mr Scott: My allegation was that rents were charged that are beyond that permitted by law. Any other allegation I made I withdraw.

The Speaker: Would the minister respond to the question, please.

Hon Mr Charlton: This member does not say anything different to Mel Swart, the former member for Welland-Thorold, than he said to the media on September 6 or that he spent an hour on CBC Radio two weeks ago Monday saying to the larger general public of this province.

The government did not reject its policy of public auto insurance. This government has not changed its view of the value of a publicly owned automobile insurance system. This government will be releasing in the coming months its plans for public auto insurance and it, in effect, will be the yardstick against which we measure the performance of the private sector, because it has said it can do it.

Mr Scott: I should have brought to the honourable minister's attention what Mr Swart also said. He said you may expect "that the reasons given by the government for abandonment will not stand up under any examination."

But if that is the answer he gives to Mr Swart, what answer does he give to the honourable member for Welland-Thorold, who said this, and I think he was accurate about this, the next day in the St Catharines Standard: "There isn't a New Democratic Party member in this entire province who did not campaign on the promise of public auto insurance, and to permit this type of 180-degree reversal seems to me to be a betrayal of the commitments that those people made to their voters. I am disappointed. I can't think of a policy that was more central to the NDP platform in this province." Then he goes on to say that the insurance industry has got to the Premier's office.

What does the minister say to his present colleague? We have heard that he has diffused what he says to Mr Swart. What does he say to his present colleague, the member for Welland-Thorold?

Hon Mr Charlton: I do not intend to try to put words into the mouth of the member for Welland-Thorold. Having said that, the member for Welland-Thorold says he was disappointed. I was disappointed. The Premier was disappointed. Everybody on this side of the House was disappointed that we were not able to proceed. None of us is ashamed of that.

The test of whose pocket we are in and the test of what we do in the future will be the public acceptance or rejection of the reforms that—

Interjections.

The Speaker: Will the minister take his seat.

Mr Tilson: I have a question for the Minister of Financial Institutions. Yesterday, the Minister of Financial Institutions told this House that his auto insurance reform would include benefit reform, financial loss benefits and tort for pain and suffering but not for loss of income, which will certainly result in discrimination against many members of our community.

The minister's promise of reform is long-standing. We have been hearing about this since last fall and we still have nothing. This government continues to flip-flop on its philosophy while the list of innocent accident victims who have been promised by his government to have their right to sue restored grows daily.

His party has released this past week a tabloid which sets forth his party's policies, yet he continues to tell this House that he is still in the process of consultation. Because of the minister's party releasing this tabloid to his members, I think he owes it to this House to tell us when exactly he intends to introduce a bill setting forth his government's reform on auto insurance.

Hon Mr Charlton: The member obviously does not understand a very complex issue. He should take the time to get up to speed on it. The information which is contained in the tabloid to which the member refers is precisely the same information that I referred to yesterday and precisely the same information which went out to the larger general public on September 6. We are still in consultation and negotiation with the industry and with all of the stakeholder groups. I met all last week and am meeting all this week with stakeholder groups. We hope to be making an announcement in this House during October and seeing legislation during this session. When we are ready to make that announcement, we shall do so.

Mr Tilson: That is about as confusing as Mel Swart's, it really is. I would like to read from the minister's reform—

Interjections.

Mr Kormos: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I am hoping I misunderstood what the member just said. To make reference to Mel Swart in that type of disdainful manner is the most disrespectful thing to a person who has performed an outstanding role in this Legislature and in this province and who was one of the most non-partisan members of this Legislature who could ever be found. I really would hope that member would reassess the manner in which he refers to Mel Swart, who I and everybody else in this House should hold in great esteem.

The Speaker: To the member for Welland-Thorold, I hope you are not asking the Speaker to rule on what is or is not confusing or who is or is not confusing. That is a very difficult thing for any Speaker to do. I would ask the member for Dufferin-Peel to place his supplementary.

1510

Mr Tilson: This is a quotation from the tabloid the government introduced last weekend to the members of its party: "Under our reforms, we will get a greater access to the courts. By reintroducing the ability of innocent accident victims and their families to sue for pain and suffering, we will be removing one of the worst features of the Liberal system. More people will be able to bring their case to court, and innocent accident victims will be able to have their awards tailored to meet the non-economic losses they actually experience."

Now, that does not sound like consultation. That sounds like definite policy. Has the bill been written or has it not?

Hon Mr Charlton: Again, I just repeat what I said to the member earlier. It is the same material that was released to the public on September 6. The definition of a "threshold" in legislation, if the member should care to look at the act, is somewhat different from a simple, principled statement like the one he just read out. When we finish the definition of that threshold, we will announce that, along with the rest of a benefits package in this House.

PETITIONS

LANDFILL SITE

Mr Beer: I have a petition signed by some 1,000 residents of King township in my riding. The petition reads as follows:

"King roars, 'Respect our rural environments.' We, the undersigned, oppose the Minister of the Environment's arbitrary decision to make York region Metro's megadump. As concerned citizens, we specifically oppose any landfill site located on environmentally sensitive areas, such as the Oak Ridges moraine."

I have signed my name to that petition.

HEALTH INSURANCE

Mrs Witmer: I have a petition to the Legislature of Ontario which has been signed by 106 people from my community who refer to themselves as the Golden Years Gone Grey:

"The recent policy change by OHIP of reducing their payment for hospital and medical fees for out-of-country vacationers will have a very serious and profound effect on senior citizens. The Blue Cross has already announced their substantial increase in the cost of supplementary insurance. As an example, the cost of out-of-country insurance for three months last year was $111. This year, with the announced increase, it will be $347 for a single.

"Many senior citizens on a fixed income cannot afford this additional increase. Some will cancel their plans to get away from the cold Canadian winter, and this will certainly have a negative impact on their health. Others will gamble and leave the country without supplementary insurance, which could prove to be a disaster if they are involved in an accident or have a serious illness.

"We, the undersigned, therefore request the Ontario government to re-examine this change in policy by OHIP as it relates to retired senior citizens who can ill afford this tremendous increase in their cost of living."

TAXATION

Mr Abel: I have a petition signed by approximately 150 residents of the John Bayus Country Club, and it reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned, object to the system of taxation. We are all residents of the John Bayus Country Club and ask for a review of our situation.

"We do not object to paying taxes, but the neighbouring area receives service such as garbage collection, road repairs, snow removal from the town of Flamborough. We receive none of the above benefits and our taxes are out of all proportion to those paid by neighbouring houses.

"We are also caught in a system of mobile home sizes as a criterion of assessing, while smaller trailers pay no taxes but have added rooms, some larger than mobile homes.

"We would also appreciate your consideration of a new tax system for seniors who live in a senior residential area. Many of us have fixed incomes and have invested into a community dedicated to seniors and their needs. We ask that you consider our appeal, and look forward to your reply."

CHRONIC FATIGUE AND IMMUNE DYSFUNCTION SYNDROME

Mr Carr: I am pleased to table a petition signed by the residents of Ontario which reads as follows:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the chronic fatigue immune dysfunction syndrome, Myalgic Encephalomyelitis is a chronic, debilitating disease currently affecting over two million adults and children in North America; and

"Whereas diagnosis is difficult and the direct costs to our health care system are enormous; there is a drain on the social services; and tax revenues are severely affected because affected people cannot work;

"We, the undersigned, respectfully petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to support the establishment of a task force to study the most appropriate method of establishing an information centre and clinic to provide both information and care to persons with"—this disease—"Their families, physicians, educators and others.

REPORTS BY COMMITTEES

STANDING COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

Mr Runciman from the standing committee on government agencies presented the committee's 13th report.

The Speaker: Pursuant to standing order 104(g)(14), the report is deemed to be adopted by the House.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS

PROVINCIAL BUDGET AND FISCAL POLICIES REFERENDUM ACT, 1991

LOI DE 1991 SUR LES RÉFÉRENDUMS CONCERNANT LES POLITIQUES FISCALES ET LES BUDGETS PROVINCIAUX

Mr Harris moved first reading of Bill 138, An Act to authorize Municipalities to obtain the Opinions of Electors respecting Provincial Budgets and Fiscal Policies.

M. Harris propose la première lecture du projet de loi 138, Loi autorisant les municipalités à obtenir l'avis des électeurs concernant les politiques fiscales et les budgets provinciaux.

The Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry?

All those in favour will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion, the ayes have it.

Motion agreed to.

La motion est adoptée.

Mr Harris: This bill would authorize a municipality to hold a referendum on provincial budgets and fiscal policies. I think it is no secret that municipalities are greatly distressed by the overlapping responsibilities. Disentanglement is the key word of municipal associations and provincial governments.

Municipal electors could be asked whether they agree that the provincial government should be required either to balance its budget at least once in every three fiscal years or, if it fails to do so, to call a general election or seek approval in a province-wide referendum to spend this money that it does not have.

I believe the bill is an important one. If it were passed quickly it would allow municipalities in this election to be able to put this question on the ballot, and I would encourage the government to pick up on this and facilitate second and third reading as quickly as possible. If there is unanimous consent, I move that we move to second reading today, Mr Speaker.

The Speaker: Is there unanimous consent? No.

1520

ORDERS OF THE DAY

INCOME TAX AMENDMENT ACT, 1991

LOI DE 1991 MODIFIANT LA LOI DE L'IMPÔT SUR LE REVENU

Resuming the adjourned debate on the motion for second reading of Bill 83, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act.

Reprise du débat ajourné sur la motion visant la deuxième lecture du projet de loi 83, Loi portant modification de la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu.

Mr Cousens: I thank the House for its attention yesterday and also the number of people who were watching it on their home channels to realize some of the dialogue that would go on within this House.

A number of points have been made to me since then to make sure that I reinforce them. I think one of the points is that when this government enacts another tax bill, it is another occasion when the public is saying: "It's hurting so much. We can't give any more. What are we going to do?"

The fact is that there is a whole reaction beginning to form by society at large out of anger and frustration at the very large taxes they are having to pay now. The kind of thing that is happening is that we are going to see and will continue to see a reduction in the amount of money that people give to charities and to worthwhile events in their own communities.

I have had a number of people talk to me today and say, "I'm ending up now paying so much in taxes that from my disposable income, the money that's left over, where I once made a contribution that was of a significant nature to different health causes, cancer, kidney foundation and other health areas, to the United Way, I do not have the resources left over to make the kind of contribution I used to." So they are cutting back on the public services that once took a certain share of their income.

I think what has happened here is that this government, along with the previous Liberal government under David Peterson, is turning people off. It is turning them off so that instead of wanting to contribute to their community and to make some kind of extra effort, they are saying: "Look, I am being bled to death through my taxes. I have so little blood left in the veins, I'm not going to come along and give what's left over elsewhere."

That disposable dollar is being reduced and reduced, with inflation taking a certain percentage of it, with the cost of living and everything else that is coming in. It seems that those who make more and more get less and less because more and more is taken away by the government.

The kinds of dollars that this amounts to some people say is peanuts. It is not, because you are not only taking away from them the money in their earnings and their income, but also their incentive to want to go out and make more and do better. There is a point—I am not sure when that happens but there is a point—at which you say: "Why do I continue to work so hard for the government? Why am I not working harder for myself?"

What ends up happening is that we are getting a kind of underworld current here where people are trading things on the side. There is a form of commodity trading where instead of having to pay taxes they will provide services to other people for cash and it will be under the table. It is another form of breaking the law, but because the taxes are so high, they are almost being encouraged to break the law.

We have lost sight of the reason why people came to this new country in the first place. They came to this country for freedom. They came to establish a new, fresh life out of the control and bounds and limitations that under a feudal system or under a government that was not giving them a chance to prosper.

What they have come into now is a province that is moving into every area of human life and taking away that incentive and that freedom that people came here for in the first place. A fundamental breakdown in society is happening because we here in government are allowing it to happen. It seems as if people take it for granted.

I have to say that under the leadership of the member for Nipissing our caucus and our party will continue to be vigilant and will speak out on the whole issue of taxation. It is not something we take as just a necessary thing we have to do in the Legislature. We believe there should be the kind of fiscal leadership and responsibility in government and the kind of leadership that is going to say, "No, we can't spend more money on it because we are going to have raise more taxes to do it, and we can't continue to build a bigger debt." It is high time that this government and all governments understood the importance of having that kind of fiscal responsibility.

The public at large, if they have not lost confidence in this House, are continuing to lose it for all of us. We must begin to start today. Here on this bill would be as good an example as any, Bill 83, where the government would say, "All right, let's find a way of restricting our spending, reducing our spending, reducing the deficit, putting our house in order.”

It is a problem when people pay so much out for taxes that they do not have enough left over to protect themselves from future disaster or the kind of recession we are in now. What is happening is that most people are living within one or two paycheques from bankruptcy. The more you make does not mean the more you save, or the more you make, the more you are able to put on to your home and your recreation and other things. It is surprising how many people who are in the category for taxes that this bill will affect, who are making in excess of $84,000 a year, are very controlled in their spending because the commitments they already have for the dollars they are making worry them. Their disposable income is reducing constantly. This is another example where they will have less disposable income to do other things.

One of the things that will suffer in our society is certainly the charities and those needful agencies that are looking for contributions from private citizens. What we are seeing with the social democratic agenda is that the government will take over everything. The government will run all things. So those people who once had some disposable income are now going to hold on to it. They are turning off the funnel. There will not be the kind of money for the United Way and for those services that there should be. One of the reasons is their lack of confidence in the future. They are saying, “Well, the government is already taking so much that there isn’t enough left over for us to really make the kind of contribution we want to make.”

As business continues to suffer, as people continue to suffer, what do we see? A government whose tax policy is almost forcing more suffering upon them.

It is not easy times. I had several people react to the ignorant comments from this House when I talked about a home—it was ignorant. When we started talking about people whose homes are $500,000 and $600,000 and who are having trouble paying for it, people in this House said, “Oh, yes,” and there was a chuckle across the floor. That is not something to laugh at. There are people in my community and in many communities who have an expensive home, are working hard in order to pay for it, to pay it down. It is their biggest investment most of the time, and here what we are doing is almost making fun of that kind of investment they have. The problem they have is that when they lose their jobs and they are out of business, who is there to help them? There is no program that comes along and helps subsidize them for the kind of commitments they had when they were making big money. Then they end up having to sell their homes. They have to change their lifestyles. They have to do a number of things.

What are they going to do right now? When they see the government continuing to sap the strength, to sap the money, to drain it off from them, they are going to hold on to more and more of it for the rainy day. If you go and do an assessment of those people who have been spending money in our society, it is a very small number who have the large dollars. Those who are making between $80,000 and $120,000 are people who are really hustling to make it happen. They are working 60- and 70-hour weeks. They are not people who are just coming along and winning a lottery. Their lottery comes through the effort of their hard work.

What this government wants to do is put them down so that everyone is at the same common, low denominator, and that is not for the future of our country. We should have the opportunity for everybody to make big dollars and then be able to spend those dollars or save those dollars, but not to make the dollars and have them taken away from them by the government. It is like Sweden was. Sweden has woken up and is going back to another system now. They are moving to free enterprise. We are moving right into socialism. Do not make fun of it. I see it as a serious problem.

Europe is coming along and changing in a way. They are moving to democratic systems. They are coming to a system of free enterprise. We are moving into socialism the same way eastern Europe is trying to move out of it. So we are swinging one way; they are swinging the other. This government will swing at the end of a rope in four years.

1530

Interjections.

Mr Cousens: Mr Speaker, I have their attention, anyway. It is hard to get them to wake up; it is just terrible. It is probably feeding time for the NDP.

As we look at the number of taxes that have been levied in this province in the last five or six years—

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: The honourable member will have a chance to talk, an opportunity to speak in the House when it is time.

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: I do not remember interrupting him. There has been nothing worth interrupting.

Interjection.

The Acting Speaker (Mr Farnan): The member will find that if he keeps—

Mr Cousens: Mr Speaker, I appreciate your intervention here.

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: I would like to see a better climate in the House. I would like to see a better climate in the province. We would have a better climate if the dippers did not keep dipping in our pockets and taking our money away from us. Included in the measures that are in this 1991 budget, we see once again the Ontario taxpayers are having their taxes increased. Since 1985 when the New Democrats and the Liberals formed their coalition and their alliance, in six years we have seen some 40 increases in taxes. Now, as a consequence of this government’s action, we are seeing that they will collect $18.6 billion more in taxes than they did in 1984-85. Since 1984-85 there has been an increase of 123.6% in the taxes that are collected by the province.

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: Because the honourable member interrupted, I will repeat it again so that he will hear: 123.6% increase in taxes since 1984-85, $18.6 billion. I do not know how high a billion dollars would be if it were 10-dollar bills, but it is a huge amount of money. The government will collect $9.7 billion, or 155.5% more in personal income taxes. That is nearly 80% or $3.5 billion more in retail taxes, 66% more in gasoline taxes and 223.7% more in land transfer taxes than it collected in 1984-85.

In the current fiscal year, tax revenues account for 78.1% of the total revenues and represent the equivalent of 11.9% of the province's gross domestic product. In 1984-85, the comparable ratios were 62.9% and 8.8% respectively.

We are just seeing a dramatic increase in the cost of life and living here in the province, but I have to face up to, and we are all facing up to, what this government is doing: forcing a fiscal recovery within this province further off as the New Democratic government relies more on deficit financing for the remainder of its mandate.

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: I am going to come to that. I appreciate the member for Durham asking about what the deficit is, because that is the next element I would like to address in my presentation today.

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: Do I have the floor, Mr Speaker?

The Acting Speaker: Yes, I request that the member for Parkdale and the member for Guelph desist from the interjections across the floor and allow the member the opportunity to present his views to the House.

Mr Ruprecht: Mr Speaker, on a point of order: All I was really saying was that the member was right when he mentioned that the cost of living was increasing, then I heard some interjections from across the government side, and consequently I simply said he was correct. I certainly agree with him.

The Acting Speaker: The member for Parkdale is out of order. Certainly I think he will add to the tone of this House if he co-operates and allows the member the floor.

Mr Cousens: Mr Speaker, I would like to compliment the member for Parkdale for following the debate so closely and thank him for his support on that one point. That is much appreciated.

The dipper government's, I mean the New Democratic government's midterm fiscal plan shows that in addition to this year's $9.7-billion deficit, Ontario's smiling socialists will add another $25.1 billion to the province's accumulated deficit from 1992-93 to 1994-95. The New Democratic government will then effectively push the province's accumulated deficit, which stands at an estimated $44.5 billion in this current fiscal year, to a total of about $70 billion in 1994-95.

When measured in relation to the accumulated deficit in 1990-91 of $34.8 billion, the midterm fiscal plan indicates that the New Democrats will effectively run up as much new debt in four years as had been accumulated by all previous governments in Ontario. Their policies will ensure that by the end of their mandate the province's deficit, its gross domestic product ratio, will be worse than that of the federal government's, at least when measured on the 1991-92 budget projections of both governments.

Ontario's debt service charges will also rise as a percentage of provincial revenues as New Democratic policies begin to erode the bottom line. Over the midterm forecast, debt service costs will continue to increase. By 1994-95, the debt service cost will account for 12.3% of the total revenues coming into this province. In other words, 12% of every dollar that comes into this province will be feeding the debt.

At the federal level over the same period, public debt charges measured in relation to federal revenues will drop from 33% of revenues this year to a projected 26.5% in 1994-95. There is a recognition on the part of just about everyone except the New Democrats that the deficit has to be fought and that you do not live by continuing to live beyond your means; you control your costs and put a lid on it.

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: The member said, "How do you do it?" I am glad I was asked. You say no more often. You say no to people who come along and ask for money. When I have had people in my riding office on a more recent basis, I do not say—

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: Get off that stuff. When they come along and say Markham needs stuff—if we are going to be a growing, dynamic community we will need our roads, our hospital, and our services, and any growing community deserves that. We as a province want to fuel that kind of growth because there is a pile of money made in our taxes through the new housing and the new growth. You do not come along and just expect them to be there and not provide those services.

This is just a one-sided, blinded view that some people have. The tragedy is that this is the experiment that failed. The experiment that has failed in Ontario is the New Democratic government. On September 6 last year people thought, "We're a little disappointed in David Peterson," and they had reason to be, because they looked at Patti Starr, they looked at the way they raised the taxes so many times, they looked at the giving away of Senate seats in Ottawa, they looked at a number of issues, they looked at their credibility and at the reason for calling the election, so the election on September 6 had something to do with 38% of the province, not 50% but 38% of the province saying, "Let's give a message to the Liberal Party and allow the New Democrats a chance." They had no idea that those guys would take this thing over and that they would be doing the kind of damage they are doing right now.

1540

The Acting Speaker: The member for Markham will take his seat, please. Basically we are discussing Bill 83. I request that the member for Markham address the issue before the House. I think he will serve the House well by doing so. Thank you.

Mr Cousens: Without income taxes you cannot pay for all these programs and, because the government continues to add all these programs, this Bill 83 is just another way for this government to get its money. They are taking the money out of the pockets of those they call the rich people in Ontario. They are discouraging those people who are out there working hard to try to make a dollar and, because more and more money is coming out of their pockets and going into the coffers of this government, being abused, misused and misappropriated, they are ending up having a very serious problem. I am talking about that and it is a part of the problem; 38% of the people of this province gave this government the chance to do what they wanted. It is an experiment that is failing and we are all going down the drain with it.

The Treasurer blamed his deficit woes on federal policies and in particular on the transfer payments he says he did not receive from the federal government, and he indicates they cost a total of $3.6 billion in 1991-92. However, the Treasurer does not mention two points: Other provinces have had to live with the same changes in federal policies and have not tripled their deficits. This Treasurer, unlike other finance ministers in the country, has done nothing whatsoever to restrain his spending.

At this point I would like to comment on the restraint of spending. I went through these books which are the Ontario budget for 1991—

Mr Fletcher: Have you read it yet?

Mr Cousens: I have read it. Has the member read it? Does he understand it? He probably does not know how to add up the figures because they are all in the red. We are just going further and further in the red and the member probably does not like to read the ones that are in the black and maybe—no, I will not get nasty. I was about to say something very rude and that would not be becoming to either of us.

The problem we have is that in this budget document restraint is not mentioned. Yesterday when the Minister of Health was here heckling me she was saying, "Oh, yes, there's restraint." There is not. There is not any effort by this government in this budget to show restraint. It has become the new R-word they learned about at the Delawana Inn, but it is not something they have included in their thinking over the next three or four years, and that is a problem. Everyone else in this province is having to live under restraint because there is only so much money coming in, and what is left over they are having to give to the government under Bill 83. That kind of action by the government is costing people just too, too much.

I would like to comment on the problem with taxes. It happens to have one of the newspapers in my riding, and it is really one of the better newspapers, I have to say. Members are not going to believe what it is called—

Mr Hope: Is it recycled?

Mr Cousens: Oh, it is recycled. It is the Richmond Hill Liberal or the Thornhill Liberal. In spite of the name, it is a paper that hits the nail on the head very, very often and the editorial in last week's paper says, "Let The Tax Revolt Begin." Marney Beck, the editor of the paper, goes on to say: "The tax revolt is finding its way to York region. Some people at a recent meeting suggested that they would withhold a portion of their taxes in protest."

Woe to them to try to withhold it from the province. You try to hold back a tax to the Minister of Revenue, who is not here at this time but has been sitting in here most of the time—

Mr Johnson: She is right here.

Mr Cousens: That is good; I just did not see her. She is usually sitting in her seat. The fact of the matter is that you come along and try to skip a payment to the Minister of Revenue and they just send in the army after you. If you do not pay your taxes to the province, you do not have any choice; they will take your business and your house and garnishee your wages. They will do anything to take the money out of you. You talk about retailers or business people who are a little behind in their provincial sales tax; this group is right on and it is hungry for the money. If people come along and say, "Let's have a tax revolt," they are not going to revolt against the province because we have so much armour out there that there is no way they can fight back. But the poor people are going to come along and say: "We've had enough. We're going to start withholding our taxes at the municipal level." The editor says on the tax revolt: "This is unlikely to get the GST repealed," and that is for sure.

I am not in love with the GST. It would be nice if this province were working with the federal government on having one common sales tax that would somehow work between the two, instead of having—

Interjection.

Mr Cousens: Oh, come on. It is just painful for anyone who is running a business these days. They are collecting tax for the provincial government and the federal government. They make a mistake and get both of them coming in upon them. How can they possibly go out and make a dollar and do business? There is nothing wrong with making a profit and holding on to some of that profit, but those guys and governments all over want to take it from them. How can they succeed?

She goes on to say, "It is unlikely to get the GST repealed or to persuade the Ontario government to rethink its high-deficit policy, but it will attract the attention of local government and that is a good place to start."

People are going to start taking it out on local government to see what they can do to reduce the costs of providing municipal services. A tax revolt has begun. I and our caucus are in a tax revolt. We will do everything we can to fight the Treasurer and this government as they continue to hike taxes, to raise taxes. We will fight them. As long as they are going to be as irresponsible in what they are doing with our money and increasing it as much as they are, then someone has to stand up and make sure they get the lesson.

I have a feeling, Mr Speaker, that not you, but those other honourable members in this House have not really a true regard for the impact these taxes are having on our society as a whole.

Mr Hope: I see you stand alone in your field.

Mr Cousens: Some people say I stand alone in my field. I will be quite prepared to stand alone on this. I am very fortunate that there are at least 19 others who were elected on September 6 who are in the Conservative caucus and each one of them strongly believes in the kind of principle I am talking about today, and that is fiscal responsibility.

If the people of Ontario had a chance to take a government to task for its dishonesty and its irresponsibility, if there were some way in which we could have the public have a vote on a referendum basis on some of the issues that it is into, I will tell members that the public would not support it. The 38% that voted for the government last September 6 would not be voting for this tax bill today. They would not. The 38% that voted for the New Democrats on September 6 would be coming along and saying, "We disagree."

Oh, they will get some of the true orange and free who will support their policies, and that is fine. That is the freedom in a democracy and I do not take that away from any human being. I think that is part and parcel of a free country. But the fact is that the 38% that voted for the New Democrats across the province would not be voting for the kind of fiscal irresponsibility that is implicit to this budget, and that is a fact.

I have a number of points that I would like to follow on further and a number of issues that I would like to raise as they pertain to what this government is doing and what it is not doing. I know there is going to be another day on which I will have an opportunity to talk to it. There are at least four other tax bills that are coming forward and I hope to be able to speak on each one of those so that the views from the riding of Markham can be heard and the people who are represented, at least by the PC caucus, will have a chance to put on the record some of their concerns.

I truly believe that Bill 83 is an example of the irresponsible collection of more taxes by the government of the Premier. I believe that in taking this money away from the people who are earning it right now in the province, it is taking away, certainly, some of the disposable income they would spend on other services. It is also taking away some of the confidence they had in the province.

I see this province as one that is in trouble right now, very serious financial, economic trouble, not just because of a recession that has hit Canada and North America and English-speaking countries; we are in a problem because of the failure of leadership of the Premier and his social democratic government. I see this government as one that is digging a bigger and bigger hole for the people of Ontario. I see business backing off and moving away. I see investment funds from Ontario putting their money elsewhere where it is not going to be in jeopardy, as it will be in Ontario with this government in charge. I see people saying: "Why spend money in Ontario? We'll go across the border and spend it because we can get more value for our dollar there."

I see a government that is digging a bigger hole for us by virtue of its high deficit, a deficit that will be, at the end of its term, double the size it was before. I see a government that is now in a position, if it had integrity and honesty and self-respect, to review its fiscal policy and come back and say: "We've made a mistake and we're in a position now to review the kinds of decisions we were going to make. Let's start showing restraint. Let's start showing some way of living within our means. Let's start setting an example."

1550

There is still time to do it. If members of this House have been listening, there is indeed a chance that members of the New Democratic government will vote against—yes, vote against—Bill 83 and allow this bill to go back to the Ministry of Treasury and Economics and let them rethink their financial plans for Ontario. If the government members do not do it, our votes are not enough to make it happen. I know the member for Dufferin-Peel and I will be here and there will be many others who will come into this House to vote against this bill.

I do not know how the Liberals will vote. The Liberals voted for so many tax increases when they were in power that they will probably come along and say, "We were used to it then, so we're used to it now." I have no idea where the Liberals will be today. They have had quite a conversion from the days in which they were in government. Now they are coming along and knocking all these tax increases. But they will make up their own minds. They have their own way of deciding these things, and whatever they do is their decision.

I can tell members this much. Our caucus is opposed to Bill 83. We are opposed to tax increases. The people of Ontario have had enough. Why does the government not wake up and understand that?

The Acting Speaker: I suspect the member for Markham may have generated some questions and comments. The member for Chatham-Kent.

Mr Hope: Thank you, Mr Speaker, and congratulations on your new place. You look great up there, as a matter of fact. I guess I have to go through you, but unfortunately—you are well familiarized with what I am going to talk about. In two minutes it is going to be pretty hard to put some points of view and perspective. But the honourable member made a few suggestions about the financial structures of other provinces, that we are still behind on a financial structure and that we should change so that it makes us look as good as those other provinces that say they do not work on a deficit basis.

The other party made a comment which is a major part of the GST fight I was part of. The people who are working in factories and in small businesses make probably about $30,000 or $40,000 if they are lucky. When you look at that and try to distribute that kind of money over buying things—for instance, when we face the GST now, they are adding an extra 7% that is taxing their income. When you talk about $84,000, if I only make $30,000 and spend $25,000 of it back into the economy—most of us who worked in factories and elsewhere were lucky if we had savings accounts. Where the tax is focusing, and where his focus is being misled—I will straighten that one out; is being improperly put—is that people over $84,000 are paying a little extra. That is a single person making $84,000. If you are married and you get dual income, you go through the system, and if you make, probably, $130,000 or $140,000, you are going to pay a little more.

The people we have to focus on during this debate are the working people who are generating every weekly paycheck into the economy. That is who we have to help. They are the ones who stimulate the jobs. I think it is important that when we look at the bill, we look at the context of the bill and make sure that we go in the right direction to help working people who stimulate this economy, the people who work in the $30,000 and the $40,000 and less jobs a year.

Mr Conway: I have had the pleasure of listening to, I think, the entire address of our friend the member for Markham. What does one say? My first reaction is that if it looks like R. B. Bennett and sounds like R. B. Bennett, that it must be an unvarnished, unrepentant old high Tory. That is of course a position that is available in the political spectrum. I have some considerable regard for the intellectual capacities of my friend, the former Presbyterian cleric and proud son of Vankleek Hill in my part of the province.

But to hear some of what he has to say and to listen, to really think about what it would suggest, is to take me back to one of these tax revolt meetings of not too many weeks ago when a similar old Tory gets up, and having apparently passionately advocated for the building of the opera house here in Toronto, notwithstanding current financial difficulties, is the first man none the less to go out and have at the social safety net that is so central to so many people who are either out of work or on the verge of losing their jobs.

He is quite legitimate in the criticism of any government around. I have the advantage of a few more years in this place than he does, and I have said before that were few people for whom I had a higher regard than W. Darcy McKeough, the former member for Kent West and the long-time Conservative Treasurer of Ontario. But in my first year here, 16 years ago, in what were by today's standards halcyon days, the Tory government of Bill Davis, under the able financial leadership of Darcy McKeough, brought in a budgetary deficit of $2 billion on an expenditure plan of some $12 billion to $14 billion.

I know he was not a member of this assembly then, but the member would do well, in the interest of an honest debate, to reflect upon those salad times when 16 years ago Darcy McKeough was forced to present, for whatever reason—I am sure it had nothing to do with the election of 1975—a budgetary deficit of $2 billion on an expenditure plan of not $50 billion, but, then, $12 billion.

Mr Tilson: I have a question to the member for Markham. Certainly, looking at the members on the other side of the House, I do not think there are too many members who were around for the last government. They all look to be newly elected people.

Mr Hope: Doesn't mean we don't know what's going on.

Mr Tilson: There may be an exception, and I stand to be corrected, but basically they are all newly elected people. I would like the member for Markham, in his experience, who has watched the Liberals make a farce of our system in Ontario—I think he is now seeing a new government that was supposed to be a new government, that was supposed to be a dawning of a new era—

Mr Hope: A Rae of hope.

Hon Mr North: A Rae of hope.

Mr Tilson: A Rae of hope; whatever words members want to use. But this was genuine, what was put forward by this NDP party during the last election, that it was going to solve all our problems, that it was going to create new economic prosperity. There would be economic prosperity of days gone by. My question to that is, having seen this government and the actions it has been performing, whether or not the member for Markham, as an experienced member of this House, feels this government is performing up to its promises.

Mr Mammoliti: I could be wrong, and if I am please tell me so, Mr Speaker, but I heard the member say, "NDP party." I am sick and tired of hearing the Conservatives say, "NDP party." Let me spell it out. NDP: New Democratic Party. It is not New Democratic Party party. I hope that in the future the individuals sitting across from me will learn that NDP stands for New Democratic Party; it is not "NDP party." I will close by saying thank you very much for listening to me, Mr Speaker. The pleasure is always mine, but in his statements, the member will please be right.

Mr Cousens: I apologize. I would not want to call the dippers anything other than the New Democratic Party. If I have offended the member by doing that, that shows improper use of the term, so I will work at that. I am pleased to be brought up on that one.

The member for Dufferin-Peel: Where does one begin in describing where the Liberals went astray? I think they really had a chance during the halcyon days of the mid-1980s to bring this province into the future. They brought a number of social programs we could all support, but their way of spending money at great abandon has led this government into a way in which it has had to continue those programs.

By the way, when the government came along with its close to $10-billion deficit, it did not even give credit to the Liberals for giving it, because so many of those programs that led to the kind of deficit it has got were initiated by David Peterson. It did not have the nerve or the knowledge or the kind of backbone that would say, "Hey, let's change some of those policies."

But I appreciate the comments of the member for Renfrew North. I happen to respect very greatly his expertise and his understanding in the House. Philosophically, we are very much on a different part of the pendulum, but that does not take away the fact that there is a real depth of appreciation for what he has to offer sometimes.

I would just like to say to the member for Chatham-Kent that when he talks about stimulating work, there is no doubt that those who are making $30,000 to $40,000 or less—some are making far less—are indeed much of the machinery of what it takes to have the province run effectively. Never do we ever want to see anyone not appreciate the kind of contribution they make. The other part of the equation, though, is the capital that it takes to invest in jobs and businesses and machinery to make it go. You need the people to make it go, but you need the capital to make it come together. Those two things, when they come together, make for prosperity.

1600

Mr Johnson: It is a pleasure for me to rise in the House today and support Bill 83. I think it is a bill that is important, it is a bill that is necessary and it is a bill that I am sure all my colleagues on this side of the House will support as well.

I must say, truly I listened with pleasure to the member for Renfrew North yesterday. He is a fluently articulate member of the Legislature and very knowledgeable about the history of the House, at least for the last 16 years. But I would just like to remind him that certainly it was in the last five years that there was a 5% increase on the Ontario surtax on the federal portion and that 5% increase was one that was initiated by his government.

I also find it interesting, I might add, that he does not embrace Keynesian economics, but in part I see that while they were in power they had an opportunity to do some saving and maybe did not do that as well as they could, and certainly they did make some tax increases.

I had an opportunity yesterday as well to listen to the member for Carleton, who unfortunately is not here today, and I found it interesting to hear him talk about the need or the supposed need for companies to move to the United States and in fact for people to want to move to the United States because of the tax system we have here in this province. I would like to remind him, in his absence, that there are many other taxes that are levied in the United States that are not similarly levied here in Ontario. There are city taxes, there are taxes in municipalities, there are road taxes. They put up toll bridges on highways in order to collect taxes. We do not have toll bridges in Ontario, nor do our cities levy their own sales tax in Ontario.

I listened as well to the member for Markham, who is no longer here, who wanted to say that this was a horrible tax increase. Certainly people have opinions that they express in the House, and I think it is important that they express their opinions, but their opinions are not always correct. I would like to point out that error in the member for Markham. In fact, he talks about this grave tax increase, Bill 83, and the actual increase is one quarter of 1%. That is a nominal, almost insignificant tax increase, and what that in fact does is increase, as other members have said, tax on those single individuals who make more than $84,000 a year, and as has been mentioned earlier, those who are married and have more dependants can make more before this will affect them.

Might I add that $84,000, in my opinion, is a significant income. The average income in the province is far less than that, and in fact only 3% of the taxpayers will be affected.

What is going to happen with this? We have given a break to the people at the bottom end of the spectrum, and a portion of these revenues collected in this new tax will help those people. It will increase the moneys to dependants, from $200 to $350, of those people who are needy at the bottom end of the spectrum.

It was mentioned that as many as 700,000 low-income taxpayers would benefit from this. I would suggest, because of the difficult times we are having with the economy right now, that may even be more now.

We listened to the member for Markham say we have to learn to say no. "We've got to learn to say no," he says. Who do you say no to? I would ask him. Do you say no to hospitals? Do you say no to—

An hon member: Schools.

Mr Johnson: —to schools, as my colleague says? Do you say no to people in—

Interjection.

Mr Johnson: I also heard the member for Markham say that it is really unfortunate when corporations close down and 800 people in the community lose their jobs because corporations have moved to the United States. I agree. That is most unfortunate, very unfortunate, and I have every sympathy for those people who have lost their jobs, but on the other hand he says that it would be good for the government to take away government jobs. He says it is bad when private corporations move and people lose their jobs. He says that is bad and we should be doing something about it. We should be taking some money that we raise through taxes and we should be applying it to help these people, but on the other hand he says the government has to say no. Who do we say no to?

I heard him say that in other provinces they have rolled back the numbers of government employees. The people of Ontario want more service, and truly the people of Ontario are concerned about taxes, so we have a Fair Tax Commission that presently is looking into this system of taxation.

I just want to say, because there might be a chance that the errors of the commentary of the member for Markham might be believed by members of the public watching to be the truth, that in fact Bill 83 only increases taxes by one quarter of 1%, and I want to say one more time that is only on single people who make more than $84,000.

I rise to support this bill. I think it is a very important bill. It takes some money from the people at the top of our income scale and redistributes it, something that I think we as members of the New Democratic Party have advocated. It is a very small way, but it is certainly a step in the right direction, and so I wholeheartedly support this bill.

Mr Conway: The member has made a very valid point about to whom does any government say no, not just this government. That is very difficult, particularly in straitened economic times like those in which we now find ourselves. But I suspect over the course of the next few weeks all members of this assembly, but most especially the government members, are going to have to go home to Lincoln and Brantford and Niagara-on-the-Lake and a lot of other wonderful places and stare constituents in the face and say, "Well, we promised, we had hoped to do things with respect to the college system."

To hear Richard Johnston this morning on radio was, to me, just breathtaking. I hope my friend Richard Johnston, for whom I have the highest regard, is up to the miserable task he now has to perform.

Paddy Musson must be out there at some NDP action committee right now in London in overdrive and apoplexy. No wonder the Minister of Labour does not want to answer that question. I tell members, the Minister of Education will need danger pay to go home to face Paddy Musson in full flight over what this government has of necessity now to do to the college system.

Of course, they have made an agreement with the doctors, an incredible agreement, a good agreement, perhaps, to get peace in our time, but it is six years and apparently it is on the shelf and it cannot be touched. But they are already facing farmers and they are about to face Paddy Musson and the college teachers and a variety of other people for whom the news is not going to be good.

I will say just in conclusion, and here I am being a bit spiteful, I found it fascinating today to hear the Treasurer say that one of the things that is driving the expenditure line of the government is the teacher pension situation. A part of me, the spiteful, vindictive part of me, almost wishes, in a figurative sense, that the NDP drowns in the teacher pension politics in which it has engaged over the last 18 months.

Mr Tilson: A brief question to my friend. In defence of the member for Markham, I think what he is saying is simply that they cannot continue spending their way out of the recession. Obviously, at one point during the budget, that was their philosophy, and now we hear the Treasurer and the Premier saying: "Maybe we should take a different look at it. The recession is a little bit more serious."

It is no different than it was back then. It is no different than when this Bill 83 was first introduced. We are simply saying, "Hold the line."

Obviously, now the Treasurer is simply saying, "There are several millions that may have to be looked at." He is not being very specific. I am sure in due course he will introduce a statement that will tell us exactly what he is going to cut, but I think there is a lot of fear out there about exactly what the Treasurer is going to cut. He probably has not even told the member yet, but he will. I think there is a lot of fear.

On the subject of pay equity alone, which of course was introduced by the Liberals, we are now being told that the civil service is going to triple in size and that the cost of pay equity and the cost of bringing other crown corporations and others into the civil service is going to be astounding.

If the government does not start cutting, it is going to bankrupt this province. My question to the member is, does he think that this province and the taxpayers of this province are a bottomless pit?

1610

Mr Hope: A few comments have been made and I think it has been well illustrated on what percentage of people will be affected by the increase, and the comments were made, who do you say no to? The member for Renfrew North says that people will be going back and facing the farmers. I am one of those individuals who is out there trying to help our farming community regain itself. This is not the recession. Everybody looks at it as if this started September 6, 1990. I remember talking to a lot of the farmers in my community. This is something that has been going on since 1981. This is not something new.

Who do you say no to and how do you put fiscal management back in? The percentage increase may be just a reflection of balancing the system out, because I know for a fact the majority of the taxation has always hit the working- and lower-class people of society. We have kept them lower. We used to have a low- middle- and high-income status. We now have low and high and those are the only categories we have. So it is important that through the tax, and I think the member has illustrated it right—what do we do? Do we start holding referendum balloting on paying for roads or paying for the schools or paying for the sewage treatment, paying for the luxuries we have?

Yes, we have to make some financial changes, but I am sure the Treasurer in his capability as he stands tall in his seat where he sits—I think it is very important that he is illustrating that fiscal management can come without knee-jerk reaction to situations. We have only been in for a year. Time will prove itself, and I am sure the general public, when the next election is called, will make all judgement calls in that nature. I think it important that we put a balance back in the system of helping people out in trying to put an equal system back in place.

Mr Mammoliti: I wish to share a little story with the members. It goes back to the 1990 campaign. I knocked on a few doors, actually, on the same street and asked: "What should we do in reference to tax hikes? Where do you want to see them?" Door to door, it was consistent. They want to see the people making the bucks pay a little more. Frankly, I cannot see anything wrong with that. I tend to agree with all of those people where I knocked on doors and asked for their advice.

I would like to go around with some of my colleagues across the floor when they are canvassing and perhaps talk with the average home owner, the average individual who does not make $84,000 a year, and ask him in the presence of my colleagues across the floor, "What do you think?" and see whether or not these individuals would take the same stance at that door. Something tells me that they would not and that here they say one thing and perhaps in front of their constituents they say another.

I would like to do that. Perhaps one of them can invite me to canvass with him during his next campaign, or even perhaps next summer or at Christmas time. Let's do it at Christmas time and see how much money the average person has to spend and where he wants these tax increases. I will bet the members that they will tell him that they want the increases in the higher-level-income homes.

I cannot see the debate here. I really cannot. Frankly I suggest we stop debate. I do not know. Perhaps I am wrong, but frankly they should please listen to what we are saying for a change.

Mr Johnson: I do not have to tell everyone in this House the economy is in a difficult situation. That is blatantly obvious. The fiscal responsibility this government has to manage is certainly a very big and very serious problem. Maybe it is not a problem, but it certainly is something we have to do in a way that is meaningful and in a way that the people of Ontario want.

I answer to the member for Dufferin-Peel that no, we do not have a bottomless pit. It is certainly finite; it is certainly limited. What we have to do is balance, and it is a very difficult balancing act, as I am sure he is most aware. Where we collect taxes and make expenditures, we have to make sure we collect enough to make enough. If we make the cuts—I do not have to tell the member the story, I am quite sure, as he knows it so well.

I think not having a bottomless pit certainly means we have to be prudent when we deal with the overall fiscal management of the province. When we look at the revenues we want to bring into the province, the very small tax increases we want to make, I do not think they are unreasonable. I think the majority of the people in the province see them as small tax increases, and for the most part not unreasonable. People in the province want their services. They do not want things to be taken away. In fact, if they want anything, they want to see improvements.

I think what is important for this government is to make sure that what we do is maybe something that was not done as well in the past as it could have been, and that is to have a very efficient, effective government in dealing with the fiscal matters of the province. This government has the ability to do that. I think in time the member, my other colleagues and the people of Ontario will see that is so.

Mr Bradley: I welcome very much the opportunity to speak very briefly on this particular piece of legislation because I have many things I want to say about some of the other bills that are coming before the Legislature. This is one of a series of revenue bills which we will be confronting as members of the opposition and members of the government. They are bills of some significance because they are bills which are bringing in a series of tax increases at a time when the people of this province and the people of this country and of our various municipalities are indicating clearly that they have had it with taxes, that they believe they have a lot of services out there now that are costing them a lot of money and that they would like to pause and see if there is not a way of doing things more efficiently in Ontario.

I did not think I was going to have much time to debate this bill because frankly I thought I would be spending some time debating the bill on the government automobile insurance plan. I kept hearing all summer that a plan would be introduced and that legislation was forthcoming.

I recall my friend and colleague the member for Welland-Thorold being very enthusiastic about this in opposition. I recall his filibuster of some 17 hours of expended time. That is not easy. Some people, particularly when in government, tend to be critical of that and say it is a nuisance and so on, but nevertheless he expended a good deal of time on an issue he obviously felt very strongly about. Of course, he is probably, as I am, waiting for that bill. He will have lots of time, as I do, to speak on this particular bill, because we will not be dealing with the car insurance legislation, since the Premier has decided to renege on the most important promise, I thought, or at least a central promise. I do not want to exaggerate. I think it is a central promise. Whenever I thought of the NDP, one of the things I thought was that it stood for government insurance.

1620

Mr Fletcher: Honesty, what's best for the people.

Mr Bradley: Honesty and integrity was another thing. I have said on some occasions to this House, Mr Speaker, when you have been in the House in other capacities, that I was one of those people who was actually almost convinced that the NDP was different, that it was a different kind of party, that when it got into power it would do things differently from what other parties have done. Well, reality has set in and we find out the Premier is just another politician. That is not a putdown of him at all, but he was a person with a halo around his head in the minds of many people. That halo has slipped considerably, perhaps to the floor. The party was always considered to be a party which was interested in ethics and morals. Without perhaps being cantankerous, I simply observe that they have broken many promises over the past several months and, I am sure, disappointed many of their supporters.

Those of us in the opposition who disagree with some of the policies which are advanced think of it in two ways. In one way, we are happy they have not proceeded with some of the things they said they would proceed with when in opposition and during the campaign, because we do not think they are good for the province. On the other hand, we have a bit of concern that it increases cynicism in the public when it watches a government get into power, head up to Honey Harbour, and late on Friday afternoon when most of the members have taken off make a final decision that somehow it is going to completely abandon automobile insurance, which is central.

That is not directly to do with this bill, Mr Speaker. You have been kind enough to indulge me for a period of time in diverting a bit from the precise subject, and that is taxation.

I look at this particular tax and it does not really affect me. On a direct basis, I do not worry too much about it. There are cabinet ministers who may or may not be affected by that. I forget how it actually works out. They make about $90,000 a year, but some of that is not taxable, so it might not even affect them. It may affect some of the advisers, some of my very good friends who have served in the past. The people who sit on the government benches will soon recognize that people who did not get elected make more money than people who did get elected.

My good friend David Reville, who was an excellent member of this Legislature, and Ross McClellan, another good fellow who sat on the NDP benches and defended the causes in which he believed greatly, and Gerry Caplan—he does not work for the government, but I am sure he makes lots of money—these kinds of people are all going to be affected by this. I suppose they are not going to be stampeded to the United States.

One of the concerns I have about this is it is difficult for me because I come from a working-class background. My father, when he was alive, was a union member. I live in a working-class neighbourhood in St Catharines. I do not live in the ritzy part of town or anything like that. Most of my friends come from the level of pay that would be commensurate with those who would not be affected by this tax and so on.

I used to think that was great, what we should do is always tax these rich people. I was a bit intrigued by the 1979 Marxist-Leninist slogan they used to put all over the city, "Make the Rich Pay," because it had a good ring to it. I was not rich; somebody else was. "Would it not be nice? There is a lot of fairness to that."

The previous speaker for the government, the member for Prince Edward-Lennox, talked about its being a matter of justice, I suppose—I do not want to put words into his mouth—and equality and so on. One of the concerns I have, however, is that many of the people in that category are people we really want to keep in our province. I may resent the fact they make more money than I do. I may think they make too much money and I may think it is unfair, but I watch people heading out of this province to other jurisdictions, particularly to the United States, because they think they cannot do as well as they would like in this province.

In some cases that is not a legitimate excuse. I hope people will think in patriotic terms, but I found more and more people I would not have believed now abandoning this country and heading to the United States or another jurisdiction, but it is mostly to the United States.

For all the revenue we are going to get from it, I wonder if we do the right thing. I wonder if this is not the kind of tax which is going to drive people farther. I am probably a person who supports a tax like this, because it seems to be on those, but I ask myself the question, as we all have to, with all of the taxes we have rather than this particular tax, do I drive them out?

I am a sports fan, as are many members of the Legislature, and I watch people now say, "I don't want to play in Canada because the taxes are too high." That is one of the reasons they do not. I suppose to a certain extent, if you look at it strictly in terms of dollars and cents, it makes some sense to say, "I would rather either be paid in American dollars or head somewhere else where the taxation system is different." We see talent, on that basis, wanting to go somewhere else. That is not as important to us. There is some pride to having those professional athletes here.

I am concerned about other people, whether it is top-notch people in the labour relations field or people who are in business or professionals, who might decide the taxation system has become so oppressive in our province because of taxes that have built up. With a Conservative government followed by a Liberal government followed by an NDP government, the taxes have increased over the years to meet what we all perceive to be a desire to meet the service needs of the people in this province. I think that is something we have to look at when we look at each of these taxes.

I also believe we are in a different era. There is nobody in this House who is not a grass-roots political representative who does not detect a considerable shift in the mood of the people of this province. Even a couple of years ago there was not the tax revolt we see today. Probably the recession had a big part to do with that.

The Speaker represents an area, as I do, which is subject to the ups and downs of the economy. When there is a recession on, hits Cambridge, hits St Catharines and hits places like Brantford, Oshawa and so on with a great deal of difficulty for the people who are living there. Windsor is another place I think of, and Sudbury and the extraction areas of northern Ontario where there are resource industries.

People then become resistant to tax increases. It is a difficult balancing act. I do not want to pretend, as some will, that somehow there is a magic way of doing this, that somehow we cut everything. That is difficult to do because each one of us as an MPP writes to ministers or speaks in the House or asks questions. I ask about a CAT scanner for the Niagara region all the time. The cost to the ministry is not great on that, but that is another demand the people want. The people in the area have to raise the funds themselves. That is how it works. The ministry does not pay the capital cost. There is an operating cost that is covered partially by the ministry. It is an example of how we are still going to have demands made of us, and at the same time try to keep those taxes down.

I look at the deficit, which is one of the reasons we put higher taxes on people. The Treasurer said, "I'm going to have a difficult time keeping it at even $9.7 billion unless I have some tax increases in my budget," so he increased taxes. If you take it to a full year, it is about $1 billion those taxes will increase.

There are other taxes I want to speak on at greater length, because I am more concerned about them than I am this particular tax, which I must say will never send me into revulsion or into the streets with a sign in my hand. But I look at the total accumulation of taxes and say that people out there are revolting and they are turning away from traditional parties as a result of that.

They look at the Conservative Party and they will hear members of the Conservative Party in this House make a case for restraint, make a case for control of government expenditures. They will look at Ottawa and say, "We have a Conservative government there." I understand how unfair it is trying to explain to anybody that there is a difference between a federal party and a provincial party. I had to go through that when we were in opposition and there was a Liberal government in Ottawa—people said, "Well, your friends in Ottawa"—and the Conservatives have to go through that at the present time.

But you look at the circumstances and people say: "The Tories in Ottawa have a huge deficit and they even have the word Conservative in their name and they seem to have a lot of money for certain things. Yes, they have tried to pull in the reins on other things, but they seem to have a lot of money for things. They seem to be pretty big spenders."

Then look at the Liberal government. We went through some good times and we were able to expand some programs and undertake some capital projects. They say, "That party, when it was in power, sure it balanced the budget one year but it had five good years out there and it seemed to have money to be spending on the population."

Then they look at the NDP and say: "Those people have never been interested in restraint. That's not been part of their policy. It's been a policy of providing service and expanding and investing, and that's been traditional." At least in Ontario, they would gain that impression.

They start turning to other parties, and that is where we see the results of the election in New Brunswick. I do not attribute those victories or those eight seats to something called taxes and things of that nature. I know the reason for those seats being lost, and that is not hard to figure out when you look at the demographics of the province.

1630

But one of the factors that makes the Reform Party attractive to some people in this country, and parties such as CoR attractive, is a feeling of oppressive taxation. That is why we have proceeded with a good deal of care when we talk about implementing new taxes in this province. I am concerned about, as I am sure everybody is concerned about, the deficit in this province. We have about a $10-billion deficit this year.

What I submit is even more disconcerting, however, is the fact that next year it is projected at about $9 billion and the two years after that at about $8 billion. That accumulated debt is beginning to worry even people I would not have believed would have any worry about debts, and that means that you start hearing the buzzwords of "spending smarter." Even the government picks up on these now as the opposition parties did when they were in power and were looking at ways to avoid tax increases.

I look at the promise of 60% of the cost of education. A number of the people who sit on the other side of the House come, as I do, from the teaching profession, and the federations certainly always plugged heavily for 60% of the cost of education to be paid by the province. Now we find out that last year in fact the percentage went down once again. It went down under the Liberals, it went down under the Conservatives, and they found out they were chasing something that was pretty hard to catch up to.

I wonder how, without even more tax increases, this government is going to be able to meet that promise. They are either going to have to break the promise and say, "Look, we thought it was a good idea when we were in opposition, but guess what? We can't do it," or they are going to have to tax, or I guess the third is to run even a bigger deficit.

I do not think we can get away with running those deficits any longer, though I think in fairness when the New Democrats speak about a deficit, we have to look at what the member for Renfrew North said. You have to look at what the total budget is and what the deficit is. Ten billion dollars sounds like a lot and it is a lot, but I can recall in the midst of the last recession and in desperate straits a Treasurer, who was a Progressive Conservative Treasurer, had a deficit over $3 billion on a much lower budget. Darcy McKeough even had to run them and he was seen as a fiscal conservative.

But I think all of us are going to have to look carefully at those expenditures. I, almost ad nauseam in this House and to the boredom of a lot of people, recommended strongly—and some people who have been around for a while know what I was talking about—looking carefully at each of the expenditures. The Chairman of Management Board is an underrated position. It is now called treasury board, I guess; it has a new name. But the Chairman of Management Board has always been an underrated position. Management Board plays an extremely important role in controlling expenditures.

Unfortunately what you have to do—there are a lot of programs around that have been around for a number of years, and I know as a minister if you try to cut those, there are people with a vested interest in seeing them continue in your ministry. They are good people. They are working hard at them. They believe in them and they do not want to see them abandoned.

But you may say we are in 1991. That program might have been relevant and might have been important in 1985 or 1980 or 1975, but today perhaps we believe within that ministry there is something more important we should be doing. Instead of putting in new taxes or running the deficit up, we might say to a minister, "If you abandon this program, we will allow you to take that money and spend it more productively on another program, or if the program is not needed at all, we will take that money into the central pot so we can pay down the deficit." I think that kind of fiscal control is going to bring our expenditures in this province under some considerable control in the future.

I look at other countries and what is happening—and you cannot tell, because you will see different governments elected for different purposes—but I look at Sweden as an example. This government and members of the New Democratic Party, in Ontario at least and perhaps other places—only in my friends in the NDP in Ontario have I noted this—have been particularly intrigued with what has happened in Sweden. It was always held out as the paradise, and indeed a lot of things were accomplished in Sweden.

A lot of what was accomplished was probably in a humane sense quite worth while, but the people of Sweden this time around—I think, until this election campaign came up, a bit to the surprise of the governing party—rejected a party which has provided government to them, has been a popular government over the years to the people of Sweden. They have said, "Our tax burden is too great and many of the ideas we thought were good and were almost paradise are not what we really need in the 1990s." So we see them being rejected.

Some people will compare, and I am not going to engage in it; they say: "Look what's happening in eastern Europe, in the Soviet Union, and everything. They are getting rid of socialism and they are embracing the free market." I do not think that is a fair comparison, quite frankly, because it was communism, a different kind of socialism, that existed in those countries.

However, the principle of moving towards a market economy is there and it seems that a lot of people in the world are moving more in that direction. What is fairer is probably to compare Sweden rather than to compare what is happening in eastern Europe. For rhetoric purposes it is great stuff and I will say it from time to time in a heated conversation with my NDP friends, but Sweden, I think, is the better example.

I look at some problems that arise that I will deal with at some length in other bills coming before the House, but the cross-border shopping issue is one which the member for Sault Ste Marie and I have had some chats about. I never reveal in the House the privacy of chats that members have, except to say, as he would publicly, that it is a matter that causes great arguments even within one's family as to whether there should be cross-border shopping.

It is also difficult with low-income people. Now these are people with not much money to spend and some people lecturing to them—and we all like to hope they would buy in Canada—say, "You know, you should buy in Canada." They will say, "Well, if I made as much money as a cabinet minister or as an MPP or something like that, as the Speaker, I guess I could afford to shop in Canada as well."

Where I bring that into this argument is again the feeling that oppressive taxation is driving people out. It is an excuse almost. People feel vindicated. They say, "We've got the GST, we've got the PST and we've got all these other taxes, gasoline taxes and cigarette taxes," and whatever other taxes this government increases and other governments increase—alcoholic beverages, that is it—and they say, “This is my rebellion, my way of speaking out against taxes.”

Now it comes back to haunt them, because a lot of the people who are working are going to be affected by this, and I have often had this argument with some of my colleagues and friends. I have not always been as successful as I might be, and I know my friend the member for Sault Ste Marie has experienced some of the same situations.

I am also concerned about plants leaving this province. Again you will say, “What does this have to do with all these tax bills we have?” It is again the accumulated effect of oppressive taxation on a province. I am not a business person. I often say, “They don’t have any business experience over there.” Neither do I have any business experience, but I guess I have some experience of having been in a cabinet and exposed to a lot of people around the table who knew something about business, people like the member for Wilson Heights and the member for Quinte who had been in businesses of their own, and some others. I cannot recall exactly all of them. Premier Peterson knew business, and so on. The debates were quite vociferous in cabinet between those who did not have business experience and those who had business experience. I hope a balance emerged from that.

But my concern is that with all the taxes we are seeing, people are going to head out of here. I do not know whether I have to like those people or not. Some of the heads of certain companies in this province who have been there over the years have been not very kind to their workers and not very good patriots. That is fortunately a very small number, but about some of those people some people say, “Good riddance to them.” I am sorry, but there are jobs that are provided and it does stimulate the provincial economy.

Whether we like those people or not, whether we agree philosophically with those people or not, it is important that they keep their investment here and that they continue to invest, and that new people are interested, because if they are not interested, I am afraid all of the social programs that are advocated, by members of the government particularly and some of us in opposition, certainly will not be possible without the revenues that would come in from those people, without increasing taxes.

Now they have established a treasury board, I hope to heck they use the treasury board appropriately and that the chair of treasury board is going to be the most miserable person in government, because that simply is part of the characteristic of that person if he or she is going to be effective.

1640

I looked at a number of other issues that could arise, but I indicated to members of the House—I know the Progressive Conservative Party has some future speakers, and others may have as well—however, my concern is greater about the gasoline tax, and although I do not smoke and I do not particularly like smoking, about the tobacco tax only as it relates to cross-border shopping, and about the alcoholic beverages tax, which is also reflected in the price of meals. So I would be more inclined to spend some considerable time there, and it is probably more in order to spend some considerable time on that aspect of it at that time.

I caution the government at this time to look very carefully at expenditures. It is going to be attacked. It is going to be attacked by the opposition in some cases because we will decide what we think is a reasonable cut by the government and what is not reasonable. The government can be assured it will receive some attacks here and it will receive some from the people who supported it. The member for Durham West makes a lot of noise over there and his friends in the Ontario Secondary School Teachers’ Federation are going to be on his back when they see that the government is not going to keep the promises it said it was going to keep. So he will have to bear the brunt of that and it is part of being government. Some of them who have been close to social groups, social workers and others who believed that when the NDP got elected, at long last the programs would be funded the way they felt they should be funded, may be disappointed.

I am going to be interested in reading the union newspapers. I have always found it interesting reading the newspapers put out by various unions because there are some interesting points of view, some very compelling points of view put forward. I am going to be interested to see other people who make comments on public policy, whether they will be apologists for the NDP or whether they will continue to advocate for the group with which they have been involved.

There are some people who attacked the Liberals and said, “Well, of course, the Liberals are in the pockets of insurance companies.” I have been known to interject occasionally in this House and I have interjected in a joking way, “Aha, you’re now, as a government, in the pockets of the insurance companies.” I am going to be interested to see whether today those same people who attacked me for not being an overwhelming and strong supporter of government-run auto insurance will be critical of the government. Will they have in the forefront their NDP membership card, or will they have in the forefront their lifelong struggle for things they believe in?

I know many of these people and I know they will have to put aside their allegiance to the NDP. They can still vote NDP and still be supportive, but I know that because they are people of integrity, they will be critical of their own New Democratic Party and will write letters to the editor instead of attacking opposition members for their positions. They will be writing letters to the editors saying, “We don’t agree with what our NDP government has done.” If they are simply apologists for the NDP and not defending the positions they have so strongly believed in over the years, then they do not serve the people they have been involved with over those years, whether they have been striving to support the poor or any particular group in our society.

I will be watching carefully. I know some of those people will overcome the desire to support the NDP no matter what and will make known their views in a very strong sense. That will make it difficult for the members of the government to deal with tax bills such as this particular tax bill, Bill 83, that we have at the present time.

Mr Speaker, I want to thank you for indulging me in this. The previous Speaker who sat in the chair, the member for Cambridge, was also tolerant of deviating from the precise provisions of this bill. I encourage the government to withdraw its other taxes and to examine the ramifications, through some kind of careful study, of even this tax for the wellbeing of the province.

Mr Tilson: I have certainly followed with interest the career of the member for St Catharines over the years. I have not always agreed with what he said, but I have certainly respected his thoughts at times. I appreciated his specific comments as to where this government is going.

He has observed socialism around the world. It is true that the tremendous upheaval in the Soviet Union is not really a fair comparison, but it is a comparison, that extreme socialism has not worked in that mammoth type of government. It has not worked in Europe, it has not worked in Sweden and it remains to be seen whether it is going to work in North America. We have observed an election going on in British Columbia and we have observed the member from the NDP in British Columbia distancing himself from Ontario. It remains to be seen what the people from British Columbia feel with respect to socialism in that province.

Certainly socialism does appear to discourage competitiveness. It discourages the desire to work. With all these facts, my question to the member for St Catharines is this; I know he has had more time to reflect on philosophies, having been a minister. I would like him to share some of his thoughts as to where he thinks this government is going with the philosophy that everyone else around the world is turning his back on.

Mr Sutherland: As usual, the member for St Catharines gave a very good speech this afternoon outlining some of his views on the issues. He raises some important issues, as the member for Renfrew North did yesterday in his speech. While I was not here, I did take time today to review his speech, and he made some very thoughtful observations about the dilemma we are in.

It is interesting that the member for Dufferin-Peel talked about Sweden and how socialism had not worked there. I disagree with him in terms of the sense that it has worked there for many years and the people there have thought it has worked for many years. That is why they continued to elect the government. The reason it has worked is that they made value decisions. The people and the government made value decisions in terms of what were priorities and what was important to them.

Bringing that back to what the member for St Catharines was saying in terms of the dilemma we now face, it seems here in this country that people have made value decisions in terms of what issues are important to them, in terms of health care and education and the type of system we want to have here versus the system to the south. At the same time as they have made those value decisions, up to a certain extent they have been willing to pay a premium for those different values. While there may not be a better standard of living from a statistical standpoint, certainly there is a better quality of life in this province and in this country due to some of those value decisions.

The key dilemma right now is that many of those people are saying they still want to have those same values, but they do not want to pay the premium price that we have had to pay as Canadians and as Ontarians for that. That is going to be a real challenge for this government. I think it is going to be a real challenge for all governments in this province and country to try to deal with that. I am sure that debate is going to go on a little more. It has certainly been a learning experience for me over the past year in terms of balancing off that dilemma we face.

Mrs Sullivan: I wanted to comment in response to the statements of the member for St Catharines, who I think made some very telling points about taxes becoming an impetus for people to decide to leave this country and this province.

Certainly in my constituency, among my constituents, I am seeing that situation on a daily basis where young people, not just the corporate executives, are deciding they are going to choose career options that are outside of this country, and taxation is one of the reasons that is a turning-point in their decision.

Certainly if they look at the situation in the United States when tax reform occurred, one of the things we are finding in jurisdictions against which we are competing for jobs, for investment and so on is that while maintaining progressivity in their income tax rates—indeed they have done that, collected the same amount of money, and reduced rates at the same time. So when a young person or an executive is looking at the comparative factors in deciding whether to stay or to leave, he is looking at substantially lower taxes for very similar services, other than health care. Even with the addition of what is clearly expensive health care coverage in the United States, people are still making the decision that they will be further ahead at the end of the month and will have more freedom to decide whether they are going to invest in home life or in their community through corporate activity or other activity.

When the members look at new income taxes in conjunction with other taxes that are proposed, which the Treasurer has indicated in his last budget are going to be going on until the end of the government's term in office, believe me, that decision is coming earlier and quicker and with more definition each day.

1650

Mr Johnson: The member for St Catharines did indeed make some very important points and made some interesting comments. One of the comments he made was that people are leaving to go to the United States because they think they are going to have tax advantages. In fact, they may have some immediate gratification with regard to how their taxes are taken from them, but is it not a sad commentary when we think of people who want to work where they can get the most money and live where they pay the least? They want to work where they make the most and live where they pay the least. Would we not all like to be in that situation? Well, unfortunately, we all cannot.

The idea that people think—and they truly do—there is an advantage to living in the United States may not in fact prove to be so. As I indicated earlier, there are city sales taxes, there are road taxes. I have not been in the United States recently, but I know when I was there about 15 or 20 years ago I was on one of the turnpikes and there were a number of toll bridges and I had to keep reaching into my pocket trying to find change to feed them. This is something we do not have in Ontario. There are ways and means by which they collect taxes that are not income taxes, and I think that certainly is something we have to look at.

The quality of life they have, the medicare system they do not have, and certainly the fact that they have probably one of the biggest deficits in the world, some day they are going to have to collect on that. I have no doubt about this. Does that mean that all those people who have migrated to the United States will suddenly say, "Hey, we're going back to Ontario because now there's an advantage there"? I am not sure. The situation is very serious and certainly I want to thank the member for St Catharines for the point that people think there is an advantage to moving to the United States.

Mr Bradley: I thank the members for their various comments and questions. I will not have time to deal with everything. I thought all the comments were useful and helpful.

The member for Dufferin-Peel asked me about what I felt the philosophy of the present government would do to Ontario, where it would send us. I think one of the problems is that the government when it was elected and when it was in opposition raised a good deal of expectations, expectations that cannot be met. I would suggest to them that people are soon not going to expect as much from government as they did before, except they are going to expect somewhat lower taxes. That is a change. That is a perceptible change from what I would have seen in the 1960s and the 1970s, even into the 1980s, as we get into the 1990s to see that change.

I think there is a recognition now among many that they are no longer members of advocacy groups; they are now people who have to make value judgements as they are elected. We like to chide them, whether they are from the trade union movement or other areas. My friend the member for Chatham-Kent is here and I like to chide him about those things, and I still recognize that as a member he is going to have to defend positions which are not 100% of what he would like. We are going to have to see that happening in this government, and it is doing it already.

I think there has to be a recognition that we live in a very competitive world. I wish we did not. I wish we were living in, I guess, a system where there was not the kind of competition—the world after the Second World War, where Canada was king, pretty well, and we did not have to worry about the competition.

But in everything that the government does, I believe it is going to have to understand that the competition exists. Perhaps it cannot have everything as it would have liked.

The last thing I would say to the government is to be very careful of entrenching things in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. I heard the Premier starting to make some comments about what he would like to see in a Constitution. May I assure the members, if they want to see the control slipping away from elected people to the courts or to a Senate or somewhere else, just entrench those things in a Constitution and they will find out there is a big difference.

Mr Tilson: I think all members have acknowledged that there are certainly other bills to follow resulting from the budget, which I know we all wish to debate, specifically the bill with respect to gasoline and tobacco, and there are others. This is a bill certainly of a more general nature. The explanatory notes have been referred to the House. I know we can all read, but I think that members of the public will be interested specifically in what this bill does.

It has been referred to by members in the government as a very simple bill, that there is nothing really to it, that it is minor increases to the very rich. I would like just to refer, for the record, to what the explanatory notes of this bill say.

"The bill implements the proposal contained in the budget of the 29th day of April, 1991 to increase the surcharge imposed under the Income Tax Act on personal income tax in excess of $10,000."

There is one section which is summarized in the explanatory notes:

"The re-enactment of section 2b of the act increases the rate of surcharge from 10 per cent of Ontario personal income tax in excess of $10,000 to 12 per cent for 1991 and 14 per cent for subsequent years."

I think that latter statement is certainly interesting. It is committing our future to future increases in the years to come of 14%. The bill, as the government has been wont to do, is making this retroactive to the first of January 1991.

As a new member, I can say that I meet not just people in my own riding but people around the province. I have had the pleasure, or the displeasure, of travelling around the province, specifically on the rent review hearings, and meeting people who have discussed not just housing issues but general issues of the economy.

It has been one of dismay. Standard questions one hears are: "Why are people cross-border shopping? What can we do about it?"

They are going because of the high taxation rate in this province. Certainly there are other issues. There are the issues of the recession and how the recession is affecting the people in this country and, yes, they are going because of the GST. I will be addressing the GST in a moment.

Another question that is asked is: "What is this government doing? Do we have to put up with them?" Yes, I suspect we do. The NDP won the election. It had a majority and it intends to implement—it has given us notice of that—social programs for the next number of years.

But there is a general fear, a fear by business. I sat on a committee yesterday where members of this government were concerned with what they called the myth that has been created by the opposition parties and the press that business is afraid of what the government is doing. I can tell members, it is there. All they have to do is read the papers every day, talk to people in their own ridings, talk to business people, talk to people on the streets, and business is afraid of what the government is doing, business is afraid of bills such as Bill 83 and how it is going to affect their businesses and their survival.

People are afraid for their jobs. They are afraid of how taxation is affecting business and how that is destroying businesses. Businesses are going bankrupt. Yes, it is not completely because of the government's policies, but it cannot deny that it is because of some of its taxation policies, and this is certainly one of them.

The fear is of companies moving to the United States. Yes, there is no question that there is a whole series of reasons why businesses have left this province and are going not only to other provinces but to the United States.

But the facts are there, the fear of increased taxation in this province. All of us in this House, particularly members of the NDP and members of my party, in the last election went around complaining about the past Liberal government and the great number of tax increases that it spent, but this government is no different.

People were very upset in the last election. The NDP did not win the last election because people were supportive of its policies. They were voted in because of the fact that people did not like the continuous tax increases that were being put forward by the Liberal government and yet the government continues to implement—I submit it is even worse than what the previous government was like. Its taxes are becoming unbearable.

It is going to be interesting to watch the municipal elections that will be unfolding this fall. In every municipality around this province the theme seems to be the same: taxes, taxes, taxes. School boards are spending more, perhaps because of more increased pressure by the provincial government, and the downloading of policies is continuing. Bill 30 is an example.

1700

The municipalities are continuing to be concerned with the demands that are being put on them by this government. At the same time the hints were there. In the last election the government was thrown out and one of the main reasons—there were a number of reasons and the members submitted them, as did I, when we went around our ridings—was taxes. It is going to happen again, and yet the government continues to spend, to implement policies that are expensive and to put forward policies that we simply cannot afford.

I do not know how we are going to help that feeling of dismay and that lack of confidence, because how do you stop people from leaving this country or this province? How do you stop people from the lack of desire to invest in this province? What do you do? How do you do it?

The government's theory seems to be to continue with taxation. It has built up a deficit that is going to be insurmountable. The government members continue to remind us of the GST. I do not think anyone likes the GST. I do not think anyone in the country likes the GST and obviously that is a continuous debate that surfaces daily. People do not like the GST, but I would like to remind the members of the philosophy of the previous Liberal government in Ottawa, which was a spending philosophy and it caused great debt in this country. The debt increased until it was spending 33% or 35% on interest alone. That is what is going to happen in this province.

In the future, people who are coming to this country and our children and grandchildren are going to have to pay the debt. Somewhere along the line the debt has to be paid, and that is the fear and dismay this government is creating. There is still time to reverse that policy. There is dismay when we hear the Treasurer talk about the deficit and how he obviously is going to have to cut back on several millions. He has been asked in the last two days what he is going to cut. There is a great deal of concern.

Commitments have been made around this province. In my own riding, for example, there is a commitment to build a hospital by this province, by the Liberal government and by this government. It was renewed by the former Minister of Health and I hope she honours her commitments, because there is a great fear that this province is going broke and that we are not going to have the needed services that were promised by previous governments, and the planning and the great needs for our health services.

One of the major philosophical differences I have noticed with this government is that we should all be the same: "Tax the rich. Tax the middle class. Don't tax the poor." I think there have to be graduated schemes of taxation, but the middle class is slowly disappearing in this province. I would like simply to ask the members of the government why they feel we should all be the same. Are we all the same? Should the ministers be paid the same as other members in this House?

I disagree a lot with the philosophies that are being put forward by the ministers of this particular government, but I know they all work very hard. They all spend many hours and they should be paid more than the rest of the members of this House, and yet they are typical examples of people who are working and being taxed. There are others, other doctors and other people. I cannot expect that the members not deny they should be paid more because of their talents. Values are placed on more talents than others and should be paid accordingly, and yet the government's theory is to make us all the same, tax, tax, tax.

It is going to discourage people. Why should one be competitive? Why should one start up a business? Why not join the government? They are paid well and their jobs are guaranteed. Businesses continuously are going into bankruptcy, but why should the government? Why should they work hard and spend more hours? They do not have the union hours. The people in government do not have the problems that people in private enterprise do. Why do people do it?

I hope this government would try to put forward means to encourage private enterprise. We need private enterprise because it gets back to the issues that were raised by the member for St Catharines. Socialism is not working. It is not working in other parts of the world and it certainly is not going to work in Ontario. I hope that when the members are voting for these bills, they keep those theories in mind, and they encourage people to work in this province and not tax them so they will be forced to leave the province.

I spoke to a number of doctors who have raised the question of the issue of capping their salaries. They are simply saying: "Once I have reached that salary, why bother working? My salary is capped. I can't make any more. I might as well move to the United States." Considerations are being taken by those individuals. I appreciate that this specific subject does not have a great deal to do with Bill 83, but it has to do with the general philosophy of Bill 83 and the general issue of taxation.

There is the whole subject of particular industries and the concerns they have on taxation. For example, I will pick the subject of tourism. Certainly much time will be spent on the subject of the gasoline tax with the subject of tourism and I will not dwell on it, but the whole philosophy of taxation in the tourism industry and how it is affecting their industry is a concern.

Why would people in the United States come to Ontario? Why would they, because of the high taxes that are surfacing in this province? The prices are higher, costs are higher and taxes are higher. Why would they come here to spend their holidays? Why would they come here to spend?

Mr McLean: They would just come to learn how to spend money.

Mr Tilson: That is right. They come to learn how to spend money because that is what this government is becoming very good at: how to spend money.

There are concerns around the province specifically from the tourism industry. I would like to refer to some of the comments that have been made dealing with the whole theory of taxation and the tourism industry, and specifically I would like to provide a submission that was made to our leader's tax campaign that went around the province at the time of the budget debate. This came from the Peterborough Kawartha Tourism and Convention Bureau. At that time submissions were made to us expressing the concerns of the taxation policies and the high deficit policies of this government.

It is stated by this industry that the industry decline that started some two years ago was delayed in reaching Peterborough and the Kawarthas by some six months:

"That six-month reprieve helped, but now the slow-down has reached us. Tourism is of the utmost importance to this region. Studies conducted over the years confirm this. In 1989 the economic impact of tourism to the region was estimated to be $140 million. Direct and indirect employment was in excess of 7,000 jobs, which accounts for 12% of the area labour force as well as over $27 million in combined municipal, provincial and federal tax revenue."

That is something I do not think the government has spent a great deal of time on: the effect of its taxation policies on jobs, how it affects industries such as tourism and how it affects other industries and other jobs where people are simply going to lose their jobs because industries and businesses cannot continue because of the high taxation policies of this province, and Bill 83 is no exception.

"A brief background to the Peterborough Kawartha Tourism and Convention Bureau: The bureau was established in 1982 as the primary marketing and visitor servicing agency for Peterborough and the Kawarthas. We are a non-profit association representing approximately 200 members of the area's tourism industry."

This is an organization that certainly speaks for the entire area and expresses its concern about the decline of tourism in the Peterborough area. They talk about the additional taxes that were announced in the budget of April, and they say specifically that it was "bad news to operators at the start of the 1991 summer season. Added taxes which increase costs and are ultimately passed on to the consumer dim the light at the end of the tunnel."

1710

Then they refer to the various taxes which we will be dealing with later, the tax bills for gasoline, tobacco and alcohol. We will be spending some time, at least in this party, on how that has affected the tourism industry across the province.

"In 1982, US tourism represented 47% of all visitors to the Kawarthas. The percentage has continued to drop and in 1989 was down to 17%.

"One area resort operator tells me that his US business in 1979 represented 90% of his total business. In 1990 that figure was reduced to 3% and forecasts for the 1991 season see US business reduced to 1.5% of his total."

Again, there is no question that it is not solely the effects of this government that are causing that industry to decline. But certainly when you talk to these people in the business about the economic policies of this government, the tourism industry is placing a heavy responsibility on this government as to where the tourism industry is headed.

"In recent months, the bureau has seen increased inquiries from bordering US states. We are encouraged by the interest but concerned about reactions to costs upon the arrival of our American friends. The product is there, but by comparison to US prices we are expensive."

I have seen at first hand, particularly in the border areas, restaurants that normally are full in the summer months, and they were empty compared to other years. Why are they empty? Because of the philosophy, the taxation policies of this government.

"The 47% share of visitation previously made up of US visitors has now been replaced by visitors within a 140-kilometre radius of Peterborough. The largest of that 47% is 25% from Metro Toronto."

Then, again, they spend considerable time on the other taxation bills. I will try to restrict my remarks to the general taxation policy of Bill 83.

"At the annual pre-budget submission made by Tourism Ontario to the Treasurer of Ontario, the provincial federation which represents the industry suggested alternatives rather than presenting requests for the upcoming budget.

"These suggestions and alternatives could have reaped significant revenue for the province, and rebalanced taxation inequities.

"We are pleased to see that the freeze on the PST applied to roofed accommodation at 5% and the rebate of same tax to visitors from outside the province remained intact."

So there are positive compliments to this government, but they are discouraged by some of the recommendations that were not included in the budget, specifically the rescinding of the current provincial sales tax exemption on prepared foods; harmonizing the collection of PST applied to prepared foods and beverages to 8%; the levelling of the playing field between publicly funded and non-profit tourist attractions and private tourist attractions; and the reinvestment of provincial tax revenues collected from provincial fuel taxes, drivers' licences, etc, into the improvement, repair and expansion of provincial and municipal roads.

"We here in Peterborough were recently disappointed when yet another delay was announced in the completion of Highway 115. Highway 115 is the gateway to the Kawarthas."

So there is a feeling of dismay in this particular industry, and I think we could refer to a number of industries—the retail industry—as to the philosophical economic policies of this government.

One of the fears that is surfacing more and more—and it existed a year ago, and members of the government saw it while they were campaigning around the province—was the downloading, the passing of what are provincial responsibilities by a provincial government to municipalities. They are continuing to do that, which dismays many of the municipal politicians, and they will be attacked by that; they will be attacked by those philosophies in the forthcoming municipal elections.

There was an interesting observation talking about property taxes in the province of Ontario in one of our recent Toronto newspapers, commenting on the size of property taxes. In other words, property taxes are increasing more and more—and, I would submit, because of their philosophies in the economic area.

Mr Hope: No, the Liberals did that.

Mr Tilson: Yes, there is no question that part of it was because of the Liberal philosophies, but the government is continuing it. They have an opportunity to stop it and they are not.

I am quoting from this newspaper clipping:

"The total amount of property taxes collected in Ontario in both 1989 and 1990 was almost half the total collected in Canada.

"According to records in the public institutions division of Statistics Canada, Ontario collected $9,927.2 million in 1989 while in 1990 the figure was $10,682.2 million. The total property tax collected in Canada in 1989 was $19,895.6 million and $20,993.5 million in 1990."

That is rather astounding. The municipal politicians will unanimously be telling them that it is because of their economic policies, the policies of passing on provincial responsibilities in the education field and the municipal field to the property taxes, whether it be child care or whether it be other areas.

There is no question, I would submit, and it has been pointed out to them over and over; I am sure they have paid studies in their files that talk about predictions from economists that this province is going to be the last province to pull out of the recession.

The Premier and the Treasurer have made comments that, "Okay, we're going to spend our way out of the recession, and therefore we have a $9.7-billion deficit." Now they are saying, "Well...." We have not been told how much that has increased to and I think we are anxiously awaiting, as are the people of this province, to see what they have been doing with our money. But I am sure it is going to be revealed as to exactly how terrible the situation is, and we worry about it. We worry about it on this side of the House and we worry about it out on the street, as to exactly what the government has been doing with our money and how it has been spending money we do not even have.

Reporter after reporter after reporter has talked on this in the press. The government has received studies, I am sure, that have talked about this whole subject. I would like to refer to one that simply came from my riding. I will just refer to a couple of sections that express the concern of the people of this province.

Here is a writer in one of the newspapers who warns that "Ontario is repeating the same economic mistakes made by Ottawa during the last recession." He predicts that "the province will, as a result, be crippled in future with an institutionalized debt and spiralling taxes." Does that not sound like Ottawa back in the 1970s? Do members remember how the deficit had increased, increased? In one foul swoop, the government has created a monster in this province that will take decades for us to pay off.

"Ontario could well be the last province to pull out of the recession, which apparently is close to an end." That has been predicted around this country, that it is close to ending. There is a certain amount of optimism that the recession will end. But that optimism does not exist in this province. There is a fear of, am I going to lose my job? The housing market is certainly down, and the reason is not because of the interest rates; the interest rates are somewhat down and they were a few years ago. But certainly people are afraid of losing their jobs. Why are they afraid of losing their jobs? Because businesses are failing; people are being put out of work. Why are they being put out of work? Because of bills such as Bill 83, which is discouraging business from operating in this province.

This writer goes on to state that the Ontario budget proposes to "raise provincial spending by $6.2 billion, or 13.4%, in a single year." That is astounding in this recession, in a recession that we are already in, and yet this government decided to increase its spending by 13.4%, sustain a $9.7-billion deficit in the first year. That is astounding considering the recession we are in. Would government members put their families in debt in the same way their government has put this province in debt? I do not think they would.

1720

"This deficit is higher by $6.5 billion, or 204%, than of the previous year." What an increase, 204% from the previous year.

"Add another $25.1 billion to the province's accumulated deficit, from 1992-93 until 1994-95.

"Add more debt over 48 months than Ontario accumulated in the previous 125 years.

"By 1994-95, make Ontario's deficit-GNP ratio twice as bad as that of the federal government."

That is where we are heading. Those people stand over there and they say what a disaster the federal government policies are. They should think about it. If their economic policies continue, it will be twice as bad as it is now in the federal government.

"The Ontario government must question why it, alone among all the other Canadian governments, has chosen this well-known path to trouble."

That is how it ends, and so it is a feeling of dismay. I took that at random out of letters to the editor and comments that are made by reporters and columnists in our ridings.

There are other comments that have been made by people in the press that I am going to refer to, because I do not think those people are reading the press and the feeling of dismay that has been expressed around this province.

The main feeling, of course, is that "a net debt in Ontario, which under the NDP will grow from $34.8 billion to an awesome $69 billion by 1994-95"—and that, of course, is calculated simply on the deficits of $9.7 billion this year, 1991-92; $8.9 billion in 1992-93; $8.4 billion in 1993-94, and $7.8 billion in 1994-95. How in the world are we going to pay it off?

One of the government's bright ideas is to put forward bills such as the one that is before it. That is how they are going to do it. How in the world do they expect that bills, about which one of the members over here says, "It's just a small amount; it's only going to tax people a little bit," are possibly going to reduce that deficit? Is it going to disappear by magic? Is it going to go through a recycling? If you think about it, where is the money going to come from? I mean, you do not spend money that you do not have.

The calculations that are put out by this reporter, and this came out of an article in the Toronto Sun at the time of the budget and that was an estimate, those figures that were given—they are not just quoted here; they are quoted in other newspapers around this province—are, "$25,000 owed by every household, or $7,000 owed by every newborn baby." Every baby that comes into this world, just because of their policies, is going to owe $7,000.

"Personal income taxes in Ontario now account for more than 37 cents of every tax dollar"—does that not sound a little bit like Ottawa, a little bit like, where is the money going to come from?—"compared to 26 cents back in 1984-85." That is what the people of this province are worried about. Where is this government going?

They also get into the other bills, Mr Speaker, and I can assure you that I will be expressing those concerns with respect to the other bills, because obviously this government is not listening to the concerns that are being talked about around this province.

There are a couple of other statistics, some of which have been given and I am going to repeat them—some of them are new—that I would like to refer to the House as a result of the tax economic policies that are being put forward by this government, as exemplified by this bill.

The NDP budget, of course, includes $1 billion in tax hikes. That includes them all, but $1 billion in tax hikes. Government members should try to remember back when they were running for office. They should try to remember back to what they were saying. Did they ever think that they would be taxing the people of this province an increase of $1 billion? They should try to explain that to their constituents. One of the members up here was talking about going around ridings such as mine and talking about the wonderful things he is doing here in Toronto. He is going to have a hard time explaining how in the world his government has $1 billion in tax hikes as a result of its philosophies.

This government is continuing on from the previous government. Ontario taxpayers have had more than 40 tax increases since 1985. The NDP government made the same sorts of remarks when it was running for office. They talked about the tremendous number of increases that the Liberals put forward. They were going to be the new breed of politician. They were not going to do that sort of thing, they acknowledged. They would go door to door and people would be complaining about taxes: property taxes, all kinds of taxes, tire taxes where the $5 tire tax was not even going on the environment; it was just disappearing into the general revenue. People were concerned, and they are getting terribly cynical.

Again, how is the government going to explain the continued number of tax increases? They should add them up. They should add up the number of bills that we are putting forward, that we are going to be debating. This is the first. I want them to go back to their ridings and explain why they have broken their promises. Of the seven Ontario budgets tabled from 1985 to 1991, five have imposed tax increases and/or new taxes; the two exceptions, of course, fell in election years.

No wonder the people of this province are cynical. No wonder they are cynical about what the government is doing. No wonder business will not trust them. We have been sitting through housing policies, and people who are investing in the housing industries, with the retroactivity, playing by the rules that were set by the previous government—that is just an example. The government has lost the confidence of the people who invest in this province, not only from within the province but from outside the province.

The NDP government will collect $18.6 billion more in taxes than the Conservative government did in 1984-85—$18.6 billion more; astounding figures. The deficit has tripled from where it was to $9.7 billion. At least, that is what we were last told back in the spring. Who knows what it is now? I groan. It troubles me when I see the Treasurer say that he is going to be making several millions of dollars in changes. It really does, and I think it is troubling the people of this province. Where are they going to cut? Now, all of a sudden, they are talking about cutting. Where are they going to cut? It troubles us.

This is the largest provincial deficit ever in this country. What a record, having the largest provincial deficit ever, an astounding record.

There is still time to change it. They can change the direction in which they are going. It is a direction in which they say they consult, but I question whether they do. Certainly there has been very little change as a result of hearing the people in their own ridings who are coming to them expressing concerns at the spending habits and the economic philosophies that this province is going and that their own government is going in.

I do not envy the government members. I do not envy how they are talking to their constituents. In fact, I was in Hamilton the other day talking to a group and they were having trouble speaking to the members. Hamilton represents four or five members. They are all NDP members, and they were hiding. At least, that is what I was told. And I do not blame them for hiding, because they are going to have a hard time explaining these facts. They are going to have a very difficult time. Facts are facts, and what are they going to do about it?

I will challenge them what to do about it. One of the things that they can do is that they can stop this bill, Bill 83, because it is a philosophical direction that is going nowhere. The cost to Ontario taxpayers is $13,684,931.50 a day for interest payments—just interest payments. I will bet the government members never realized that. That is $507,205 an hour on interest. That is what they are doing to this province.

1730

Mr Mammoliti: How long did it take you to figure that out?

Mr Tilson: Well, I am going through this. I know the figures are interesting to the member.

An hon member: He doesn't know it.

Mr Tilson: That is why I am telling the member, because I do not think he realizes that. To spend $507,205 an hour on interest and then say—

Interjection.

Mr Tilson: No, I did not calculate it out, but it was calculated out on government figures, that is for certain.

Mr Mammoliti: What kind of calculator did you use?

Mr Tilson: If the member does not believe me, he should work it out himself, because I think he is going to have a hard time explaining these facts to his constituents. If he can prove me wrong, let him prove me wrong, but it is quite clear. It has been uncontradicted to date that the government's policies are out of control.

To comment with respect to Ontario's eroding competitiveness, the government's budget outlook predicts employment levels will drop by 184,000 in 1991. The budget boosts provincial spending by 13.4%. Government operating expenditures increased over $5 billion from last year. The budget brings business tax rates up to 30% higher than similar companies in Quebec and New York state.

Two other facts: Ontario has been losing $360 million a year in retail spending due to the cross-border shopping. Of course, the budget makes the situation even worse.

Mr Speaker, it is difficult for me to stay specifically on this bill, but the philosophical theme of the bill goes into other areas. I appreciate your allowing me that factor. These facts affect all the bills. I may be repeating them back to the government, because I do not think it knows them.

Interjection.

Mr Tilson: They are figures that are accurate. How are government members going to explain these figures to their constituents? The final figure that I throw to members to think about is that continental pressures have forced other jurisdictions to create a competitive climate. Ontario is headed 180 degrees in the wrong direction. That has been said over and over. All you have got to do is look at these figures and you realize that statements such as that are correct. When is the government going to reverse what it is doing?

The Treasurer has given some hints that he is going to consider it, and we will be looking forward to seeing what sort of cuts he is making, but it is troublesome that he made commitments in the spring and now he is saying it has gotten a lot worse. It has not gotten a lot worse; it is just as bad now as it was then. The government put this province in an unbelievable debt and I do not know how we are going to get out of it. One of the things the government can do is stop this bill.

Promises: A great deal of time has been spent by members of the opposition with respect to promises. The government obviously made the plan quite clear during the last election that there would be very few taxes. They would not give us any more higher taxes. That promise was made by all government members during the last election. That was their promise.

Interjection.

Mr Tilson: They should pull out their speeches. I will bet every one of them to a T made that promise, that would cut spending instead. That was their promise. They were going to cut spending. Are they cutting spending? No.

After the Premier told us in his $52.8-billion budget this spring that he was willing to spend Ontario's way out of recession, that budget cost our prized triple-A credit rating. No one has ever said anything about that. That is what the government is doing. That is what its economic policies are doing to this province. The fear that goes around, not only the world but within this province, is the lack of confidence as to what the government's economic policies are doing to this province.

Reference is made to Ontario's slow recovery, which has certainly seen recently housing starts taper off. Of course, there are no residential housing starts. There is no one building apartments. I am talking about general housing starts, which tapered off last month even though they were higher than last year. There is no question they were higher than last year, but they are tapering off. Why are they tapering off? Because of lack of confidence in this government. Toronto's resale market, which enjoyed some sort of boom this spring, did fall down considerably after the budget was put forward. Average prices were down in May. With respect to listings in the real estate boom, they fell substantially after that into the summer.

Auto sales were buoyed by dealers' cut-rate financing and special package deals. They are falling still. Those plans put forward by the dealers did not work. Why are they not working? Because people are afraid to make those types of investments. They cannot afford it. They cannot afford it because of the government's taxation policies.

The Premier has made comments that he is going to cut spending. He has not told us what. The fear that some of us have is that he is going to cut capital expenditures that would affect our infrastructure, because the municipalities are going to be hearing that. I do not envy the members opposite going around their ridings listening to municipal speeches, because that is the fear that has already started. The people who are declaring themselves for office, to run for municipal office, fear what the government is going to cut, what it is going to do to the infrastructure of this province.

One of the emphases the government seems to have is with respect to keeping social programs intact. At first blush that seems admirable, because certainly there are a lot of people who do need assistance, but the government is not looking at the other areas. It has made it quite clear that it does not appear to be going to be cutting its social programs.

Capital spending is going to be needed in this province to improve our productivity and I fear the government is going to disregard that type of philosophy.

I have just a few concluding remarks to make on this general type of bill. I will be rising to address the House specifically on some of the other bills because you start looking at the whole effect of cross-border shopping and how that has arisen, and the effect of just the gasoline tax, specifically in my community, the number of people who commute and how that is affecting them. We will be spending a great deal of time on that and how that affects their way of life and how it affects their living and their quality of life.

I would like to refer to a recent article in the Financial Post.

Mr Mammoliti: Who wrote it?

Mr Tilson: I know the members opposite do not like any newspapers, they do not read anything, but I suggest they start reading them because they are all saying the same thing. Ruth Getter, who is a senior economist of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, made some comments which I would like to quote in conclusion. She writes: "The additional [1991-92] spending is not geared primarily towards fighting the recession. An effective recession-fighting strategy would be to increase capital spending, stimulate the economy and create new jobs." The government is not doing that with its policies. New jobs are not arising as a result of its policies.

She continues: "Fully two thirds of [Ontario's] increase in spending will go towards health, education and community and social services." Two thirds of that increase will go to those areas. The Minister of Health talked today and yesterday about the problems she is having trying to keep the expenditures in the health industry under control. The members have been applauding her for that. But that is the direction the government is going in.

Again quoting Ms Getter: "Community and social services spending, for example, rose by about 28% in 1991-92. Health, education and social services are the areas most subject to uncontrollable cost increases." She refers to the Treasurer, who is announcing spending cuts of several hundred million dollars. This has been made on two days running, although he has yet to tell us what that is going to be. He says the reason he is going to do that is to prevent Ontario's deficit from climbing even higher than the $9.7 billion that was announced in the spring.

1740

It scares us when the Treasurer has given hints that we have a deficit that is even higher than it was in the spring, and he is very vague, several hundred million dollars. We do not know how many several hundred million dollars, but we know at least several hundred million dollars are going to be cut because the deficit has jumped.

Again quoting the article:

"The truth is that large deficits like Ontario's don't stimulate the economy....'Deficits increase the demand for funds in a way that pushes up interest rates'....And high interest rates tend to dampen the economy more than the deficit stimulates it....'You have to start with the view that large deficits are counterproductive to what they are designed to accomplish'....'The high deficit ends up hurting the very people you are trying to help.'"

It has been commented that this bill is a bill to tax the rich. The question is, who is rich? When we start hearing what the higher officials in Hydro are making and some of the amazing salaries that are being made, this bill of course affects cabinet ministers or may affect cabinet ministers. I am not too sure of the tax implications, but it is certainly going to affect them. The cabinet ministers tell us over and over that they are just average people, that they would be making more money outside, and some of them probably can. Some of them cannot, but some of them can.

But the effect of these financial policies is going to be affecting the very people the government is trying to help, people who are looking for jobs, people who are trying to improve themselves. They are leaving the province. They are not buying. They are going bankrupt.

This article in the Financial Post states, "Higher provincial taxes will be necessary just to keep Ontario's deficit from running out of control." That obviously is what the government is doing. They are going to tax, tax, tax to stop the deficit from going out of control.

The article goes on, "For that reason Ontario's policies 'will seriously reduce the province's competitiveness and could lead to a loss of investment, output and jobs over the longer term.'" This is from economists from the Royal Bank of Canada. The banks are concerned. The banks spend a lot of money hiring economists and people who have studied the economy in this country, in this province and around the world.

That is what they are saying, and this government should listen to them, because we are going nowhere but to disaster time. It is going to be a disaster. They complain about the GST, and again I hark back to it, when they create these deficits—the Treasurer stated it—some day these deficits have to be paid off. How is the government going to pay them off?

Quoting again from this Financial Post article:

"The NDP government in Ontario and its Liberal predecessor, for example, indulged in high spending in the late 1980s and early 1990s and knowingly courted inflation at a time when the Bank of Canada was trying to contain inflation with high interest rates. Clearly, Ontario's spending policies contributed to higher interest rates which increased business costs and government debt servicing costs."

It is very simple. The effect of the deficit, the effect of the government's taxes is going to affect everything else. I remember a few years ago we were concerned with the high interest rates. Here we have some very highly qualified economists who are stating that the government's policies will lead to higher interest rates and will certainly lead to higher business costs.

Businesses around this province are terribly concerned as to where they are going. They are terribly concerned. Many businesses are going bankrupt. Every once in a while we read statistics about people who are going bankrupt with respect to the costs they have in contributing towards the government debt servicing costs.

These statements that are made—and this is a typical article, just at random. This is an article that came out of the September 16 Financial Post. I do not imagine many members read these things. As to these facts I have given that some members said they were bored with, and I am astounded they would state that because the facts are there. I will repeat: $507,205 an hour for interest payments alone. It boggles our minds, but that is what the government is doing to this province.

This article talks about the economics around the country. Clearly these articles are all very worried about where this great province is going, how it was once the great province economically and otherwise. I must say there is no longer, I get the sense, the hatred of big, bad, rich Ontario, because we are no longer big, bad, rich Ontario.

I hope that some of the members will go back, when we start voting on these bills, and take a long, hard look at the direction in which they are going. They should listen to what their Treasurer says when he starts cutting back, making the cuts. That is going to be the real key to their success. When they start making these cuts, are they going to be getting a whole other set of people upset with them because of the cuts, because of the promises they made? They are going to have to change their minds. Is it going to be in health? Is it going to be in education? Are they suddenly going to come along and say, "Well, maybe the Conservatives were right?"

Mr Hope: Far right.

Mr Tilson: It is fine for the member to make those remarks in jest, but he should remember to read Hansard when the facts start coming out in a number of months and the disaster is going to strike. He should remember what he is saying and I hope he can try and explain it to his constituents.

Mr Hope: Not a problem.

Mr Tilson: Well, I wish him luck when he starts explaining to them the $507,205 an hour that the government is spending on interest rates.

Mr Hope: Not a problem.

Mr Tilson: Well, good luck.

I could again refer to other industries that are being affected, industries that are going out of business around this province, industries that are moving to the United States, businesses to the United States. I repeat, there is no question that part of the reason they are going to the United States is because of other economic influences from outside the country, from outside the province. But economists are saying almost unanimously that the policies of this government are playing a major role in why these industries and businesses are leaving the province and why people are becoming bankrupt and why their quality of life is decreasing.

I can tell members at first hand that specifically in the housing area, when we had people come from outside this country, from outside this province, they said they would not invest a nickel in this province because of their lack of confidence in this government, because of the economic policies it is putting forward and because of the high deficit. Where else in this world is there a deficit jump like what this government has just done? They are spending money like it is going out of style.

The problem in Ottawa was caused by a government that existed in the 1960s. Interest rates have gone out of control, costs have gone out of control, and that is what the government is doing in this province. There is no need for it at all. I want this government to reassess its position. I assume that they are going to have caucus meetings, that they are invited to caucus meetings and will be able to express their views freely. Hopefully they will be persuading their Treasurer and their Premier to change the economic direction in which they are going.

1750

Mr Johnson: The member for Dufferin-Peel made many comments and used many facts that were not exactly correct. I think he said that—well, let me put it this way: This member was with me and we listened to some experts on the economy talk about deficit spending during a recession. It just depends on what expert economists you are listening to, because there is a group that thinks it is very good to spend during recessions and there is a group that would also say it is very good to spend during recessions but that the practice has not been in place or it has not been widely used for a long period of time.

The member read some things from the papers that would suggest that these people who have written in the papers are correct. I do not know that this is true. The amount of increase being a disincentive to stay in Ontario, if examined more closely, is not correct. Presently the marginal rate of Ontario income tax for those having high income is a little over 15 cents on the dollar. The existing surtax increased this marginal rate for the highest, richest taxpayers to just over 16.5 cents on the dollar, and if this bill becomes law, the top marginal rate for those Ontarians having the richest income will rise to just under 17 cents on the dollar. That is for 1991. In 1992, it will be 17.1 cents. So this disincentive to remain in Ontario is 0.6 of one cent on each dollar. Is that a disincentive for being in Ontario for those people who have to pay the little extra? I think that is not a good enough reason, quite frankly.

They wanted us to harmonize the PST with GST. There is half a billion dollars versus the $1 billion they talk about.

The Speaker: The member's time has expired. Further questions or comments?

Mr Phillips: I would like to comment on the member's speech. I realize the government members may not like to hear the statistics, but I think they are actually quite important. It is sometimes tough to humanize them, but I think the member is correct. I do not think we will find an economist who will now agree with the budget and the tax policy. Even when we had before our legislative committee the 58 economists who supported a part of the budget, they said—I think it was Professor Watkins—it is crazy to continue to run deficits like this budget does. He said: "I don't agree with that. It's fine in a recession to have a one-year or two-year deficit, but it's crazy to run that kind of long-term deficit."

The members should not be misled by Professor Watkins's apparent support of the budget, because if they read Hansard they will see it is wrong. I think they will find that the statistics that the members quoted are very accurate and facts are facts. I do not think they will find that there is an economist who would today say this budget is going to be helpful to the province of Ontario.

The government members may find, as I am certain the cabinet has, the budget is beginning to unravel. Frankly, I feel sorry for the Treasurer, who is clearly an honourable individual who is doing his best, but the budget is beginning to unravel. We will find over the next few months that many of the predictions that the member has made will come true. He is trying to raise with the government members the need to change their minds. They have made a mistake. They may not like to admit they have made a mistake, but they will ultimately have to admit they made a mistake. They are far better to do that sooner rather than later and get on with running the province the way it should be.

Mr Harris: I want to say to the member for Dufferin-Peel how much I enjoyed his comments, both those that I saw on my monitor before I was able to get here and those that I heard once I was here. I think the facts do speak for themselves. I want to comment on the comments as they relate to the member for Dufferin-Peel's comments that were made by the member for Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings. They talk about, "Oh, it's only 0.6 of a cent, it's only point this, it's only one point here, it's only this little thing." Of course, this is the problem; it is the cumulative effect of the cent here and the cent there. You get 100 different laws and 100 different taxes; that is 100 cents and there is nothing left. When you are paying 100%, 0.6 is enough to say: "That's it. I'm out of here. I'm gone." This is what is happening.

The second fact that is indisputable is that capital entrepreneurs, investors, are indeed fleeing this province. They are afraid of the future. They are concerned about their children. I hear people come to me and say, "We are really concerned about the future for our children and we think the best thing we can do for them is get them a green card in some other country anywhere in the world, whether it is the United States or anywhere."

When I spoke to a group of university students last week at the business school of the University of Waterloo, basically the thrust was, "There are opportunities all around the world for us." The professor was afraid of that. Their concern was they do not think they are going to be here in Ontario. That is their concern. That is what we are fighting for, that is what the member for Dufferin-Peel is fighting for.

By way of conclusion, I understand that government members do not understand this. We know that, or they would not stand up and vote for this silly stuff. We understand that they do not understand the facts, but surely it is our obligation to keep trying to bring this forward in different and in better ways, to get through their heads what is happening in this province.

Mr Hope: There were a lot of figures laid out and a lot of us are familiar with them. The figures that a lot of us are more familiar with are the weekly paycheques we used to receive, and we used to find out about the taxation.

A lot of us clearly understand what is going on, but when I hear the comments that are put out about, "The company is not sure; they are leaving and going away," they only have one individual in mind. We forget about those workers who may be affected, we forget about those family members who are affected. We hear the comments about, "We've got to cut spending, we've got to do this and we've got to do that." Well, we inherited a lot.

Members opposite put the comment that, "Well, the Liberals were in before the Conservatives." It is amazing how we did so badly in one year. How many years have we had a Conservative regime in the federal government?

I think it is very important what we are trying to do through the worst economic times we are faced with. People have been victimized by the governments for the last 10 years or more and they are asking for help of this government to get them back on their feet. There is only one good investment right now. It is to help out the working citizens of this province.

If we help out the farmers in my community, they generate dollars and generate business and generate the economy and generate the investments. If I put money back into investment in properties and back into the industries that are around us, we are putting investment into the people, because those people are going to spend.

If the members opposite want to talk about creating investment in Ontario, if you and I, Mr Speaker, are spending our paycheques, let me tell you, there are going to be people out there, little entrepreneurs who are going to see a potential market. What they will do is build a factory and sell that product for you. They will service your needs.

The Speaker: The member for Dufferin-Peel has up to two minutes to respond.

Mr Tilson: Certainly one of the areas that I spent many of my remarks on and which there have been responses to is the whole philosophy of deficits. The member for Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings and I did attend a session together where we did the opposite philosophies. I think the real question we need to ask is, how are we going to pay it back? Where is the money going to come from?

I would like to take the little time that has been left to me to refer to correspondence that was sent to the Treasurer, with a copy to the Premier, by a well-known business in this province, Weall and Cullen. Mark Cullen, the president of this firm, wrote to the Treasurer back at the time the budget was put forward, and he said:

"I am writing to express my deep disappointment in last week's Ontario budget. While I have no argument with the principle of helping the underprivileged and protecting the environment, my complaint is that a $10-billion deficit in one year is absolutely unforgivable. Your children, my children, and our grandchildren are going to pay for that. In time, the deficit that your government is running up today will have to be paid for by someone, somehow. What kind of legacy do you think this is to the next generation? How do you suppose we are going to pay for all that debt? Please,

Mr Laughren, answer one question: Where will the money come from?"

That is the question, obviously, with respect to Bill 83, and I hope the government decides to withdraw it.

Mr Wessenger: I just noticed I have only a few minutes to speak today, but sitting here listening to the comments from the third party, I almost think I am in a time warp and I belong in the 1930s. I have not heard such comments since the time of Herbert Hoover, although we had them brought back with Ronald Reagan recently.

The Speaker: Would the member resume his seat. When the debate is resumed on another occasion, he will of course have the floor.

The House adjourned at 1800.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor/Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon/L'hon Lincoln M. Alexander, PC, QC/CP, CR

Speaker/Président: Hon/L'hon David Warner

Clerk/Greffier: Claude L. DesRosiers

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Committees/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des comités: Smirle Forsyth

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Journals/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des journaux: Alex D. McFedries

Sergeant at Arms/Sergent d'armes: Thomas Stelling

Abel, Donald (Wentworth North/-Nord PC) government whip/Whip du gouvernement

Akande, Hon/L'hon Zanana (St Andrew-St Patrick ND)
Minister of Community and Social Services/
Ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires

Allen, Hon/L'hon Richard (Hamilton West/-Ouest ND)
Minister of Colleges and Universities, Minister of Skills
Development/Ministre des Collèges et Universités,
ministre de la Formation professionnelle

Arnott, Ted (Wellington PC)

Beer, Charles (York North/-Nord L)

Bisson, Gilles (Cochrane South/-Sud ND) PA to Minister of Northern Development and Mines, PA to minister responsible for francophone affairs, Vice-Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/
Ap du ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines,
ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones,
vice-président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario
au sein de la Confédération

Boyd, Hon/L'hon Marion (London Centre/-Centre ND)
Minister of Education, minister responsible for women's issues/Ministre de l'Éducation, ministre déléguée à la
Condition féminine

Bradley, James J. (St Catharines L) opposition House leader/
Chef parlementaire de l'opposition

Brown, Michael A. (Algoma-Manitoulin L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on general government/ Vice-Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales

Buchanan, Hon/L'hon Elmer (Hastings-Peterborough ND)
Minister of Agriculture and Food/Ministre de
l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation

Callahan, Robert V. (Brampton South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Président du Comité
permanent des comptes publics

Caplan, Elinor (Oriole L) Chair, standing committee on social development/Présidente du Comité permanent des affaires
sociales

Carr, Gary (Oakville South/-Sud PC)

Carter, Jenny (Peterborough ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability
issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre
des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des
personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

Charlton, Hon/L'hon Brian (Hamilton Mountain ND)
Minister of Financial Institutions/Ministre des Institutions
financières

Chiarelli, Robert (Ottawa West/-Ouest L)

Christopherson, David (Hamilton Centre/-Centre ND)
PA to Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/
Ap du Trésorier de l'Ontario et du ministre de l'Économie

Churley, Hon/L'hon Marilyn (Riverdale ND) Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ministre de la
Consommation et du Commerce

Cleary, John C. (Cornwall L)

Conway, Sean G. (Renfrew North/-Nord L)

Cooke, Hon/L'hon David (Windsor-Riverside ND) Minister
of Municipal Affairs, government House leader/
Ministre des Affaires municipales, chef parlementaire du
gouvernement

Cooper, Mike (Kitchener-Wilmot ND) deputy government whip/
Whip adjoint du gouvernement

Coppen, Hon/L'hon Shirley (Niagara South/-Sud ND)
Minister without Portfolio, chief government whip/
Ministre sans portefeuille, whip en chef du gouvernement

Cordiano, Joseph (Lawrence L) Vice-Chair, standing committee
on social development/Vice-Président du Comité permanent
des affaires sociales

Cousens, W. Donald (Markham PC)

Cunningham, Dianne (London North/-Nord PC) Progressive
Conservative chief whip/Whip en chef du Parti
progressiste-conservateur

Curling, Alvin (Scarborough North/-Nord L) opposition deputy whip/whip adjoint de l'opposition

Dadamo, George (Windsor-Sandwich ND) PA to Minister of Transportation/Ap du ministre des Transports

Daigeler, Hans (Nepean L)

Drainville, Dennis (Victoria-Haliburton ND) PA to Minister of Municipal Affairs; Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/Ap du ministre des Affaires municipales, président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario au sein
de la Confédération

Duignan, Noel (Halton North/-Nord ND) Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative, coprésident
du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire

Elston, Murray J. (Bruce L) Leader of the Official Opposition/
Chef de l'opposition officielle

Eves, Ernie (Parry Sound PC) Progressive Conservative House
leader/Chef parlementaire du Parti progressiste-conservateur

Farnan, Mike (Cambridge ND) First Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Premier vice-président du
Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Fawcett, Joan M. (Northumberland L)

Ferguson, Hon/L'hon Will (Kitchener ND) Minister of Energy/Ministre de l'Énergie

Fletcher, Derek (Guelph ND) PA to Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ap du ministre de la Consommation
et du Commerce

Frankford, Robert (Scarborough East/-Est ND)

Gigantes, Hon/L'hon Evelyn (Ottawa Centre/-Centre ND)
Minister of Housing/Ministre du Logement
Grandmaître, Bernard C. (Ottawa East/-Est L)

Grier, Hon/L'hon Ruth A. (Etobicoke-Lakeshore ND)
Minister of the Environment, minister responsible for the greater Toronto area/Ministre de l'Environnement, ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto

Haeck, Christel (St. Catharines-Brock ND)

Hampton, Hon/L'hon Howard (Rainy River ND) Attorney General/Procureur général

Hansen, Ron (Lincoln ND) Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs; Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/Président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques, président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi privés

Harnick, Charles (Willowdale PC)

Harrington, Margaret H. (Niagara Falls ND) PA to Minister of Housing/Ap du ministre du Logement

Harris, Michael (Nipissing PC) leader of the Progressive Conservative Party/Chef du Parti progressiste-conservateur

Haslam, Hon/L'hon Karen (Perth ND) Minister of Culture and Communications/Ministre de la Culture et des Communications

Hayes, Pat (Essex-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (agriculture)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (agriculture)

Henderson, D. James (Etobicoke-Humber L)

Hope, Randy R. (Chatham-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Community and Social Services/Ap du ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires

Huguet, Bob (Sarnia ND) PA to Minister of Energy/Ap du ministre de l'Énergie

Jackson, Cameron (Burlington South/-Sud PC) Chair, standing committee on estimates/Président du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses

Jamison, Norm (Norfolk ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology, responsible for small business/Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie, délégué aux Affaires des petites entreprises

Johnson, Paul R. (Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings/Prince-Edward-Lennox-Hastings-Sud ND)
PA to Minister of Revenue/Ap du ministre du Revenu

Jordan, W. Leo (Lanark-Renfrew PC)

Klopp, Paul (Huron ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (food)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (alimentation)

Kormos, Peter (Welland-Thorold ND) Chair, standing committee on resources development/Président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources

Kwinter, Monte (Wilson Heights L)

Lankin, Hon/L'hon Frances (Beaches-Woodbine ND)
Minister of Health, minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ministre de la Santé, ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale

Laughren, Hon/L'hon Floyd (Nickel Belt ND) Deputy Premier, Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/Vice-premier ministre, Trésorier de l'Ontario et ministre de l'Économie

Lessard, Wayne (Windsor-Walkerville ND) PA to Minister of Colleges and Universities/Ap du ministre des Collèges et Universités

Mackenzie, Hon/L'hon Bob (Hamilton East/-Est ND)
Minister of Labour/Ministre du Travail

MacKinnon, Ellen (Lambton ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative

Mahoney, Steven W. (Mississauga West/-Ouest L) chief opposition whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition

Malkowski, Gary (York East/-Est ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

Mammoliti, George (Yorkview ND) PA to minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ap de la ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale

Mancini, Remo (Essex South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on general government/Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales

Marchese, Rosario (Fort York ND) PA to the Premier, PA to Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Ap du premier ministre, ap du ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales

Marland, Margaret (Mississauga South/-Sud PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on estimates/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses

Martel, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Sudbury East/-Est ND) Minister of Northern Development and Mines/Ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines

Martin, Tony (Sault Ste. Marie/Sault-Sainte-Marie ND) PA to Minister of Education/Ap de la ministre de l'Éducation

Mathyssen, Irene (Middlesex ND) PA to Minister of the Environment, government whip/Ap de la ministre de l'Environnement, whip du gouvernement

McClelland, Carman (Brampton North/-Nord L)

McGuinty, Dalton J.P. (Ottawa South/-Sud L)

McLean, Allan K. (Simcoe East/-Est PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Vice-Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux

McLeod, Lyn (Fort William L)

Miclash, Frank (Kenora L) opposition chief whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition

Mills, Gord (Durham East/-Est ND) PA to Solicitor General/Ap du Solliciteur général

Morin, Gilles E. (Carleton East/-Est L) Deputy Speaker and Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Vice-Président et Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Morrow, Mark (Wentworth East/-Est ND) Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman; Vice-Chair, standing committee on administration of justice/Président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman, vice-président du Comité permanent de l'administration de la justice

Murdoch, Bill (Grey PC)

Murdock, Sharon (Sudbury ND) PA to Minister of Labour/Ap du ministre du Travail

North, Hon/L'hon Peter (Elgin ND) Minister of Tourism and Recreation/Ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs

- O'Connor, Lawrence (Durham-York ND) PA to minister responsible for the greater Toronto area; Vice-Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/ Ap de la ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto, vice-président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi privés
- Offer, Steven (Mississauga North/-Nord L)
- O'Neil, Hugh P. (Quinte L)
- O'Neill, Yvonne (Ottawa-Rideau L) opposition deputy whip/ Whip adjointe de l'opposition
- Owens, Stephen (Scarborough Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Financial Institutions, government whip/ Ap du ministre des Institutions financières, whip du gouvernement
- Perruzza, Anthony (Downsview ND) PA to Minister for Skills Development/Ap du ministre de la Formation professionnelle
- Philip, Hon/L'hon Ed (Etobicoke-Rexdale ND) Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology/Ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie
- Phillips, Gerry (Scarborough-Agincourt L)
- Pilkey, Hon/L'hon Allan (Oshawa ND) Solicitor General, Minister of Correctional Services/Solliciteur général, ministre des Services correctionnels
- Poirier, Jean (Prescott and Russell/Prescott et Russell L)
- Poole, Dianne (Eglinton L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Vice-Présidente du comité permanent des comptes publics
- Pouliot, Hon/L'hon Gilles (Lake Nipigon/Lac-Nipigon ND) Minister of Transportation, minister responsible for francophone affairs/Ministre du Transport, ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones
- Rae, Hon/L'hon Bob (York South/-Sud ND) Premier, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Premier ministre, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales
- Ramsay, David (Timiskaming L)
- Rizzo, Tony (Oakwood IND)
- Runciman, Robert W. (Leeds-Grenville PC) Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux
- Ruprecht, Tony (Parkdale L)
- Scott, Ian G. (St. George-St. David L)
- Silipo, Hon/L'hon Tony (Dovercourt ND) Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet/Président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement
- Sola, John (Mississauga East/-Est L)
- Sorbara, Gregory S. (York Centre/-Centre L)
- Sterling, Norman W. (Carleton PC)
- Stockwell, Chris (Etobicoke West/-Ouest PC)
- Sullivan, Barbara (Halton Centre/-Centre L)
- Sutherland, Kimble (Oxford ND) PA to Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet; Vice-Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs/Ap du président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement, vice-président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques
- Swarbrick, Anne (Scarborough West /-Ouest ND)
- Tilson, David (Dufferin-Peel PC)
- Turnbull, David (York Mills PC)
- Villeneuve, Noble (S-D-G & East Grenville/S.-D.-G. & Grenville-Est PC) Second Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Deuxième vice-président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
- Ward, Brad (Brantford ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology with responsibility for trade and technology/ Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie et délégué au Commerce et à la Technologie
- Ward, Margery (Don Mills ND) PA to Minister of Government Services/Ap du ministre des Services gouvernementaux
- Wark-Martyn, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Port Arthur ND) Minister of Revenue/Ministre du Revenu
- Warner, Hon/L'hon David (Scarborough-Ellesmere ND) Speaker; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président, coprésident du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire
- Waters, Daniel (Muskoka-Georgian Bay/Muskoka-Baie-Georgienne ND) PA to Minister of Tourism and Recreation; Vice-Chair, standing committee on resources development/ Ap du ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs, vice-président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources
- Wessinger, Paul (Simcoe Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Health/Ap de la ministre de la Santé
- White, Drummond (Durham Centre/-Centre ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman/ Vice-président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman
- Wildman, Hon/L'hon Bud (Algoma ND) Minister of Natural Resources, minister responsible for native affairs/Ministre des Ressources naturelles, ministre délégué aux Affaires autochtones
- Wilson, Hon/L'hon Fred (Frontenac-Addington ND) Minister of Government Services/Ministre des Services gouvernementaux
- Wilson, Gary (Kingston and The Islands/Kingston et Les Îles ND) PA to Minister of Culture and Communications/ Ap de la ministre de la Culture et des Communications
- Wilson, Jim (Simcoe West/-Ouest PC)
- Wininger, David (London South/-Sud ND) PA to Attorney General, PA to minister responsible for native affairs/Ap du Procureur général, ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires autochtones
- Wiseman, Jim (Durham West/Durham-Ouest ND) PA to Minister of Correctional Services/Ap du ministre des Services correctionnels
- Witmer, Elizabeth (Waterloo North/-Nord PC)
- Wood, Len (Cochrane North/-Nord ND) PA to Minister of Natural Resources/Ap du ministre des Ressources naturelles
- Ziemba, Hon/L'hon Elaine (High Park-Swansea ND) Minister of Citizenship, minister responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

STANDING COMMITTEES/COMITÉS PERMANENTS

Administration of justice/Administration de la justice

Chair/Président: Vacant

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Mark Morrow

Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Jenny Carter, Robert Chiarelli, Mike Cooper, Derek Fletcher, Charles Harnick, Irene Mathysen, Gordon Mills, Jean Poirier, Gregory S. Sorbara, David Winninger

Clerk/Greffière: Lisa Freedman

Estimates/Budgets des dépenses

Chair/Président: Cameron Jackson

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Margaret Marland

Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Hans Daigeler, Mike Farnan, Paul R. Johnson, Wayne Lessard, Dalton McGuinty, Lyn McLeod, Lawrence O'Connor, Anthony Perruzza, Gary Wilson

Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Finance and economic affairs/

Finance et affaires économiques

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Kimble Sutherland

Members/Membres: David Christopherson, Norman Jamison, Monte Kwinter, Gerry Phillips, Norman W. Sterling, Chris Stockwell, Barbara Sullivan, Brad Ward, Margery Ward, Jim Wiseman

Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

General government/Affaires gouvernementales

Chair/Président: Remo Mancini

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Michael A. Brown

Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Gilles Bisson, Dennis Drainville, Margaret H. Harrington, George Mammoliti, Rosario Marchese, Bill Murdoch, Yvonne O'Neill, Ian G. Scott, David Turnbull

Clerk/Greffière: Deborah Deller

Government agencies/Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair/Président: Robert W. Runciman

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Allan K. McLean

Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Jenny Carter, Robert Frankford, Bernard Grandmaître, Pat Hayes, Rosario Marchese, Dalton McGuinty, Chris Stockwell, Daniel Waters, Jim Wiseman

Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Legislative Assembly/Assemblée législative

Chair/Président: Noel Duignan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Ellen MacKinnon

Members/Membres: Mike Cooper, Robert Frankford, Norman Jamison, Margaret Marland, Irene Mathysen, Carman McClelland, Gilles E. Morin, Hugh P. O'Neil, Stephen Owens, Noble Villeneuve

Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Ombudsman/Ombudsman

Chair/Président: Mark Morrow

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Drummond White

Members/Membres: Alvin Curling, Joan M. Fawcett, Christel Haeck, D. James Henderson, Peter Kormos, George Mammoliti, Bill Murdoch, Margery Ward, Paul Wessinger, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer

Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Public accounts/Comptes publics

Chair/Président: Robert V. Callahan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Dianne Poole

Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Sean G. Conway, W. Donald Cousens, Christel Haeck, Pat Hayes, Paul R. Johnson, Ellen MacKinnon, Lawrence O'Connor, David Tilson, Drummond White

Clerk/Greffière: Tannis Manikel

Regulations and private bills/

Règlements et projets de loi privés

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Lawrence O'Connor

Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Mike Farnan, Derek Fletcher, Leo Jordan, Ellen MacKinnon, Frank Miclash, Tony Ruprecht, John Sola, Kimble Sutherland, Drummond White, Jim Wilson

Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

Resources development/Développement des ressources

Chair/Président: Peter Kormos

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Daniel Waters

Members/Membres: Ted Arnott, John C. Cleary, George Dadamo, Bob Huget, Leo Jordan, Paul Klopp, Sharon Murdock, Steven Offer, David Ramsay, Len Wood

Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

Social development/Affaires sociales

Chair/Présidente: Elinor Caplan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Joseph Cordiano

Members/Membres: Charles Beer, Christel Haeck, Randy R. Hope, Gary Malkowski, Tony Martin, Lyn McLeod, Stephen Owens, Paul Wessinger, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer

Clerk/Greffière: Lynn Mellor

SELECT COMMITTEE/COMITÉ SPÉCIAL

Ontario in Confederation/

Rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération

Chair/Président: Dennis Drainville

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Gilles Bisson

Members/Membres: Jenny Carter, Alvin Curling, Ernie Eves, Charles Harnick, Margaret H. Harrington, Gary Malkowski, Irene Mathysen, Steven Offer, Yvonne O'Neill, David Winninger

Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

SPECIAL COMMITTEE/COMITÉ EXTRAORDINAIRE

Parliamentary precinct/Enceinte parlementaire

Co-Chair/Coprésident: David Warner

Co-Chair/Coprésident: Noel Duignan

Members/Membres: Dianne Cunningham, Remo Mancini, Kimble Sutherland

Clerk/Greffier: Smirle Forsyth

CONTENTS

Wednesday 25 September 1991

Members' statements

Hugh McDonald	2497
Mr Daigeler
Land registration	2497
Mr Jordan
Police services	2497
Mr Sutherland
Waterfowl hunting	2497
Mr Poirier
Nursing homes	2498
Mrs Witmer
United Way campaign	2498
Mr Hope
Ontario Hydro rates	2498
Mr McGuinty
Alternative fuels	2498
Mrs Marland
Canadian Football League	2499
Mr Morrow

Statements by the ministry

Alcohol and drug treatment	2499
Ms Lankin

Responses

Alcohol and drug treatment	2500
Mrs Sullivan
Mr Bradley
Mr Eves
Mr Harris
Expo 98	2501
Mr Ruprecht
Visitor	2501
The Speaker
Rent regulation	2501
Ms Akande
Visitor	2503
The Speaker

Oral questions

Budget	2502
Mr Elston
Mr Laughren
Rent review	2503
Mrs Marland
Ms Gigantes
Assisted housing	2505
Mr Harris
Ms Gigantes
Labour disputes	2505
Mr Offer
Mr Silipo
Labour legislation	2506
Mrs Witmer
Mr Mackenzie

Forest management	2506
Mr Martin
Mr Wildman
Ontario Hydro rates	2507
Mr Conway
Mr Laughren
Ontario Human Rights Commission	2507
Mr Cousens
Ms Ziemba
Assistance to farmers	2508
Mr Hansen
Mr Buchanan
Automobile insurance	2508
Mr Scott
Mr Charlton
Mr Tilson

Petitions

Landfill site	2510
Mr Beer
Health insurance	2510
Mrs Witmer
Taxation	2510
Mr Abel
Chronic fatigue and immune dysfunction syndrome	2510
Mr Carr

Reports by committees

Standing committee on government agencies	2510
Mr Runciman
Deemed adopted	2510

First readings

Provincial Budget and Fiscal Policies Referendum Act, 1991, Bill 138	2510
Mr Harris
Agreed to	2511

Second readings

Income Tax Amendment Act, 1991, Bill 83	2511
Ms Wark-Martyn	2511
Mr Cousens	2511
Mr Hope	2515
Mr Conway	2516
Mr Tilson	2516
Mr Mammoliti	2516
Mr Johnson	2516
Mr Bradley	2519
Mr Sutherland	2523
Mrs Sullivan	2523
Mr Phillips	2532
Mr Harris	2532
Mr Wessenger	2533
Adjourned	2533

Lists of members

Members and their responsibilities
Committees of the Legislative Assembly

TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Le mercredi 25 septembre 1991

Déclarations des députés

Chasse à la sauvagine	2497
M. Poirier

Première lecture

Loi de 1991 sur les référendums concernant les politiques fiscales et les budgets provinciaux, projet de loi 138	2510
M. Harris
Adoptée	2511

Deuxième lecture

Loi de 1991 modifiant la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu, projet de loi 83,	2511
M ^{me} Wark-Martyn	2511
Débat ajourné	2533

Listes des députés

Les députés et leurs responsabilités
Comités de l'Assemblée législative

59 1991

59 1991

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly of Ontario

First Session, 35th Parliament

Official Report of Debates (Hansard)

Thursday 26 September 1991

Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

Première session, 35^e législature

Journal des débats (Hansard)

Le jeudi 26 septembre 1991

Speaker
Honourable David Warner

Clerk
Claude L. DesRosiers

Président
L'honorable David Warner

Greffier
Claude L. DesRosiers

Table of Contents

Table of Contents for proceedings reported in this issue appears at the back, together with an alphabetical list of members of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at (416) 325-7400.

Table des matières

La table des matières des séances rapportées dans ce numéro se trouve à l'arrière de ce fascicule, ainsi qu'une liste alphabétique de députés de l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario.

Il existe un index cumulatif des numéros précédents. Les renseignements qu'il contient sont à votre disposition par téléphone auprès des employés de l'index du Journal des débats au (416) 325-7400.

Numbering of Hansard

Effective with the opening of the Second Session of the 35th Parliament, Hansard issues and pages will once again be numbered on a sessional basis. Hansard numbering therefore will become consistent with Orders and Notices and Votes and Proceedings, and with other parliamentary publications throughout Canada.

For the last two years Hansard has been numbered according to the calendar year. Under this system, the numbering of issues and pages was restarted with the first issue in the calendar year, regardless of session or Parliament.

Under the new system, the sequence of numbering started in January 1991 will end with the final House and committee sittings of the present First Session. A new sequence will begin on the opening day of the Second Session, and each succeeding session, which will be issue 1 and begin with page 1. Committee reports likewise will be numbered from the first sitting of each committee in a parliamentary session.

Numérotation du Journal des débats

A partir du début de la deuxième session de la 35^e législature, les pages et les numéros du Journal des débats seront de nouveau numérotés par session. La numérotation du Journal des débats correspondra donc à celle de Feuilleton et Avis et de Procès-verbaux, ainsi que celle des autres publications parlementaires au Canada.

Depuis deux ans, le Journal des débats était numéroté par année civile. Avec ce système, la numérotation des numéros et des pages recommençait au premier numéro de l'année civile, quelle que soit la session ou la législature.

Avec le nouveau système, la numérotation commencée en janvier 1991 s'arrêtera à la dernière séance de la Chambre et des comités de l'actuelle première session. Une nouvelle série commencera le jour de l'ouverture de la deuxième session et des sessions suivantes : numéro 1, page 1. Les rapports des comités seront également numérotés à partir de la première séance de chaque comité pour une session parlementaire donnée.

Subscriptions

Subscription information may be obtained from: Sessional Subscription Service, Publications Ontario, Ministry of Government Services, 5th Floor, 880 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 1N8. Phone (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 or toll-free 1 (800) 668-9938.

Abonnements

Pour les abonnements, veuillez prendre contact avec le Service d'abonnement parlementaire, Publications Ontario, ministère des Services gouvernementaux, 5^e étage, 880, rue Bay, Toronto (Ontario) M7A 1N8. Par téléphone : (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 ou, sans frais : 1 (800) 668-9938.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Thursday 26 September 1991

The House met at 1000.

Prayers.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BUSINESS

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN

Ms Harrington moved resolution 22:

That, in the opinion of this House, the time has come for a fundamental assessment of provincial policies and practices concerning violence against women, therefore the Office Responsible for Women's Issues should undertake a thorough review including: (1) the rights of people accused of assault to function in a manner that could be considered dangerous to members of society, (2) the causes of violence against women and how the legacy of violence can be stopped, (3) the effectiveness of education programs and how they can better serve victims of violence, and (4) the accessibility of shelters for battered women and the need for shelters in all communities.

The Acting Speaker (Mr Villeneuve): Pursuant to standing order 94(c)(i), the honourable member has 10 minutes for her presentation. Following the completion of the remarks of the member who has moved the motion, the debate will proceed with members of the various parties speaking in rotation. Each recognized party in the House is allotted a period of 15 minutes to debate the item of business. Debate will proceed in clockwise rotation among the parties until the time allotted to the parties has expired.

The mover of the motion may speak a second time during this period in the time provided for her party. The mover of the motion has two minutes in which to reply. The time remaining for each party and for the member who moves the motion to speak initially to the motion or reply to the debate will be indicated on the Legislature timer display.

Ms Harrington: Mr Speaker, I thank you for the opportunity to put forward this resolution to the House, which is both timely and far-reaching.

At the end of my presentation, I would ask the House for consent to omit clauses 1, 3 and 4 because, since this resolution was written last June, I have decided I want to deal basically with the big picture without focusing on specific parts of this.

This government was formed last October with a very strong mandate and a commitment for social change, equality and social justice. We have seen many examples of that over the past year. We have seen the rights and services for disabled people improved, self-determination for native people initiated, protection for tenants legislated and proposed labour reform has been started. I believe our agenda has moved ahead considerably. But even more than that, I believe that in one year there has been a significant change in attitude in Ontario and I really want that to continue.

If members remember back almost a year ago, in the throne speech we made a commitment as a government, and I will quote that exactly to you. It says the government will "deal resolutely with violence against women and children. It is time now for society to come face to face with this reality."

Now, one year later, I want to refocus that commitment. That is exactly why this resolution is here before us so that all of us, I hope on all sides of the House, can work together to make sure that goal is clearly accomplished. This past year has been a time of transition, and as we have said in this House, a time of coming to grips with very difficult economic realities. There are huge challenges and I would like to set this resolution in the context of what we face right now.

We as a government must evaluate and control the huge spending increases that have taken place in the last decade in health, education and social services. On top of that challenge, we have the massive restructuring of our manufacturing sector that is taking place around us whether we like it or not. The very heart of Ontario's economic machine is changing, and if that were not challenge enough we face a third challenge, Ontario's role in the new Constitution for Canada.

In these times of personal stress and economic strain everywhere in the province, we cannot leave out progress towards equality for women. Will it be seen as unimportant when the government's efforts must go to economic renewal? That is the question. Will women be seen as a drag on society or as a vital part of the economy in which they can help Ontario grow? I believe it is important, now more than ever, to bring women as full partners into the economic life of Ontario, so I would ask us all here to come to that face-to-face reality we talked about in the throne speech knowing that it is a very difficult, ugly and sensitive subject, that reality of violence against women.

I believe there are actually two realities, first of all, the reality of newspaper headlines which we all know about: 18-year-old Nina DeVilliers disappeared while jogging near her family's recreation club. The dismembered body of Burlington teenager Leslie Mahaffy was recovered encased in concrete from a lake. In January, 29-year-old Dr Carolyn Warrick was beaten to death virtually within view of security cameras in the basement of her Bay Street condominium building just one block from Queen's Park. I remember that night of January 27 because it is my son's birthday and I live in the building right next to Carolyn Warrick's. My family was visiting that night and we had ordered in Chinese food while she was being murdered.

There is another reality besides the headlines. The other reality is the one we do not hear about. Maude Barlow is a woman who speaks to many high school audiences about women's issues. One engaged teenage girl said to her, "My father beats my mother, my uncle beats my aunt, my grandfather beats my grandmother; I didn't know there was any other way."

1010

On an August holiday weekend in 1990, I went to the local police station with a young woman I will call Ruth to help her deal with a complaint against two police officers. We had to take along her six children who were under the age of eight. Her husband beats her. She has been forced to flee to the local women's shelter before. Although ordered to pay support by the court, he refuses to pay. The support and custody enforcement office has such a backlog that Ruth's file has been on record for five years and has not yet been processed. She is trapped in the welfare system in Ontario Housing. She is a victim of frequent violent assaults. She has no feeling of security from police protection.

What happened in this case is very similar to many other cases, and I would like to add that where Ruth lives, what has happened to her has affected many of her neighbours as well. Women have become demoralized, discouraged and rendered powerless because they are poor. They live in public housing because they are women. When women are victimized and powerless, they rarely fight back. In this particular case, she declined to take any further action on her own behalf to follow up on the complaint. These women simply endure.

I would put to this House that this is a waste of human resources. Besides, as everyone in this province will tell you, it is a drain on our tax system. What is violence against women? Let's just state it clearly: it is a soul-destroying subordination, a loss of control of one's life, a loss of dignity, a feeling of entrapment, and the horror of living with constant violence. In the first reality of the newspaper headlines, people can say these are just isolated cases of psychotic killers, but with a second reality we cannot say that.

I would like to close this portion of my remarks by looking at the lesson of Montreal. On the evening of December 6, 1989, students were given their end-of-term papers in a quiet classroom in École polytechnique. A killer separated 14 young women from the men, called them feminists and shot them.

Anger and grief followed across Canada. Canadians struggled for the meaning of this act. Is it symbolic and symptomatic of our society that it fears or possibly hates women? Is there misogyny in our society?

Here is one analysis by the Canadian Auto Workers. What if a gunman walked into the middle of a bargaining session, asked management to leave, called the others a bunch of workers and executed them? The question of political versus personal would not arise. In Montreal it is not simply a personal act of madness. We must examine our collective conscience about the attitudes of society and we, as the leaders of this government in this province and on all sides, must be the first to do it.

Sexism is a deeply rooted refusal to acknowledge value and incorporate women's reality into the philosophy, practice and organization of society. When women's perspectives are undervalued, then it is easy to have violence, injustice, exploitation and the silencing of women, if condoned. Let's have the courage to speak out against overt and covert sexism, starting with the simple jokes and pinups in the workplace and going all the way to the laws of this land.

Ms Poole: I am very pleased to rise today to support this sensitive and thoughtful resolution by the member for Niagara Falls. There are two reasons why I am delighted to speak to this resolution. One goes to the fact that I am the newly appointed critic for women's issues for the official opposition, but perhaps more important is the passion I have for this particular issue and our attempts to find resolutions to it.

As a woman and as a Liberal, I am particularly proud of the steps our party took while we were in government to change the public's perceptions about violence towards women. Because of that commitment, more and more people have finally realized that wife assault and sexual assault indeed are crimes.

I am sure all members remember the powerful TV commercials on wife assault that our government produced. These ads made it very clear that wife assault is not a private family matter; it involves all of us. There is no excuse for it and it is a crime.

In addition to the massive public education campaigns, we took concrete, immediate steps to help victims of wife assault. The decision to give priority status to victims of wife assault who apply for public housing is just one example.

In January 1990, we began an ambitious program to address the issue of sexual assault. Almost $30 million was allocated over five years to expand services to victims of sexual assault, to improve the justice system's response to the crime and to encourage public education and prevention.

I am delighted to see that this government today has expanded upon this commitment and that today $14 million is being committed to these programs. However, if one looks at $14 million in the context of the $52 billion we spend annually with our provincial budget, perhaps that puts it in perspective. No matter how much we do, there is much more left to be done.

I believe the extent of violence against women truly is one of the most serious challenges facing our society today. Women do not always think about the threat of violence as they go about their daily lives, but the threat is always there. Action to stop wife assault and sexual assault is crucial if women are to move towards full equality. If you cannot even feel safe in your home and in your community, where can you? How can you reach your full potential as a person when operating under these circumstances?

Rarely a day goes by that we do not hear reports of sexual and physical assaults against women and girls. Unfortunately, those assaults that we hear about are only the tip of the iceberg. According to one study, almost 87% of sexual assault victims do not report the crime to the police, and a further 12% tell no one at all. The crimes that we hear about actually make up only a small fraction of what is going on.

Most studies of this problem come up with the same finding. One in four women is sexually assaulted at some point in her life. Half of these women are assaulted before the age of 17. I find those statistics absolutely frightening, and to those people, those naysayers who think these are gross exaggerations, I say study after study is showing they are indeed facts. Every 17 minutes there is a sexual assault committed in Canada; 90% of the victims are female and 99% of the perpetrators are male.

The number of men who have been sexually assaulted is lower. Estimates vary from roughly one in five to one in seven. However, these assaults largely occur to males under the age of 13, to children. Women, on the other hand, are sexually assaulted at any age. In approximately 95% of the cases of sexual assault of men, the offender is also male. But regardless of the different rates of risk, the effects of sexual assault on female and male adults and on children are extremely serious and can be equally damaging.

Every woman in our society can be at risk of assault. Contrary to what most people think, there is no one type of woman who is assaulted. The vast majority of women who are assaulted suffer at the hands of somebody they know. In fact, at least one woman in eight in Canada, it is estimated, is assaulted by her husband or partner. What is truly appalling is the finding that a woman is hit by her husband or partner an average of 30 times before she even calls the police.

As shocking as these statistics are, it is easy to believe they do not really apply to anybody we know. But I think if we look closer to home, we will find that may not be true. We have 28 women members of this House. Think of it. According to most statistics, that means seven of us have been or will be sexually assaulted at some point in our lives.

1020

Violence against women is widespread and systemic. It cannot be solved by simply checking the offenders into alcohol treatment programs or group therapy or by instructing women in the art of self-defence. They are valuable tools, of course, but they do not get at the underlying reasons for violence.

I really welcome the resolution the member for Niagara Falls has put forward. It is time that we assessed and reviewed the policies we have put in place to see if they are truly effective and to see if they are really working.

For instance, take a look at the vast array of ministries involved in programs relating to violence against women and sexual assault. There is a myriad of programs, in the ministries of the Solicitor General, Health, Community and Social Services, the Office of Francophone Affairs, Northern Development and Mines, the Ontario women's directorate, the ministries of Education, Colleges and Universities and Correctional Services.

On the one hand I think it is extremely positive that so many ministries in our government have been taking steps to sensitize them to the problem and to make sure their ministries respond to it, but on the other hand perhaps it is time we assessed whether the interministerial approach should be re-evaluated. For example, the Ministry of the Solicitor General is currently responsible for 21 existing rape crisis and sexual assault centres. I have always wondered why this was the purview of the Solicitor General's office as opposed to Comsoc, and perhaps that is something we should be looking into.

I believe that item 2 of the resolution by the member for Niagara Falls points to the crux of the issue: What are the causes of violence against women and how can this legacy of violence be stopped? Looking after the immediate needs of victims obviously has to be of the highest priority, whether it means providing shelter, emergency assistance, counselling, legal assistance or helping the victim make a new start. However, the only way we can ultimately put a stop to the legacy of violence is to attack the problem at its source.

When I was preparing my notes for today, I tried to list the various reasons why men commit acts of violence against women. I think part of it is the sociological implications: how boys are raised; their attitudes towards having to be tough and macho; their affinity for bodily contact in sports such as football, hockey, boxing and wrestling. There is another thing that I believe; that is, that it is the reinforcement of traditional sexual stereotypes. When people say to me, "As a woman member you are making a fine role model for your daughter," I say, "Equally important to me is I hope I am making a fine role model for my son." That is where the hope really lies, with our children.

Excuse me; I have been battling a cold all week. This issue was of such importance to me that even if my voice sounds like a cross between Elmer Fudd and Bugs Bunny at times, I did want to speak to this.

There is a well-known song by Harry Chapin which some members may have heard of. It is called Why Little Girls Grow Crooked, Why Little Boys Grow Strong. There are a couple of lines in there that talk about how girls are taught to reach the shelves, boys to reach the stars, and how girls are taught to take the messages while the boys take the calls. I am glad to say that much of that is changing, but there is still a lot of work to do in that area. It all goes back to what the member for Niagara Falls referred to about the gender power imbalance and control. It goes to cultural attitudes; it goes to the increasing pressures in our society and how we cope with them.

Violence against women is a difficult issue for all of us, whether we are male or female, but one concern I have is that by its very nature it tends to polarize men and women. Just think about it: the victims are women and 99% of the perpetrators are men. My heart and sympathy go out to any woman or child who has been a victim of violence. I can understand why the trauma of a violent experience might make a woman who has been brutalized by one man distrustful of all men, but maybe the rest of us do not have that same excuse. There are things we can do.

It has been quite disconcerting to me that a number of men have approached me in the past months—these are men whom I consider to be allies for women in our fight for equality, very sensitive men who are the last to condone violence—and they are saying they feel like criminals. With the barrage of figures on sexual assault and violence against women, men are feeling increasingly vulnerable because some members of their gender are committing these crimes.

I have three stories I would like to relate to the members which I think illustrate the point.

The first is at a conference in Banff, Alberta, and the members may remember reading about this in the newspaper. A leading feminist from the United States was visiting, and in her remarks she said the ultimate way to deal with violence against women is, "If necessary, we will take to the streets with guns ourselves and shoot them down." I cannot condone that. Violence against violence is not solving the problem.

The second relates to the tragic massacre at École polytechnique in Montreal almost two years ago. There was a lot of grieving in the period following those massacres. Maybe I should say, first, that I am a feminist and I am proud to be so, but to me there was some shame in my heart when at some of these vigils women denied men the right to grieve with us.

The final story I have to tell would, I guess, be funny and humorous if it were not so sad. It relates to the program "Wife Assault is a Crime." I think the members will remember the ads several years ago—very effective, hard-hitting ads. Several of the ads were geared towards victims, and women as victims. At the end of the ad it would say: "Help is waiting for you. If you are a victim of sexual assault or wife assault, please call this 24-hour toll-free number and we will get help to you."

On the other hand, they had another set of ads that were geared to the perpetrators, the male offenders. The ad, in a very effective way, put across that wife assault is a crime. At the end of these ads, there was a statement, "If you are a male perpetrator and you need help, please write Queen's Park," and they gave the address. To me, it does not make any sense. You have an ad telling somebody that if they have done this they are a criminal, "but please write to us so that we can indict you with your own words."

My point, which I am not sure I am getting across, is that we have to look not only at the victims, which has to be a priority in dealing with this, but also at the perpetrators to make sure they get the counselling necessary so that these crimes do not recur. They cannot write Queen's Park. They need help as well.

My final point is that men and women must work together. It does not do for any of us, feminists or not, to blame all men as a sector. What we have to do is recognize the men—and many of them are in this House today—who have fought beside us, women, in our march towards equality. The important thing is to work together. When it all is said and done, the important thing is to solve the problem of violence against women.

Mrs Witmer: It is a pleasure to participate in the debate on the motion put forward by the member for Niagara Falls.

1030

It is absolutely essential that a thorough and complete review of this issue of violence against women be undertaken as soon as possible. I can assure members that this is a priority not only for myself but also for the PC caucus and for the members of the general public as well. Women and men—and I think it is extremely important that we do include the men—are more concerned than ever today about violence against women and they are more anxious than ever to stop this legacy of violence.

Indeed, in the recent Take Back the Night rally in Kitchener-Waterloo, approximately 500 women and children marched in the largest rally ever. They marched to express their outrage against sexual violence. The participants were as young as seven years old and as old as 72.

Why were there so many women and children at this rally? They indicated that they joined the march because the killings and the court decisions of this past summer left them feeling fed up. They indicated that they were there because they are angry. They can no longer walk on the streets of our cities and our towns without inordinate fear.

Yes, if you take a look at the polling, it shows that violence against women is uppermost in the minds of women. Violence and the fear of violence are depriving women of their ability to achieve equality in this country. It is a violation of a fundamental human right.

Although most violence against women has been invisible and unrecorded, the truth is slowly coming to light. The K-W sexual assault support centre received 221 crisis calls in the month of January this year.

However, the biggest problem still remains underreporting. Many women are afraid to go to the police because they feel the police response will be negative and that they will be further victimized by the courts. Fortunately these negative police attitudes are changing. However, more must continue to be done to increase the understanding of rape victims' needs and feelings.

Although the true numbers of women who are victims of violence may never be known, the estimates today paint a shocking picture in Canada. They indicate that over 90% of sexual assaults involve female victims. Did members know that 50% of women are afraid to go out after dark in their own neighbourhoods and at least one in four women will be sexually assaulted in her life?

Unfortunately it has consequences for the children, because children who witness the assault of their mothers have problems similar to children who are themselves physically abused, and sons of batterers are 10 times more likely to beat their wives than those who have not witnessed this behaviour. Unfortunately, violence breeds violence.

It is time, as the member has said, to examine the root causes of violence against women. There is presently very limited research on the underlying causes of violence against women. It is known that male abusers do grow up believing they are the ultimate authority in the household. They learn very early in life that to show any emotion whatsoever is a weakness. They are to be strong and aggressive.

As well, violence against women is linked to economic inequality between the sexes. The economic consequences of going out on their own have deterred many battered women from leaving an abusive partner. Women who leave an abusive situation often face the prospect of poverty. This must be eliminated.

This government must raise the profile of women's issues. It is of utmost importance to our caucus and we have tried on several occasions to introduce legislation that will assist victims of violence. It is unfortunate that our initiatives have been rejected.

This government must combat the attitudes and the stereotypes that encourage and excuse this senseless violence. They must ensure that the brutal people who commit these crimes are held accountable. They must provide help to the innocent victims.

Yes, I welcome this thorough review and this assessment of the provincial policies and the practices. Women cannot achieve equality in our society unless violence against women is eliminated, and I would encourage all men and women in this House and men and women throughout this province to join in that fight to truly, once and for all, eliminate violence against women.

Mr Mills: It is a pleasure for me to take part in this debate here this morning and perhaps offer a different perspective on it.

As some members may know, I spent over 20 years as a police officer in Canada and investigated and had the opportunity to look into many cases of violence against women. I remember the first time this unfortunate chore fell upon me was in the 1950s. In the 1950s we all had that chromium kitchen set. I remember going to this house, and I can see it in front of my eyes as I stand here today. This person had torn the legs off the chrome table and thrown them through the kitchen wall like darts. The lady had a huge lump on the side of her face.

In those days, we called those domestic disputes. The action for the police was, believe it or not, that we provided protective custody for the husband overnight, waiting for the victim to go in the morning before a justice of the peace to lay an information so that we could proceed in the courts with an assault case. But, as members know, the wives did not do that. They were frightened. They did not go forward because they knew that once they did that and the summons was issued, the man would be free to go home and beat the daylight out of his wife and she would leave and have nowhere to live.

Unfortunately that blight on society in the 1950s is also a blight on society in the 1990s. All forms of sexual assault against women, whether it be violence, whether it be sexual, whether it be degrading material or making women perform lewd acts, has got to stop. I think our government is really committed to doing that.

What bothers me most is that in these economic tough times, when we are looking at programs and where we can best spend our dollar, the government is committed to spending over $14 million in 1991-92 to educate people in what I consider is a basic obligation to treat other human beings in a respectful way. It is a sad measure of society when we have to spend all of this money to teach people to behave right. I think that is absolutely a sad measure of what goes on in Ontario today.

I could stand here and speak of the initiatives of the Solicitor General's office, and there are many. We have provided core funding for sexual assault centres. We have expanded 10 sexual assault centres. We have crisis counselling, diverse community outreach and regional sexual assault centres, and perhaps above all, we are trying to educate policemen in a way to respond to the needs of victims of violence, and particularly women. I know that the Ontario Police College at Aylmer now has a course specifically geared to educate police officers in this very delicate and sensitive issue.

I thank the member for Eglinton for her comments, particularly about the fact that she feels some of the things we do at the Solicitor General should be in Comsoc. I have some empathy with that decision, because it makes a great deal of sense to me. I would be pleased to take her concerns to the minister and maybe we can generate some discussion.

I could go on and on at length. I have a deep empathy with this situation through my experience, but in deference to my colleagues who also want to partake in this debate, I will leave it at that and thank the other members for their participation.

1040

The Acting Speaker: I believe the Liberal official opposition has used up all of its time. Further debate on behalf of the Progressive Conservative caucus?

Mr Jackson: Let me start my brief comments this morning by saying those who have watched the work I have done in this House for the last three sessions would be aware that this is the one issue which I have persistently and consistently been discussing before this House. I see the member for Cambridge is here. He is very much familiar with the four or five private member's resolutions I have tabled in this subject area.

What I am about to say may offend a few people, but I believe it with all my heart. If there were ever issues in this country and in this province that do not need studying, they are the issues contained in this resolution. Never before in the history of this province have we had a cabinet that had within its membership more people who understood at first hand this issue, and yet we are being told today that we need further study.

I could use up the next eight minutes just reading into Hansard the lists and the titles of all the studies that have been done on domestic violence, incestuous violence, violence against children, offences against women. Yet we are told today somehow that we need to study this. I can assure members that we do not need to study it on this side of the House, and I am at a complete loss today to understand why the cabinet of this Premier needs to study this issue.

I hope to lay out a couple of concerns with this resolution in terms of the kinds of things we are about to study, first, "the rights of people accused of assault to function in a manner that could be considered dangerous to members of society."

On the one hand, for example, we have heard a policy initiative from this government that Comsoc is considering opening up some of the regulations in the Young Offenders Act. Yet on the other hand, we know that we are putting back out on to the street violent criminals, even though the crime occurred at a juvenile stage, but they are now being released as adults. They get the right to reject any kind of therapy, any kind of support. We know that is a serious problem, and I raised the issue of the young lad who was released out into the community of Oakville and Burlington after murdering his entire family.

We are going to study "the causes of violence against women and how the legacy of violence can be stopped."

We had enough information on this whole subject. It has been the subject of two resolutions in this House in the last seven years that I have been here. I can tell members that when I was working with my colleague Richard Johnston, I put forward a resolution that in education we have to start reforming the program needs of children so that we do not develop inappropriate models for our children, because a lot of it is based on not only public through the media, but also through some of the educational programs that are in our schools.

We resolved two and a half years ago that the ministry had a 14th goal, that education develop an awareness of those stereotypes and assumptions that contribute to the unequal position of women in contemporary society, and I can tell members that when I have asked the subsequent Education ministers about the resolution I tabled, we have had no meaningful action on that agenda item.

Violence in our schools is a serious problem. Do we have a task force looking into that? We have received all the reports from the teachers' federations on this. It is occurring today in our schools.

We are going to look at "the effectiveness of educational programs." I appreciate the brutal honesty of the member for Eglinton to say how concerned she was that after spending some $2 million on advertising that hitting your wife is a crime in this province, you phone to get help, only to be put on hold. In this province, 10,000 women seeking help with shelters were denied access last year. Why do we need to advertise for them to pick up the phone? What we need is shelters, which is the fourth thing we are going to study, "the accessibility of shelters."

We have all the numbers. I can tell members that in my community the government told them to apply for a shelter. I have a letter on file, because I am going to use the M word. Theresa Greer, the executive director of Halton Women's Place, said this NDP government has misled them. There is a copy of the letter, and it is a matter of record that this government has been dancing around for over a year on a women's shelter for Burlington. In Burlington we are taking families from Peel, from Fergus, from Guelph and a few from Hamilton, and Burlington people and Oakville people cannot get inside their own shelter because of the backlog. We do not need to study this issue.

With regard to the area of court reforms, members are aware that I have been fighting to get Ontario to act. This is the last province in Canada to have a victims' bill of rights. All members of the House stood up and said they supported it in principle, but the NDP government decided, "No, we're not going to proceed with victims' rights."

A question on the Orders and Notices paper was just responded to by the Attorney General. It is unfortunate that the member for Rainy River is the Attorney General, because he tells us that at this time the ministry is not proposing to create a bill of rights for victims of crime in Ontario and he says there are limitations caused, in part, by insufficient resources. Is that not a crying shame? We cannot provide the badly needed support for these women and these children because we do not have the badly needed resources.

If it is not a priority, if violence against the person is not a priority for this government, it cannot be anybody's priority. We control the purse strings in this province. We are the only ones responsible for reforms, meaningful reforms, really changing things in this province, because we control the money. All the volunteer efforts in the world out there in the field are going nowhere unless we can provide those shelters.

That is why, as it has been stated earlier, it is our number one social policy concern. It has been for the last four years and it will continue to be, if you listen to those families or if you listen to a Franca Capretta. This woman had her husband grab her by the hair and take her out to her front lawn and beat her with a steel pipe. She spent more time in the intensive care unit of an Ottawa hospital than her husband spent behind bars. That is our criminal justice system in this province. Every province in this country and the national government have said the only way to change our criminal justice system is to set a victims' bill of rights into our Criminal Code, yet Ontario does not have the resources at this time.

The real tragedy is that we have one of the best cabinets to understand the needs of women we have ever seen in our history and yet we have second-class programs relative to the priority that is made in other provinces.

There are so many other things I wanted to mention. The victims' bill of rights is not going to be proceeded with during the term of this government. We will now be five years behind the last province that brought in victims' rights legislation. The Ontario Coalition of Rape Crisis Centres is concerned that this government has not seen fit to provide the stabilized core funding other provinces have given, because those centres should not live from hand to mouth for their funding every year.

Finally the member for Oakville South and I are here today to say simply that our communities are fed up with the idea of study. Our communities want reforms now. We have buried two young teenagers this year, Nina DeVilliers and Leslie Mahaffy, and our community has said enough is enough. All children are at risk, all women are at risk and we had better get on with the business of these reforms, not studying them.

Mr G. Wilson: I am certainly pleased to join this debate that has been initiated by my colleague and joined in by members from the other two parties. In particular, I want to mention the critic for women's issues, the member for Eglinton, for her very moving and factual account. She certainly raised a number of issues that lead to some insight into what we will need. The member for Waterloo North also raised some matters that will help us in our deliberations. The member for Burlington South certainly added an edge to the discussion at this point that I think is also needed and bears some looking at.

1050

I want to say first, from a personal perspective as a husband and the father of two young daughters, that I am certainly very aware of the concern about violence against women. It is a daily issue—the question of locked doors, for instance, and the safety of going to school and the concern about after-dark hours. It is closer to home in another way, in that I live in the building where Dr Carolyn Warrick, mentioned by my colleague, was murdered. That was a very gripping and tragic event that certainly focused the attention of all of us on the need to deal with this issue.

I agree with the member for Burlington South that our government is well positioned to offer a lot of leadership in this role. My colleague who was the Minister without Portfolio responsible for women's issues and who recently resigned, the member for Scarborough West, certainly showed a lot of leadership on this issue, based on a lot of experience. I know her support is still there. Certainly the minister now responsible for women's issues, the member for London Centre, will still have that kind of leadership.

I want to say, though, that the issue of money has always been a concern and it cannot be left entirely to governments. It depends on the organizations we have in the community that deal with shelters and counselling services. Certainly they have done it in the past, and with our help they will do it in the future. We all have to recognize the participation and the contribution they have made up to this point and that it has to be supported.

I want to look at something very definite, also from my own experience, and that is the role of unions in highlighting the issues of all workers in general but certainly women in particular. Through organizing, women are able to try to boost their economic security. It is certainly something mentioned by, I think, all three of the opposition members. I look forward to their support in helping unions organize, because if that is the route we want to take, and in my experience it has been a very real benefit, then we will want to see more women organized in unions to push for greater economic equality. But unions provide more than economic equality. They also provide a voice.

Looking at the issue, it certainly is one that is very deep. The member for Burlington South seems to think that after a year we should have this thing put on the shelf as being solved. It is deeply rooted in our society and it is part of the socialization of both boys and girls in our society to accept the roles that have been traditionally allotted to them. This is the thing we have to work against. Again, unions are very important in this role in fighting for the economic equality of women and also giving them a voice in fighting for the things they find important for our society—indeed that are important to both men and women—things like child care, pay equity and safety in the workplace and in the home.

Another point that should be raised is that trying to create a safer society for women—that is, the fight against violence against women that happens so often in the home and is disguised—by bringing it out into the open, in a way that is effective and that depends on women coming forward, can be accomplished through organizations, which can be not only the voluntary organizations in our community that governments can support but also through unions. I think that is another point in their favour.

Finally, by removing the threat of male violence against women, it not only helps society in that it relieves that burden on women, but it also brings men into the 20th century. It is a crime. It has to be recognized as such. It also frees them from that kind of mentality. With those remarks, I would like to turn the debate over to the other members.

Mr Owens: I am not going to say it is with any kind of pleasure that I stand up to address this issue today, because this issue brings me, and I am sure all members of this House, absolutely no pleasure.

I find myself in a very strange position today in that I have to agree with the member for Burlington South. We have the evidence. We know what the problems are. We need to start action.

Our government has been probably the most proactive of any government in the history of this country in terms of assigning money and going out to take action on this subject, but still, as the member for Burlington South mentioned, we have had to bury a Nina DeVilliers and we have had to bury a Leslie Mahaffy. This issue is not getting any better.

We as a Legislature have to start by setting an example that we have zero tolerance for this issue. The statistics that have been recited here and many more that we could talk about are absolutely appalling. One in four women will be sexually assaulted before they reach adolescence. To me, this is absolutely and completely appalling.

The one issue I will disagree with the member for Burlington South on is the need to construct shelters. I understand we have an acute need for a place for people to go at this point but I can assure him that by constructing more shelters, by constructing more rape crisis centres and not dealing with the root cause of the problem, we are simply institutionalizing violence against women. To me, that is inappropriate.

We need to get to the root cause of the problem and we need to deal with it. We have talked about two particular people today who have recently died at the hands of men. I am sure that later on this fall, when members of this Legislature attend the Ontario Association of Interval and Transition Houses lobby, this group will bring to our attention many more whose names have not made the paper.

Again, the bottom line is that we need to start looking at changes in laws. We need to take a look at the position of women in the criminal justice system, at how women are treated, and at how children are treated. Do we make this system accessible to these people?

This government is currently undertaking a witness protection program for children to encourage the reporting of abuse. We are undertaking a protocol that is modelled on a project conducted in Duluth, Minnesota, where perpetrators of violence against women are automatically charged. What has been found is that by charging people the rate of recidivism drops immensely.

As a legislator, and I am sure other members in this House share the feeling, when the Supreme Court of Canada released a decision dropping the rape shield defence, I was saddened, because no doubt not having this protection in place will certainly have a chilling effect on the reporting of sexual assault and sexual abuse.

In my mind there is absolutely no relevance in a person's sexual history prior to an assault taking place. It does not matter what the person was involved in prior to the assault. The fact is an assault has taken place. That is a criminal activity and any other evidence should not be a factor. This has unfortunately been dropped.

I read recently that people from the Canadian Civil Liberties Association are now backpedalling on their position that this was a good thing, that all civil liberties should be intact. Unfortunately, between the time the federal government can introduce legislation and get it passed, the numbers of victims who will have to pass through this process cannot be estimated and the amount of damage that will be caused is inestimable. Again, I refer to the chilling effect this kind of decision has on the reporting of assaults.

As the member for Scarborough Centre, I and a committee are working hard to establish a women's legal clinic to deal with victims of sexual assault, domestic violence and incest survivors, but again, the bottom line is that we can establish clinics all over the province, we can establish shelters all over the province, but until we deal with the systemic issues, the power relationships between men and women, this problem is going to continue.

1100

The Acting Speaker: The honourable member for Niagara Falls has two minutes to summarize.

Ms Harrington: First of all, I must say that this is not a resolution which asks for a study. This resolution wants an assessment of the provincial policies and their effectiveness. The ministries' programs now have a three-pronged approach: first, services such as counselling and shelters; second, work within the justice system to stop violence against women; and third, education and prevention programs. We want to assess those programs and see if they are working and see if we can do better. Whenever there is an educational program, the demands for counselling and shelter services escalate so quickly that we cannot meet the need.

For me, I want to reiterate how I feel and what has been said, I think, by one other speaker; that is, that it is a vicious cycle. In true reality this is it, the vicious cycle: violence against women makes women unequal in society, and because women are unequal in society there is violence against women. It just perpetuates itself. Inequality is shame, fear, guilt, powerlessness. It is a cycle that affects the richness of our lives, it affects the economic health of this province and it is ultimately passed on to the next generation. We all know that children witnessing violence become most likely users of violence.

In Niagara Falls we have a shelter and it has a button that says, "You can't beat a woman." Does that not sound nice? But in Canada you can; you can beat a woman, too often with impunity. You can beat a woman, and the police, if they charge you at all, will charge you reluctantly, very often, and you can do it again and again. Women who seek shelter go there after 35 assaults, usually.

I would just like to end by saying this is an issue of power in our society and control in our society, and violence is, I think, parallel to slavery in our society. It was accepted for thousands of years and it was abolished, I believe, if history is correct, in a few decades. Inequality of women, violence against women, has been accepted in part of our society for thousands of years. Surely this can be the decade when we do something about it.

EMPLOYEE WAGE PROTECTION

Mr Kwinter moved resolution 19:

That, in the opinion of this House, given the horrendous negative effect the policies and proposals of the New Democratic Party government have already had on the investment and job creation climate in Ontario, and given the deliberately antibusiness proposal by the federal Conservative government to introduce a payroll tax to fund its wage protection program, thus making successful workers and employers pay the costs for their unsuccessful counterparts, the present government of Ontario should at no time introduce a payroll tax as a means of funding the employee wage protection program.

The Acting Speaker: Pursuant to standing order 94, the honourable member has 10 minutes for his presentation and will have two minutes to wrap up.

Mr Kwinter: Events have overtaken this resolution in some respect. When this resolution was introduced into the order list, it was felt that this was a serious problem. Now it is a very critical problem. What we have is a situation where the heartland of Canada, the industrial heartland, the economic heartland, is under severe siege.

Many of these events are not of any one individual's particular doing or any one government's particular doing; it is accumulation of various global effects, things that are happening. But the impact is being felt in Ontario far more severely than anywhere else in Canada, and there is a very good reason for that, the reason being that we in Ontario are the manufacturing, business and financial centre of Canada.

Some of our colleagues across the country are not happy when they hear that. They think that somehow or other Ontario is boasting. It is not a boast, it is a fact: 42% of the economic activity in this country takes place in Ontario, the bulk of the manufacturing is here, 75% of all the securities traded on the Canadian stock exchange in total are traded in Toronto, and it is the home of five of the six major banks in Canada. Whether one likes it or not, this is where a great part of the economic activity in this country takes place.

Now, that is good news and it is bad news. The good news, of course, is that it has given Ontario a standard of living that is the highest in Canada. It is no secret that the engine—I do not mean this to be a pun—that drives the economy of Canada is the automotive industry, and most of it is located in Ontario. The spinoffs of that industry filter through small-town Ontario, because there are small machine shops, there are small suppliers, people who supply the automotive industry. That is where the well-paying jobs are, that is where we get the bulk of our export activity, and it is critical to Ontario's economic wellbeing.

What has happened to change that? The thing that has happened, of course, is that we are now into a global economy. Where traditionally our competition came from our neighbours to the south in the United States or from western Europe—the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Italy—that has changed. We certainly still get a great deal of competition from those areas, but there are new players emerging virtually every day.

Many of the members, and I have said this before, are old enough to remember that if they ever gave somebody something made in Japan, they would be embarrassed if he turned it over and it said, "Made in Japan." That was synonymous with cheap and shoddy goods. Now, of course, the Japanese have come on to the scene. They started out in electronics. They moved into the automotive sector, so much so that for the first time in history the number one selling automobile in the United States is the Honda Accord.

We have pressures from Taiwan, Thailand, Singapore, Hong Kong, Mexico, coming on the scene; Brazil, some of the eastern European countries. All of these things are bringing pressure to bear on our competitiveness. When we ask if we are competitive—unfortunately, there are those who think that is a buzzword. When we are trying to be productive or competitive, that is the buzzword for bashing labour. I want to suggest that has nothing to do with it at all. It is a fact of life.

You can rail to your heart's delight about the fact that you have to protect jobs, but you only have to protect jobs as long as those jobs are relevant, as long as they are producing things that can be sold. There is not much sense in producing something if it cannot be sold, and there is not much sense in producing something if it is overpriced so that in the global competition someone else is selling that product at equal quality but at better price, or at better quality and better price, which is also a possibility.

So my concern—and I do not want to single out this government alone, because I have to admit that when we were in government we fell into some of the same things. There is always an incredible demand for more service and more money. The easiest thing to do, and this is what disturbs me particularly from the government side, is to fall into the trap of feeling that business does not pay its share and saying, "Let's add this on because they have a responsibility."

1110

When I sat on the committee that toured the province listening to people's comments on the budget, I was quite disturbed at the number of people who appeared and said: "We've got to get the corporate welfare bums. We have all these corporations that are not paying any taxes and we've got to do something about it."

The misinformation among those people is frightening, because there is an attitude that business is out there just having a free ride, and it is not. They may not be paying any profit taxes if they are not making any profits, but they are paying taxes. They are paying workers' compensation taxes. They are paying dividend taxes. They are paying sales taxes, in many respects. They are paying employee health taxes. They are paying corporate concentration taxes. They are paying a wide range of taxes that help create the kind of infrastructure, support the kind of municipalities that look to these businesses, because without them, the tax base for their citizens would just be too onerous.

At the end of the day, some of them may make a profit and they will pay a tax on their profit. Others do not make a profit and they do not pay any tax. It is no different from an individual. If you do not earn a certain income, you do not pay any tax. What we have done consecutively over the last few years is, we keep increasing the number of people who do not pay that tax.

When we talk about an employee wage protection plan, I do not think there is anybody who would not argue that a person who works and earns an income should be entitled to have that income; no question about that. And if a company fails, there is a feeling that there should be some kind of wage protection plan to pay for it. The problem I have with that is the same problem I have with several other plans that are similar to that. What the government is doing is saying to the successful company, "You have to pay for the unsuccessful company."

We have the same thing exactly in two other areas. When you deposit money in a bank, we have the Canada Deposit Insurance Corp, and we also have in Ontario, in the credit unions, OSDIC, the Ontario Share and Deposit Insurance Corp. If you put $60,000 into your bank account, it is insured. If you exceed it, you are at risk. What happens is that the ones who have to pay the insurance for that are the big banks that in theory will never go bust. The chances of the Royal Bank of Canada going bankrupt, I would say, are quite remote.

Notwithstanding that, they must pay an insurance premium on every dollar they take in to pay for that. But who are the beneficiaries? They are some of the weaker institutions, the ones that are poorly funded, poorly managed, that go out of business, and the big banks have to pay for it.

We have a situation with the pension protection act as well where, if you have a pension plan, you must pay a certain amount of money into it to protect those people who have pensions, and if the company goes broke, it cannot pay for them. The problem we have with that is that it absolutely discourages people from taking pension plans, and we have a situation where most people do not have a pension plan. The reason for that is that companies will not do it because the cost is too onerous.

It is exactly the same thing with a payroll tax that is used to fund an employee wage protection package. What you have is another deterrent. It is another reason why someone will say, "I'm going to go to another jurisdiction. I'm going to set up in New York or Quebec or British Columbia or wherever," and I say that because of what I think is a very precarious situation, we are in severe danger of losing our competitiveness.

Mrs Witmer: I am pleased to see that the honourable member who introduced the motion this morning has been radically transformed and recognizes that payroll taxes such as the employer health tax are not appropriate.

Ever since the government introduced Bill 70, I have been extremely concerned that this program would eventually be funded by a payroll tax. Indeed, I am very afraid that this payroll tax is going to be introduced in next April's budget because it is in April of next year, 1992, that the first 18 months of Bill 70 end, and at that time, of course, the government does have the opportunity to make whatever changes it wishes if the legislation passes as it is. Certainly in questioning that I have done to both the Minister of Labour and the Treasurer in asking them about the prospect of a future payroll tax, neither the Treasurer nor the Minister of Labour has given me any assurance whatsoever that there will not be another tax imposed on employers in this province.

I feel that it is important to remind this government that payroll taxes—and this has certainly been well documented and well demonstrated in the past—do reduce our competitiveness. They do severely impair job creation, they do hurt economic growth and they do put a squeeze on small business, and we have to remember it is the small business community that creates most of the jobs in this province. Not only does it put a squeeze on small business; it also has a very punitive impact on businesses in this province. I believe that the current recession has clearly demonstrated that this government must not introduce a single new measure that will in any way, shape or form impair Ontario's competitiveness.

I think we need to remember that businesses in this province already sustain a much higher total tax burden than similar businesses located in Quebec and and British Columbia, so, "Why would you stay in this province?" is the question that many business people are asking today.

I am concerned that the cost of this fund is going to escalate because the average claim has escalated. In April they told us the average claim was $3,254, and in July we learned that the average claim was $4,200. Thus, in the future, businesses in this province may well be levied for an enhanced fund, because Bill 70 is going to give the minister the power to change the maximum amount of compensation and also the terms of the package without the need to bring the legislation back to the House for full public consultation and scrutiny.

I would like to share with members the concerns of some of the members of my community. This past week I had an opportunity to meet with the members of the Waterloo economic development strategy committee. We have many businesses in Waterloo and Kitchener that are failing and that are concerned about their future. There was one small business person there who employed 35 employees. They have enjoyed prosperity in this province. They are a high-tech industry that is continuing to grow. They now export 80% of their products abroad and are managing to compete globally.

However, because of the increase in taxation, this individual has indicated that any further expansion will be south of the border. I have to tell members this is a message that I am hearing from employers throughout this province. They are downsizing and they are not creating employment opportunities because they are very fearful of the economic climate and the increased possibility of taxation on the employer.

During the public hearings this past summer we heard some very grim testimony from many groups about the impact of Bill 70 and particularly the introduction of this payroll tax as a means of funding. I would like to share some of their concerns with members. Before I do that, I would like to add that I think it is extremely unfortunate that the NDP government, as a result of the public hearings, did not introduce a single substantive amendment.

1120

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association indicated to us that no employer tax or payroll tax be established to fund the program in the future. To do so would be detrimental to the economy of Ontario by making it even less competitive, resulting in fewer jobs for Ontario workers. Almost all jurisdictions with which we compete offer a far more competitive tax environment.

From the representative of Mother Parker's Foods Ltd: "You must realize that another payroll tax would send a great deal more small businesses straight into bankruptcy and put even more individuals out of work."

From the More Jobs Coalition: "We would like to state that the More Jobs Coalition is firmly opposed to any initiative which would add an additional payroll tax on the already heavy burdens employers must bear."

From the Ontario Chamber of Commerce: "No employer taxes should be introduced to cover the cost of payments made in accordance with the bill. These are social benefits that should be drawn from the consolidated revenue fund."

From the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada: "We cannot support financing the program by means of a flat payroll or corporations tax. Clearly any additional cost of doing business will negatively affect the industry's ability to compete in the North American marketplace."

From Steve Yeoman, Bates and McKeown: "In the aftermath of the GST and the employer health tax and the Ontario budget deficit, small business in the province of Ontario cannot afford another tax."

These are the types of comments that we heard this summer, and there is one from the Information Technology Association of Canada: "A payroll tax will drop with a thud on the scales when weighing in against the investment case for Ontario. You should recognize that it is not only the cost of doing business in a given environment that investors will measure."

Finally, from the Canadian Federation of Independent Business: "The regressive character of payroll taxes makes them much more burdensome to the small business community than to large corporations."

As the Premier rightly noted when he was Leader of the Opposition and criticizing the then government's decision to impose the employer health tax on the province's employers in lieu of OHIP premiums, "Payroll taxes are a tax on small business and a tax on jobs." It is obvious that the Premier no longer considers that to be the case, but he did indicate that payroll taxes are a tax on small business and a tax on jobs, and we would certainly concur with that statement.

In conclusion, I would urge this government to reject the introduction of the payroll tax. I would remind them that we no longer have a healthy tax advantage here in the province of Ontario. I would remind them of the 32 tax increases that were introduced by the Liberals, including the EHT.

At a time when there is economic insecurity, at a time when we have many people throughout this province suffering great hardship because of lost jobs and at a time when the neighbours to the south of us are actively recruiting businesses and encouraging them to move, I would encourage the members of this government to do everything they possibly can to stem this tide. I would urge them to focus their efforts on the creation of jobs and doing everything possible to do so. I do not see this happening.

I can assure them that another payroll tax is going to create more hardship. It is going to contribute to more job losses for workers. Unfortunately it is going to be the final nail in the coffin for the businesses that are presently struggling to survive in the very uncertain economic climate that has been created in this province.

Ms S. Murdock: What was interesting so far in what I have been hearing is that it seems as if this payroll tax is already in place and a fait accompli, which it is not. I would like that clearly on the record. There is no doubt that the funding of the employee wage protection program seems to be a topic of great concern. It was during the hearings this summer and it obviously still is this morning and again this afternoon, when we debate Bill 70.

Throughout the public hearings and in the written submissions that the committee received, groups expressed their views as to who should pay, and the options presented by all groups that appeared before us were basically only three. One, of course, was that we leave the situation as it exists now, presently, in a status quo and workers who have earned wages and benefits, not social benefits but actual wage benefits and other benefits that they have earned, do not get paid. For us that was not an option. We are not willing to do nothing.

The second option that was presented to us by most of the groups was basically that we do what the federal government is doing. Anything that the Conservatives in Ottawa are doing is not something that we would generally follow anyway, but certainly taxing the employer or taxing solvent businesses to pay for their unsuccessful counterparts was not the way that we thought we should go at a time of recession. It is true that businesses, as has been so eloquently stated by the members opposite, are overburdened at this time. Our general feeling and our sense of responsibility is that we cannot go with in that option, certainly while the province of Ontario is in such hard times.

The third option we had presented, and this was in the employee wage protection program, was the consolidated revenue fund paying for it. In that instance, the arguments that we got in committee this summer were basically why should the taxpayer pay for employers who have gone out of business or who have left the province willingly and it is not fair that the taxpayers should pay that.

If we listen to all of those arguments then it ends up that we are back where we started again. No one is paying. The employer who has gone bankrupt or who has left is not paying the worker whose wages have been earned. If we do not take it from the consolidated revenue fund and we do not do a payroll tax, then the worker is the one who is penalized. Interestingly many felt, from all sides, and that is both management and labour, that taxpayers should not be responsible for the debts incurred by a few, and yet all agree that the workers should not be penalized. There was no one who said that people who earned money and worked for it should not be paid what they were owed. Generally the feeling was that successful employers should not be penalized either.

Right now the plan is that the program will be funded by general revenues, and the member for Waterloo North certainly has said that as of April 1992 that 18-month funding program is going to be completed and a decision will have to be made. There are no plans to impose a payroll tax. I should make that very clear; there are no plans. That is not to say it is not going to happen, but this resolution today is, I think, very presumptuous, because in no way could I agree to make such a decision as suggested in this resolution in the bottom line, that the "government of Ontario should at no time introduce a payroll tax as a means of funding the employee wage protection program."

Personally, I think it would hamstring any future decisions made by the Treasurer, even though the amount of the payroll tax for the employee wage protection program would in all likelihood, at least by our estimation, be almost infinitesimal and be impractical as to standing by itself. The method of payment to workers is either by the fund or a tax and either one of those is not a decision for me alone to make, nor should we have to do this in terms of a future basis.

My personal recommendation—I said this in committee so I am not speaking out of turn—is not to go by way of increased taxes. I have no difficulty in stating that, but as we have learned only too well in the past year, you never say never. That is what this resolution is asking me to do. I would not presume to do that.

I thank members for allowing me to make that statement.

1130

Mr Phillips: I am pleased to join the debate and support my colleague's resolution. I was struck earlier this week when the Premier, I think in the very first piece of business when the House came back, said, "Renewing our economy must be the central focus of our work as a province." I very much agree with that. I think all of us have to work towards that.

The problem I think people in the business community have as they watch us proceed with this is that our actions often speak louder than our words. The very first thing that happened was the Treasurer saying that our spending is essentially out of control. "Out of control" may be strong words, but essentially out of control. Not our revenue. The stuff that the business community out there is generating seems to be coming in on track, but it is our spending that is out of control.

The business community that is struggling mightily—believe me, it is tough out there, as we all know—says, “My gosh, as we are trying to cut our expenditures, keep ourselves alive, somehow or other the government’s spending is out of control.” We will hear more about that next week, but that is one thing they worry about.

The second thing they worry about is just taxes. Here we have, with the wage protection fund, the threat—the previous member from the government said, “We are not planning it at this time.” That worries business. “At this time” worries them. As they are looking ahead at where they are going to invest, how much confidence they are going to have, that is another cloud on the horizon, “not at this time.”

Certainly, as they look at that threat, they look at hydro rates going up 12% this year, and the announcement from Ontario Hydro is it will be 12% the following year and then another 12%. That is like a 40% increase in hydro rates. To a business person trying to survive in this economy, my gosh, that is frightening.

It is not just this that they worry about; it is the collection of it. The Treasurer has said in his budget, “We are going to have to raise taxes substantially.” As a matter of fact, he says, “We are going to have to raise taxes at the rate of about $5 billion, new taxes, in order just to keep our deficit at about the $8-billion level.” For the business community that is unbelievable: $5 billion of new taxes.

I know the government members often say, “We’ll just tax the corporations, these rich, fat corporations.” Let me tell members two things. One is that if we look at the federal government’s Fiscal Monitor, here is what it says: “In the first quarter of 1991, corporate profits were 65% below their pre-recession peak and nearly 50% below the same quarter in 1990. As a result, corporate tax collections declined 24.9% in the first quarter of this year.”

The second thing I would say about corporate taxes is that we think there is a lot of money there. What per cent of the provincial revenues do members think comes from corporate taxes right now? It is about $3 billion of about $45 billion. It is a relatively small part. There is not a huge windfall available in increasing corporate taxes. I know it sounds neat, but there is not a huge windfall to be found in increasing corporate taxes.

That is the first point I wanted to make. The business community, looking ahead at how it is going to invest, create jobs, create the kind of economic activity we are looking at, is extremely frightened. They partially welcomed the Premier’s opening remarks this week about focusing on the economy. Then they look and see what we are doing—spending out of control; $5 billion of new taxes coming on the horizon; the fact that corporate taxes are already falling on them substantially; a hydro rate increase of at least 12% this year and 12% for the foreseeable future—and they are worried.

My colleague, in his resolution, pointed out the economic morass we are in right now, and we all know that, but I was looking just the other day at the plant closures, not plant closures that have taken place in the past but the plant closures that are planned. As members all know, the Ministry of Labour produces these statistics. Here we have two pages of what are called complete closures. These are not downsizing, these are not partial closures, but complete closures coming. Why are they coming? Because businesses in this province are having difficulty competing in the new global economy.

If members want to deny that we are going to have to compete globally, they are living in the past. We are now in the real world. As a province and as a country, we are going to have to compete globally. This is testimony that our industry is having trouble competing globally, and a payroll tax would simply add to that.

The third thing I would say is that the unemployment rate continues to be unacceptable. We have heard from the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology that he is creating new jobs, yet we see these layoffs occurring. We see the unemployment for the month of August. We have in this province right now 525,000 people unemployed. That is up dramatically, as I think all of us know, from a year ago. A year ago, Ontario had the lowest unemployment rate in the country. Now every single province in the west has a lower unemployment rate than Ontario does. What is happening? We are not having the economic renewal in this province that we require.

I very much support the resolution my colleague has put forward. I think all of us must recognize that the economy is in serious difficulty. There are the things the province is doing right now: spending out of control, the threat of substantial new taxes coming in the future, the lack of an economic program. As a matter of fact, in the first year of this government, the Ministry of Industry, Trade and Technology did not announce one single proposal that would increase employment in the province. I waited patiently for the minister to get up in his place and say, “Today we have reached some sort of an agreement between the union and the company” to do this and to do that. Not one announcement of new jobs and new job creation in the province.

We are at, I think, a crisis. That may not be too strong a word. We have a government that has no economic plan, and as my colleague said, the thought of adding another tax to an already very burdened business community would just drive another nail in the coffin.

I appreciate the opportunity to bring my thoughts to the debate.

Mr Carr: I am pleased to participate in the debate. I am going to start off by apologizing to my friend who moved the motion, because I am going to be fairly critical of both him and the government he was a part of.

I think the member mentioned earlier in his comments that they fell into the same trap. I say to him that the previous government, which he was a part of, did not fall into the trap; it jumped in with both feet when it comes to taxes. From being a province that was taken from medium in terms of taxes, they made us the most heavily-taxed province in Canada, the most heavily-taxed jurisdiction in all of North America.

I say to my friend again, because he may have been speaking at the cabinet table, that the cabinet decisions that came out, where he sat, were a big part of the reason we are in this predicament right now. They introduced 33 new taxes during their period of time. They taxed people who were in business. They taxed individuals. They taxed everybody. Anything that moved in this province over the last five years, they taxed, and as if that was not bad enough, even though they taxed them, if they did not tax them to death, they regulated them to death.

1140

The member sat at the cabinet table. I suspect if the truth were known, he was probably fighting for business and industry, but the fact is that in the results that came out of a government he was a part of, they were the worst offenders of all the provinces in Canada.

In my own area, 500 jobs were lost at Tridon. My colleague the member for Burlington South and myself met with the Canadian Auto Workers. We sat down with them. They said: "We had a good relationship with the company. We tried to help to control costs." The company said, "We had a great relationship with the workers." The thing that they said cost those jobs, the final straw, was the employer health tax. Five hundred jobs were lost in Burlington and Oakville as a direct result of a tax levied by the Liberal government of the day. The member who introduced this motion was part of the cabinet, around the cabinet table, and part of the decision that cost well over 500 people jobs in my riding.

When the debate started, all the things came out and they said it was the free trade agreement, and it was this and that. Both sides, both the union and the president of the company, said it was the employer health tax that was the final straw. I sat down with them and said: "Why don't you come out and say it to this new government of the day? Why don't you come out and say that it was the employer health tax?" He looked at me and he said: "Gary, I would do that. Even though we're selling back into this marketplace and corporate relations are very important, I would do that if you honestly and truly believed this government would listen to me." I sat there and I could not tell him he could.

As a result, with all the reasons about why the company left that are out there, all the misconceptions, the employer health tax which the Liberals introduced had a direct result in the loss of 500 jobs in my riding.

That is why I am a little bit sensitive about what is happening when this government then introduces a resolution and talks about employer payroll tax funding. That is why there is cynicism out there in the public, because people who sit around the cabinet table have direct authority. Then when they are out of government, they tell you what you should be doing. What we need are people who are a little more consistent in their application. Again, I do not want to be too critical of the member, because I think if the truth were known he was probably fighting very hard but, unfortunately, if you are a cabinet minister you have to live by the results that come out of those discussions. I am very critical of that.

I was reading through some of the material last night from the Ontario Chamber of Commerce. It has put together resolutions, about 111 pages, very easy to read. They talk about everything, including the environment. As members know, the chamber has about 65,000 members, 165 boards, and has been around since 1911. One of the statements it makes on page 65 is that it does not believe any of the funding for the wage protection fund should come from another payroll tax. I would encourage those members who are going around the province saying, "We're listening to business, we're listening," to read page 65 of the report. That might be very helpful in other matters as well, because it is very important material of what business is saying about some of these taxes.

What we need to do is address the problem of the job losses, not have the short-term fixes of trying to find money to assist workers. What we need to do is have long-term plans that will probably be implemented down the road and will keep the jobs for the people of the province. That is what the people wanted. I support it, but I think it is a very cynical motion by a party that is very cynical.

Mr Johnson: I, too, unfortunately am plagued with a cold that many of the members have, and I hope my voice does not fail me.

I have to say right at the beginning that I cannot support this resolution because I do not think we would want to make it an absolute that the Treasurer could not at some point in time—although we know that at this time it is not necessary—levy a tax that may or may not be understood to be a payroll tax. Because of that, I just cannot agree with this resolution.

The member made some interesting comments at the beginning of his remarks. It is true that in the world, a global economy is taking effect and having a disastrous effect on the province of Ontario. It is true, maybe because of its geographic location, maybe because of its population, that Ontario is a dominant factor in the economy of Canada.

As the global economy grows, I think we have to look at what kind of effects this is going to have on Ontario. A global economy in theory is probably not a bad thing, except that many things are not constant. For example, in other areas of the world, they do not have environmental laws and environmental protection like we have here in Canada or in Ontario. They do not have the health or safety factors taken into consideration for their employees. We know these things are costly to some degree. We also know that wages in other areas of the world are considerably lower than they are in this province. Ontario is a great place to live. We have many social benefits. I think we have, if not the highest, one of the highest standards of living in the world.

The member for Wilson Heights also mentioned a theory—I am not sure it is entirely his—that jobs should exist if they are relevant, and if they are not relevant they should not be here. Of course, that brings to my mind a concern for the farmers in Ontario, because he mentioned that if you worked for a reason that was viable, that was a good purpose for employment and that would make the job relevant. Well, certainly in the global scheme of things, we see that the farmers in Ontario are suffering because of the global economy, because prices are down, because in other areas of the world they can produce their produce much less expensively or at much less cost than we do here in Ontario. Although in theory I understand what the member was getting at, I think that if practised completely we would have no farmers in Ontario. We would be importing all our food, and I think it is really important that we supply our own people with our own produce. I guess there is a cost involved in that.

The "horrendous negative effect the policies and proposals of the New Democratic Party government have"—I find that a little offensive. I find it offensive because at this time, a year after we have been in government, as a result of many things, not the fact that we have been in government for a year—I cannot help but speak about the free trade agreement and other things this government had no effect on. If businesses are leaving Ontario to go to the United States, which seems to be a comment heard often in this House, I think it has a lot to do with the global economy and the free trade agreement.

The suggestion that the free trade agreement was going to make a more level playing field for business, I do not think has been true. In fact, as a result of the global economy and the free trade agreement, we see many businesses leaving to areas of the world, in particular the United States, where they think they are going to have advantages and may in fact have advantages, so they are leaving. But that is not the fault of the government.

Certainly the net result is these moves have created some problems the government has to deal with, that is, the job losses we have and the fact that business is leaving. We have to look at these problems very seriously and try to do some things that will help the people who are unemployed, help the business. We have to deal with business, most certainly. We have to talk with business and we have to do things that will encourage them to stay.

I want to say again that the global economy and the global marketplace, which we are becoming involved in, are unfortunately having very negative effects on Ontario. Therein lies the problem, not the fact that we are the government. These things started some time last year, and there has been a snowball effect. It has just carried on and we have seen more and more businesses leave.

I also want to say that in the actual statement of the resolution, I find some things there offensive.

I want to conclude by saying, as another member said, that as it would be a kind of tie to the Treasurer, never being able to introduce a tax that either would be perceived as a payroll tax or would be a payroll tax, I certainly cannot agree with this resolution.

1150

Mr Mahoney: I am delighted to rise in support of my colleague the former Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology on this very well-thought-out resolution and to suggest that it is not premature at all, as has been suggested, because the reality is that we believe, frankly, that the decision has already been made.

The honourable members opposite might find it somewhat of a surprise to be sitting on the back benches and not being told by the Treasurer or the Premier or the cabinet what their long-range plans are, but the first year in government would seem to indicate, to me at least and I think to the public, that all of the decisions in relation to the future decisions of this government are made out of the corner office by one person, who then simply dictates what should happen.

I want to take a moment to congratulate the member for Wilson Heights. I know, as his former parliamentary assistant and as the advocate for small business in this province while I was with his office, that he did indeed fight, as one of the members said, at the cabinet table and in caucus and everywhere in this province on behalf of business. I think business had a sense, as long as the member for Wilson Heights was in that job, that it had a champion who understood its problems and who was prepared to go to bat for it. Unfortunately, that cannot be said of the current government.

We had a minister who was asleep at the switch for an entire year. He has now been replaced by another minister, and I hear that the travel agents who book all the flights out of MITT got extremely excited when they heard the member for Etobicoke-Rexdale was now going to be booking all the trips for MITT, because we all know that the member for Etobicoke-Rexdale certainly is a citizen of the world. I think the travel agents recognize that their business and their fortunes shot up dramatically with the Premier's announcement.

I want to say why this motion is so important. The decision has already been made to fund this program with some form of employer health tax. There is absolutely no question, so members should not be shocked when the Treasurer walks into their caucus room in the not-too-distant future and says: "I've got a can for you to carry. I've got a message for you to take back to your constituents, and it is that we're going to fund Bill 70"—in all its ramifications and its 107 new employees at an annual cost of some $5 million to implement NDP policy—"on the backs of the business community through an employer health tax." There is absolutely no question that is going to happen to the members.

But the real problem they have to face and understand is that an atmosphere of fear and mistrust has been created out there. Regardless of what the honourable member from the third party would like to say about the record, he should take a look in the mirror and take a look at nationalization of things like Suncor, Minaki Lodge and many other things before he throws stones. I, for one, do not think the public in this province wants to go back to the days of the pink Tories, who thought they could solve all problems by taking taxpayers' money and buying corporations.

But I will say this: There is real fear out there. Those members, those men and women, can shout at me all they want, but the reality is that businesses are going down the highway and leaving this province in record numbers. If the members want to tax them, they had better tell the Treasurer to hurry up, because there will not be any left to tax. There will not be any left. They are leaving because of fear and mistrust of this government.

The real issue here is, how do you protect jobs? That is really what we are talking about.

Interjection.

Mr Mahoney: The member's opinion of how to protect jobs is to pass legislation that says, "Your job shall be protected." That is the mentality—

Mr Sutherland: No.

Mr Mahoney: It is, I say to the member for Oxford, it is the mentality of socialism in his party.

His Premier gets up and says, "We've got to deal with business." I just heard the honourable member say, "We want to support business." They do not believe the government, and everything it has done up to date, I say to the honourable member for Cambridge, would indicate that they have no reason to believe it.

The government can talk in those terms. The Premier can get up and open his arms wide. He can go and speak to the chambers of commerce and pretend he understands their difficulties, but they know different. What he understands is that he has all the government members snapping at his heels, saying: "We want more for this and more for that. We want you to spend here and spend there. We don't want you to build roads for logging, or do we?" I am getting mixed messages all over the place. "We don't want you to put in an employer tax, a payroll tax for this," yet we think that is going to happen.

I understand. It must be a riot to be in the government's caucus room on Tuesday mornings, because I am sure the battles are very fascinating. I do not know if the Premier still sits through all of that. I would think he is probably too busy. As he does not even come into the Legislature any more, I doubt he spends a whole lot of time in caucus.

The Premier has government members buffaloed. He has them thinking that life is good in a Bob Rae Ontario. He has them thinking that everything is going to work itself out.

Let me give government members some numbers. In Bob Rae's Ontario we have had 31,787 permanent and indefinite layoffs just in 1990 alone. In 1991 the figure already is 15,320. What do we see happening? They do not understand. If you want to support the worker, then you have to ensure that the company can survive. If the company goes out of business, where is the worker going to get a paycheck?

Mr Sutherland: No kidding.

Mr Mahoney: The member does not understand that. The New Democrats think that the way is to give more power to the unions, to give more authority to the unions to take over. That might be true in Kapuskasing where the business is gone. I do not know what they are going to do with Algoma where the business is gone. Believe me, the real secret here is to allow a company to open its doors on Monday morning and make a profit on Friday afternoon, but I know the word "profit" is not in their vocabulary.

I beg government members at caucus to fight the Premier and the Treasurer. They have already made the decision to bring in a payroll tax. Government members should fight it. It is the only hope for this province.

Mr Klopp: To the honourable member for Wilson Heights, I apologize for not being here for his whole debate. There were other pressing issues I had to deal with, being on the government side now and trying to correct a lot of things that have slipped over the years.

In fact, one of the problems I had with this whole motion today was that it seemed so hypothetical, assuming there is a decision already made and talking about the future. It has been stated by the minister that this payroll tax, if there ever is a payroll tax, is not going to be put in place for the first year or so, or whether it even will be done at all.

But with all the problems, as my honourable colleague mentioned, with the farm situation, to have to come here today to speak on this issue, I think there are better kettles of fish to fry. However, it is the opposition's day and it wants to bring this up. That is their job.

Hearing some of the comments this morning that we are scaring away jobs, that we are hostile to business, if business people read this today from the opposition, and I am sure it will get passed around, they are going to say, "Oh golly, this government must be doing that," and the first thing they are going to do is go back to the notes they had, those who showed up at our committee meetings, where it was said very clearly that no decision has been made on that and there will be consulting if any changes are made to it.

1200

I heard some comments from other members that we do not get listened to in caucus, that the decision is already made. I guess they are basing that on how they ran their government. All I can say is, if that is how they ran their government, that is the way they did it. I feel sorry for them.

Mr Lessard: That's why they're on that side of the room.

Mr Klopp: Maybe that is why they are on that side of the room. Maybe they will learn from it. We have learned every day since we have been here. We are also big enough to consult and even to change our position on things, which we have done. But to hear the comments that the decision has already been made and that is why we have to hurry up with this motion just does not hold water.

I do not think the people out in Ontario appreciate this kind of debate, because there are more important things to talk about, like farm issues, like the fact that the wage protection bill should be passed. One of the arguments is that it creates a problem for business. I do not think it does. I think, in fact, business, especially when it gets so high up in some areas, does not look at a lot of factors. One of the factors is that if workers are laid off and they do not get their money, then they do not go to the bank and pay their bills, or that money does not get flowed into the system, which creates more problems.

I support the wage protection bill. I cannot support this motion at this time because it is unnecessary.

Mr Kwinter: I want to thank all the members of all parties who participated in this debate. I want to clarify a situation that I detect from the comments that were made by the government side. Thursday mornings are private members' business. Private members can bring in any bill they want to, and they debate it. It is not an opposition day per se. It is private members. The members can agree or disagree with what I have to say, but they are not debating with us as the government and them as the opposition, or vice versa. I think it is important.

But I also think it is important to know that this is a very serious matter. The heckling that comes from the other side, and I noticed it in conversations we have had in the hearings, is that they always pick out one person who is supporting them, and that is their model, whether it be a James Frank or a Siemens. They say, "What about them?" But the point is, what about all the others?

We have an article in the paper today talking about, "Ford Boss Slams NDP Labour Policies: 'Potential Disaster.'" That is another signal going out, not by some political hack but by the president of a major automobile corporation, who is saying there are problems. All that is happening is that when the member for Sudbury stands up and says, "Well, we certainly can't tax the people for it, we certainly can't tax the workers," that really means the decision has been made. The decision has been made that, when it comes down, we are going to have to tax those businesses that are still in business. That is what I object to and that is what I feel is going to create a situation where we are going to lose more and more business in Ontario and also impact on our competitiveness.

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN

Ms Harrington: I would ask the House at this time for unanimous consent to amend the resolution, as I explained in my introduction, by deleting sections 1, 3 and 4. What I explained was that since last June, when this resolution was originally written, I have decided to deal not with specifics but with the whole question of violence against women.

The Acting Speaker: The member for Niagara Falls has requested that her resolution be amended by deleting sections 1, 3 and 4. The member will be aware that standing order 94(j), under the heading "Private Members' Public Business," states, "No amendment may be made to a motion under this standing order." I will therefore determine if we have the unanimous consent of this House to allow these deletions or these amendments. Do we have unanimous consent?

Agreed to.

Motion agreed to.

1210

EMPLOYEE WAGE PROTECTION

The House divided on Mr Kwinter's motion, which was negatived on the following vote:

Ayes—25

Beer, Bradley, Brown, Callahan, Caplan, Carr, Cousens, Cunningham, Curling, Harnick, Jordan, Kwinter, Mahoney, Marland, McLean, Murdoch, B., Offer, O'Neill, Y., Phillips, G., Poole, Sterling, Tilson, Turnbull, Wilson, J., Witmer.

Nays—27

Carter, Christopherson, Cooper, Drainville, Farnan, Frankford, Harrington, Hope, Huget, Johnson, Klopp, Lessard, Malkowski, Martin, Mathysen, Mills, Morrow, Murdock, S., O'Connor, Owens, Waters, Wessinger, White, Wilson, G., Winner, Wiseman, Wood.

The House recessed at 1216.

AFTERNOON SITTING

The House resumed at 1330.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

ARMENIAN INDEPENDENCE

Mrs Caplan: The 20,000 members of the Armenian community in Metropolitan Toronto, many of whom live in my riding of Oriole, have been closely watching the political events in their homeland. Last Saturday, September 21, 1991, they witnessed an historic achievement when citizens of the Soviet Republic of Armenia voted overwhelmingly in favour of independence from the Soviet Union. This is the first time in its 71-year history that a referendum on the question of independence was held.

On Monday of this week, as a result of the referendum, the Parliament of Armenia declared independence. Armenian leaders will now be negotiating a new arrangement on defence, foreign policy and monetary matters with the Council of Presidents of other independent countries.

Armenian Canadians are jubilant and justifiably proud of this first step towards self-determination. They are anxious to learn even more. Mr Aris Babikian, from the riding of Oriole, will soon be travelling to Armenia to see at first hand what independence will mean. He will be reporting back to the Armenian community in Metropolitan Toronto.

I know I speak for all the residents of the riding of Oriole and probably on behalf of all of the constituents in Ontario and members of this House when I say that we extend our best wishes to the people of Armenia for a prosperous and peaceful future.

WELLESLEY FESTIVAL

Mrs Witmer: I would like to take this opportunity to inform the members of this House of a very important event that is happening in my community this weekend, and that is the Wellesley Apple Butter and Cheese Festival. This is an annual event in celebration of the excellent apple and cheese products that are produced in the Wellesley area.

The day-long festival includes such events as a pancake and sausage breakfast, a farmers' market where apple butter, apples, cheese and baked goods can be purchased, apple butter and cider mill tours, craft demonstrations, a horseshoe tournament, a model boat regatta, antique car and tractor displays as well as a quilt auction. There are also many activities for the children. This festival has always been a highlight for our family and especially my own daughter, who has grown very fond of the apple fritters one can purchase there.

I would like to take this opportunity to extend a very warm welcome and an invitation to all members in this House to come to Wellesley this Saturday to join us in the festivities and to take home with them some of the exceptional cheese and apple products.

MEALS ON WHEELS

Mr Mills: As members may know, this week is being recognized across Ontario as Meals on Wheels Week. It gives us all a chance to pay tribute to the thousands of volunteers across Ontario who give up some of their free time each week to help their neighbours. In my riding of Durham East, the town of Newcastle is this week paying tribute to its volunteers. There are 11 Meals on Wheels routes running through Newcastle, Newtonville, Mitchell Corners and the hamlet of Orono, where I make my home.

People on these routes depend on 150 volunteers to bring them hot, nutritious lunches three times a week. Meals on Wheels gives us a chance to recognize the contribution being made by those unsung heroes, who for 52 weeks of every year quietly make a real difference in the lives of people around them.

I stand in the Legislature today to thank publicly all those volunteers in the Newcastle area and across the province who participate in this program, and I ask all members to join with me in extending a warm "Well done."

COMMERCIAL FISHING

Mr Brown: I rise in the House today not to point blame or take sides, but rather to call for co-operation and communication. Not everyone thinks of the north channel of Lake Huron as a commercial fishing location, but let me assure the members that it is. One commercial fisherman, Mr Brian Nyman, had his nets lifted by members of the Sagamok first nation. The nets were returned later. He is obviously concerned about the implications of these actions and is not satisfied with the answers he has received from the Ministry of Natural Resources staff.

He has attempted to communicate with the minister responsible for native affairs, the Minister of Natural Resources and his member of this Legislature, the member for Algoma, without success. We confirmed this morning that he has made approximately one dozen calls to the member for Algoma and his concerns have yet to be dealt with. One member of his staff accepted a call from Mr Nyman over a week ago, but has yet to respond.

The minister and this House must realize that a potentially unpleasant situation is developing along the north channel. This situation can be defused by the minister communicating with the parties involved. The minister must do whatever he can do to foster a better understanding and greater co-operation before this situation gets out of hand.

MEALS ON WHEELS

Mr Turnbull: As my colleague from across the floor has already pointed out, September 22 to 28 has been proclaimed Meals on Wheels Week across Ontario. During this special week we are reminded of the thousands of elderly, convalescent and handicapped people who rely on hot and nutritious meals delivered daily to their homes by many dedicated volunteers. Without this service, many of the recipients would not be able to stay in their homes alone but would need to move into institutions. This would place an extra demand on our already overcrowded care facilities.

Meals on Wheels has been operating in this province for almost 30 years. Based on current statistics, in one year in Ontario 43,000 volunteers delivered over two million meals to 66,000 recipients. We are all aware that the numbers of seniors in our communities will continue to grow in the years ahead and the provision of adequate and appropriate home support service such as Meals on Wheels will become increasingly vital to our society.

Meals on Wheels Week is a time to acknowledge the contribution of many volunteers who make this regular commitment to helping others less fortunate than themselves. Without the time, energy and caring of these thousands of volunteers, it would be impossible to provide Meals on Wheels and many other equivalent important programs. They deserve our appreciation and thanks. Yesterday I rode with those people and helped deliver to houses, and it is indeed a wonderful service that seniors can do to help other seniors.

PURCHASE OF HYDRO PLANT

Mr Wood: It gives me great pleasure and a sense of satisfaction to know that the workers at Spruce Falls ratified on September 7, 1991, the new employee Tembec 60-40 ownership plan by a vote of 87%. The Premier and the Minister of Northern Development and Mines and I spent many hours and days consulting with the former owners of the business, Ontario Hydro, labour and municipalities to reach this agreement, which will save up to 800 jobs in Kapuskasing and surrounding areas.

The deal provides money for modernization of the mill, which will provide for the economic stability of the region for the future and create 150 construction jobs. This historic agreement is an example of how the government is listening to the people of the north in providing creative, workable solutions to the problems we face. By working co-operatively with all the stakeholders, I know our government will continue to listen to all the interests and carry on the strong, decisive leadership that it has shown in the past for future economic renewal in the north.

1340

MEALS ON WHEELS

Mrs Fawcett: As has already been mentioned by two of my colleagues, we are grateful to the Meals on Wheels program in Ontario. This community program provides any individual who would otherwise do without with a nutritious, well-prepared meal and a valuable social contact. In my riding of Northumberland, for instance, these meals are delivered by volunteers who are seniors. Great pride is taken in helping those less fortunate than themselves. Their contribution is both meaningful and appreciated. This program is co-ordinated through organizations such as Cobourg and District Senior Services, Brighton Meal on Wheels, Port Hope Red Cross and Campbellford and Colborne Community Care.

Recently I have noticed TV ads promoting the Ontario Lottery Corp and the community support programs to which they provide funding. One ad shows a person receiving a meal from a Meals on Wheels volunteer. Meals on Wheels is funded in part by the Ontario Lottery Corp through the Trillium Foundation.

This foundation provided Meals on Wheels with $34,500 for the fiscal year 1990-91. However, in that same year the Ontario Lottery Corp spent $187,400 in the production of this particular ad. That figure does not even include the cost of airing the ad. It is a colossal mismanagement of taxpayers' funds to pay five times more money to promote a grant than the actual amount of the grant. This government must look at integrating Meals on Wheels with its long-term care proposal.

HEALTH PROFESSIONS

Mr J. Wilson: The Coalition of Unregulated Practitioners, an organization encompassing thousands of unregulated practitioners, is extremely concerned with the regulated health professions legislation. The concern centres around what is known as the diagnosis clause.

Under this government's legislation, it will soon become a serious criminal offence, with a jail term or a fine of $25,000, for anyone except medical doctors, psychologists and a few other regulated health professionals to communicate a diagnosis identifying a disease or a disorder.

As Canon Bob Cuyler of the Coalition of Churches pointed out at the press conference here this morning, "Often when a responsible pastoral counsellor, social worker, chaplain, parole officer, etc, gives an answer to the question 'What is wrong with me?' the answer involves identifying a disorder as the cause of symptoms."

It is more than just a little ironic that just over a year ago the NDP was sponsoring the coalition's press conferences, and now the coalition complains that it cannot even get the ear of the minister and that it has not entered into meaningful dialogue with this government.

The Minister of Health believes that the courts will rule in favour of unregulated professionals. This matter should not have to go to the courts. Unregulated professionals should not have to spend exorbitant amounts of money in our court system to correct this government's mistakes. Passing a piece of legislation riddled with holes does not and should not fall under the Minister of Health's job description. I would like the minister to bring forward amendments to correct these injustices.

FALL FAIRS

Mr Sutherland: As we are all aware, this has been a tough year on the agricultural sector and on many rural communities, but I rise today to give credit to the many wonderful volunteers who work for agricultural societies in our province and who of course are the main sponsors of many of the fall fairs.

As we know, fall fairs instil a great sense of community pride as they have the people come together, both the many volunteers who help organize them and the many people who participate in the many events, whether it is displaying the products they produce, garden produce or corn, or the many calf- and cattle-showing displays that occur at fall fairs. They give many people in small communities, particularly rural communities, a great sense of community pride.

I want to encourage all those members who have not attended one yet—I am sure most have—to try to get out to some of the few that still have not occurred, and I extend congratulations to those many dedicated people in agricultural societies across this province and the many in my own riding who have provided so much entertainment and sense of community for so many years.

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY

POLLUTION CONTROL

Hon Mrs Grier: Today I would like to bring the Legislature up to date on the latest developments in the province's water protection program.

I am pleased to announce that the Municipal-Industrial Strategy for Abatement: Issues Resolution Process—Final Report is now available from the Ministry of the Environment. This report establishes the principles of our program to prevent and control industrial discharges into our waterways. We will now use these principles to move into the most important stage of the municipal-industrial strategy for abatement program. In consultation with industry, environmental groups and others, my ministry will establish regulations to limit industrial discharges into Ontario's water.

For the last several months, ministry staff and I have been evaluating the MISA program, where it is working and where improvements are needed. We want to ensure that MISA: (1) reflects the government's environmental priorities and aligns with other environmental initiatives; (2) contributes to significant reductions in total chemical loadings on the environment; (3) promotes behaviour compatible with environmental values such as conservation, stewardship and efficiency; (4) contributes to the government's priority of economic renewal and the greening of industry.

As with all our programs, consultation has been central to the establishment of procedures and criteria to be used for MISA regulation development. During the past two years, ministry staff have reviewed submissions from a wide range of interested parties, including municipalities, environmental groups, industry and academia.

The report I am tabling today incorporates our decisions on these submissions and sets out the pollution prevention and control measures we will take to achieve the goal of virtual elimination of specific persistent toxic contaminants from discharges to Ontario waterways.

We will: (1) set effluent limits for a list of sector-specific contaminants; (2) prohibit effluent which kills fish; (3) establish a zero-discharge list of specific persistent toxic substances; (4) require industry to establish reduction targets for other toxic contaminants which although not targeted for elimination, need to be reduced to the lowest possible levels.

In the first phase of the MISA program, monitoring regulations were designed for nine industrial sectors encompassing more than 300 direct discharging industries. The monitoring for all nine sectors was completed in August 1991. The results of 12 months of monitoring for the petroleum sector were released in July 1990, and the six-month monitoring results for the pulp and paper sector were released in February 1991.

I am also releasing today the results of the second six months of monitoring in the pulp and paper sector and the 12-month monitoring report from the iron and steel sector. We anticipate that the results from the remaining five sectors will be released by the end of this year.

The findings of the monitoring phase confirmed the need for a review of the MISA program principles. In the Issues Resolution Process document, we have resolved 16 outstanding issues. These solutions will serve as the framework for developing limits regulations under MISA. While most of these issues are highly technical, we intend to incorporate three overriding principles which signal a significant shift in policy for the Ministry of the Environment.

This government is committed to:

1. Pollution prevention: This means we must focus industry's energy on getting things right at the beginning instead of attempting to fix them at the end. End-of-pipe solutions have, by and large, only resulted in increasingly onerous burdens on the public purse for cleanup dollars.

Prevention means that industry must overcome its reliance on end-of-pipe technology, introduce closed-loop systems within plants to prevent the discharge of contaminants into the environment, substitute raw materials to avoid the generation of harmful byproducts or waste, and introduce process changes and redesign products to minimize the amount and degree of hazard in the waste stream.

2. Stopping the transfer of pollutants from one environmental medium to another: We recognize that we live in a closed ecosystem in which activity in one environmental medium can influence quality in another. For example, water pollution is caused not only by direct discharges, but also indirectly when airborne contaminants, such as acid rain, fall in our lakes and rivers or when leaking industrial landfills and the spreading of toxic sludge affect our groundwater reservoirs.

3. The third principle is zero discharge of specific persistent toxic chemicals. As part of our pollution prevention strategy, we are adopting a zero-discharge approach to achieve the virtual elimination of the most persistent toxic contaminants. This means we are developing a list of specific persistent toxic chemicals to be banned from the discharges of all facilities regulated by the MISA program. The revised MISA will contain the requirement that the effluent must be non-toxic to fish.

I am pleased to say that we are improving the MISA program in a manner consistent with our overall environmental policy and with our commitment to involve all stakeholders—business, industry, labour, environmental groups and the general public—in developing strong, consistent and meaningful environmental regulations.

We are now entering the phase where, based upon the definitions in our Issues Resolution Process document, we will consult with all affected parties to design regulations on an industrial sector-by-sector basis that prevent and limit discharges. Our initial focus is on the more than 300 direct discharging industries, with the municipal sector to follow.

We are hopeful that by the spring of 1992 we will have draft regulations for several industrial sectors available for broad public review. We look forward to co-operation from all members of society as we move to prevent further toxic contamination in Ontario's waterways.

This government believes that environmental health and economic health go hand in hand. An effective MISA program will not only protect Ontario's waterways for all who depend on them, but it will also stimulate economic growth in the pollution prevention business and keep our industries competitive. Our waterways are a precious resource which must be preserved for our children and future generations. This next stage of MISA, with its shift in direction towards pollution prevention, will help ensure that we leave to them a legacy we can be proud of.

1350

TVONTARIO

Hon Mrs Haslam: In May, the government instructed the Provincial Auditor to undertake a special audit of the Ontario Educational Communications Authority, TVOntario.

Today I have received a copy of this audit. It is now being reviewed to ensure that it meets Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act requirements. Following that review, I will make the audit available immediately to my colleagues the member for Etobicoke-Humber and the member for Mississauga South. It will also be available to any others upon request.

TVO is an important cultural institution in Ontario. Its health and effectiveness is of utmost importance to this government. TVO is an integral part of the province's educational system and furthers the development of Canadian culture.

My officials and I will be reviewing this report in the coming days. I intend to come back to this House after a thorough review of the report and outline what steps TVO and my ministry will undertake to address this audit.

I want to take this opportunity to reiterate this government's unequivocal support of TVO, its mandate and programming. We value the institution and believe it is important to the people of Ontario.

RESPONSES

POLLUTION CONTROL

Mrs Sullivan: I am pleased to respond to the statement from the Minister of the Environment relating to the MISA program. The unfortunate thing about this statement is that it is approximately one year behind when it should have been made, and I suggest it is one year behind because the minister has become the minister of garbage and has left the key issues of water pollution control behind.

In doing that, she has created uncertainty in industrial and municipal sectors. Capital investment programs have been postponed or set aside while the minister has fiddled and faddled with words on these whole issues.

Last November, regulations for the petroleum refining sector should have been in place. They are not here. This fall, regulations for the pulp and paper sector should have been in place. They are not here. Where are these things in her announcement and when can we expect them?

In her postponement of decisions on these issues, I want to ask the minister, how many tons of toxic pollutants have been poured into Ontario waterways while the minister has sat on her butt? In opposition, the minister said the process must be speeded up. What we have seen from her is a little change from the Mackenzie King routine of postpone, postpone, abstain; we have seen postpone, postpone, postpone.

Where are the process changes she will require? What process changes will she require? What is her timetable? What will be her consultative process? Who has she talked to, other than her own bureaucrats, on these issues?

I suggest that there has been no formal review process since that which was established by the previous Minister of the Environment, which ended in June 1990. There has been no formal change in terms of consultation on these issues since this minister came into office.

If the minister's real aim is pollution prevention, where is her list of banned chemicals? There was a distinct promise from the Premier of Ontario about organochlorines from the pulp and paper sector. There is no mention here of that matter. Surely to goodness that could have been identified in this statement today.

Without action, what we are seeing from this minister is a minister who is stealing language from the environmentalists for headlines only, and no action. Where is the emphasis on bioaccumulation? We have not seen that. The minister talks about pollution prevention.

There is nothing here, and she is far too late in terms of dealing with these issues, in coming to terms with an appropriate consultative process and in getting things done.

TVONTARIO

Mr Bradley: I have read the statement of the Minister of Culture and Communications, and it is a non-statement, so we will not have any response to it.

Mrs Marland: I am responding to the statement from the Minister of Culture and Communications. I appreciate the promptness with which she has brought her information to the House today and that she is going to share immediately the report of the auditor. Obviously this is a very serious matter to all members of this House and I appreciate the fact that the minister understands that. I appreciate her co-operation.

I think it is very important that although this question hangs over TVOntario, based on the information that was given to an all-party legislative committee in a public forum, apart from what will be available through the auditor's report, the future of TVOntario is very important to the people of this province. This television programming provides an excellent and unique service to the people of this province and it is very necessary as an educational service. Frankly it needs our support to survive this present crisis of confidence so that it can continue to provide outstanding educational broadcasting services to the people of Ontario.

I respect the fact that the report should be cleared through the existing provisions of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, and we look forward to clearing up the whole situation one way or another as soon as possible.

POLLUTION CONTROL

Mr Cousens: The Minister of the Environment has forgotten the days when she was in opposition and would mount her high podium and shout down the government whenever it was late with a regulation or whenever it did anything that was not right. Now, after one year in office, she has forgotten all the lessons she tried to teach someone else.

This today is an admission of failure from a Minister of the Environment who has become a classic ditherer. Mr Speaker, is "ditherer" a parliamentary word? I would not want to offend any members here, except if I offend the minister and cause her to begin to react in a realistic way about the MISA regulations. Then we will have done something from the opposition, because no one seems to be able to move her. She is dithering.

She comes along to the House today and says she is doing something when she has nothing to report, absolutely nothing. Regulations as they affect refineries and pulp and paper: Nothing has happened. She is dithering. The minister is spending her time very usefully, I suppose, in her own mind, working on the garbage dumps. I wish she had some solutions there, but she is not dealing with the water problems. Since she has come to office, there is not one less gram or one less ounce of pollution going into the waterways because she has not done anything about it. It is continuing to accumulate and the minister has not acted on it.

I am getting excited about what is going on, because nothing is happening. If the people of Ontario want to believe the window dressing, God bless them, because if they want to believe the words this minister gives—the words are high-sounding, they sound as if she means it, but the actions do not bespeak what she is doing.

1400

The minister says, "Our waterways are a precious resource." We all know that. "They must be preserved for our children." We all know that. But the minister is now in a position of responsibility. When she had a chance to complain about it, she complained; she was the best complainer. That is why she got promoted. But now that she is there, she has lost the art of complaining. Instead, the minister has become the one who pats someone on the head and gives them a banana. What she needs to do is start getting out there and putting the regulations in place. Let the municipalities know what they have to do, let industry know what it has to do.

The minister says, "We are going to do something about grey water." Yes, it is a problem, but there is nothing close to MISA. Come on. MISA regulations need to come out, and the minister should not begin to think she is doing the job until she has made those regulations clear to everybody. They are not public. She probably has not even thought about it. She did when she was in opposition. Now that she is in power, she is failing.

To call the minister a ditherer is to be complimentary, but for the other words I have, the Speaker would have been down my throat saying, "You are not being parliamentary." But by not coming forward with true solutions, the Minister of the Environment is not being responsible. To come today and make this statement is truly an admission of failure by the present Minister of the Environment, and I suggest that the Premier have a second look at what she is not doing.

Hon Mr Rae: I believe there is an understanding between the parties that I will make a statement today with respect to the Constitution, one that will parallel the written statement which I have released but will not be an exact replication of it. I think there has been an agreement that we will share time in this regard and give the opposition leaders a chance to respond.

The Speaker: Do we have unanimous consent?

Agreed to.

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY

CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM

RÉFORME CONSTITUTIONNELLE

Hon Mr Rae: I want to make a statement to the House today about the Constitution and, as has been the practice over the last several years, want to take the opportunity to speak not only directly to the members of the House but to the people of the province and even beyond about the current situation.

I think it is fair to say that following the failure of the Meech Lake accord, the country went into a time of reflection and into a time when a number of provinces and a number of people have put forward a number of positions with respect to constitutional reform.

Our own government, this House, this assembly, has participated in that period of the presentation of positions. I think it is fair to say that period is now over and that we now face, over the next several months, the most extraordinary challenge, not of simply taking positions or of arguing from a fixed standpoint. We are now entering a very different period, one in which we must strive, all of us, to reach a national consensus and understanding that includes all Canadians and that is reflective of the greatness that is Canada.

I say this because I think it is important for us to start this time with the recognition that we are, all of us, going to have to struggle for this consensus. It is going to involve decisions that will have to be made by this House, by this government and by this Premier about the most effective way in which we can build a consensus. It is going to involve us listening and learning and understanding that change on everyone's part is going to be part of reaching a bargain. There can be no new national contract, no new deal for Canada, without that sense of compromise and without the sense that in fact we are now building to a national consensus.

Perhaps it is appropriate—I will do this before I turn to some of my more prepared remarks—that we start with some very basic questions.

What is this country called Canada? First we have the land, the land that has captured the imagination of everyone who has lived and visited here. If I could just quote the words of the poet A.J.M. Smith, who wrote in The Lonely Land:

This is a beauty of dissonance,
This resonance of stony strand,
This smoky cry curled over a black pine,
Like a broken and wind-battered branch
When the wind bends the tops of the pines
And curdles the sky from the north,
This is the beauty of strength,
Broken by strength and still strong.

I have found in every conversation I have had with Canadians that when we talk of our affection for Canada, in a sense we start with our affection for the land. That affection is one which we share with every Canadian and which we share as a common value.

Then, when we talk of this country, we talk of the people. We talk of the first citizens, people who have lived here for thousands of years—thousands, not hundreds or a few decades, but thousands—and whose relationship to the land and whose relationship to this country called Canada has yet to receive the recognition in our Constitution that it deserves. For us to understand the tension and the feelings of the first citizens of Canada, we have to appreciate their perspective, as they have seen generation after generation of immigrant and settler come and share this land with them, and their position in the land has yet to receive the full recognition it deserves.

The first to come after those who had been here for thousands of years were the people we call les Canadiens: their home on the shores of the St Lawrence, their home in New Brunswick, their home in this province which is now called Ontario, their culture and civilization, their civil code, their values, their society, again, stemming so strongly from the history of this country and built into the experience of hundreds of years. There were battles and wars fought by rival empires for supremacy over this land, but whatever may have happened, the culture and civilization, the society whose centre is found in the province of Quebec, has been a distinctive characteristic and feature of our country.

We have been through this debate. We have shared this question of the words “distinct society.” We have had the exchanges on all sides. I just want to say to members that it was the view of this House just a few short years ago, in its vast majority, that we were prepared to recognize and we understood the importance of recognizing Quebec as a distinct society within Canada, within the Canadian federation. I want to say to the people of this province and to the people of Quebec that we recognize the distinctiveness. We recognize that Quebec has a distinct place in our federation with respect to its language and culture.

1410

Nous reconnaissons, avec un sens profond de fraternité envers la province de Québec et la population franco-ontarienne, l'importance de la présence de cette culture, de cette société unique et distincte dans notre Canada. En la reconnaissant, nous n'enlevons rien de notre propre identité. À mon avis, c'est une des choses uniques de notre pays, de notre cher Canada, le fait qu'on peut reconnaître la personnalité d'un autre et qu'on peut reconnaître les différences, dans les traditions et dans les expériences, en même temps que nous acceptons avec joie le fait qu'on est tous des Canadiens, que nous avons une terre à partager, une histoire partagée, une expérience partagée et un partenariat qui, à mon avis, est inévitable.

The partnership between Canadians has a certain inevitability about it. We ought to recognize that fact and we ought to recognize that the value of success in these constitutional negotiations so far outweighs any alternative, so far outweighs any possible alternative, that we cannot possibly fail. We cannot allow ourselves to fail in this event.

Les Canadiens and our first citizens were joined over our history by people from all over the world: Loyalists coming from the United States seeking a different culture, a different society, a different set of values—peace, order and good government—immigrants who have come from all over the world, and we are all of us in one way, shape or form the sons and daughters, the children of all those people who have come here and who have lived here. And this is the society we are building together.

We are building a multiracial, a multicultural society. We are building a society that is multicultural and multiracial with its unique relationship to this land which we treasure. We are recognizing what is distinct and unique about us as Canadians, about what has made us different.

We have a Constitution, we have a country, because it is an expression of our common values as a people and it is a way for us to provide the framework, the institutions, the houses that we live in, both metaphorically and in real terms.

Why do we have these institutions and this government? Why do we have a Constitution? For some very simple reasons: to allow us to be ourselves, whoever we are; most fundamentally, to allow ourselves, our personalities, our identities, to be affirmed in our relationships with other people. That is what a Constitution must do. If a Constitution does not allow a citizen to say, “I see myself in that mirror,” a Constitution is not doing the job it needs to do.

What is so crucial in this recognition of the dignity of others and in our sense of mutual recognition of the dignity we owe one another is that we can do that and take nothing from ourselves. I lose nothing as the grandson of immigrants to this country in saying I recognize the unique characteristics of Quebec and I recognize the importance of the French fact in Canadian life. That takes nothing away from me. It takes nothing away from my children. In fact, it adds to their inheritance and to their culture and to their values in the future.

Members should think of what we are creating when our children can take as much pride in the success and in the quality of life and in the values and traditions of the native citizens of Canada as they can in their own. That is not taking anything away from us. We do not have to live in a society where everyone has to be the same or think the same or look the same. What is unique and great about this country is that we can affirm the dignity of others with a spirit of generosity and take nothing away from ourselves. That is the self-confidence we must have.

A country and a Constitution have to allow us to work and to create wealth and to make our way in the world, and so all the talk about the economic union and all the talk about how the Constitution and the real country have to work economically is important. It is not irrelevant. It is important. It is vital. I believe the Constitution has to allow us to take care of each other. That is a very important part of living in a community. Yes, we work for ourselves. Yes, we want to do well in the world. Yes, there is nothing wrong with that. It is important. It is vital. It is crucial. It is a critical basis for any society.

But we have to be prepared and understand and recognize that we get sick and we get hurt and we need to provide for one another when that happens. One of the features of our society, one of the things that has made us unique in relation to other countries around us, to the United States just south of our border, is that we have decided to create a society in which we care for ourselves in a different way. When we made Canada, we were not only making it in terms of the experience of the people who have come here; we made a decision to create a country here and not to join some other country, to make a country ourselves. That is what we have done.

I say those things because as we get into the more technical aspects of the discussion so many things get lost in the works. We begin to argue about whether this clause should go here or there. Everyone in the House knows what the next few months are going to be like. Should the phrase be here or should the phrase be there? Should this clause be here or should this clause be there? We start to get overwhelmed with the technicalities of this discussion. I think it is important that we start from some very basic premises. A Constitution is about building a common sense for Canada. That is what it is about. It needs to respond to the commonsense view and vision that the people of this country have for Canada.

Having said that, I want now to turn to the federal proposals. I have said over the last couple of days that I think it is a good start. I think the fact of the matter is we now have a base for a far more intensive and productive discussion and resolution of the constitutional crisis that has affected this country so seriously. I do not agree with every aspect of the federal document and I will outline some of the questions that I have. The government has not had an opportunity and all the lawyers have not had a chance to look at all the things and give all the views about what various clauses mean or might not mean.

I really genuinely do not see this as a deeply partisan debate which has to divide the parties in this House any more than it should divide the parties in Ottawa. What I see is a federal proposal that has been based on a real effort of learning and listening to other people, a real effort at getting the dialogue and the discussion to this next critical phase of nation-building. The proposals are comprehensive and they are also complex. Without sounding too much like mumbo-jumbo, I have to say we are going to be studying them very carefully and we will be coming forward with more detailed responses as the months and days unfold. But there are some basic principles that we have taken to be important and we continue to feel important.

1420

First, we still believe very strongly that the process has to be open. The process has to be seen to be open. It has to involve the people of Canada.

Second, we have said all along that our endeavours must strengthen the unity of the country and the sense of belonging and shared purpose among all Canadians.

Third, the Constitution must be such that all Canadians can see their interests and aspirations reflected in it.

Fourth, we have built up a comprehensive network of social programs whose aim is to ensure that all members of our society have the opportunity to achieve their full potential. We continue to believe this is a very important element in building a stronger sense of national unity.

Finally, as I have said repeatedly in this Legislature and elsewhere, the economy is, after all, the real constitution of the country. We cannot solve the problems of national unity without at the same time addressing the question of the national economy: how it is managed, who benefits from it and how those benefits are to be distributed in our society.

I want to turn to a number of elements. I have already referred to the question of the distinct society. There will be lots of discussion about the exact words, about the exact place of where it goes, but I do not want there to be any misunderstanding about my views and the views of this government about the need for us to be generous and so expressive of the tolerance that is the best in Canada as we try to understand what is the challenge that faces the government of Quebec—any government of Quebec, regardless of its political stripe—and French Canadians across the country. It is to maintain a culture and a society that have been facing adversity, facing a world that is different from theirs for hundreds of years and whose culture and whose language and whose creativity as a society are an advantage, a plus, for Canada.

We have a lot to learn. Look at our labour relations and compare them to the state of greater consensus in Quebec. We have much to learn from the sense of solidarity that is being built in that society. I believe that. I believe as well that we have to build a stronger Canada and that building a stronger Canada and a stronger social and economic union should not be seen by anyone as a threat to that.

I listened carefully to what Mr Bourassa had to say yesterday. I was encouraged by it. I think we all should be. I think the questions he has raised with respect to the nature of the proposals put forward by the federal government are things we need to look at. I believe a strengthened economic union is crucial for Canada. On the face of it—and this is just on perhaps the first, second and third read-through—some of these proposals from the federal government seem to be more oriented to strengthening the federal government rather than to strengthening the economic union. You do not necessarily need to do that in order to strengthen the economic union. That is something we want to discuss with other provinces, including of course Quebec.

As a province, we have never historically felt that Senate reform was the most important part of the constitutional agenda, but we have to recognize and listen and learn the fact that it is a very important part of the constitutional agenda for other parts of the country, for western Canadians and for a great many people in Atlantic Canada as well.

The federal government's proposals, I think, will form the basis of a very intense discussion, but I can tell members of this House we are going to have to do something to reform federal institutions—the Senate—in order to allow the various parts of the country to feel they have more of an impact on the decisions that are taking place in the centre. We have to be aware of that as Ontarians. We have to be aware of that sense of alienation that exists in western Canada and we have to be prepared to respond to it in a positive way.

Without getting wedded to any particular formulas or saying it has to be this way or that way, we recognize—and we are going to be participating fully in the discussion—the importance of this issue for many people in Canada and we are prepared and eager to discuss the need for change.

We are very interested in the federal proposals on other institutional changes with respect to the Council of the Federation, as it has been called. We recognize the need for us to build more effectively the links that tie the country together. I must say I am concerned about the number of institutions and layers that we are creating. I think it would be nice if we could keep it a little simpler in terms of what we actually end up with as a structure, so that it does not become so unwieldy that it cannot work. That is just a concern I have, but I think we have to work at making sure it works effectively.

On the federal proposals on devolution, I would just say that you cannot talk about that unless you are prepared to talk about how you are going to pay for programs, particularly how you are going to pay for programs in those provinces which do not have a sufficient economic and financial tax base to fund what is being devolved on them or what they are being asked to do.

This again is going to be the subject of some very intense negotiations and very intense discussion. That is one of the reasons why we as a party have talked about the need for a social charter, the need for a sense of social union to match the importance of economic union so that everyone can see that the two things go together, that they are not fighting with each other but they are being brought together, and so that we can in fact create the climate in which economic and social decisions can be made on behalf of Canadians, recognizing that provinces have their role and their part and their position to protect and to put forward, but recognizing that fundamentally we do want to create a productive society, a productive country, in which we are able to provide work and opportunity for everyone, which surely should be the objective we set for ourselves.

I think it has become clear over the last few days that the recognition in this document of the aboriginal right to self-government does not yet adequately reflect what, in our view, needs to be done. The reason that the words “the inherent right to self-government” have achieved such significance is because what those words signify is a recognition that there were societies and governments here before 1763 and 1774 and 1791 and 1840 and 1867 and 1982. That historical fact about Canada needs to be recognized.

I believe the next six months, the next year is perhaps the most critical period this country has faced since it was born. I was very encouraged by the approach taken by Mr Bourassa yesterday. It took courage for him to do that in the face of the changing winds and climates of opinion in his own province. It is going to take some courage on our part as well. If we just sniff the wind and watch which way it is going, then the country will be in even deeper trouble than it is today. We have to set out clearly the elements of constitutional reform that are going to bring the country together and allow it to work, and to work productively.

I say to the House, as I said to the leaders of the opposition parties yesterday, this government, this Premier, is prepared to work with everyone. I have invited Mr Bourassa to come to Toronto and he has accepted. I believe the discussions and the dialogue which must take place, the work of the federal committee which is under way, has to be based on this urge for consultation and openness, yes, but we must also face another reality and that is the collective capacity of this country to make a decision. This is where I want to close.

1430

The process in a democratic country of making a constitution is, to put it mildly, difficult because so many people feel excluded and so many feel uninvolved, and because so many people have concerns and points of view which they want to express and think are important to them. We are now reaching a period over the next few months when our ability to create structures which will allow people to participate will be tested.

I continue to believe profoundly that we must do that, but we also cannot forget the fact that we have to create a collective capacity to make a decision and to recognize that this is also an essential element of reform: the will to talk, the will to listen, the will to learn, and finally the will to act.

RESPONSES

CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM RÉFORME CONSTITUTIONNELLE

Mr Elston: I have said many times to several people that one of the roles of the Ontario Premier has always been to speak out about the sense of feeling this province has for the nation which has been so kind to us, and I have thought that for too long this gentleman who now leads our province has not been able to speak out with the emotion he expressed so often before he became Premier. He did not disappoint us today when he spoke with the sense of feeling and emotion which so many Canadians, so many people who now find themselves in Ontario, wish they could have had over the preceding months.

While he speaks today, he speaks of an optimism which all of us can feel and which all of us measure in terms of the desire to lead this province to come to the conclusion that a state of Canada without one of our provinces would not be the Canada we would like to see. We must have the accommodation the Premier speaks of. We must have the language around the construction of our new Constitution which all of us will believe will provide each of us with the individual opportunity to grow to become the best person we can inside the social and cultural home we all desire. He spoke about that, that this must represent for each individual a home which is satisfactory for each of us as we relate to other people in our country.

I am happy he said that, because when all is said and done, all we ever really can conceive is the best social contract that has brought together a whole series of regions, of men and women who have arrived here one way or another to spend their natural lives in this land.

I grew up—some say I grew up, some have said I have not—and I have come through the 1950s, the 1960s, the 1970s and the 1980s in days in which there has been very little, if anything, that we could not grab on to; very little that we could not grasp to make our situation much better; very little that was not within the reach of us who were born in the so-called baby boom era.

For some of us, the concern and indeed the real underlying fear which confronts us with this new type of dynamic we are in is that we may not have that opportunity again. I say to the people who are looking in on this that if we cannot come to grips with reconstructing our nation, it will most certainly not be available for the children who follow us. That is what is working in my mind as I examine these documents.

I got a copy of this paper. I walked home with it last night and I walked to work with it this morning. It does not feel quite right yet and there is work to be done among all of us here, but also all of us who are looking in across Ontario, to make this feel like it is ours. While we try to make it feel like it is ours, we must make it feel like it belongs to all the people who live in the land that is described in every atlas as Canada.

If we change the word "compromise," when we try to arrive at that seemingly very easy objective, to read "accommodation," perhaps then we can find a home for all the individuals who want Canada to allow them to be the best individuals they can be; more particularly, for those of us who, like me, have come through the 1960s and 1970s in educational institutions, to ensure that our kids, and after them their children, can become the best they can be.

I am struck by the fact that almost everyone who does not have some political agenda other than the Canadian one has talked about accommodation, has talked about the starting point as being a good one. It instils within me the sense that the goodwill from the seaboard on the east to the west coast will inspire a whole lot of work by people to try and build a home for all of us who live in this province and for all of us who live in Canada.

While we go out and listen to all the suggestions that are going to be put before our committee here—it is chaired by the member for Victoria-Haliburton, who looks on with interest—and all the information that is given to the federal committee by all the people who want to respond with their ideas about how Canada can accommodate their individualism, accommodate their growth, after all is said and done it comes down in the end to leadership and decisions having to be made, decisions having to be taken by men and women who have rightfully heard all there is to be said in the next few months about what there is to create the type of Canada that we all see accommodating the people who come after us.

While we think about the words we write here, we must think about the lives that will be affected by them. While we put our energies into creating new words in this document, we cannot forget about the lives that go on day by day and that need to be sustained while we build the new world according to the Constitution.

While we may live more by words than many others, in our society men and women still require work. They still require the support and the sustaining drive of people who have not deviated too much from the real world. The real world still afflicts women and men in Ontario with the fear of unemployment, with the fear of disease, with the fear of alienation and with the fear of violence, and governments need to put an end to those fears.

By this alone, we cannot end fear. By this alone, we cannot end uncertainty. By this alone, as men and women who have been elected to represent all of Ontario, we cannot come to grips with each problem. While we may put our stock in this in some academic way, men and women today require some practical demonstration that they have not been lost, that the energy and resources of all of us here have not been diverted from their plight, that they will not be forgotten in this generation in an attempt to create an ideal generation to come.

1440

Anybody who reads this document—and I have read it a couple of times, some parts more than others—will know that it does not provide the feeling that is needed to sustain our people. Words alone of course are not enough. Actions which fall from this are what will make us, as a society, measured a success by the people who put us here. Feeling the fear of people, feeling the insecurity of people, addressing their insecurity in a way which will build this into something real, is what in the end will prove our efforts successful.

I would just say to anybody here in this Legislative Assembly that we have been here before many times as a people, and we will be here again. The mark of legislators is their ability to respond to the moving nature of social and cultural and economic change. To hold this as the final product would be a very serious mistake. This is, as the Premier has said, a starting point, and the discussion which terminates after this paper has been resolved into action will be but a starting point; and the measurement of this assembly and the measurement of the politicians and the measurement of the people who provide the services to our society as it is reconstructed will be how well we eliminate the fear and insecurity and how well people are made to feel at home.

That is what this is: It is our home. For each of us, and for each man and woman who resides inside that area described on the map as Canada, there must be a sense that there is security for us as individuals in our home. That is our duty.

Mr Harris: I will not be at all lengthy today. I reviewed some of the comments that were made by the Premier, Mr Nixon and myself on March 27. I am very pleased to say that I sense in the country, from what I have read in the last couple of days, and I sense in this House today far more optimism than was prevalent in this chamber, than was prevalent, indeed, around the country, in the House of Commons, in the other legislatures, in the media, the newspapers, radio and television. It was very pessimistic.

In fact, after meeting with the Premier and the leader of the Liberal Party last night—and last night I read these comments—I was really surprised and a little shocked myself about how far we have come from that pessimism of just last spring, all three of us, in the remarks on behalf of our three respective parties, and truly, I think, on behalf of all of us in the House and on behalf of Ontarians, so I want very strongly to suggest, as we look at the awesome task ahead of us, the pitfalls that lie in the way, that in my view we have come a long way, we have come a long way just since last spring.

When I reflect on Meech and why Meech failed and the difficulties at that time, 99% of the comment really aimed at the process. It failed because of the process, or maybe it was okay but it was not understood. It was reported differently in different parts of the country because of the process, because of 11 first ministers, because all the legislatures were not involved, all of the people were not involved, all of the stakeholders were not involved.

If you reflect, sure, there has been criticism of commissions and how much they have spent and “Is this consultation necessary?” But look over the last six months and reflect and think how different this process is now—now it is not the Quebec round; now it is everybody’s round; now it is reconfederating Canada—and how much more complex that is. Think of Meech, the simple task, in comparison, that it had to do—“This is the Quebec round; How do we bring Quebec into the Constitution to get it to sign this document we finally brought home from England?”—and then think of the complexity now. It makes the optimism now to me even more satisfying, more exciting. You have to feel much more enthusiasm, I believe, for our ability to achieve success.

I want to talk in a few minutes about the process, not the specifics and not the details. Perhaps I will use one example of how we got derailed, because there is still some misunderstanding. We are in a much more open process, all of us, legislatures, the federal government, a much more co-operative process.

When you think of “distinct society” that the Premier referred to—I think it is important that we do talk about it—when you think of how “distinct society” was reported in Quebec and then how it was reported in Ontario, or in French Canada and in English Canada, surely you could not have believed you were reading the same document or even that it was reported in the same country. We have had great difficulty. I say to all of us here and, quite frankly, I say to the media, I say to all Canadians—it is not just legislators and politicians—that we must not allow 99% of reporting in English Canada to be different from 99% of reporting in French Canada. When we remind English

Canada about Quebec’s override of the charter and never mention Alberta’s override of the charter to take away rights from French-speaking Albertans, we must send a message—and I am sending it; I am happy to say it and I do not mind saying it—to the Quebec media: “You must not report Alberta’s override of the charter to take away French rights in Alberta, while never mentioning Quebec.”

We need to understand what is meant by “distinct society,” so I applaud the efforts of the federal government to come forward and say, or attempt to, anyway, to open the debate—it will be a long debate, I have no doubt—“Here is what we think ‘distinct society’ means.”

1450

The Premier very clearly is on the record, always has been, and part of that process of supporting Quebec as a distinct society, I believe he said, is with respect to language and culture. I know he means, as well, the justice system. To suggest that it is not distinct in those aspects is really not looking at history, at reality, at what Quebec is today. Is it majority French-speaking? It sure is. Is that distinct from the rest of it? It sure is. Is their justice system based on a different code? It sure is. It always has been. Do we have difficulties with that? I think the Premier was right. That does not take anything away from me, I do not believe, as an Ontarian, as a Canadian. When we are dealing with culture, is their culture different? Yes it is.

There will be those who will interpret it in such a way that it does take something away from us. I think we will reach a successful conclusion to this debate provided we are not saying one thing in Quebec and another thing outside Québec, we are not saying one thing in Ontario and another thing outside, we are not trying to define this to sell it to one group and then define it differently to another group. If we have learned anything from Meech, those days are long gone.

I mention that and some of the mistakes we have made in the past in the hope that we will not make those mistakes again and will not be afraid to talk about bilingualism and French language and what it means, how it affects Ontario, how it affects Quebec, because I, too, believe it can be interpreted in such a way, can be entrenched in the Constitution in such a way and can be applied practically in day-to-day life in such a way that it does not take away the rights of any of us. If we achieve that, we are a long way down the road.

I know there are many other issues on the table. It is now a reconfederation process, but we must remember as well that unless we deal with language and culture and the justice system in Quebec and with this definition, what we are dealing with is reconfederating nine provinces in Canada, not 10; we are reconfederating a different piece of geography than we are dealing with, or we are exploring how we are going to relate to a sovereign Quebec.

All I am saying to natives across this country and here in Ontario, and to other groups now seeking a greater understanding of their rights in the Constitution, that by putting some focus on Quebec it determines whether it is Canada’s geography as we know it today working on the social rights, on the economic rights, on how we are going to function as a country; on ensuring that while extending these rights, recognizing the privileges that are there and recognizing the obligations that go with them, we are not indeed taking anything away.

I really am encouraged that all three parties here in Ontario and in the federal House and, from what I have sensed across the country, are prepared to work together. Perhaps it is necessity, because in my view our role has diminished, quite frankly. Perhaps we were never important, some may say, in the whole process, but I think the Premier, in the discussions yesterday, alluded to the fact that his views, the views of a Premier of a province, are not so important any more.

There is going to be some leadership required and the understanding that those of us involved are very important in shaping public opinion, but ultimately the people are going to decide. No more Meech Lake. No more going back to inform everybody how they are going to stand up and vote. That is not going to be the ultimate process out of this. We have recognized that in the committees we have set up, in the consultation, in how we are moving forward. I want to tell people and Ontarians that I am encouraged that we have not ruled out any possibility for that final determination, whether it is a national referendum, whether it is a whole series of provincial referenda. It seems to be that kind of debate, not the fact that there is not going to be a ratification process—not by me, not by my party and not by the 130 of us here, but a ratification by the people of this country.

We have not ruled out constituent assembly, even those who are violently opposed. That may be the ultimate way to both arrive at the package and perhaps to get representative groups to give their stamp of approval beyond the Premier's, beyond mine, beyond the Liberal Party's, beyond all of us 130. I am pleased with that and I think that is very important as well.

I appreciate our Premier sharing with the Liberal leader and myself the information he has, his understanding, those chats he does have—sometimes it is revealing—and the ones he does not have across this country, including in the province itself. I appreciate that because, more important than ever, the opposition parties, the leader of an opposition party is probably much more important than in the past.

The views of members as individuals—not because they are going to be the ultimate ratifiers; it is going to come from the public—are more important than they have been in the past too, because it is not 11 people with whatever advisers they have making the decision. It is the public, and it is us who can shape public opinion. It is us who can clarify or mislead depending on which it is we want to do.

I hope it is to clarify. So far there have been comments in the media from some who have a different goal of Canada, particularly in Quebec. I do not get a great sense that it is to clarify and to understand, but I think that is very much in the minority in Quebec, in Ontario and indeed across this country.

It is important that those viewpoints be to clarify—constructive and non-partisan. I accept that obligation, I accept that responsibility and I take it very seriously, and I want the House and the Legislature to know that.

I indicated at our meeting last night, to the Premier and the leader of the Liberal Party and to the committee, that I am leaving next week. I am going out west to meet with the three premiers of the western provinces. One is a little tied up right now—two of them are tied up, but one is substantially, it appears to me, more than the other. The three premiers I am going to be meeting with, Monday with Premier Getty and Tuesday with Premier Filmon and Wednesday with Premier Devine—I appreciate the time of Mr Devine who, as we know, is tied up as well but who believes strongly in this country—were three who were involved pre-Meech, during Meech, post-Meech and involved now.

I am very interested in a two-way exchange. I am very interested in relaying to them the mood, the sense that has been reflected to our all-party, non-partisan committee here in Ontario, the collective understanding from the Premier, from the leader of the Liberal Party, from myself, from my caucus, from our people of what we sense the mood is in Ontario, our desire to find a solution and our understanding of what needs further clarification and perhaps some things that we may not find acceptable, and seeing how that meshes with the views of the western premiers on how they view their jurisdictions, how they view what their people feel, what their committees are saying, how they feel about native self-government, about distinct society, about a social charter, about the economic proposals and indeed the federal proposal itself.

1500

I hope that will help me understand a little better. I hope it will help them understand as best as I can convey it what is happening in Ontario to those individuals. I will report back to the Premier, to the leader of the Liberal Party and to the committee the sense that I receive next week as I embark upon this mission, which I think is important for me to do.

I really believe that we do owe it to ourselves to explore every opportunity to understand and to interpret correctly. It does not mean we have to agree with everybody. We never do, as members know. But I think if we truly understand and we are using the same definitions and we are trying to bring the light of day to what it is that provinces, regions, jurisdictions, people and different linguistic groups are looking for, I think they can be accommodated in a Constitution in Canada. That is the challenge.

I conclude by saying how much more optimistic I am. Some will say: "You silly fool, how can you be optimistic with this great challenge ahead? Look at the history and experience over the past period of time." I have been here in government, in opposition. I have been involved on the periphery and on the inside and at various levels. I have been involved with my constituents, more importantly, for 10 years on these constitutional issues. I sense a better understanding today than there was even six months ago. I think where there is understanding, there is a basis for agreement, there is a basis for consensus and there is a basis for a Constitution for our country.

ORAL QUESTIONS

BUDGET

Mr Elston: My speech drove my favourite minister out of the House. I am going to have to speak to the Chairman of Management Board instead of to the Treasurer. The Chairman of Management Board confirmed yesterday that he likewise would be making a statement next week about those steps to be taken to cut the funding that is going through the budget. I hope he will be a little more helpful than the Treasurer has been. I usually ask the questions and the press get the answers.

I wonder if the Chairman of Management Board could enlighten us a little bit on what we found out in the press today, that the colleges and municipalities will be bearing the brunt of the government's problem of managing its expenditures. I wonder if he can tell us if he is in favour of forcing municipalities to have to increase their property taxes to deliver the services they are currently delivering.

Hon Mr Silipo: I am not sure that the questions as they have been posed by the Leader of the Opposition fall entirely within my prerogative as Chairman of Management Board, given the change of the responsibilities in Management Board to treasury board. However, I will certainly attempt to answer the questions.

Let me say to member very directly and to members of this House that it is certainly not our intent as government to pass on our responsibilities as government to colleges or universities or indeed any other sectors. I think we believe very strongly that we have some clear responsibilities in those areas and we will do the best we can to live up to those responsibilities.

What we have been doing, as I indicated yesterday, is that we have been in the process of meeting with both union groups and employer groups in the broader public sectors to share with them the reality that we are dealing with in this year and heading into next year. We think it is our responsibility to do that and to make them aware of those realities.

Mr Elston: It sounds like the minister just said that if that is what it takes—ie, if that means municipalities will have to increase property taxes to deliver their services—then that is what will have to happen.

I want to ask the Chairman of Management Board, who is in charge along with the Treasurer of casting the entire cutting program on to the table for their colleagues to see, if he likewise agrees with the strategy of forcing colleges to accept also the responsibility for his mismanagement of the budgetary process. Then, having said that colleges will have to live with less, is he also in agreement with the Premier, who says that there will be no increase in tuition, and could he tell us then what option that leaves for the colleges?

Hon Mr Silipo: First of all, I would have to take strong exception to the notion that we are mismanaging our responsibilities. I think, in the face of growing pressures upon us in terms of social welfare costs and other costs, we are doing a very good job in responding to those needs and trying to maintain our fiscal responsibilities. I will reiterate to the Leader of the Opposition our commitment to continue to live up to our responsibilities and to do so in a fair and equitable way right across the board.

Mr Elston: "Fair and equitable" is an interesting turn of phrase which we will bring back to the honourable gentleman next week as we review his cut-and-slash program, along with his colleague the Treasurer.

Can the honourable Chairman of Management Board tell us, along with the two new members on the losers' list which was viewed first in the papers this morning, who else is also on the losers' list? Who also will be bearing the brunt of his mismanagement of the budgetary process in Ontario?

Hon Mr Silipo: Again, I would have to take exception to the notion that there are losers and winners in this process.

Mr Jackson: Were you not the chairman of the Metropolitan Separate School Board? Have you forgotten?

Hon Mr Silipo: Actually, I was not the chairman of the Metropolitan Separate School Board, for the record.

I will just reiterate the point that we are going about this process of dealing with the budgetary pressures for the 1991-92 year, I think in a fair and reasonable way. The Treasurer will outline some of those steps in his statement next week and, as I indicated, I will outline some further steps that we will be taking, as the Treasurer will, with respect to the 1992 fiscal year.

Mr Elston: I want to thank the Chairman of Management Board for those enlightening answers. We will be waiting for his replies next week to our questions about fairness and equity as well.

EMPLOYMENT

Mr Elston: While I have an opportunity, I would like to talk to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology, the gentleman who reported to us on Tuesday about a paper which apparently was supposedly released by his colleague the Minister of Labour, but which later the Minister of Labour said was not available, the same man who reported to us that he had created some 1,291 jobs. When we checked with his ministry officials, the reply we got was extremely interesting. It was, "Whoa, we don't know where the minister got those figures."

Having come up with that, we were prepared to accept that he had someplace that he picked those numbers from, but can the minister tell us, while he was creating those 1,291 jobs through his ministry, what he was doing for the almost 1,200 people who have lost their jobs in the two businesses most recently closed down in the city of Barrie, General Tire and Kolmar? Can he tell us what those 1,291 jobs that he created are going to do for the over 1,100 people who have lost their jobs in Barrie?

Hon Mr Philip: I can tell the member that the figure I used was the Ontario Development Corp's figure as to jobs that were created as a result of investment by that corporation. I can tell him also that the union, the mayor and the company have all admitted that the unfortunate situation in Barrie is related to a downturn in the tire market throughout the world and in particular in North America; that we have met with the company; that I have met with the mayor on two occasions; that I have spoken to the mayor; that my officials are meeting with the city of Barrie and with its industrial development people; that we are working on a series of plans to try to attract new industry to Barrie; that the Minister of Labour has his staff working with the company and with the employees and the union in that particular plant, and indeed that I met with the advocates.

1510

Mrs Caplan: They are leaving. They are not coming here to Barrie or anyplace else.

Hon Mr Philip: If the member would be kind enough to let me answer, I am sure that her colleague who asked the question would like the answer.

Furthermore, I met with the sector itself this morning to talk about new relationships with the rubber industry so that we can work with that industry as a whole.

Mr Elston: So far the reply has been that the minister is talking a lot, but for the men and women who will lose their jobs permanently in Barrie tomorrow, there is no relief and there is no relief of the fear and insecurity that those people feel.

Can this minister who talked to us about 1,291 jobs that he created tell us whether or not those 1,291 jobs will fill the void for the over 1,850 people who will lose their jobs under the Algoma restructuring that is currently going on? Is he satisfied that he has done everything he can to alleviate the dislocation, the insecurity and fear which are in the hearts and minds of the men and women of Sault Ste Marie who did not know about the 1,291 jobs that he created this past year?

Hon Mr Philip: I am pleased to say that this government has worked with both the union and the management at Algoma. A restructuring plan has been brought forward in its first phase that is acceptable to both the workers and the company. I say to the member then that as we work our way through that process, we will have a proposal that will be acceptable not only to the workers and the union and the company but also to the banks, as we put our final touches on that particular agreement by October 31, which is the deadline that both parties have been able to obtain.

Mr Elston: I have not heard how the 1,291 jobs the minister presumably has created are going to fill the void for those 1,850 people. Can he tell us how the people—

Hon Mr Wildman: I thought one of your other members, Mr Kwinter, was opposed to helping Elliot Lake.

The Speaker: Order. The Leader of the Opposition has the floor.

Mr Elston: Somebody from Algoma is testy because he knows the 1,291 jobs are not helping the 1,850 people who are losing their jobs.

I want to ask the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology how his supposed 1,291 new jobs are helping the 250 people who have lost their jobs at Red Rock and what he proposes to do to assist that entire community, as it goes through the fear and insecurity of thinking about losing its entire industrial activity. I want the member who is now the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology to tell us what he is doing, other than those 1,291 supposed jobs he has talked about, to offset the insecurity that is being felt in Red Rock.

Hon Mr Philip: I believe the honourable opposition member's information on Domtar and Red Rock is not accurate, but we will be happy to answer that question later. Let me tell the honourable Leader of the Opposition that his party's position is to do nothing in each of those cases.

Let me just read what the official opposition critic had to say about Elliot Lake, and I quote from yesterday's estimates: "Elliot Lake is a community that has no reason for being where it is, other than that at some time it was perceived to be the location of uranium. But now that it is no longer competitive, people are pouring hundreds of millions of dollars to keep it alive. The economics of it do not make any sense."

That is what the member for Wilson Heights said. That is the opposition's position on Elliot Lake, "Write off Elliot Lake." The member should read the Hansard from yesterday. His critic said, "Write off Elliot Lake." He said, "No money to Algoma." He would have written off the whole town of Kapuskasing because he thought that was a waste of the taxpayers' money, and he did not want the workers at de Havilland to have a restructured company that would—

The Speaker: Would the minister take his seat, please.

EDUCATION POLICY

Mrs Cunningham: My question is to the Premier. The Premier is familiar with this document, A Canadian Social Charter: Making Our Shared Values Stronger. I would like to read from it.

"National standards are very important in promoting the Canadian economic union.... Differing standards for health care or social assistance can act as a barrier to inter-provincial labour mobility.

"Our education and training systems are also critical to future prosperity. National standards promote the economic union by assuring that these important programs play a comparable role throughout the country."

Given the Premier's proposal to entrench these principles in our Constitution, will he explain why Ontario is the only province to refuse to participate in a national testing program for education?

Hon Mr Rae: If the minister were here I would naturally refer the question to her, but she is not here so I will respond on behalf of the government.

I can tell the member that when I was in Alberta in August, Premier Getty and I discussed this question. We also discussed it at the premiers' conference in Whistler. I said to the Premier at that time, on the basis of the discussions I have had with the minister and the deputy over many months, that the concern that has been expressed by Ontario has to do not with the principle of evaluation, it has to do with the nature of the evaluation that has been proposed and with the fact that we do not feel the stakeholders have been sufficiently involved—the teaching profession, the school boards, the trustees and others—in this national exercise. That has been the position. That is the position I put to Premier Getty.

As a result of those discussions, when the minister met last week with her colleagues in Edmonton—I believe the discussion was in Edmonton—there was a willingness expressed by everyone there to have another look at the concerns Ontario has expressed with regard to those two questions. So I would say to the member that Ontario has taken a view that I consider has been—

The Speaker: Would the Premier conclude his response, please.

Hon Mr Rae: I will leave it at that, and then the member can ask me a supplementary.

Mrs Cunningham: The Premier can finish with the second part. An article in this morning's Globe and Mail, subsequent to those meetings, suggested that if Ontario does not get its own way with the discussions over national testing, the minister will simply take her football and go home. I think there is a clear contradiction, and I am sure the Premier would agree, between these kinds of undertakings, the Premier's position right now on national testing and his proposals last week. I think the game has changed, given his proposals. It just does not make sense to call for these national standards in education while we are holding out and not working with the other provinces.

There is a time frame and perhaps, given what he has just said, I should ask him right now, is he going to discuss this with his minister and give her clear direction to work as hard as she can in the next few months, given that we are just now in a pilot project stage on the questionnaires?

Mrs Caplan: Yes.

Hon Mr Rae: I appreciate the member for Oriole, who while she was on this side of the House was always a model of brevity. I will answer the member for London North and say to her as directly as I can that it is not a matter of my issuing instructions to the minister. The minister has been playing a leadership role in trying to get a discussion with teachers and with other ministers of education about the kind of evaluation that makes the most sense for this country at this time.

We participate fully in international evaluations. It was initiated by the former government. We are participating in that. We are initiating a benchmark evaluation of the success and progress of our kids through schools, right the way through. An evaluative and an accountable system is what we are all aiming for.

It is not a matter of Ontario picking up its ball and going home; it is a matter of Ontario saying: "Wait a minute. Let's make sure the teachers are there. Let's make sure the trustees are there. Let's make sure we're doing it in a progressive and effective way." That is the approach we are taking, and we are still trying to make that approach succeed.

1520

Mrs Cunningham: All of us will appreciate the Premier's word "accountability," because that is what we are all here for. I should remind the Premier also that the other ministers have agreed so far in the progress that has been made, and all of the other provinces are part of this solution.

With over $13 billion being spent to educate our children, I think taxpayers, parents and students have a right to know if they are getting value for their money. Our children deserve to know that their education measures up to students in other provinces.

Right now I am going to ask the Premier, no matter what happens, will he put the his best efforts along with the minister into getting those people to the table, and no matter what happens, make it work so that Ontario can be part of a national testing scheme in 1994?

Hon Mr Rae: We are committed to an approach which we think is going to be the most effective in getting the teachers involved, because it really works much more effectively. They are the ones who are meeting the kids every day. It does not make sense to us to create a system they do not feel they are part of as well. We also want to make sure the trustees across the country and trustees' organizations are involved.

That is the approach we have taken, and I think it is the good approach. The minister has taken some heat on it because of some misconceptions and misinterpretations of our position, but in my view she has been doing a fantastic job in persuading the other ministers of the merits of this. I appreciate the member's advice.

ASSISTED HOUSING

Mrs Marland: My question is to the Minister of Housing. Yesterday my leader explained to this minister that it will cost $2 billion to build 7,000 units at the proposed Ataratiri housing development. Her response to this was to say, "We are working hard on that to make as reasonable and practical plans for the future as we can." Surely affordable housing that costs $250,000 per unit to build is not reasonable, practical, or for that matter affordable. My question is, when will she put an end to this ludicrous project?

Hon Ms Gigantes: The member for Mississauga South fails to indicate that yesterday in the House I indicated we were looking at all the options for this project. When I say all the options, I mean all the options.

Mrs Marland: I do not know how long this looking at all the options is going to take, because in the meantime nothing is being done to put additional affordable units on the market for these people who need housing accommodation today. The interest on this $2-billion white elephant would be $200 million per year. That means that each unit of housing will carry an interest charge of close to $2,400 per month, year in, year out, interest only. That is without the cost of heating, hydro or maintenance. Clearly this level of operating subsidy is outrageous.

When the minister has all those facts before her, when will she tell us that she is pulling the plug on this multi-million-dollar sink-hole before any more time and money is wasted? How much more information does she need to tell her that to go ahead would be absolutely in the wrong direction?

Hon Ms Gigantes: I think before the member for Mississauga South relates facts to this House she might like to check them once, twice, three times. There is a great deal that is speculative about her description of facts, both in this case and in other recent cases.

She has suggested that nothing is being done to house people. I will point out to her that at this point in 1991 there are over 25,000 units of co-op or non-profit housing that are in one stage of the process of building or another. We are working very hard to provide affordable housing for people, not just in Toronto but throughout Ontario.

Mrs Marland: I would like to give this minister some facts out of today's newspaper under accommodation for rent. For $2,600 you can rent a penthouse at the Palace Pier of 3,100 square feet. You can actually rent a luxurious house for $2,500 in the downtown area with three bedrooms and a den and so forth. You can also, for $2,490, rent in downtown Toronto a luxurious Victorian town home, and so forth and so on. What the minister is talking about is going ahead with a project at government expense that is comparable to what these kinds of places are renting for today.

I would suggest to the minister that when she is looking at what is available and is trying to make the decision, she should read the facts that are available today. It is a clear indication that government has no business in the housing business. When will the minister agree to take the money from this project and if not the capital investment, at least the interest on that money, which is $200 million per year, and take that money to subsidize through a shelter subsidy program in which she could then provide accommodation for 65,000 families instead of 7,000?

Hon Ms Gigantes: While we are in the process of looking at all the options for the Ataritari area, I am sure that ministry staff would be pleased to hear from the member opposite if she has ideas about what those options might be. She is suggesting that before we look at options we ought to just put the land on the market. She suggests that this would easily provide alternative housing for people here in the city of Toronto. I hope she will take a very good look at the facts when we report to this Legislature on the best way we have been able to assess them. I hope she will put forward any options she has that would help us determine what will be the best kind of decision to make for Ataritari.

LANDFILL SITE

Mr Mahoney: My question is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. As he knows, there are some municipalities in part of the area I represent that are somewhat upset with his seatmate the Minister of the Environment. There are some very high-profile political people in the community who are extremely upset with the Minister of the Environment. I see, and I hope that minister would agree, that his role as Minister of Municipal Affairs is as an advocate at the cabinet table for the municipalities.

I wonder how the minister reconciles his position as an advocate when he sits at the cabinet table and the Minister of the Environment says she is going to ignore a legal agreement signed between the city of Mississauga, the region of Peel, and more important between the citizens of that community, to close the Britannia sanitary landfill site in 1992 after a 12-year lifespan, an agreement that was signed and put in writing. This minister has just arbitrarily thrown that agreement out and issued an order for the region to comply, to expand the Britannia sanitary landfill site, obviously to take all of Metro's garbage for the future.

How does the minister reconcile his role as an advocate, and what does he say to the elected municipal officials and the staff at those municipalities when they ask him why this minister is betraying those agreements that were entered into in good faith?

Hon Mr Cooke: I think the member and the critic for the Liberal Party should understand that this entire government—all the members of this cabinet—are ministers who support the environment policy of this government and support the environment. The decisions that have been made by our Minister of the Environment were made because there was not adequate planning in the past and because the landfill the member refers to was in fact, as I understand it, approved under the Environmental Protection Act. We are trying to find long-term solutions and long-term facilities for garbage in the greater Toronto area that will go through the Environmental Assessment Act, so that the people of this province and the people of this region will have environmental protection and also a place to put their garbage. I support very strongly, and this government and all the members of this cabinet do, the actions that have been taken by our Minister of the Environment.

1530

Mr Mahoney: I guess the minister did not understand my question. It was not an environmental question. As the honourable member is, I assume, the advocate—if he is not, maybe he could tell us and all the municipalities in this province—as the Minister for Municipal Affairs, sitting around the cabinet table, what does he tell the municipalities when he shoves things down their throats? I would just like to give the honourable member some idea of how they feel.

Interjection.

Mr Mahoney: Excuse me, are the members doubting the word of the mayor of Mississauga? Let me quote her. "Ruthless, hypocritical, dictatorial," was Mississauga Mayor Hazel McCallion's description of Grier." Those are not my words; those are her words. She feels betrayed.

This minister has issued an order, and the outcome of that order, if it is not obeyed, are fines of up to $100,000 a day and jail terms. The mayor of Mississauga has said she is prepared to go to jail to fight this minister. The member is her minister at the cabinet table. Is he going to sit there while the Minister of the Environment puts Hazel McCallion in jail, or is he going to speak up for the municipalities of this province?

Hon Mr Cooke: I indicate two things to the member. First, all the cabinet ministers in this government are advocates for the environment. All of us are advocates for the environment. I also indicate to the member, if he wants to quiet down for a second and listen to the answer, that if he takes a look at the record of this government and our relationship with municipalities, in the first year of government it is a good record and shows very clearly that we are sensitive to the needs of municipalities. If he wanted to understand that, all the member had to do was to show up yesterday at the AMO consultation with cabinet, where it said there is a clear and total difference in the relationship between the municipalities and the provincial government now that we are in power.

Interjections.

The Speaker: When the members have come to order, we can continue with question period.

ONTARIO ECONOMY

Mr Carr: My question is to the new Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology, and I would like to congratulate him on his new position. As he stated yesterday, it is a critical position in this government. However, leadership is action, not rhetoric, and the people of this province want solutions, not slogans.

I have in my hand some recommendations from the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, about 111 pages of concrete action on everything from health care all the way through to parkland. It takes about 15 or 20 minutes to read. I am going to send a copy over to the minister. Tonight, when the chauffeur is driving the minister home, I hope he will read through it. With traffic jams being what they are, he will probably get it done by the time he hits Spadina.

My question is very clear. When does the minister plan to implement any recommendations from the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, what recommendations will they be and when can we expect them to be implemented?

Hon Mr Philip: I have had a very productive meeting with the Ontario Chamber of Commerce and with a number of other business groups in this province. I have met with their president on some three or four occasions, as the Minister of Transportation and also, as the member probably knows, the president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce is on the Premier's Council on Economic Renewal, on which I sit.

Their recommendations are being considered and implemented in the new economic strategy for the restructuring of the economy in Ontario and, when we announce that, I think he will see that many of the recommendations of the chamber of commerce, as the recommendations of other groups, will be considered.

While I am on my feet, I compliment the member for a very constructive and, I thought, interesting speech in his leadoff to my estimates yesterday.

Mr Carr: I thank the minister very much. Unfortunately he has come into a ministry where we see nothing but disorder, friction and malperformance, and the people of this province want answers.

Page 2 of that same report I sent over to the minister says:

"The planning process for any long-term project in the province of Ontario was seriously undermined last December when the Minister of Transportation"—lo and behold, the now Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology—

"announced the withdrawal of the provincial funding for building of the north-south link.... Over 30 years of planning, land acquisitions, months of consolidated environmental hearings, a supportive ruling by the Supreme Court and over $70 million has been spent on this project."

In today's report in the paper—as the minister will remember, he had an opportunity to meet with the president, the chief executive of Ford—the headline reads "Potential Disaster" in regard to some of the legislation brought in. My question is very, very clear. Why should anyone believe the minister when he says he is going to work with business in Ontario?

Hon Mr Philip: The particular decision we made was an environmental decision, and it was a cabinet decision with regard to Hamilton. Indeed the money is still in there, and it is building roads and infrastructure in the Hamilton area. I am proud that I happen to have made an environmental decision when we made that decision, as did our party, and I think it is supported by a large number of people in the city of Hamilton.

But the member asked me the question, why should anybody be interested in investing in this province? I tell him that the president of the chamber of commerce no less has suggested, and I have certainly agreed, going with me to the United States to meet with investors to tell them Ontario is a good place to invest. Let me tell him this. Just recently, Leo Sakada Electronics in Singapore is investing $3 million in the greenfield operation of the municipality of Thunder Bay; Ilkay Inc of Korea, $4.5 million in North Bay; Eli Lilly, $50-million expansion of its Ontario manufacturing plant; Upjohn—

The Speaker: Would the minister take his seat, please. Perhaps on another occasion he could respond a bit more promptly.

JOB SECURITY

Mr Abel: My question is also for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology. Keeprite is an important industrial employer in Brantford. Recent accounts in the newspaper had said that the firm could close down because the company was rationalizing its operations in the United States. Can the minister explain the status of the situation?

Hon Mr Philip: I would be happy to. Keeprite in Brantford is an important industrial employer in that region, and recent newspaper accounts said the firm would close down. I am pleased to inform the member that Keeprite has decided to rationalize the production of all residential and commercial heating and cooling products in its Brantford plant.

This is obviously good news to the region since the decision will immediately save more than 300 jobs in Brantford and the company's plans call for the doubling of employment levels over the next five years. This means transferring jobs from the United States to Brantford and to Ontario. I am proud that this has happened to us.

1540

TRUCKING INDUSTRY

Mr Kwinter: My question is for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology. Last week hundreds of businesses and thousands of people suffered through the fifth tie-up in the last nine months of traffic at the Ambassador Bridge in Windsor. At a time when the most senior members of the cabinet met night and day considering options because of the impact of Toronto's transit strike on the people of this city, no one in this government could find one minute to travel to Windsor to attempt to resolve the latest and most devastating blockade of trucks. The minister knows that much of Ontario's industry depends on just-in-time delivery and that the blockade had a significant impact, shutting down a number of assembly lines in the province.

I see the minister is looking at the Minister of Transportation. I would like the minister to tell this House why not one representative from the NDP government could find time to travel to Windsor to get involved to ensure that business, workers, truckers would do something to make sure that the lost production, particularly in the automotive industry, could be resolved. This is not a transportation problem; this is an industry problem. I would like the minister to answer that question.

Hon Mr Philip: It is both an industry and a transportation problem and the Minister of Transportation will be pleased to answer the question.

Hon Mr Pouliot: I welcome the question from the member opposite because he is most aware that although Ontario has 40% of the trucking business in this country, Quebec being second with 17%, giving central Canada a total of 57%, he is also cognizant that we have a monopoly on blockades.

Why was the minister not at his post like a sentry to address the truckers in Windsor? Because the minister could not be in two places at once. He was in Winnipeg at a ministers' conference, meeting with the federal minister, with the chairperson and with the president of the Ontario Trucking Association, informing his colleagues across the country of the need to have a better depreciation allowance for truckers and of the difficulties with which truckers are faced in terms of the transition with the recession coupled with free trade.

Interjection.

Hon Mr Pouliot: I was there. Where was the member?

Mr Kwinter: I hope the minister will realize he is the government and we are the opposition. It is his obligation to be there, not ours.

Not a long time ago the minister's political cousin in Ottawa, Steven Langdon, staged his own illegal protest on the bridge. That really set the pattern for what has been going on, so it would seem to me that maybe the minister's reluctance to go to Windsor is because he seems to have some sympathy for Mr Langdon's position.

I suggest to the minister that he be aware of what has happened in the Windsor city council, which passed a resolution asking this government to amend the Highway Traffic Act. In addition, the Windsor Chamber of Commerce faxed a letter to my colleague the member for Essex South asking that action be taken to prevent Windsor from becoming the blockade capital of Canada.

The Speaker: Order. The member's question?

Mr Kwinter: The minister has found a new religion, and that new religion is co-operation with business. When is he going to act as if he had any kind of concern about what is happening to the business community in Ontario?

Hon Mr Pouliot: We have and we will. Partnership with business, with the private sector is a religion that the member opposite and I and this government have in common indeed. We are awaiting the competitiveness studies. There are two of them, and they are an important factor in our relationship and the long-term solutions vis-à-vis the dilemma, the impasse that is faced by the truckers.

We are putting the final touch to the competitive studies. They will reach us. It would analyse the difference between the way business is conducted in the United States and our competitive advantages and/or disadvantages in Canada, and it will parallel a federal study. Then we will have all the tools at our disposal to address the problem short-term but, more important, to look at the long-range solution so that the present confrontation will become the order of yesterday, not the order of the day.

We have a responsibility not to impede the flow of traffic. We are law-abiding. We invite people in the trucking industry to negotiate with us. Our door is always open and we do not do it in the climate of confrontation. We identify the problem. We seek solutions. We are very concerned and we are acting on it.

ELECTORAL DISTRICT OF BRANT-HALDIMAND

Mr J. Wilson: On behalf of my leader, the member for Nipissing, I have a question for the Premier. Last night I, a number of my caucus colleagues and my leader met with hundreds of residents in the riding of Brant-Haldimand. These good people are anxiously awaiting the Premier's call for a by-election. I recall that when the riding of Welland-Thorold became vacant in 1988, he demanded that the Premier of the day call a by-election. He said, "People are entitled to local representation." When will the by-election in Brant-Haldimand be held?

Hon Mr Rae: There are many answers I could give, but some of them would get me into even more hot water than I am in at the moment. I would only say to the member that we are obviously looking at the situation. I think, if he has some sense of the history of this place, that the delay has not been unduly long. Obviously I am aware of my responsibilities to ensure that the people of Brant-Haldimand have representation in the House.

Mr J. Wilson: I think the Premier would agree—at least he agreed when he was in opposition, but I guess that was then—that the residents of Brant-Haldimand deserve representation at Queen's Park. In fact in the good old days, as far as we were concerned, when he was on this side of the House, he went to great length to give us and my former colleagues in the House lectures about democracy and the need and the right of people to be represented in this chamber.

The last Premier, he may recall, the guy who is not here any more, played politics with the people too. He played politics with the timing of the last provincial election and he paid a tremendous price for this. So I am going to ask the Premier again: When will he call the by-election in the riding of Brant-Haldimand which the people deserve and want now?

Hon Mr Rae: The length of time of the vacancy has not been long. The former member served for a good part of the summer. That is a reality. I think it is worth pointing out that we have a responsibility to fill the vacancy with respect to an election within a reasonable time after the vacancy has been declared, and we will certainly do that. That is exactly what we are going to do.

ADVOCACY AND GUARDIANSHIP

Mr Owens: My question is to the Minister of Citizenship. Recently the Toronto Star has contained several articles with respect to the new Advocacy Act that our government will be bringing in. The articles have implied that many seniors and many people with disabilities will require advocates. I am wondering if the minister can clarify for the House and for the people of Ontario exactly what the role of advocates will be and who will require advocates.

Hon Ms Ziemba: I am very pleased to respond to this question and help to clarify some of the misconceptions that have arisen. As members know, over the past 16 years coroners' inquests have asked to have an advocacy system in place. Previous governments have asked to have an advocacy system in place by having the Fram report and the Sean O'Sullivan report. We know the system is needed.

The goal of the legislation is not interference but autonomy. Those who do not require advocates will not have advocates. The vast majority of seniors and disabled people do not require advocates; they live independently. Others have families and friends who can assist them. That is the way it should be. What the advocacy system will do is to assist those who are especially vulnerable, those who have been vulnerable to exploitation, neglect, coercion and abuse because they are alone or isolated.

Mr Owens: Some of the articles, and members of the Doctor Save caucus, have brought up the issue of cost. Can you explain to the members, Doctor Save caucus, why it is important that we bring in this act and why every single penny spent on this act is an important penny spent?

Hon Ms Ziemba: It is our conviction that this act will go a long way towards addressing some of our long-standing social injustices. Even though some of our disabled people and seniors are in need of our protection and care, they should continue to make their own decisions and exercise their rights to the extent that they are able. The Advocacy Act is going to assist them to be able to do so.

I think we heard the Premier speak very eloquently today about the fact that we as a country want to have social justice and we in our country want to take care of each other. The advocacy system will do that.

1550

EXPO 98

Mr Ruprecht: I have a question for another minister in hiding. I would hope he will be presently coming forward to get this question. The question is really to the Minister of Tourism and Recreation. In the meantime, let me ask the government whip, since the minister is not present—

The Speaker: To whom is your question directed?

Mr Ruprecht: I have a question to the government whip, Mr Speaker. As you can appreciate, we have no choice on this side. The Premier is not present, the Treasurer is not present, the Minister of Tourism and Recreation is not present, the Minister of Community and Social Services is not present, the Minister of—

The Speaker: Would the member place his question, please?

Mr Ruprecht: You can see why I am almost forced to ask the chief government whip. Would the chief whip—

The Speaker: Will the member take his seat, please?

Hon Mr Wildman: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I really do not want to belabour this, but is it not against the rules of this House to comment on the presence or absence of another member?

The Speaker: The basic nature of this exercise is to identify a minister to whom you wish to address a question and then to go ahead and address the question. Would the member please get on with it?

Mr Ruprecht: Mr Speaker, thank you very much indeed for your comments. I just want to remind you that in my search for a minister to address this question—and I have stumbled across a serious item in this government's agenda—

The Speaker: Would the member place his question, please?

Mr Ruprecht: There is no one there to ask questions of in the front row. That is why I am forced to ask the government whip, and I will therefore place my question to her.

The Speaker: Quickly.

Mr Ruprecht: Would the government whip—
Interjections.

The Speaker: Order.

Mr Ruprecht: Thank you, Mr Speaker. Would the government whip not agree that the opposition has a right to ask questions on any government expenditure that has taken place? Consequently, my question to her is, if a minister of this government is not producing either a press release or a statement by the ministry to this Legislature, would she not then agree that is not the way we work in this House, and traditionally we will not be able to carry on our government business?

Hon Mrs Coppen: The member has every right to ask a question of course. If I am not mistaken, the opposition is informed when our ministers are not going to be in the House. Is that not correct? My ministers are away on government business right now and the opposition is notified of their absence. There are times when ministers will be absent from the House because they have to make emergency phone calls or be back in their offices, but that is only briefly.

Mr Ruprecht: I just want to remind the government whip again that on this list that she has produced here today, there are at least five ministers I can tell her are not present today. Consequently I am very unhappy about this and sorry to say that we are not able to continue, in this government's business, to raise questions in the Legislature.

But my question, Mr Speaker, was really different. You indicated earlier that it is our right to ask questions any time the government spends taxpayers' money. I have repeatedly asked this. The Minister of Tourism and Recreation did not inform this House how much money this government has allocated to support our bid for Expo 98. He has not as much as produced a press release to tell this Legislature and our members so that we can ask a question in this Legislature. Would the government whip not therefore agree—

The Speaker: Would the member for Parkdale take his seat, please.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Would the member take his seat please, now. The member will recall that the standing orders are quite specific that supplementaries are to flow from the original question placed. We will have a new question. The member for Dufferin-Peel.

Mr Phillips: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: If you would refer to the question that the member asked, the supplementary flowed directly out of it. The problem was that I do not think the minister answered the question the member asked. I would ask you to look at Hansard and you will find that the member's question was directly around his supplementary.

The Speaker: To the member for Scarborough-Agincourt, I will indeed be happy to review Hansard. My understanding was that the question originally posed had to do with the attendance of ministers in the House, and therefore I did not allow his supplementary. I will review the Hansard and report back Monday. I have recognized the member for Dufferin-Peel.

Mr Ruprecht: Mr Speaker, on a point of order—

The Speaker: Is this on the same matter or something else?

Mr Ruprecht: Would I be able to address the Speaker, please? Is that possible?

The Speaker: The member should be aware that we are utilizing question period time. I have undertaken to review Hansard and I will report back to the member as quickly as possible. The member for Dufferin-Peel.

LAND REGISTRATION

Mr Tilson: I have a question to the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. The closing of 14 registry offices across Ontario has been and continues to be of great concern to the members of my party. Through our efforts, witnesses from across Ontario appeared before the standing committee on general government last July to tell the minister that her plan would result in irreparable harm to local communities. Throughout the hearings, government members of the committee continually displayed obedience to the decision of the minister and it was clear that they did not care about and were not listening to the concerns of those appearing in front of them.

This obnoxious and arrogant attitude was reinforced by the ministry's decision to close the Toronto registry office while the hearings were still in progress. Since then, Bowmanville has been closed and Arthur is set to close next week, while the report from the committee has yet to be reported to this House.

My question is whether the minister feels this course of action is fair and democratic, and will she agree to stop any further closures until the committee has reported back to the House on its findings?

Hon Ms Churley: The answer to the first question is that, yes, I think this is a fair and equitable decision to make, and yes, I will continue to try to keep on schedule in terms of the integration of the land registry offices.

Mr Tilson: It kind of makes our whole system a sham when she consents to going through those hearings knowing full well she is going to ignore what we are going to be doing.

My supplementary question is this. In the April edition of Registration News, a newsletter of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations registration division, it was reported that the Strategic Alliance Corp, an alliance between the government and Real-Data Ontario Inc, would be incorporated in May and that business would start up and would follow in the next six months.

I am aware, as is the minister, that this corporation is now complete and that the company is now called Teranet. I am sure the minister knows the background surrounding the initiatives of Teranet and I would like the minister to tell us what the status of Teranet is today and what the relationship is between its goal to automate land registry offices and the closing of these offices across Ontario.

Hon Ms Churley: I suppose the question is related, but really it is two separate sets of issues, because the implementation of Teranet has absolutely nothing to do with the closing of the land registry offices. There is no connection whatsoever and I am sorry information is erroneously out there. I want to make clear that when Teranet does start up its business, it will in fact provide more up-to-date information to the land registry offices.

Since it is a supplementary question, I also want to remind the member that the decision to integrate the land registry offices was a cabinet decision. It was examined very carefully by myself, by my ministry, by cabinet, and in fact, I have read, at one time by members of his government, when the PCs were in power and they backed down, but Larry Grossman was quoted as saying, "It's a good idea."

We are moving forward with this and I still believe that it was the right decision to make.

One last point—

The Speaker: Would the minister conclude her response, please.

Hon Ms Churley: I have examined very carefully all the letters and comments that came through the committees and I still feel, after examining all the questions, that this is the right decision to make.

1600

POLLUTION CONTROL

Mr Johnson: My question is for the Minister of the Environment. I was delighted, and I am sure my constituents will be delighted, to hear the announcement the minister made today in the House. My riding of Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings has the longest shoreline on Lake Ontario of any riding in the province. There is a strong tourist industry there where people have an opportunity to swim in the lake and fish, and many people draw their drinking water from Lake Ontario.

My question to the minister is this: I would like to know if she could explain in more detail zero discharge and virtual elimination so I might have a better understanding of this and so my constituents too might better understand that.

Hon Mrs Grier: I am glad to elaborate on the concept of zero discharge, which has been the subject of much debate over recent years. The principle was first enunciated in an agreement signed between the federal governments of Canada and the United States, the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, in 1978. I know the member will share my pride when I tell him that we are the first government in the Great Lakes basin to take that principle seriously and to commit ourselves to putting it into practice.

What that agreement called for was the virtual elimination of persistent toxic substances from the Great Lakes basin, and that happens in two ways. It happens by cleaning up existing contamination, and I am sure the member has participated in the remedial action plan that has been working, with a great deal of public support and hard work in his own riding, for the Bay of Quinte.

The second part of virtual elimination is preventing the entry of any further persistent toxic substances into the ecosystem. That is done by phasing out and eventually banning the use of chemicals that do not break down in the environment or that cause death, disease or abnormalities, and that is the basis upon which the regulations of the MISA program will be developed, starting today.

Mr Offer: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: It is with respect to a response given by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology on September 24 in response to a question posed by the member for Wilson Heights. On that day the member for Wilson Heights posed a question dealing with a cabinet document, dated August 7, which outlined numerous controversial changes to the Labour Relations Act. Mr Speaker, I am reading right from Hansard, as you can see.

"The communications plan of this document outlined a detailed strategy for squashing all business concerns, and the most telling passage of this document is where the minister states, 'There must be a special effort made to neutralize all opposition from the business community.'"

The question contained a number of other aspects, but in response the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology stated, and I read directly from the second sentence of the response, "He has a discussion paper out there." The "he" referred to the Minister of Labour.

About an hour later on that same day, we conducted, through the standing committee on estimates of this Legislature, a procedure where I posed a question to the Minister of Labour as to whether in fact there was a discussion paper out there around the Labour Relations Act, as the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology had alluded to in his response to the member for Wilson Heights. The Minister of Labour indicated that there was not a discussion paper. I would have thought that the—

The Speaker: What is your point of order?

Mr Offer: My point of order is that I would like to give the opportunity to the minister, who surprisingly is here today, to correct the record. I would certainly hope that he is an advocate for—

The Speaker: Would the member take his seat, please. This is all quite interesting. It is, first of all, a committee matter, and second, points of order relating to anything that is recorded in Hansard should be raised at the earliest possible moment.

Mrs Sullivan: Mr Speaker, I have a point of order relating to the statement just made by the Minister of the Environment relating to the water quality agreement with the United States. The minister should know and in fact should have informed the House that this agreement has expired and she has not participated in negotiations to renew it.

The Speaker: That is not a point of order. It certainly is of interest to many and perhaps could have been contained in a response at the time.

Mr Offer: Mr Speaker.

The Speaker: Another point of order?

Mr Offer: No, Mr Speaker. You indicated that the matter should be raised at the earliest possible moment. The earliest possible moment was today when the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology was here. I would have raised it earlier, but I do not believe he was present in the House yesterday. I wanted to raise it while he was present in the House so that he would have the opportunity to correct the record. I thought that would be done more as a matter of protocol and courtesy.

The Speaker: I appreciate the member's interest in these parliamentary matters. I am sure he is also aware that it would be more appropriate to raise it in committee, since it is indeed a committee matter.

PETITIONS

LABOUR LEGISLATION

Mr Runciman: I have a petition signed by over 600 employees of business and industry in Brockville and area expressing concern with respect to some possible announcements related to labour law changes and basically expressing concern about the ability of business and industry to compete because of legislative programs and taxes that have been instituted in this province over the past five or six years.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

Mr Cooper: I would like to present this petition on behalf of the member for Perth. It has 95 signatures and it is objecting to only evolutionism being a compulsory core unit in the history and science Ontario academic course. It goes:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"We, the undersigned, petition the Parliament of Ontario as follows:

"The Ministry of Education has made evolutionism a compulsory core unit in senior OAC, previously grade 13, history and science. Since evolutionism and creationism are completed acts in the past, neither can be proven or disproven. In fairness to all parents and students, equal time should be given in presenting the underlying assumptions of each. Through the two-model approach, the skills of critical thinking, such as recognition of bias, awareness of society's influence on one's bias and the awareness of assumptions, can allow students to examine their own belief system and better appreciate an opposing view."

1610

REPORTS BY COMMITTEES

STANDING COMMITTEE ON ESTIMATES

Mr Jackson from the standing committee on estimates presented the committee's report as follows:

Pursuant to standing order 58(a), the following estimates are reported back to the House, as they were not previously selected by the committee for consideration, and are deemed to be received and concurred in: Office of the Assembly, $127,057,000; Office of the Chief Election Officer, $1,096,300; Ombudsman program, $9,716,500; and Office of the Provincial Auditor program, $8,025,000.

The Speaker: Pursuant to standing order 58(b), the estimates not selected for consideration by the standing committee are deemed to be concurred in.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

House in committee of the whole.

La Chambre en comité plénier.

EMPLOYMENT STANDARDS AMENDMENT ACT
(EMPLOYEE WAGE PROTECTION PROGRAM), 1991

LOI DE 1991 MODIFIANT LA LOI
SUR LES NORMES D'EMPLOI (PROGRAMME DE PROTECTION DES SALAIRES DES EMPLOYÉS)

Consideration of Bill 70, An Act to amend the Employment Standards Act to provide for an Employee Wage Protection Program and to make certain other amendments.

Étude du projet de loi 70, Loi portant modification de la Loi sur les normes d'emploi par création d'un Programme de protection des salaires des employés et par adoption de certaines autres modifications.

The Second Deputy Chair: Are there any questions, comments or additional amendments? The table would very much appreciate having them now if different parties do have questions, comments, or amendments in particular.

Hon Mr Cooke: Mr Chairman, I believe there is an agreement among the three parties that any amendments that are divided on will be stacked until we have completed the bill.

The Second Deputy Chair: Is it the pleasure of the House that we stack all amendments until completion of the bill?

Agreed to.

Ms S. Murdock: I would ask that the minister and myself be allowed to sit at the front, close to our staff.

The Second Deputy Chair: Is it the pleasure of the House that the parliamentary assistant and the minister be allowed to move down to the table in the front row?

Agreed to.

The Second Deputy Chair: We would like at this point to make sure that all members, if they have amendments to be made, bring them forth to the table now so that we could check them with the amendments presently filed with the Clerk to see if we have any duplicates, and then we could proceed with Bill 70.

Mr Offer: We will be moving amendments to section 5 of the bill, section 6 of the bill and section 16 of the bill. I believe, Mr Chair, that you do have copies of those amendments and the subsections under the sections that we will be moving amendments to, and I believe members of the opposition and government also have copies of those amendments.

The Second Deputy Chair: I thank the honourable member. Yes, we do have copies of the official opposition's amendments to Bill 70.

Mrs Witmer: We also have amendments to the bill and they refer to section 5 of the bill, section 5 of the bill again, section 15 of the bill and section 17 of the bill, and we have submitted those amendments.

The Second Deputy Chair: Any other amendments to Bill 70? We will proceed with consideration of Bill 70.

Mr Offer: As a preliminary matter as we start with the committee of the whole, there was a request made during the committee that we might be able to receive information from ministry staff as to what they feel will be the average payout under this particular plan. To date, I have not received that information and I was wondering if that information is now available.

The Second Deputy Chair: Possibly the Minister of Labour may want to comment on that.

Hon Mr Mackenzie: The average claim at the moment is $4,200.

The Second Deputy Chair: Any more comments prior to consideration of Bill 70? We will now proceed in the normal sequence.

Mr Offer: On a point of order, Mr Chair: I ask that we stand down discussion on sections 1, 2, 3 and 4 at this point in time to the end of our deliberation and commence with that part of the bill referred to as section 5, which is entitled "Employee Wage Protection Program." This is in keeping, in large measure, with the procedure undertaken by us in committee deliberation.

The Second Deputy Chair: Normally we would be proceeding with the first, second and third sections. However, the honourable member for Mississauga North has requested that we put off discussion of sections 1, 2 and 3 until the end of consideration of Bill 70. Do we have agreement on the request? Would that request also include section 4?

Mr Offer: Yes, I believe I alluded to section 4 also.

The Second Deputy Chair: Are we all in agreement to postpone discussion on sections 1 to 4 until the end of the proceedings?

Agreed to.

Section/article 5:

The Second Deputy Chair: We will now be moving into consideration of section 5 of Bill 70. We do have a number of amendments to section 5. We have an amendment to section 5 of the bill proposed as subsection 40b(2) of the act, a Progressive Conservative amendment.

Mrs Witmer moves that subsection 40b(2), as set out in section 5 of the bill as reprinted, be struck out and the following substituted:

“(2) When an employee is compensated by the program, the wages for which an employee may receive compensation are regular wages and vacation pay.”

1620

Mrs Witmer: At this time I would like to make some comments regarding the intent of this amendment. I think it is important to recognize that Bill 70 presently still does have some flaws. I think it is extremely important to consider this in the context of the harsh economic circumstances and the other NDP policies. Also, we have to remember that this bill will contribute to the already deteriorating incentives to do business in Ontario. Certainly some of the points within this legislation will prompt more businesses to move south in search of a much more favourable business environment.

Our intention here is to limit the definition to earned wages without the inclusion of severance and termination. I think it is important to remember that under this bill when a payout is made to an employee, about 10% will be to reimburse the employee for wages and vacation. However, 90% will be devoted to paying him or her for severance and termination.

We are also proposing this definition because it parallels the proposed federal program. We are also very concerned, as I mentioned at the outset, about the economic climate. We really question whether we can afford to be quite this generous at this time. We have to remember that we do have a $9.7-billion deficit and that there is a projected doubling of the provincial debt to $77 billion by 1994-95.

We have already learned that this fund is going to cost $175 million in the first 18 months. That is assuming 56,339 workers access the fund. By 1992-93, assuming we do have a return to normal economic conditions, an additional 19,411 workers will access the fund at a cost of $55.33 million.

We also need to remember that the amount of the average claim has increased from $3,254 to $4,200, as was reported to us in July of this year. We need to consider the impact of the changes that are being proposed by Bill 116. These are the changes to the termination, and it would certainly make the program much more expensive if those changes were to be accepted by this government.

We need to remember that workers are protected by the unemployment insurance system and we have to remember that the minister did indicate that workers who have received their unemployment insurance premiums from the federal government may have part of their employee wage protection program claim clawed back, because the federal government does deem severance and termination pay as income. In essence, the provincial government could well be paying the federal government.

Also, this expanded definition expands the immediate liability of directors, as they were previously not liable for termination or severance pay. Thus, it is going to increase the cost of running a business in Ontario, as companies now are going to be forced either to set aside vast amounts of cash in case of a future insolvency situation or obtain liability insurance, which many of them are finding it almost impossible to purchase in the first place. The cost of doing business in this province is going to increase if the government expands the definition to include severance and termination, and there will be less money available to actually help provide jobs for employees.

These are some of the reasons. I would like to add one other. We have to remember that this definition of the wage protection fund includes not only those people who are unemployed, who lose their jobs because of bankruptcy. This also includes now under this bill those who are employed and it includes the amounts owing them in compensation for violating pay equity or pregnancy leave requirements or for wrongful dismissal for refusing to work on holidays and the like. So in time this bill, if we were to take a look at the definition that is presently being proposed, could become a tremendous burden for the taxpayers and the business people in this community. Thus, we would like to see the definition of wages limited to actual earned wages.

Mr Offer: I would like to talk to this particular amendment because it brings back some of the representations and presentations which we heard during our committee deliberations. Certainly we on this side of the House will recognize that we were dealing with what we felt to be an extremely important bill, important not only in terms of its substance but also in terms of the principle and the message it was conveying to a great many people in this province.

One of the problems we had at the outset was that in recognizing and embracing that particular importance, we would have appreciated, and certainly wanted, a great deal more time devoted to this bill and to its deliberations. We wanted more time to allow more people to be part of the process in the committee room. We wanted to be able to travel throughout the province so that more people who are in business, who are the victims of the recession, would have had the opportunity to come to the committee to talk to us about what this bill means to them and indeed how this bill could be improved.

Unfortunately, when that motion was put forward by us in committee, the members of the government and in fact, with all due respect, the members of the third party voted against travelling. I think that will be something which will always be the subject of criticism of this particular bill. At a time when we were in the worst recession since the 1930s, when 250,000 jobs had been lost, when bankruptcies were soaring, when optimism and confidence were at a very low ebb, the government members decided not to travel, decided not to listen to business, to those victims of the recession who just a year or two ago had a job, had optimism, had confidence and now did not.

That is something we will have to carry with us as we deal with these deliberations, because we did not hear from people in the Windsor area, we did not hear from people in the Ottawa area, we did not hear from people in the London area, we did not hear from people from northern Ontario. We heard from people in the area surrounding the Toronto area. The presentations and submissions were very good, but I think all will recognize that it was an obligation, if not a responsibility, of ourselves to vote in favour of travelling on this particular bill. Though we and our caucus did recognize that, we are certainly sorry that was not the case.

I think that before we deal with this particular amendment, we have to recognize that the bill is really of two parts. The first is the part which talks about a fund for employees to access, to come and receive dollars as the result of a loss of wages, vacation pay, termination and severance. That is one area of the bill, an important area of the bill, but it is not the only part of the bill.

There is a second part to the bill which talks about in many ways the enforcement aspect of the bill, that being what happens when an employee is making application to the fund and receives money. What steps are taken through the employment standards branch to try to recoup some of those dollars? That is the enforcement aspect.

During our discussion of this bill today, and if unable to complete it today, then in the future, I think we have to keep that very clear distinction in mind. There is the access portion of the bill, there is the enforcement portion of the bill, and in many ways, although of course they are within the same bill, they are not in fact related.

1630

The proposal put forward by the member for Waterloo North is one that says that the funds which an employee may have access to through the fund are to be limited to wages and vacation pay; therefore, severance and termination will be excluded.

We had some very good discussion around this particular point and there was no question that a great number of people brought forward their opinions on this matter. When I heard submissions made, many by the small business persons in this province, they indicated that they recognized their obligation. They knew what was owed by them to their employees. They understood that and accepted that. In fact that type of obligation and responsibility is now found under the Ontario Business Corporations Act. This bill does not create any new rights.

The parliamentary assistant, who is now looking at me, will be saying, "Well, we think it does." In fact we have had that discussion and I believe this particular bill does not create any new right of access to funds by employees. It does create an enforcement mechanism, but it does not create anything new that is not now part of legislation somewhere in this province, particularly under the Ontario Business Corporations Act.

But I note that under the Employment Standards Act there is a recognition that termination pay, severance pay in certain instances, vacation pay and of course wages are things that are earned under the Employment Standards Act. I and my caucus have thought long and hard about the whole limitation aspect of the bill and what it means. We believe that if a person is entitled to certain benefits under a particular piece of legislation, then he should be entitled to those benefits, and if a fund is set up by the government to secure those benefits, then so be it.

We believe that as a result this amendment flies in the face not only of the small business persons and many people who came before the committee discussing and accepting their obligations, but also of provisions under the Employment Standards Act, which we enhanced when we were in government, and we are quite proud of that. Though I understand very well the concerns indicated by the member for Waterloo North, I believe there are other ways in which this bill can be amended which come to grips with and meet the concerns of those people who came before the committee.

This amendment, in my opinion, does not do so. We will be moving amendments of a different kind and a different nature as we proceed through this exercise. I am pleased to see the Minister of Labour is here. I hope he will think long and hard about some of these amendments which both myself and my colleague in the third party will be bringing forward. They are amendments that are really in many ways the product of people coming to our committee. They are in many ways a recognition of the implications of this bill.

We understand the principle that was announced last October by the Premier. I believe it was stated at the very time the Premier announced the government was going to allow Varsity to leave this province. It was stated at that very time and at that very table. As they were allowing Varsity to leave this province, as the guaranteed employment levels that Varsity had already indicated would be lowered, and as the government and the Premier were saying, "That is okay," so they also indicated there was going to be an employee wage protection fund which was designed to secure wages earned by those employees who were the victims of the recession.

I think that when we talk about some of these sections in the bill, we will first see that the principles as enunciated by the Premier are not ones that are carried forward in this bill, that in fact this bill is not limited just to people who have lost their jobs as a result of the recession. I believe it will be necessary to fully debate that in this Legislature, as to whether we are, first, well aware that the principle, the words of this bill, do not bespeak the principles of the legislation as previously announced by the Premier. That is going to be something we are going to have to talk about, something we are going to have to deliberate, and it is something in the end we are going to have to vote upon.

Though I speak against the amendment put forward by my friend the member for Waterloo North at this time, I do so because there are rights, obligations, privileges and responsibilities which have been outlined and enhanced under the Employment Standards Act. These types of rights, responsibilities and enhancements can be met in a sensitive and secure fashion. We can address the concerns that have been raised by those individuals who came before the committee. Again, unfortunately the committee hearings were severely shortened. They were severely curtailed because of the lack of being able to travel on this committee on a very important bill.

I will be bringing forward amendments that I believe will meet those concerns. I know that I and my caucus have opinions on this particular piece of legislation. We have concerns as to what this legislation means, we have concerns about what message this bill has in terms of small business, small business creation and job creation in this province.

We believe the people of this province are looking at this point to members of this government to put some substance behind some of the speeches they make. If they truly believe in the importance of small business, then they will accept some of our amendments. If they do not, then their speeches must remain only words on a piece of paper, because the opportunity they have had through this deliberation to back up those words on paper with substance will have been lost. I look forward to a continuing debate on these and other issues on this bill.

Mr Carr: I am pleased to speak for a few moments on the amendment that was proposed by my colleague. I think the intent of this amendment is very clear; the intent was to parallel the federal program. All too often, as I take over my responsibilities as Industry, Trade and Technology critic, when we sit back and reflect what business says in some of the concerns it has, it is more about how the regulations and various programs interact. When you look at them, it often seems like governments at all levels, because of overlap and entanglement, do their very best to make it complicated. Instead of trying to smooth things down and make some of the programs run parallel so people can understand them properly, we attempt to make them head in different directions.

1640

It was interesting earlier today that we had the discussions with the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology, who not more than about an hour or so ago went on and on about how they are listening to business and how this is the new government and they are trying to work with them. That proposal that I sent over for him to read on his way home this evening, when his chauffeur is taking him along the QEW back to Rexdale there, I hope he will flip to page 65 where they talk about what they would like to

see. I really think that the minister, being in such a high portfolio—in fact he was out yesterday in Oakville saying what a great job it was to have this position, but unfortunately around the cabinet table he must not have had much of a chance to speak up.

Businesses, through the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, which he again talked about having a meeting with, and also the chambers of all different sizes, had some concerns with the regulations. In fact, they list it, after taxes, as the number one problem for small business in Ontario. It is not the free trade agreement, it is not the cost and availability of funds or even the high Canadian dollar. They say the two biggest things are, number one, taxes, and number two, regulations. Instead of trying to simplify it, what do we do? We get two parallel programs that could work in conjunction and then we get them heading off in different directions, because governments try to claim that it was their idea first or that they cared more so they gave more.

Instead of thinking of some of the small businesses and trying to end this entanglement, when you look at it, it often appears to the people in the business community that governments do everything they can to make it very, very difficult. Most small businesses will need legal advice to figure a lot of this out. It is probably not a coincidence that most of the people writing the laws in the past have all been lawyers. They make it so difficult and so hard to understand that they keep themselves employed, although I think last time a lot of the lawyers ended up on the scrap heap after the last election. This is a particular example of that. Instead of simplifying it, what we do is we try to make it more complicated.

It is interesting to note something that I think we will be hammering away at probably for the next four years. If they go their full five, I guess we have another four. With the amount of money that comes out of a program, somewhere the money has to go into it. Something is very clear and if the government has not heard it or understood it, it should. When we increase taxes, whatever it may be, for whatever good intentions and good reasons there may be, if we increase taxes to pay for some of the programs—and we had a great debate on this very question this morning about whether it will be payroll tax or how they are going to pay for it. I think it was interesting to note—by the vote of the government I think we know very clearly, and if I was a betting man, I think I would take out a bet and know exactly where the funding will come from. None the less, what it very clearly shows is that if you have higher taxes it means fewer jobs. Here we are talking about a program to protect workers, and what we are doing is taking another step and putting another onus on some of the businesses, particularly the small businesses.

I think the chamber of commerce said it when it said that some of the funding principles penalize the healthy and responsible employers, and it may have some concerns about that. What we have attempted to do is be a little bit practical with some of our solutions. We are now looking at a deficit which is probably $10 billion or $12 billion. Whatever we can cut it back to now is going to be the big question over the next few weeks.

People say the fund will be $175 million—that is what it will cost—just like the Treasurer of this province stood in the Legislature and said he would keep the deficit to $9.7 billion. We all see how those projections were wrong. So when they say $175 million, what will it be? We will probably hit the bicentennial mark of over $200 million even before the first eight months are hit. They talk about $175 million over 18 months. The Treasurer was so far off.

It was interesting that during the hearings on the budget his parliamentary assistant went around and kept saying: "Boy, our numbers are right on. The federal government never hits them, but our numbers are right on. Aren't we terrific?" Less than a week later we have a Treasurer of this province who has to make cuts, probably to the total of about $2 billion if the truth be known.

Then we wonder why people are a little cynical about politicians. They go around and champion things and not more than a week later they have to backtrack. So when we have these figures, $175 million that it is going to cost, assuming the amount of workers who are there, the business people look at that and say, "The $175 million is another guess."

If we, as we were going through school, were as wrong as the government is in its projections, we would never have passed any grades. They are continually wrong and it is to the point now where people do not even bother looking at the figures. They know they are going to be wrong; they know they are going to be off. Depending on what happens with this current recession with the number of workers, putting some of the projections in place, I guarantee they are going to be off as well.

As we sit here, we are looking at doing something to try to be practical in making some of the changes. At the very time when you look at page after page—some members may have seen some of the reasons that businesses were leaving over the last little while. There was a report in the Toronto Star that talked about the companies going for business and why they had left. The overall cost of doing business is such that they are saying, "Thanks very much."

The ironic part of it is and the sad part of it is that these businesses are struggling so hard to survive. When I talk to some of them and I say, "Why don't you come out to some of these committee hearings?"—and there were numerous ones, as we all know, over the summer, whether they were the budget hearings or whether they were these hearings—most of the business people say: "We don't have enough time to do the things we need to do now in the amount of hours. We're working six hours, seven hours a day, more than 15 hours, and you want us to come out and talk to a government that has continually not listened to us."

We have the government in question period championing and saying: "Oh, yes, we're going to listen. We're going to listen to the opposition parties." I sit back and remember what happened in this very House when the Premier said that he wanted input on the conflict of interest. Less than 45 minutes later, they invoked closure in that committee because they did not want all the publicity about all the scandals that were happening in the government at the time.

Unfortunately the people of this province and the small business owners know very clearly where this government stands, and it is a sad state of affairs that the situation is such that groups such as the chamber that have been around since 1911 and employing so many people do fine documents that outline it to the government and nothing gets implemented. They do not listen.

We are already now at the point where we are the highest-taxed jurisdiction in not only Canada but all of North America, and yet we are in a situation now where instead of trying to look at the root causes, this government is trying to champion the causes by trying to look at giving some of the money instead of trying to get to the root of the problem.

I guess as I sit here and look at some of the amendments, the problem with this entire piece of legislation is that there is no long-term planning and in fact, there had not been under the previous government either.

It was interesting that we looked at some of the changes that are here and some of the ones we have proposed, and I hope all members would attempt to keep in mind the very clear message that is being sent by some of the folks who are in the small businesses out there, the people from the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, the people who in most cases have less than 10 employees, who are struggling to keep up.

If we can do things like try to make the programs parallel each other and simplify them and end the overlap and entanglement, I think we would be doing well. If we did nothing else but that, it would help the small businesses and the people who are out there, the entrepreneurs who in spite of these tough economic times, in spite of the fact of what the government is doing to them, are trying to survive out there. So I think the amendment that has been brought forward is—

The First Deputy Chair: May I remind the member that we have granted him considerable latitude in his remarks, and I would appreciate it if the member could focus on the amendment.

1650

Mr Carr: As a matter of fact, I was just about to close. You actually kept me on longer. I thought I was focused. Yes, I was wandering. I was just about to be brought back by the fine new Chair whom we have up there.

In closing, the fact of the matter is that what we are looking at here is to limit the definition. I look at the bill and I see the original definition that is on page 2 of the bill. In all the referring back to sections 39c, 39f and 39k, as they are laid out in this particular piece of legislation, the fact of the matter is it makes it more complicated for everyone involved. What we need to do is simplify it.

I hope we would have the support of all members. I think we have heard from the Liberal Party members saying they would not, but I hope the government will take a look at it.

Mr Arnott: I am very pleased to stand in my place today and support the motion that was sponsored by my colleague the member for Waterloo North to Bill 70. I will read the amendment very briefly. "When an employee is compensated by the program, the wages for which an employee may receive compensation are regular wages and vacation pay." Of course the intent of this amendment is to limit the money paid out from the fund to the dollars which are actually earned, wages and vacation pay, and limit the money paid out, not to include dollars that are not actually earned but only provided by way of legislation, meaning severance and termination pay.

I believe this is a very important amendment which would greatly enhance the ability of small businesses in Ontario to compete with their counterparts in other jurisdictions.

I was recently appointed our party's small business advocate and I take a great deal of enthusiasm to that role. I am looking forward to working with my seatmate, the new critic for Industry, Trade and Technology, as we attempt to bring forward positive suggestions and so forth to the government, and hopefully they will pick up on some of them.

I would like to beg the Chair's indulgence for a minute or so and add a personal observation to this. My grandfather's name was Leonard Arnott and in my opinion he was a great man. He started a business in 1929 at the height of the recession when he was 21 years old. As soon as he became of age, he signed a contract to build a bridge and I think it took a great deal of courage and a great deal of vision to initiate a small business at a time when we were coming into the Great Depression.

He kept at this business for many years, and when I was growing up, I can recall being around with him. He had more energy at 70 than I have at 28. He worked so hard, he worked seven days a week and he put his life into this business. He passed away about five or six years ago. I worked for this company. It is called Arnott Construction Ltd out of Collingwood, and I paid my way through university with the wages I earned while working summers.

Recently, the president of Arnott Construction, who happens to be my uncle, wrote to the Premier on July 9, and I would like to read a couple of paragraphs from the letter. In the interest of time, I will not read the whole thing, but it reads:

"Dear Premier:

"We are a 62-year-old, family-owned construction company involved in heavy engineering construction throughout Ontario for both the private and public sectors. In our peak construction season, we should employ around 175 people in the office, shop and field. Presently we have 78 employees, with many on UIC, work-sharing or reduced hours. I said we were a 62-year-old company, but we may not make it to 63 under the type of legislation that you are enacting or entertaining."

The letter continues and concludes:

"The economy of Ontario is in difficulty and is of concern to us all. Your budget and the changes in the labour law, if implemented, would impose further financial and administrative stress on the economy as it faces increased competition through a more integrated global economy.... The implementation of any of these proposals in the present economic climate would result in increased scepticism in Ontario at a time we are struggling to recover from a serious recession. The welfare of both employers and employees will not be enhanced in the short or long term by their adoption."

It is signed by Wayne Arnott; as I said, my uncle.

I would like to say to the Minister of Labour and his parliamentary assistant over there that if they use their majority to defeat this amendment, I guarantee them that companies such as this will not be in business next year, and in fact they will be destroying jobs in Ontario.

Hon Mr Mackenzie: Just a few comments briefly: First off, to the member for Wellington, I have difficulty understanding how this money that has been earned by employees and is finally able to be collected would destroy any small firm at this point in time in Ontario.

To the member for Waterloo North, I simply want to state that I understand the position she has taken. I understand her amendment, but if she thinks that reducing from $4,200—if 10% is what applies to wages or vacation pay—to some $400 is a just return to the workers who have earned severance pay and other termination pay that they are entitled to, it is a pretty weak piece of legislation and does not do exactly what we intended and set out to do with this piece of legislation: to give as much protection to workers as we could for money they had actually earned and was theirs. That is why we simply do not buy the amendment.

On the federal bill, I can tell her we are negotiating with them, and there is a pretty general agreement if we see the federal legislation. Forgive me, I have only been in this House 16 years, but this is an issue I raised at least six or seven or eight times over a period of better than 10 years and got the answer, "It should be resolved through federal changes."

On a couple of occasions, previous ministers of labour actually had commitments that it was going to happen, and to this day we do not have it and we are not sure yet that we will see the finalization of the current bill. If we do, up to their maximum of $2,000—the agreement is not signed, once again, so I will not make that absolute either, but the intent of the conversations we have had seems to be that this money, to the extent that we are entitled to it, would be paid into our fund if this happens. We think there will not be any difficulty, because we do not want a duplication as well in resolving that particular problem.

I think those are the key points. I was pleased to hear that at least on this point, we had the support of my colleague the member for Mississauga North.

Mr Offer: If I might make a comment just based on the minister's last remark, a number of people came before the committee and spoke about the federal plan, which has not yet been passed, as well as ours, which obviously has not been passed but seemed to be a little farther down the line. They were questioning how the minister views the discussion and the amalgamation of these two plans.

The question, I think, boiled down to whether it is the opinion of the minister that if there are two plans in place, the amount of money that an employee could access would be either $5,000 plus $2,000, or $5,000, of which $2,000 would come from the federal coffers. I would like to use this opportunity, if I might, to ask the Minister of Labour, in the event that there are two plans that have been passed, what will be the position of the government?

Hon Mr Mackenzie: The federal plan does not cover all the same areas that we cover, but the maximum entitlement would be $5,000, I can tell the member that, not $7,000, if that is the question he is putting.

1700

The First Deputy Chair: Is it the pleasure of the committee that the motion carry?

Mr Offer: I understand there is an agreement to stack these votes till the end. Maybe we could get some direction from the Chair as to the procedure. Does it require that five members stand?

The First Deputy Chair: The procedure that was agreed, I think you have already heard, is that we put the amendment to a vote and if five members stand then the vote is deferred.

All those in favour of the amendment please say "aye." All those opposed? In my opinion, the amendment is lost.

Vote stacked.

The First Deputy Chair: Mr Offer moves that clause 40b(2)(d) of the act, as set out in section 5 of the bill as reprinted, be struck out.

Mr Offer: This is a very important area of the legislation because it speaks to our roles and responsibilities as legislators. The amendment I am proposing would have the effect of moving any change in the amount of payment from regulation, which it now is in the bill, to legislation.

I believe all members of this assembly recognize what that means. By regulation, changes could be made in cabinet at the stroke of a pen whereby the amount which is indicated now as being $5,000 could be increased to $6,000, to $10,000, to $15,000, to anything the cabinet so desires, without the opportunity of debate in this Legislature, without the opportunity of members of this Legislature to vote.

I believe this is an extremely important amendment in that it speaks to our role as members. Clearly there is a concern out there that after the initial 18-month period the funding for this program may be by an employer's tax. Clearly one cannot dispute that concern. Clearly it is being read as a negative message to business. Clearly we know that any change in the dollar amount in an upwards fashion or any change in the breadth of protection will have an impact on the cost of doing business in this province, because as we all know in the event this bill passes—I can count the members in the House—insurance will have to be obtained for all businesses in this province, insurance to cover liability. When the scope of liability is increased, that must be measured in the premium paid, and that premium paid is going to be by the small business person.

We are saying we recognize the responsibility and the authority of government. We are asking government to recognize the responsibility on us, on this side of the Legislature, to be able to speak to changes in the liability of the fund. We do not think it is an amendment which should cause great concern to the government. The minister himself, in the drafting of this legislation, the minister and his cabinet in approving this legislation, the minister, cabinet and caucus in, I believe, supporting this legislation, saw no problem in inserting the figure $5,000 in the legislation. They did not see any problem in doing that.

What I am saying on this side and what this amendment is saying is that if they saw no problem in inserting the $5,000 figure in the legislation in the first instance, then surely they should not be concerned about any change in that particular dollar figure going through the legislation again. Surely they cannot have a concern about legislators talking about any change in the monetary amount of coverage of this bill. Certainly they must accept our role and responsibility and the opportunity we have to ensure, and in fact guarantee to the many people outside this Legislature who live their lives, who run their businesses, who might just want to share their opinions with us.

By not accepting this amendment the government is shutting the door on true committee consultation. It is shutting the door on anyone who wants to talk about any future or potential change to this legislation. It is shutting the door on the small business person and the large business person. It is shutting the door on the employees to come before a legislative committee to talk about any change and what it means to them.

This amendment speaks not only to the bill but in a very fundamental way to our roles and responsibilities. The minister has responded quite forthrightly to a question I initially posed, and that was, what was the average payout they could expect? The minister was very clear and said that on average it would be approximately $4,200. In a letter received by myself and probably all other committee members from the minister, the answer to the question as to how many people will be eligible on estimate to this fund was provided, and that was 55,000 people.

1710

It says here: "You have asked about the estimate takeup for the program. When the program was being designed, ministry estimates indicated that around 55,000 workers would be helped during its first 18 months of operation."

Let's just take those two figures, 55,000 people estimated with an estimated takeup of $4,200. What happens when we multiply those figures together? Members should help me out on this. When we multiply these figures out, it may be an estimated monetary takeup rate of over $200 million, $231 million to be exact.

We have to ask questions as to where they are going to get the extra dollars. This fund has been budgeted for $175 million. In committee it was clear that the $175 million, as budgeted for the first 18 months, included not only the takeup rate, but also the staff required to process these applications. We asked what the staffing would be. If memory serves me correctly, the response was 107 new people, so 107 new people must be employed as a result of this bill. I do not know what that result in dollars and cents is, but on a quick calculation over 18 months I think $5 million is not out of the question. We have to keep that in mind and recognize that it does not include desks, tables, chairs, telephones and all the operations around. Now we have new staff of approximately $5 million or $6 million. Those are my figures. The 107 is by ministry staff.

We know from the minister's own statements that there are going to be about 55,000 people taking up this program. We know, again by ministry statistics, that it is going to be about $4,200 and we also know that the chance of recovery of these dollars from directors is minimal indeed, and we will get into the enforcement aspect later on.

In the letter the minister provided, we have also known there is going to be a communications budget of $500,000. I add these figures together and I say we are away over budget; we are into $250,000,000. So the question is, if that is the case, what will be the problem in any change of liability being moved into this Legislature? What is the concern, the problem, the fear, the consternation of the government in saying: "We don't want the Legislature to talk about increasing the dollar amounts. We don't want the Legislature to discuss broadening out the protection. We want to do that at the cabinet table on Wednesday mornings behind closed doors."

That is not good enough, because there are many people, employees and business owners out there, who say: "If you change liability, if you propose change, we want to have a say in this. We want to share with you what the implications are for change. We want to tell you what it means to us in terms of jobs, investing in this province and expanding in this province," and we in this assembly should not be afraid of having changes of this nature taken out to committee.

I may oppose it but I do not dispute their right to do that, but I believe that if they do it, they as a government have an obligation, if not to the opposition parties then to the people of this province, to the people who have lost jobs, to the businesses that are trying to create jobs and to the existing establishments that are trying to expand to create wealth, to say, "We'll listen to you." The way in which we can do that is by making certain that any change is done in this chamber through legislation and not through regulation.

To many people this might not sound like a very important aspect—regulation, legislation; legislation, regulation—but to us here and to the many people who do care about this particular aspect it is important. It is important to send out a message that they will be able to speak to government and to the opposition parties. They will be able to share what is important to them.

By voting against this amendment, the government closes the door to those people who want to tell them what it means to the future growth of this province and of any change to this legislation. They close the door to people who think they may want the changes altered. They close the door to the business entrepreneurs, those people who are investing capital either in terms of money or intelligence and trying to make a go of it in this province.

They have an obligation and an opportunity right here and now to say: "Our speeches about a new climate of co-ordination and consultation are more than words on a piece of paper. They are going to be backed up by substance."

By voting in favour of this amendment, they put substance behind those words. By saying no to this amendment, their speeches ring hollow. They will never be more than words on a piece of paper which the people out there will know mean absolutely nothing because today and right here they had the opportunity to say yes to this amendment.

Mrs Witmer: I would like to speak to the motion and indicate that I share some of the concerns that have been expressed by the member for Mississauga North. I would like to preface my comments by saying I am very surprised to see that additional payments are indeed going to be prescribed by regulation as opposed to amendments to the act, which would allow for a full and complete public debate.

I am surprised because I heard the Premier's words on Monday. I have heard the Premier's words since he took office. He has certainly talked repeatedly about the need for consultation and co-operation, the need for public input, and I am surprised that these additional payments are going to be prescribed by regulation and that the cabinet is being given considerable power, a totally unchecked power. They do not have to answer to this House in any way. I believe it is extremely important that there be consultation with the public and an opportunity for public scrutiny into all program spending increases, and that is certainly what is being suggested here: additional payments above and beyond what is included in Bill 70 at the present time.

I am concerned that additional components to the compensation package can be made by regulation. One of the reasons we had the public hearings this summer was to hear from the different groups throughout the province. All the employer groups mentioned to us that they were very opposed to and were very concerned about the ability of the government to increase not only the program's ceiling, but to add additional components to the compensation package by regulation.

1720

I would like to ask the members opposite, why is it not fair to consult with the public? Why do they not want to be accountable to the taxpayers? Why do they not want to subject any increases to public scrutiny? I feel the elected members of this House need to be fiscally responsible and accountable to the taxpayers. If we are going to start making changes and additional payments by regulation, there will not be any opportunity to engage in any dialogue with the taxpayers and we will not be demonstrating fiscal responsibility.

I am also very concerned because the 18-month period will soon elapse, as will happen in April 1992.

We also heard in committee hearings from many of the union representatives who felt the ceiling was not high enough, so I can see that additional payments will be made in the future and I can see the cost of this fund increasing rapidly. This is simply going to increase the cost of doing business in this province and it is going to have a very negative impact on the business climate.

I would add, and I think sometimes the government forgets, that it is business that creates the jobs. If it creates further hardships for business, there will not be jobs for employees. We are hearing repeatedly about companies moving south. We are hearing about companies not expanding. We are hearing about companies that are downsizing. Just this week I heard about one company that could have increased the number of employees who are working for it, but in this uncertain economic climate it simply cannot afford to expand, and it will be going south of the border when further expansion does take place.

I say to this government that it should be very careful about the legislation, and I would ask it to very carefully consider supporting this amendment; that is, that any changes be made by amendment to the act, by the members of this House, as opposed to by regulation.

Mr Carr: I want to add my comments to this particular amendment; essentially, withdrawal of "such additional amounts as may be prescribed by regulation." I guess I am one of those people who believe that when you put something in that can so fundamentally change the bill, it should be done after public input and public debate. It was interesting to see that some of the members opposite felt that way.

I know the member for Etobicoke-Rexdale and the member for Welland-Thorold, who just passed by a few moments ago, day in and day out during the Police Services Act championed the cause that some of the changes should not be put into the regulations. As a matter of fact—

Mr Kormos: I still champion that.

Mr Carr: The member says he still champions that, so hopefully he will be here for the vote. In fact, during the hearings on Sunday shopping, he did also make that known and did champion it. He also, to his credit, did speak up against the government and had the courage to do so. Of course he has the whip marks to prove it, but he did definitely make some comments. I think when you look at it, that is what people are looking for: somebody who is consistent and says something regardless of how much hot water it gets him in with the Premier. Although he said that, he is in so much hot water now that I guess it really did not matter too much anyway.

The First Deputy Chair: You will help the debate if you keep on topic. We were very generous already in our interpretation. I would remind the member for Oakville South that he will help the process of the debate if he can focus his comments.

Mr Carr: Thank you very much, Mr Chairman. Getting back to the regulations that were championed by so many people in this House—I think we may know one reason the Chair is a wee bit sensitive, because what I am getting at with the Police Services Act, through the regulations, is that is how the oath to the Queen got eliminated. I think the Chair might have wished that his colleagues the members for Welland-Thorold and Etobicoke-Rexdale had been a little bit stronger in some of their debates, so it did not come out.

Mr Kormos: How could I have been stronger, Gary? You weren't there. How do you know?

Mr Carr: That is true. It is difficult to get stronger, because of course he received all the public outcry about that. It shows very clearly what happens when there are good intentions. We say: "Oh, the good intentions are there. We'll just add additional payments as may be prescribed by regulation." Then poor people are left to carry the bag, like the present Chair when he was Solicitor General. They changed the oath to the Queen and then the public outcry comes out.

I think that carves very clearly in the minds of the members opposite what happens when we leave the regulations and the changes to some of the people who are not elected. Essentially what happens is there are no checks and balances. The system we have now is such that there can be public debate regardless of whether you agree on it, disagree on it, whether it is good debate, bad debate, and we have seen all that. We have seen good proposals, good debates, good amendments made. But when you put it in regulations, things get signed in the dead of night when the regulations are approved. Oops, I should not use that with the present Chair.

We presently have a situation where payments can be changed as prescribed by the regulations, and I say that is not the proper way to do it. There should be public dialogue. I used the example of the oath to the Queen that was so sensitive. Had there been public dialogue, had people had a chance to have their fair say, just like we could have over the payments here, whatever they may be changed to—whether they go up, whether they go down, whether the amounts go sideways—the public has to realize that there is public input.

I think that is why there is a little bit of cynicism towards the whole process, because what happens when you do it in the regulations, very clearly, is things get changed that the public does not want, because some bureaucrat somewhere says: "Let's slide this thing through. The cabinet isn't looking. They're too busy with everything else on the agenda. Let's get this thing pushed through."

I say that the people who should be making fundamental changes, which I think this change in the amount is, should be the elected people. Then if the public does not like it, it can toss them out next time and say, "You shouldn't have changed that amount; it should have remained the same," or, "It should have gone higher," or, "It should have gone lower."

When it is done through regulations, the characters who do it in the night and make some of these changes cannot be thrown out based on their actions. The elected people in this House can. I would encourage the members opposite to reflect on some of the things the member for Welland-Thorold says, who will probably get up and speak about these regulations as passionately as he does. I will not be able to say it nearly as well as the member opposite, but the fundamental principle of changing things in regulations is undemocratic. I would encourage other members to speak up like the member for Welland-Thorold, who has done so in the past, because that is what the people want.

Just as a wee bit of an aside, if the Chair will allow me, I do not think it is a little bit of a coincidence that before the last election, when they held the poll, the two members, if I remember correctly, my friend the member for Scarborough North and also the member for Welland-Thorold, were the two members who had the highest percentage that they were going to win by. It is because of the fact that, regardless of what side they are on, they speak out on bad amendments, regulations like this. Members like the member for Welland-Thorold say it when they are in opposition and they say it when they are in government, even sometimes to their detriment.

So I say to the people out there, regulations and the changes that we are talking about here under clause 40b(2)(d) should not be, and the amendment to take that out is a good one. I say, get the pen out and take it out.

1730

Mr Mahoney: I must admit I have talked to our critic, my colleague the member for Mississauga North, about what went on in committee, because I was not at the committee, and I am quite astounded to find out that the government members defeated this amendment in committee, I am informed. I find that disconcerting, particularly coming from this government, because the current Labour minister and all of his colleagues, when they sat over here, were somewhat effusive about putting their viewpoints forward about openness and honesty in government. How can something be open when it is clearly a blank cheque?

My first concern, if something like this is not deleted, is that I would have thought this particular clause, "such additional payments as may be prescribed by regulation," would have been written by the bureaucrats somewhere and perhaps put in. I could accept that the minister or his personal staff might have missed it, but to find out that it was indeed supported by the committee would suggest that there was a whip on the vote and the whip of the committee informed the members that they were to vote against the amendment put forward by my colleague the member for Mississauga North.

Is that not true? Everyone thought for themselves? There is something new happening over there? I would be surprised to hear that. I am sure they were told that the government's decision was to vote against this. Clearly, that would seem to fly in the face of the Minister of Labour's comments when he was in opposition, which would have been for open, accessible government, and suggests that decisions regarding the amount of the payments to be agreed upon should be decided by regulation.

I think it is important that the public understand the difference. If this is deleted and there is a desire on the part of the government of the day, of whatever party, to amend the legislation to allow for the amount of the claim moneys available on a per-case basis to be increased, then they would simply come back into this Legislature and have to introduce an amendment and have to introduce perhaps new, changed legislation, revised legislation, which would allow for public comment.

Even if it did not go out to committee, if it only went in to committee of the whole, it would at the very least allow those of us who are elected to represent our constituents to have input and comment and it would allow the process and the proper opportunity for us to confer with those people affected, to talk to the taxpayers about how their taxpayers' dollars are being used and to have a proper democratic dialogue.

I will be delighted to hear the Minister of Labour rise in his place and announce to this Legislature and to the province that he is prepared to agree with this amendment and thinks that indeed there should be full public disclosure and public debate on amending the amount. I find it frankly incredible that the minister would not be prepared to accept that kind of amendment, knowing his track record and his background and his party's desire for openness in government.

Nobody should be given a blank cheque. No ministry should be given a blank cheque, and when you take a look at the serious problems we are facing in this province, and we have already heard that the $9.7-billion catastrophic deficit—unheard of in the history of this province or even this country for a provincial government to run such a deficit—how in goodness—

Hon Mr Allen: It depends how you measure it.

Mr Mahoney: It does not depend how you measure it. That is the problem with NDP logic and thinking. The people at home know how to measure $9.7 billion. It has got so many zeroes I cannot count that high. They understand a deficit is a deficit is a deficit. It does not matter how you measure it, I say to the Minister of Colleges and Universities. He of all people, with his educational background, should be able to measure a $9.7-billion deficit.

Hon Mr Allen: Go back and do that. Do some arithmetic.

Mr Mahoney: Maybe the minister would like the floor, Mr Chairman. Would he like the floor? I am quite prepared to sit down if he would like the floor.

The First Deputy Chair: Order, please. Will the member for Mississauga West please sit down.

Mr Mahoney: I was trying not to be provocative.

The First Deputy Chair: Would the member please take his chair. The member should not be surprised that he would cause some aggravation. The tenor of his comments was perhaps of an order that would call for some response. The member would do well to address the issue before the committee and to get on with the discussion that is relevant to this debate. Please continue.

Mr Mahoney: Mr Chairman, I am quite surprised at your comments, and I would hope that you are not showing a bias here, because frankly my comments were clearly directed to this amendment.

The First Deputy Chair: Would the member please take his chair. The member has the floor. You may continue to focus on the debate and your comments are out of order.

Mr Mahoney: As I was saying, Mr Chair, I was focusing and will continue to focus on this amendment. I was being, I think, somewhat rudely interrupted by the Minister of Colleges and Universities.

The point of the matter is that if you are talking about this amendment, if this is deleted, then the government would not indeed be given a blank cheque. With due respect, that is my point and that is my concern and I think it is clearly focused.

How can we stand here and entrust these people, who run up $9.7-billion deficits that we hear could go substantially higher, with a blank cheque where they can simply in a back room write up an amendment, call up the bureaucrats and say: "Folks, we want to double the amount of money that's going to be allowed here, so just write up some regulation. We'll post it in some book somewhere that we stick in a drawer. Nobody has to talk to the public. Nobody has to bring it on the floor of the Legislature?"

Are you suggesting, Mr Chairman—I am sure you are not—that those comments are off topic? They are not off topic, they are bang on. Those are the concerns that the taxpayers expect the members of the opposition to hold this government accountable on.

Instead the Minister of Colleges and Universities tries to get excited about how you measure a $9.7-billion deficit. How high is high? How high is the water, mama? Let me tell him how high it is. We are close to going under, and these people expect us, in a bill as important as this, dealing with—

Interjection.

Mr Mahoney: He is being told to be quiet so he does not distract me.

—dealing with a bill that I agree is extremely important for the workers of this province and there is some real merit to this bill, if the Minister of Labour would come to his senses and realize that he has no right to demand of this Legislature or this province or the taxpayers that we should give him or his band of spending spendthrifts any kind of a blank cheque.

It is absolutely absurd. In fact, I really hope that the minister will accept my colleague's amendment and recognize that the responsible way to bring in an amendment to increase the amount of money that would be allotted on a per-claim basis—which may be necessary. I have no doubt that there should be a requirement down the road. Times change. It may be necessary for us to increase this amount, but they should be accountable.

When we form the next government and I have the opportunity to be the Premier, I should be accountable? Without a doubt. We should all be accountable as elected officials in this House, and under no circumstances will I go along, nor will my colleagues go along, with a blank cheque. I would hope that the Minister of Labour would recognize that and accept this very sensible and very progressive amendment.

Mr Offer: I think we have spoken about this amendment and some crucial elements to the amendment and what it very much means in terms of the ongoing examination of the bill. At the outset I posed a series of numerical types of assertions: first, that the average claim would be approximately $4,200; second, that there is a takeup of approximately 55,000; third, that there are 107 people to be employed to process the claims; fourth, that the communications budget is in the area of $500,000.

1740

As an addendum to the employment of 107, I think we can agree that is something in the area of $5 million or $6 million. When one does a little bit of calculation, it looks like we are close to a quarter of a billion dollars. I am wondering if the minister or his staff can respond to these particular numerical concerns I am expressing.

Hon Mr Mackenzie: First, just two or three comments to the member for Mississauga North: The retroactive applications through the transitional period clearly have a $4,000 limit on them. As well as that, closed files in the employment standards backlog will actually cost less than forecast. The estimated value of these files is $70 million to $80 million. The initial rush has some of the major claims in it. We think the figures that have been used are certainly defensible and accurate in the figuring we have done.

I want to deal also with the comments made about the influence this could have, for example, on the ceiling. I think the member knows, if he stops and thinks for a minute, that we are dealing in this amendment he has moved with the definition of "wages" alone. I think the reason for it is the government's intention to include unpaid benefit contributions in the definition of "wages" for the purpose of compensating workers in the construction industry. Construction workers are excluded from severance and termination requirements under the Employment Standards Act at present.

That is all we have looked at here, but there is also an additional group that has talked to us and it might very well be something we want to take a look at. I am talking about the garment workers who have raised the issue of whether or not the piecework pay they get could be included in the definition of "wages." It is something you might have to take a look at.

With respect to the arguments made by both of the parties in opposition about the regulatory adjustments being unfair or opening the door to thousands of blank cheques, as somebody said, I suggest to the members of both parties that they take a look at the number of pieces of legislation they have passed. It would be interesting, even in the period the Liberals were in power, to take a look at the legislation they passed that had the ability, through regulation, to make changes. Drivers' licences are one example. We could go down the list with many more. I am simply saying this is not something new. This is in fact practice in many of the pieces of legislation we have in the province today.

Mr Offer: The minister responded, talking about an amendment to clause 40b(2)(b)—"amounts that are deemed to be wages." In fact, that is not my amendment. My amendment is to clause 40b(2)(d), which has nothing to do with the question as to what is or is not and what may or may not be defined as "wages." It has to do with "such additional payments as may be prescribed by regulation."

We are talking about controlling, through this Legislature, any change to the payments. I hope the government recognizes this has a major impact. It is not enough for the minister to say, "I can change a licence by regulation." We are talking about the creation of business in this province, about the creation of jobs in this province, about the implications to the cost of doing business in this province and about whether a government is prepared to say to the people of this province, "We are ready to listen to any change that we may make under this legislation."

By saying no to this amendment, the government is shutting this door. They know, I know and everyone here knows those changes will be made without any consultation whatsoever. The people of this province will know of changes only after they read them in a news release or in a media report. It just is not good enough talking about implications of changes to that piece of legislation without knowing what it means to the people out there.

The Premier spoke today in this Legislature on the federal government's constitutional proposal. On page 3 of that statement, he said, "The economy is the real constitution of this country." Let us put some substance behind those words. When so many people are hurting, do we in this Legislature not think we can say to them, "We're ready to listen to you"? When so many people have lost jobs, when so many people feel the distance they have between them and this place is so great, when they really feel they cannot input into what is going on here, do members not think that by not agreeing to an amendment like this, we increase that distance, we do not put substance behind the words of the Premier today, we do not put substance behind the words of so many people who have spoken about the importance of small business in this province?

By allowing changes to be made without knowing the implications—and the government will not. They are sitting there now thinking, "Oh, but we will." They will not know the implications. They cannot know the implications. I say that not as a criticism; I say that as a matter of reality. Nobody can unless you talk to the people. The government does not know what it is going to mean to that small business with three employees that now there is a wage protection plan increased to $10,000. They do not know what it means to that person. They do not know what it means to the carrying on of the business. They cannot know unless they talk to the person and, more important, listen to the person.

By moving these to regulation and keeping them in regulation, the government does not have any opportunity of doing that. That is what committees in this Legislature are all about. That is why we travel. That is why we reach out and try to tell people, "Be a part of this place." Regulation says, "This place is closed."

This is an important area of the bill. This is the area that talks about the liability under the bill. This is an area that talks about the impact on small business carrying on in this province. The government cannot just shut the door on them. They just cannot shut the door on people who want to talk to them. They are not going to know the implications. They may as well recognize it now, because if that was the case, then there is no need for committees in this Legislature.

If they know what all of the responses will be to all of the legislation, then they do not need committees. But the government does not know; we do not know. That is why we have committees. That is why we have long hearings. That is why we travel to different parts of the province: The impacts are different. Regulation says no committee, no travel, no understanding of impact.

1750

In this province, we all know we are trying to send out a message that we can compete. We are trying to send out a message that we can do business in this province; that we can create jobs in this province; that business should be looking at this as a place to establish itself, to expand, to create wealth. We all know the ripple effect of that.

Why can we not say we are ready to listen? Why can we not say a regulation which has as its impact changing the monetary amount, the heart and soul of the legislation, is one that must go through this Legislature? What do government members say to their constituents? What do the members on the government side say to constituents who come to their offices and say, "Well, the government has made this change; I want to tell you what it means to me."

What do they do? With it being legislation, they can say: "Well, we're going to debate this. Thank you. I want to bring your point home. I want to bring your point home to committees." What do they say to their constituents who knock on their doors and say, "Listen, I can't compete any more; you've now just upped the amount to a degree that we can't compete?"

What do they then say to the minister? I will tell the government members something: It is already announced, it is already part of the legislation. Not only have we closed the doors here, not only have we closed the doors in the committee rooms, but the government members have closed their constituency office doors on this issue. They all know and have heard, as I have heard, what a recession means to our ridings, what it means in terms of people's confidence, what it means in terms of people being able to continue to have that broad sense of options for themselves and their children. They are shutting the door of their constituency office on this issue.

I must say it will come back to haunt them, because when those changes are made, the government members will have nothing to say to their constituents. We will have something to say to their constituents. We will say that today, at this time in this place, they had the opportunity to open the doors. The choice is theirs.

I can count the number of members in this Legislature, but this is a fundamental basis for where we are and what we are and why we are here. We are here to listen to concerns. We are here to open up constituency office doors, Queen's Park offices, legislative debates, committee rooms. We are here to listen and to respond. In the 1990s, with the competition out there, it is not a time to shut doors, to close our ears to those types of implications. Now is the time to open them. Now is the time to send out a message to business that we are ready to respond, that we have a loud response.

I know the government has its right to change and to introduce legislation of whatever kind, but we also have rights and responsibilities, and one is to be receptive and responsive to implications of legislation, to what it means.

My goodness gracious, if we cannot feel secure, if the government is not feeling secure that the heart and soul of its legislation is not above legislative scrutiny, then maybe there is something drastically wrong with this legislation. Maybe there is something there that I have not yet seen.

Why would the government members be so afraid of being able to do the job they have been elected to do, to bring concerns of constituents, to bring implications of legislation to this place? Why? What is it that prompts them to vote against what is a balanced, fair amendment? I do not speak critically of the legislation in this amendment. I do speak about making this legislation better, sensitive, responsive not only to the issues today but to those tomorrow and the next day. That is what we are talking about.

We are talking about us. We are talking about our roles. We are talking about our responsibilities. If we cannot vote in favour of an amendment of this nature, then the government members are creating a distance between themselves and their constituents, for which cynicism is its end product—cynicism, distrust, mistrust about what we do. Let's open the doors. Let's be responsive. Let's take the opportunity we have now. Let's vote in favour of this amendment.

The First Deputy Chair: Mr Offer has moved that clause 40b(2)(d) of the act as set out in section 5 of the bill, as reprinted, be struck out. All those in favour will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the nays have it.

Vote deferred.

Le vote est différé.

On motion by Mr Mackenzie, the committee of the whole reported progress.

À la suite d'une motion présentée par M. Mackenzie, l'étude du projet de loi en comité plénier de la Chambre est ajournée.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon Mr Cooke: Pursuant to standing order 53, I would like to indicate the business of the House for the coming week.

On Monday, September 30, there will be an opposition day.

On Tuesday, October 1, we will be continuing with committee of the whole consideration of Bill 70, the Employment Standards Amendment Act (Employee Wage Protection Program), followed by the adjourned debate on second reading of Bill 118, the Power Corporation Amendment Act.

On Wednesday, October 2, we will continue with Bill 118.

On Thursday, October 3, in the morning we will deal with private members' business, ballot items 31, standing in the name of Ms Harrington, and 32, standing in the name of Mr Kwinter.

In the afternoon, we will continue with the adjourned debate on second reading of Bill 118, followed by Bills 83, 84, 85, 86 and 130.

The House adjourned at 1800.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor/Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon/L'hon Lincoln M. Alexander, PC, QC/CP, CR

Speaker/Président: Hon/L'hon David Warner

Clerk/Greffier: Claude L. DesRosiers

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Committees/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des comités: Smirle Forsyth

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Journals/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des journaux: Alex D. McFedries

Sergeant at Arms/Sergent d'armes: Thomas Stelling

Abel, Donald (Wentworth North/-Nord PC) government whip/Whip du gouvernement

Akande, Hon/L'hon Zanana (St Andrew-St Patrick ND)
Minister of Community and Social Services/
Ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires

Allen, Hon/L'hon Richard (Hamilton West/-Ouest ND)
Minister of Colleges and Universities, Minister of Skills
Development/Ministre des Collèges et Universités,
ministre de la Formation professionnelle

Arnott, Ted (Wellington PC)

Beer, Charles (York North/-Nord L)

Bisson, Gilles (Cochrane South/-Sud ND) PA to Minister of Northern Development and Mines, PA to minister responsible for francophone affairs, Vice-Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/
Ap du ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines,
ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones,
vice-président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario
au sein de la Confédération

Boyd, Hon/L'hon Marion (London Centre/-Centre ND)
Minister of Education, minister responsible for women's issues/Ministre de l'Éducation, ministre déléguée à la
Condition féminine

Bradley, James J. (St Catharines L) opposition House leader/
Chef parlementaire de l'opposition

Brown, Michael A. (Algoma-Manitoulin L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on general government/ Vice-Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales

Buchanan, Hon/L'hon Elmer (Hastings-Peterborough ND)
Minister of Agriculture and Food/Ministre de
l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation

Callahan, Robert V. (Brampton South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Président du Comité
permanent des comptes publics

Caplan, Elinor (Oriole L) Chair, standing committee on social development/Présidente du Comité permanent des affaires
sociales

Carr, Gary (Oakville South/-Sud PC)

Carter, Jenny (Peterborough ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability
issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre
des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des
personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

Charlton, Hon/L'hon Brian (Hamilton Mountain ND)
Minister of Financial Institutions/Ministre des Institutions
financières

Chiarelli, Robert (Ottawa West/-Ouest L)

Christopherson, David (Hamilton Centre/-Centre ND)
PA to Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/
Ap du Trésorier de l'Ontario et du ministre de l'Économie

Churley, Hon/L'hon Marilyn (Riverdale ND) Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ministre de la
Consommation et du Commerce

Cleary, John C. (Cornwall L)

Conway, Sean G. (Renfrew North/-Nord L)

Cooke, Hon/L'hon David (Windsor-Riverside ND) Minister
of Municipal Affairs, government House leader/
Ministre des Affaires municipales, chef parlementaire du
gouvernement

Cooper, Mike (Kitchener-Wilmot ND) deputy government whip/
Whip adjoint du gouvernement

Coppen, Hon/L'hon Shirley (Niagara South/-Sud ND)
Minister without Portfolio, chief government whip/
Ministre sans portefeuille, whip en chef du gouvernement

Cordiano, Joseph (Lawrence L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on social development/Vice-Président du Comité permanent
des affaires sociales

Cousens, W. Donald (Markham PC)

Cunningham, Dianne (London North/-Nord PC) Progressive
Conservative chief whip/Whip en chef du Parti
progressiste-conservateur

Curling, Alvin (Scarborough North/-Nord L) opposition deputy whip/whip adjoint de l'opposition

Dadamo, George (Windsor-Sandwich ND) PA to Minister of Transportation/Ap du ministre des Transports

Daigeler, Hans (Nepean L)

Drainville, Dennis (Victoria-Haliburton ND) PA to Minister of Municipal Affairs; Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/Ap du ministre des Affaires municipales, président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario au sein
de la Confédération

Duignan, Noel (Halton North/-Nord ND) Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative, coprésident
du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire

Elston, Murray J. (Bruce L) Leader of the Official Opposition/
Chef de l'opposition officielle

Eves, Ernie (Parry Sound PC) Progressive Conservative House
leader/Chef parlementaire du Parti progressiste-conservateur

Farnan, Mike (Cambridge ND) First Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Premier vice-président du
Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Fawcett, Joan M. (Northumberland L)

Ferguson, Hon/L'hon Will (Kitchener ND) Minister of Energy/Ministre de l'Énergie

Fletcher, Derek (Guelph ND) PA to Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ap du ministre de la Consommation
et du Commerce

Frankford, Robert (Scarborough East/-Est ND)

Gigantes, Hon/L'hon Evelyn (Ottawa Centre/-Centre ND)
Minister of Housing/Ministre du Logement

Grandmaître, Bernard C. (Ottawa East/-Est L)

Grier, Hon/L'hon Ruth A. (Etobicoke-Lakeshore ND)
Minister of the Environment, minister responsible for the greater Toronto area/Ministre de l'Environnement, ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto

Haeck, Christel (St. Catharines-Brock ND)

Hampton, Hon/L'hon Howard (Rainy River ND) Attorney General/Procureur général

Hansen, Ron (Lincoln ND) Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs; Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/Président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques, président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi privés

Harnick, Charles (Willowdale PC)

Harrington, Margaret H. (Niagara Falls ND) PA to Minister of Housing/Ap du ministre du Logement

Harris, Michael (Nipissing PC) leader of the Progressive Conservative Party/Chef du Parti progressiste-conservateur

Haslam, Hon/L'hon Karen (Perth ND) Minister of Culture and Communications/Ministre de la Culture et des Communications

Hayes, Pat (Essex-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (agriculture)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (agriculture)

Henderson, D. James (Etobicoke-Humber L)

Hope, Randy R. (Chatham-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Community and Social Services/Ap du ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires

Hugot, Bob (Sarnia ND) PA to Minister of Energy/Ap du ministre de l'Énergie

Jackson, Cameron (Burlington South/-Sud PC) Chair, standing committee on estimates/Président du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses

Jamison, Norm (Norfolk ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology, responsible for small business/Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie, délégué aux Affaires des petites entreprises

Johnson, Paul R. (Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings/Prince-Edward-Lennox-Hastings-Sud ND)
PA to Minister of Revenue/Ap du ministre du Revenu

Jordan, W. Leo (Lanark-Renfrew PC)

Klopp, Paul (Huron ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (food)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (alimentation)

Kormos, Peter (Welland-Thorold ND) Chair, standing committee on resources development/Président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources

Kwinter, Monte (Wilson Heights L)

Lankin, Hon/L'hon Frances (Beaches-Woodbine ND)
Minister of Health, minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ministre de la Santé, ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale

Laughren, Hon/L'hon Floyd (Nickel Belt ND) Deputy Premier, Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/Vice-premier ministre, Trésorier de l'Ontario et ministre de l'Économie

Lessard, Wayne (Windsor-Walkerville ND) PA to Minister of Colleges and Universities/Ap du ministre des Collèges et Universités

Mackenzie, Hon/L'hon Bob (Hamilton East/-Est ND)
Minister of Labour/Ministre du Travail

MacKinnon, Ellen (Lambton ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative

Mahoney, Steven W. (Mississauga West/-Ouest L) chief opposition whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition

Malkowski, Gary (York East/-Est ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre des Affaires civiles, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

Mammoliti, George (Yorkview ND) PA to minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ap de la ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale

Mancini, Remo (Essex South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on general government/Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales

Marchese, Rosario (Fort York ND) PA to the Premier, PA to Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Ap du premier ministre, ap du ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales

Marland, Margaret (Mississauga South/-Sud PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on estimates/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses

Martel, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Sudbury East/-Est ND) Minister of Northern Development and Mines/Ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines

Martin, Tony (Sault Ste. Marie/Sault-Sainte-Marie ND) PA to Minister of Education/Ap de la ministre de l'Éducation

Mathysen, Irene (Middlesex ND) PA to Minister of the Environment, government whip/Ap de la ministre de l'Environnement, whip du gouvernement

McClelland, Carman (Brampton North/-Nord L)

McGuinty, Dalton J.P. (Ottawa South/-Sud L)

McLean, Allan K. (Simcoe East/-Est PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Vice-Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux

McLeod, Lyn (Fort William L)

Miclash, Frank (Kenora L) opposition chief whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition

Mills, Gord (Durham East/-Est ND) PA to Solicitor General/Ap du Solliciteur général

Morin, Gilles E. (Carleton East/-Est L) Deputy Speaker and Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Vice-Président et Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Morrow, Mark (Wentworth East/-Est ND) Chair, standing committee on administration of justice/Président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman, vice-président du Comité permanent de l'administration de la justice

Murdoch, Bill (Grey PC)

Murdock, Sharon (Sudbury ND) PA to Minister of Labour/Ap du ministre du Travail

North, Hon/L'hon Peter (Elgin ND) Minister of Tourism and Recreation/Ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs

O'Connor, Lawrence (Durham-York ND) PA to minister responsible for the greater Toronto area; Vice-Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/
Ap de la ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto, vice-président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi privés

Offer, Steven (Mississauga North/-Nord L)

O'Neil, Hugh P. (Quinte L)

O'Neill, Yvonne (Ottawa-Rideau L) opposition deputy whip/
Whip adjointe de l'opposition

Owens, Stephen (Scarborough Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Financial Institutions, government whip/
Ap du ministre des Institutions financières, whip du gouvernement

Perruzza, Anthony (Downsview ND) PA to Minister for Skills Development/Ap du ministre de la Formation professionnelle

Philip, Hon/L'hon Ed (Etobicoke-Rexdale ND) Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology/Ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie

Phillips, Gerry (Scarborough-Agincourt L)

Pilkey, Hon/L'hon Allan (Oshawa ND) Solicitor General, Minister of Correctional Services/Solliciteur général, ministre des Services correctionnels

Poirier, Jean (Prescott and Russell/Prescott et Russell L)

Poole, Dianne (Eglinton L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Vice-Présidente du comité permanent des comptes publics

Pouliot, Hon/L'hon Gilles (Lake Nipigon/Lac-Nipigon ND) Minister of Transportation, minister responsible for francophone affairs/Ministre du Transport, ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones

Rae, Hon/L'hon Bob (York South/-Sud ND) Premier, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Premier ministre, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales

Ramsay, David (Timiskaming L)

Rizzo, Tony (Oakwood IND)

Runciman, Robert W. (Leeds-Grenville PC) Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux

Ruprecht, Tony (Parkdale L)

Scott, Ian G. (St. George-St. David L)

Silipo, Hon/L'hon Tony (Dovercourt ND) Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet/Président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement

Sola, John (Mississauga East/-Est L)

Sorbara, Gregory S. (York Centre/-Centre L)

Sterling, Norman W. (Carleton PC)

Stockwell, Chris (Etobicoke West/-Ouest PC)

Sullivan, Barbara (Halton Centre/-Centre L)

Sutherland, Kimble (Oxford ND) PA to Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet; Vice-Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs/Ap du président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement, vice-président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques

Swarbrick, Anne (Scarborough West /-Ouest ND)

Tilson, David (Dufferin-Peel PC)

Turnbull, David (York Mills PC)

Villeneuve, Noble (S-D-G & East Grenville/S.-D.-G. & Grenville-Est PC) Second Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Deuxième vice-président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Ward, Brad (Brantford ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology with responsibility for trade and technology/
Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie et délégué au Commerce et à la Technologie

Ward, Margery (Don Mills ND) PA to Minister of Government Services/Ap du ministre des Services gouvernementaux

Wark-Martyn, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Port Arthur ND) Minister of Revenue/Ministre du Revenu

Warner, Hon/L'hon David (Scarborough-Ellesmere ND) Speaker; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président, coprésident du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire

Waters, Daniel (Muskoka-Georgian Bay/Muskoka-Baie-Georgienne ND) PA to Minister of Tourism and Recreation; Vice-Chair, standing committee on resources development/
Ap du ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs, vice-président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources

Wessinger, Paul (Simcoe Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Health/Ap de la ministre de la Santé

White, Drummond (Durham Centre/-Centre ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman/
Vice-président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman

Wildman, Hon/L'hon Bud (Algoma ND) Minister of Natural Resources, minister responsible for native affairs/Ministre des Ressources naturelles, ministre délégué aux Affaires autochtones

Wilson, Hon/L'hon Fred (Frontenac-Addington ND) Minister of Government Services/Ministre des Services gouvernementaux

Wilson, Gary (Kingston and The Islands/Kingston et Les Îles ND) PA to Minister of Culture and Communications/
Ap de la ministre de la Culture et des Communications

Wilson, Jim (Simcoe West/-Ouest PC)

Winner, David (London South/-Sud ND) PA to Attorney General, PA to minister responsible for native affairs/Ap du Procureur général, ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires autochtones

Wiseman, Jim (Durham West/Durham-Ouest ND) PA to Minister of Correctional Services/Ap du ministre des Services correctionnels

Witmer, Elizabeth (Waterloo North/-Nord PC)

Wood, Len (Cochrane North/-Nord ND) PA to Minister of Natural Resources/Ap du ministre des Ressources naturelles

Ziemba, Hon/L'hon Elaine (High Park-Swansea ND) Minister of Citizenship, minister responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

STANDING COMMITTEES/COMITÉS PERMANENTS

Administration of justice/Administration de la justice

Chair/Président: Vacant

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Mark Morrow

Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Jenny Carter, Robert Chiarelli, Mike Cooper, Derek Fletcher, Charles Harnick, Irene Mathysen, Gordon Mills, Jean Poirier, Gregory S. Sorbara, David Winninger
Clerk/Greffière: Lisa Freedman

Estimates/Budgets des dépenses

Chair/Président: Cameron Jackson

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Margaret Marland

Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Hans Daigeler, Mike Farnan, Paul R. Johnson, Wayne Lessard, Dalton McGuinty, Lyn McLeod, Lawrence O'Connor, Anthony Perruzza, Gary Wilson
Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Finance and economic affairs/

Finance et affaires économiques

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Kimble Sutherland

Members/Membres: David Christopherson, Norman Jamison, Monte Kwinter, Gerry Phillips, Norman W. Sterling, Chris Stockwell, Barbara Sullivan, Brad Ward, Margery Ward, Jim Wiseman
Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

General government/Affaires gouvernementales

Chair/Président: Remo Mancini

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Michael A. Brown

Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Gilles Bisson, Dennis Drainville, Margaret H. Harrington, George Mammoliti, Rosario Marchese, Bill Murdoch, Yvonne O'Neill, Ian G. Scott, David Turnbull
Clerk/Greffière: Deborah Deller

Government agencies/Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair/Président: Robert W. Runciman

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Allan K. McLean

Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Jenny Carter, Robert Frankford, Bernard Grandmaitre, Pat Hayes, Rosario Marchese, Dalton McGuinty, Chris Stockwell, Daniel Waters, Jim Wiseman
Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Legislative Assembly/Assemblée législative

Chair/Président: Noel Duignan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Ellen MacKinnon

Members/Membres: Mike Cooper, Robert Frankford, Norman Jamison, Margaret Marland, Irene Mathysen, Carman McClelland, Gilles E. Morin, Hugh P. O'Neill, Stephen Owens, Noble Villeneuve
Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Ombudsman/Ombudsman

Chair/Président: Mark Morrow

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Drummond White

Members/Membres: Alvin Curling, Joan M. Fawcett, Christel Haeck, D. James Henderson, Peter Kormos, George Mammoliti, Bill Murdoch, Margery Ward, Paul Wessinger, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer
Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Public accounts/Comptes publics

Chair/Président: Robert V. Callahan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Dianne Poole

Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Sean G. Conway, W. Donald Cousens, Christel Haeck, Pat Hayes, Paul R. Johnson, Ellen MacKinnon, Lawrence O'Connor, David Tilson, Drummond White

Clerk/Greffière: Tannis Manikel

Regulations and private bills/

Règlements et projets de loi privés

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Lawrence O'Connor

Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Mike Farnan, Derek Fletcher, Leo Jordan, Ellen MacKinnon, Frank Miclash, Tony Ruprecht, John Sola, Kimble Sutherland, Drummond White, Jim Wilson
Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

Resources development/Développement des ressources

Chair/Président: Peter Kormos

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Daniel Waters

Members/Membres: Ted Arnott, John C. Cleary, George Dadamo, Bob Huget, Leo Jordan, Paul Klopp, Sharon Murdock, Steven Offer, David Ramsay, Len Wood
Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

Social development/Affaires sociales

Chair/Présidente: Elinor Caplan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Joseph Cordiano

Members/Membres: Charles Beer, Christel Haeck, Randy R. Hope, Gary Malkowski, Tony Martin, Lyn McLeod, Stephen Owens, Paul Wessinger, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer
Clerk/Greffière: Lynn Mellor

SELECT COMMITTEE/COMITÉ SPÉCIAL

Ontario in Confederation/

Rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération

Chair/Président: Dennis Drainville

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Gilles Bisson

Members/Membres: Jenny Carter, Alvin Curling, Ernie Eves, Charles Harnick, Margaret H. Harrington, Gary Malkowski, Irene Mathysen, Steven Offer, Yvonne O'Neill, David Winninger
Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

SPECIAL COMMITTEE/COMITÉ EXTRAORDINAIRE

Parliamentary precinct/Enceinte parlementaire

Co-Chair/Coprésident: David Warner

Co-Chair/Coprésident: Noel Duignan

Members/Membres: Dianne Cunningham, Remo Mancini, Kimble Sutherland

Clerk/Greffier: Smirle Forsyth

CONTENTS

Thursday 26 September 1991

Private members' public business

Violence against women, resolution 22	2535
Ms Harrington	2535
Ms Poole	2536
Mrs Witmer	2538
Mr Mills	2539
Mr Jackson	2539
Mr G. Wilson	2540
Mr Owens	2541
Ms Harrington	2542
Agreed to	2550
Employee wage protection, resolution 19	2542
Mr Kwinter	2542
Mrs Witmer	2543
Ms S. Murdock	2545
Mr Phillips	2545
Mr Carr	2546
Mr Johnson	2547
Mr Mahoney	2548
Mr Klopp	2549
Mr Kwinter	2549
Negatived	2550

Members' statements

Armenian independence	2551
Mrs Caplan
Wellesley festival	2551
Mrs Witmer
Meals on Wheels	2551
Mr Mills
Commercial fishing	2551
Mr Brown
Meals on Wheels	2551
Mr Turnbull
Purchase of Hydro plant	2552
Mr Wood
Meals on Wheels	2552
Mrs Fawcett
Health professions	2552
Mr J. Wilson
Fall fairs	2552
Mr Sutherland

Statements by the ministry

Pollution control	2553
Mrs Grier
TVOntario	2554
Mrs Haslam

Responses

Pollution control	2554
Mrs Sullivan
TVOntario	2554
Mr Bradley
Mrs Marland
Pollution control	2555
Mr Cousins

Statements by the ministry

Constitutional reform	2555
Mr Rae

Responses

Constitutional reform	2558
Mr Elston
Mr Harris

Oral questions

Budget	2562
Mr Elston
Mr Silipo
Employment	2562
Mr Elston
Mr Philip
Education policy	2563
Mrs Cunningham
Mr Rae
Assisted housing	2564
Mrs Marland
Ms Gigantes
Landfill site	2565
Mr Mahoney
Mr Cooke
Ontario economy	2566
Mr Carr
Mr Philip
Job security	2566
Mr Abel
Mr Philip
Trucking industry	2567
Mr Kwinter
Mr Pouliot
Electoral district of Brant-Haldimand	2567
Mr J. Wilson
Mr Rae
Advocacy and guardianship	2568
Mr Owens
Ms Ziemba

Expo 98	2568
Mr Ruprecht
Mrs Coppen
Land registration	2569
Mr Tilson
Ms Churley
Pollution control	2570
Mr Johnson
Mrs Grier

Petitions

Labour legislation	2570
Mr Runciman
Religious education	2571
Mr Cooper

Reports by committees

Standing committee on estimates	2571
Mr Jackson
Deemed concurred in	2571

Committee of the whole House

Employment Standards Amendment Act (Employee Wage Protection Program), 1991, Bill 70	2571
Mrs Witmer	2572
Mr Offer	2572
Mr Carr	2575
Mr Arnott	2575
Mr Mackenzie	2576
Mr Mahoney	2580
Progress reported	2583

Business of the House	2583
Mr Cooke

Lists of members

Members and their responsibilities Committees of the Legislative Assembly

TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Le jeudi 26 septembre 1991

Déclarations ministérielles

Réforme constitutionnelle	2555
M. Rae

Listes des députés

Les députés et leurs responsabilités Comités de l'Assemblée législative

Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Loi de 1991 modifiant la Loi sur les normes d'emploi, (Programme de protection des salaires des employés), projet de loi 70	2571
Étude ajournée	2583

60 1991

60 1991

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly of Ontario

First Session, 35th Parliament

Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

Première session, 35^e législature

Official Report of Debates (Hansard)

Monday 30 September 1991

Journal des débats (Hansard)

Le lundi 30 septembre 1991

Speaker
Honourable David Warner

Clerk
Claude L. DesRosiers

Président
L'honorable David Warner

Greffier
Claude L. DesRosiers

Table of Contents

Table of Contents for proceedings reported in this issue appears at the back, together with an alphabetical list of members of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at (416) 325-7400.

Numbering of Hansard

Effective with the opening of the Second Session of the 35th Parliament, Hansard issues and pages will once again be numbered on a sessional basis. Hansard numbering therefore will become consistent with Orders and Notices and Votes and Proceedings, and with other parliamentary publications throughout Canada.

For the last two years Hansard has been numbered according to the calendar year. Under this system, the numbering of issues and pages was restarted with the first issue in the calendar year, regardless of session or Parliament.

Under the new system, the sequence of numbering started in January 1991 will end with the final House and committee sittings of the present First Session. A new sequence will begin on the opening day of the Second Session, and each succeeding session, which will be issue 1 and begin with page 1. Committee reports likewise will be numbered from the first sitting of each committee in a parliamentary session.

Subscriptions

Subscription information may be obtained from: Sessional Subscription Service, Publications Ontario, Ministry of Government Services, 5th Floor, 880 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 1N8. Phone (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 or toll-free 1 (800) 668-9938.

Table des matières

La table des matières des séances rapportées dans ce numéro se trouve à l'arrière de ce fascicule, ainsi qu'une liste alphabétique de députés de l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario.

Il existe un index cumulatif des numéros précédents. Les renseignements qu'il contient sont à votre disposition par téléphone auprès des employés de l'index du Journal des débats au (416) 325-7400.

Numérotation du Journal des débats

A partir du début de la deuxième session de la 35^e législature, les pages et les numéros du Journal des débats seront de nouveau numérotés par session. La numérotation du Journal des débats correspondra donc à celle de Feuilleton et Avis et de Procès-verbaux, ainsi que celle des autres publications parlementaires au Canada.

Depuis deux ans, le Journal des débats était numéroté par année civile. Avec ce système, la numérotation des numéros et des pages recommençait au premier numéro de l'année civile, quelle que soit la session ou la législature.

Avec le nouveau système, la numérotation commencée en janvier 1991 s'arrêtera à la dernière séance de la Chambre et des comités de l'actuelle première session. Une nouvelle série commencera le jour de l'ouverture de la deuxième session et des sessions suivantes : numéro 1, page 1. Les rapports des comités seront également numérotés à partir de la première séance de chaque comité pour une session parlementaire donnée.

Abonnements

Pour les abonnements, veuillez prendre contact avec le Service d'abonnement parlementaire, Publications Ontario, ministère des Services gouvernementaux, 5^e étage, 880, rue Bay, Toronto (Ontario) M7A 1N8. Par téléphone : (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 ou, sans frais : 1 (800) 668-9938.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Monday 30 September 1991

The House met at 1330.

Prayers.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

LOCAL GOVERNMENT WEEK

Mr Mahoney: As I am sure you know, Mr Speaker, since 1985 the Ministry of Municipal Affairs, in co-operation with the Association of Municipalities of Ontario, has set aside a week each year to inform Ontario residents about the roles and responsibilities of local government.

Today marks the beginning of that week this year, 1991, and I would like to take this opportunity to personally congratulate, as the critic for Municipal Affairs for my party, all the men and women who work in local government, both elected officials and staff, who deliver the many good services to their community, whether it be schools, parks, recreation facilities, police protection, fire protection—the list goes on and on.

I find it somewhat disconcerting, however, in light of this government's latest announcements and the last year, where it has given all kinds of difficulties to local government in the area of garbage and waste reduction. It is unfortunate that this government came into power with a promise for openness and yet the Premier refuses to meet with local mayors to discuss issues of grave concern.

Now, right at the beginning of this Local Government Week, the government is talking in terms of a referral on the Sunday shopping issue to the Ontario Municipal Board, which will just create havoc in local government for the residents, and of course more particularly in this case, for those men and women who have to work within local government. It is a shameful display by this government.

POLICE SERVICES

Mr J. Wilson: My statement is directed to the Solicitor General of Ontario. It involves a matter that I have raised several times publicly in this House and privately through letters and phone calls.

The issue I raise once again is the lack of 24-hour policing in areas of my riding of Simcoe West. Every time I have raised this issue, the government has hidden behind an OPP staffing report that was completed in the spring. But while the government stalls, criminals in the area have stepped up their efforts to burglarize communities that pay full tax dollars but lack 24-hour police services.

From January 1991 until the present time, the Stayner OPP detachment has reported 130 break-and-enters. Of these, 104 occurred when local OPP officers went off duty and went on call. These break-ins will cost ratepayers in my riding about $200,000. In the past 16 days, Ferris Enterprises in Singshampton has been robbed twice while OPP officers were off duty. The thieves took $23,000 worth of cigarettes and even had time to stop and have a drink of pop.

Here is a quote from an editorial in the Collingwood Enterprise-Bulletin of September 25 regarding the government's foot-dragging on this issue: "Governments are notorious for keeping people waiting. But to keep people waiting for answers when it may concern their safety and welfare is irresponsible."

This government must live up to its social obligations to the people of my riding. Law and order and the safety and security of citizens must be a top priority of this and any government.

WASTE REDUCTION WEEK

Mrs Mathysen: I am glad to tell the House today that several communities in my riding of Middlesex are participating in Waste Reduction Week, which is sponsored by the Recycling Council of Ontario. Waste Reduction Week runs from September 29 to October 6. This week communities in my riding join the rest of the province in participating in a number of locally sponsored events being conducted to remind people of the three Rs: reduce, reuse and recycle.

One of the many events being planned is Zero Garbage Day. In the past, we have concentrated on recycling; now we must also focus our energy on reduction.

As the members can see by the T-shirt I am wearing, the theme of this year's Waste Reduction Week is "The Future Is Rs." Indeed, we can all help protect the environment by reducing the amount of waste that we generate so that it does not become a burden inherited by future generations. Mr Speaker, I am sure you will agree that the Recycling Council of Ontario and all the local participants, not only in Middlesex but throughout the province, should be commended for their hard work in arranging this week's activities.

ONTARIO HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

Mr Curling: Last week the Minister of Citizenship announced that $6.4 million would be allocated to the Ontario Human Rights Commission to eliminate the agency's 2,500-case backlog. The minister's announcement was surprising, given her previous decision to freeze the commission's funds and her statement that throwing money at the problem would not solve it. Still, as a preliminary short-term measure, this one-time injection of funds may indeed help reduce the case backlog.

Let us hope that in its zeal to deal with what had become a politically embarrassing situation, the government does not get so caught up in the statistics that it loses sight of the importance of seeing that justice is served in each individual case. It should be remembered that many of the cases in the backlog are there because of their complexity, and it is important that those assigned to deal with the backlog are not only experienced but also have a well-developed expertise with the Ontario Human Rights Code.

The minister's statement also promised a review of the Ontario Human Rights Code and the Human Rights Commission. This much-needed review should be independent and impartial. I am asking the minister and the Premier to refer the matter to an all-party committee of the Legislature to conduct public hearings and make recommendations, as has been recommended by the standing committee on government agencies.

1340

SCHOOL BREAKFAST PROGRAM

Mrs Cunningham: Mr John Snobelen, chairman of the Hunger Project, reminds us that today marks the first anniversary of the World Summit for Children. It was the largest-ever summit of heads of state, where over 100 nations promised to set down plans of action by the end of 1991 to provide the basis for the healthiest and best-educated children on this planet.

As this nation debates the latest constitutional proposal, it would be easy for us to forget that every day 40,000 children in the world die of preventable causes. Children in Canada are going hungry and suffering neglect and abuse. It is estimated that one child in six in Ontario lives in poverty.

Studies have indicated that there is a relationship between hunger and the ability of children to excel at school. Recognizing this problem, Mr Ian Sorbie came forward and, working with children, teachers and administrators, established a breakfast program for the children at Roden elementary school in Toronto. Each day, 168 children receive a nutritious breakfast at a cost of $150 a day. He feels this experience can now serve as a model that can be replicated in other schools throughout the province. Establishing a breakfast program for elementary school children in partnership with the private sector is an initiative my party supports.

Given the fact that this is the first anniversary of the World Summit for Children, I would urge the Minister of Education to begin consultation to make these kinds of breakfast programs happen in our province.

CONSERVATION

Mr Abel: Southwestern Ontario contains a wide variety of flora and fauna that are found nowhere else in Canada. This region, extending from Toronto to Grand Bend and south to Lake Erie, contains vegetation similar to that found in the southeastern United States, and has thus been termed the Carolinian life zone. Exotic trees like the flowering dogwood, sassafras, sycamore, tulip tree and black walnut are scattered among the deciduous hardwoods and conifers more typical of northeastern Canada. It is the home of some unusual species such as the Carolina wren, the flying squirrel and the opossum.

Since most of the remaining Carolinian zone is under private ownership, the key to conserving important natural areas is to ensure private stewardship. In the region of Hamilton-Wentworth, thousands of acres of land consist of part of the remaining Carolinian life zone. The reason so much of this land is preserved, not only in Hamilton-Wentworth but also in the rest of the Carolinian life zone, is largely due to the support of a very special group of people: private land owners committed to preserving the natural features of their properties.

In recognition of their contribution to sound management, I ask that all members of the Legislature join me in thanking these people for their role in protecting and preserving our natural heritage.

CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE CONFERENCE

Mr Miclash: The annual fall meeting of the Northwestern Ontario Associated Chambers of Commerce concluded this weekend in Kenora. A working conference discussed 45 resolutions and adopted 33. Resolution topics covered small business and economic development, transportation, land use and resource management. Gathered in Kenora for this most important conference were 70 chamber members from 14 chambers across northwestern Ontario.

As most people in the House are aware, NOACC will be meeting with cabinet to discuss its resolutions later this year. A resolution of note dealt with land use and resource management. It recommended as follows: "The Ministry of Northern Development and Mines be the lead agency in a process to review and administer the uses and disposition of crown land in northern Ontario. The process should result in a policy which is coherent, sensible, reasonable and flexible."

Upon reviewing the chamber's work, I see a good number of such resolutions that will well represent the thoughts, aspirations and needs of many of my constituents. However, during a presentation on Saturday morning, Tom Corcoran, the provincial president of the chamber, indicated that the present NDP government is not paying attention to the needs of small business in Ontario. I agree with the chamber president that this government must listen to all people, and not just those private-interest groups that put it into power.

DEVELOPMENTALLY DISABLED

Mr B. Murdoch: As a result of a meeting with community living groups in my riding, I would like to remind the Minister of Community and Social Services of a promise she made and has obviously forgotten. On December 20 of last year, the minister made a statement to this House advising members that she would reduce the significant gap in wages paid to workers in ministry facilities compared to wages paid to workers in community agencies. This would be done, she said, because "the government is committed to providing community agencies with the resources necessary to recruit and retain quality workers."

It was a lovely speech, and it gave the agency staff in my area hope that their dedication and efforts would be rewarded. But now they are convinced that the minister had no intention of following up on her promise, as in the almost 10 months since she made this commitment, nothing has been done to change this situation. Even the Minister of Health was quoted on June 24 as saying she was horrified by the inadequacies of the two groups.

When will the Minister of Community and Social Services acknowledge her words of December 20 and take action? When will she recognize the value of community agency workers, or is this just another typical socialist broken promise?

INTERNATIONAL PLOWING MATCH

Mrs MacKinnon: September 17 to September 21 marked the culmination of three years of hard work and dedication by an army of volunteers in Lambton county. Why, members may ask. The answer, of course, is the successful 1991 International Plowing Match. This is the largest farm equipment and machinery show in North America, with its plowing competitions, displays and collection of farm-related materials and products.

My hat is off to the plowing match committees for their dedication to making this the best-organized such occasion ever held in Ontario. I realize it is dangerous to mention individual names, but I would be remiss if I overlooked Mr Leonard McNeil, who as chairman guided this event and the project to the success it was.

For the five days of the plowing match, Lambton was front and centre, along with rural Ontario, and I am proud to have had an opportunity to highlight this great part of our province in Lambton county to over 180,000 people who attended. Next year this exhibit takes place in Victoria county, which is part of the riding of one of our colleagues. I thank everyone in the Legislature who attended opening day. Their support was much appreciated.

MINISTERIAL STATEMENTS

Mrs Marland: Mr Speaker, I rise on a point of order under standing order 31(a). This standing order is in our rules to allow ministers an opportunity to inform all members of this House on matters of importance. The Minister of Culture and Communications has made a mockery of this standing order today.

Instead of informing the House of her actions in regard to TVOntario, a matter which was first brought to the attention of this House by myself, she instead made her announcement in the media studio. It was my assumption that on a matter of such significance to the people of this province, who have a right to know, this minister would have served the courtesy to the members of this House by making her statement in this House. This shows a lack of respect for not only the rules of this Legislature, but also for all members of this House today.

The Speaker: To the member for Mississauga South, I appreciate her bringing this to my attention. The standing orders allow ministers the opportunity to make statements. It does not oblige them to make statements. The Speaker does not have any control over events which occur outside the chamber.

Hon Mr Cooke: Mr Speaker, I understand the ruling you just made, but I might just point out to the member that it is my recollection that the Minister of Culture and Communications last Thursday put the House on notice that the report was going to be released the following day and that it would be made available to the press and to the opposition parties. She made that statement in the House as a courtesy and out of respect to the Legislature, and I think she should be congratulated on the approach she took.

1350

Mr Elston: Following up on the point just very briefly, it seems to me the government House leader has missed the whole point of the exercise that has just occurred in the media studio. Here we have one of the top administrators of government activity in the province who has tendered his resignation and there is no explanation, no indication in this chamber of how this chief public administrator has come to fall on a resignation letter. There is a requirement, because this has made it a matter of importance to the people of the province, that a full explanation be made here in the chamber, as opposed to it being made out in a media studio.

I can understand that it was courteous of the minister to tell us that the report was about to arrive last week on a day which was outside the sitting of the House, but here the resignation has arrived on her desk prior to the opening of this sitting of the Legislature and she owes it to us to explain why there was a resignation tendered.

Interjections.

The Speaker: We are obviously relaxed and ready for question period.

I appreciate the comments that have been raised by the Leader of the Opposition and the government House leader as well as the member for Mississauga South. I think members understand the standing orders well. However, the leader seems to have raised material that may indeed be the subject of questions for question period, which is now about to begin.

Mrs Marland: On a point of privilege, Mr Speaker: The government House leader just stood in this House and said that the minister had said in this House on Thursday that she would release the auditor's report on TVOntario the next day. In fact, her statement to this House was that she would release the auditor's statement when she was assured through the commissioner of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act that there was no risk to anyone by the release of that report.

The Speaker: Would the member take her seat, and with everyone's co-operation, we can begin question period.

ORAL QUESTIONS

BUDGET

Mr Elston: By bits and pieces, we will gradually get this story filled in.

Perhaps what I could do is go back to my favourite minister, the Treasurer of the province, who by his own admission has been spot on. Last week he told us that his revenue projections are spot on, that he intends to keep his reckless deficit of $9.7 billion spot on, and he identified two culprits for us as being responsible for part of his overspending. He mentioned pensions and he also mentioned one other which escapes me—firefighting, I guess, in the north—as being out from what they had expected.

Since we have heard on the weekend through press reports that it is not hundreds of millions of dollars but probably over a billion dollars that he intends to cut from the over $9.7-billion expenditure level, can the Treasurer identify for us other problem areas of spending?

Hon Mr Laughren: I was interrupted at the very end of the—

Mr Elston: What other spending areas are getting him into trouble, welfare?

Hon Mr Laughren: First of all, I would not want to get into speculation on what was written in the tabloids over the weekend. However, I would simply say that what I said to the leader of the official opposition last week was that the actuarial shortfall in the pension plans was causing us heartburn, if you will, that there was an excess in spending on firefighting, that our social service case load was higher than we thought it was going to be, and finally, that there is an open-endedness to our health care system, as the member opposite knows better than most, I believe.

When you add up all the expenditure pressures, they do indeed come to several hundred million dollars, which is the reason, I think, that the leader of the official opposition would want me to state before all members of the House in more detail just what those pressures are, and I intend to do that on Wednesday.

Mr Elston: I wonder if the Treasurer can confirm to us that in fact he has a certain series of guiding principles which he is using to establish the cuts. Having confirmed that there are those principles there, will he enumerate those principles before he makes his statement on Wednesday?

Hon Mr Laughren: I am not too sure what the leader of the official opposition is fishing for. However, I do know that I am not going for the bait. I should tell the leader of the official opposition that we are concerned that we do not simply take a meat axe to the constraint program in which we find ourselves. We want to do it in keeping with the priorities of the government, because I think to do otherwise would be simply to mimic what has been done in other jurisdictions, and that is not our intention.

Mr Elston: All I asked the Treasurer to do was tell us exactly what series of parameters he was going to be viewing as he looked at the restraint exercise his government is going through. He has so far refused to tell us, first of all, the size of the problem, which he says he is going to tackle on Wednesday. He will not confirm that number to us. He will not tell us what parameters he is using to view the cuts and he is not letting us know the areas in which there are problems. If he is looking for help from us, he must share the problems with us and he is not doing that.

Having admitted that the budget he cast in April has been abandoned by himself and his colleagues, will this Treasurer tell us now what new types of goals he has established for the financial planning and expenditure controls in the province?

Hon Mr Laughren: I am pleased the leader opposite wants to share the burden, because we would like very much to share it with him. There has been no alteration in the principles under which we intend to govern this province. That has not changed from the budget that was brought down earlier in the spring. We intend to pursue those sets of principles.

I would say to the leader, however, that we thought at the time, and I still believe, there was not put in place the kind of mechanism that would allow government to look at the entire reallocation process in order to establish priorities, in particular for a new government, but for any government. I think that the leader opposite would agree with me, in view of the fact that his government had great difficulty in doing any kind of accurate forecasting, as is evidenced by the deficit last year.

Mr Elston: I will not agree with the honourable Treasurer on that point. We delivered a balanced budget the year before last. They took over and they did wonderful things with our budget last year, in addition to everything else. But let me return to the Treasurer.

One of the primary focuses of the budget, as indicated in April when it was delivered by the Treasurer, was that it was to stimulate the economic activity in the province, and one of the keystones of that was a whole of series of capital works. I wonder, after having looked at the $9.7-billion deficit that was forecast then, and now being told that he is not satisfied he can maintain that without taking some sort of actions, if he can tell us how many capital works in the public highways programs, including the four-laning of Highway 69, he has shelved.

Hon Mr Laughren: I assume the member opposite is talking about the anti-recession package. He did not quite say that. We are going to be doing an update on that for all members, as a matter of fact, because the last time I checked, I believe about 85% of the entire anti-recession package had either been completed, started or was about to start. That is of the total $700-million package. I think it would be contradictory for us to start cutting back on the capital expenditure program, especially as was detailed in the anti-recession package, at a time when we are trying to stimulate employment in the province. It is our intention not to slash capital expenditures in the province. I think that would not be wise at this time.

1400

Mr Elston: Having now heard that there will not be any capital programs cut during the speech which will come on Wednesday, as soon as the Treasurer gets his instructions from the Minister of Health—Health ministers usually do tell Treasurers lots of things during the planning for economic expenditures—can I be absolutely assured that the statement the Treasurer just made here that no capital programs will be cut as part of his cost-cutting exercise will in fact be delivered upon?

Hon Mr Laughren: To be fair, I think what I said to the member opposite was that I did not believe slashing capital programs under the anti-recession package was the right direction to go. I am not going to stand in my place and say that in that entire some $4 billion in capital expenditures every single one of them will be completed according to the schedule we had hoped for this year. That is yet to be determined, so I am not going to allow the member opposite to paint me into a corner. If I want to paint myself into a corner, that is one thing, but I am not going to allow the member opposite to do it.

Mr Elston: This is an interesting conversation the Treasurer and I are having. First he says, "There will be no capital cuts." Then he says, "But I don't really mean that; there might be some someplace."

Mr Speaker, can I ask the question which is quite obvious? Can the Treasurer confirm to the House that his bureaucracy, that is, Treasury, is not involved in the final program planning, that in fact it is all being handled by the treasury board, which is newly formed but without legislative capabilities, and that in fact the treasury board bureaucracy, which is newly formed but without legislative capacity, is driving this whole exercise, thus leaving the Treasurer out in the cold on exactly what principles are being applied to the restraint program, how much the dollar figure is and what areas are in jeopardy?

Hon Mr Laughren: No, the leader of the official opposition is dead wrong. First, the treasury board legislation was brought before this House and passed in June of this year, so to say that we are not operating with legislative approval is factually incorrect. Second, I chair the treasury board myself, so it is hardly leaving me out of the picture when I chair that board. Finally, there is a set of principles or terms of reference which will guide all of the restraint program as it affects all the ministries. So it is simply not correct. The member is incorrect on every one of the assertions in his question.

Mr Villeneuve: I have a very important lead question to the Minister of Agriculture and Food. I see he is not here. I know he is in Milton and is supposed to be back shortly. I will ask to stand down my lead question until the Minister of Agriculture and Food returns.

The Speaker: Is there a second lead question?

Mr Carr: I will proceed.

RETAIL STORE HOURS

Mr Carr: My question is for the Solicitor General. The Solicitor General will know that we spent the summer going around and hearing from the public on the Sunday shopping issue and that significant portions of the province have said they will be open on Sunday. Notwithstanding the Premier's commitment to have a common pause day, we heard from Windsor, Collingwood, Thunder Bay, Kenora and parts of Kingston that they will be open.

Lo and behold, we get the amendments that have come through from this government, which say, "Any person who objects to a bylaw made by the council of a municipality under section 4 may appeal to the Ontario Municipal Board." We are already looking at a backlog of between 12 to 15 months at the Ontario Municipal Board. At a time when we are talking about allocating resources, how can the minister justify to the people of this province lobbying more responsibilities on an already overburdened board?

Hon Mr Pilkey: The government is anxious to proceed to clause-by-clause so that we might deal with the bill and all its amendments and return third and final reading to this House as expeditiously as possible. Of course, I would seek members' co-operation in assuring that circumstance.

Not to belabour the topic beyond that but simply to respond to the question, under the amendments the Ontario Municipal Board will be asked to use its best efforts to try to hear appeals within 90 days so that in fact businesses that do receive the tourism exemption are not held up in an unnecessary fashion.

Mr Carr: The problem is when these boards and agencies come in. We talk about the rent review board. It sounded like a great idea when it came in, but lo and behold, it is so backlogged now it does not work and there is no justice. The fact of the matter is that if you ask anybody, all these well-intended programs that come in do not work.

Not only is the minister going to lob things into the Ontario Municipal Board, but one of the amendments he is bringing forward is that, "On the application of any interested person, the Ontario Court (General Division) may order that a retail business establishment close on a holiday." Again, talking about resources, we have a situation where in the courts now we have delays if you want to get a divorce. We have well over 35,000 cases being thrown out because it is clogged—cases, I might add, that include sexual assault and drunk driving.

Lo and behold, what does the minister do? He throws more into an overburdened system and now we are going to be looking at a situation where resources are going to be channelled to try and deal with a problem such as Sunday shopping. Again, with the court backlogs out there, how does the minister justify putting resources into this particular program at this time?

Hon Mr Pilkey: I am anxious to debate the bill and the amendments, but as indicated, the amendments have yet to be moved in the committee. I look forward to appearing at the committee and staying with the committee to discuss any and all of these amendments in detail so that we might bring it to the House. At that appropriate juncture, I will be quite happy and pleased to do so and subsequently debate the item when the final amendments to the bill come to the House for final debate.

Mr Carr: Not only do they come in with these hare-brained, crazy ideas, but they refuse to even stand up and talk about them. I can understand why. If I had brought in these crazy ideas, I would be reluctant to talk about them as well.

The minister is looking at all these different programs. He has heard from the public. Everybody on both sides of the issues from Thunder Bay to Peterborough to Ottawa said they did not like the legislation. Both sides of the issue said they did not like the piece of legislation. Now that the minister has come up with a couple of ideas and proposals, what is it going to cost the people? How much more is it going to cost as a result of these ideas that the minister is coming up with? How much is it going to cost?

Hon Mr Pilkey: As I indicated, I am anxious to debate amendments once they have in fact been placed. They must be placed before the committee in clause-by-clause. Those that are adopted will come forward to the House for open debate. I believe at that time the wisdom of the government amendments will be quite apparent to the member and to the public at large.

Mr Sorbara: The Solicitor General is entirely lacking in credibility with those answers. We simply cannot rely on them.

Hon Mr Pilkey: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I take some offence at the member saying my responses were inappropriate—I think he used something much harsher than that. Is that permissible when the questions are—

The Speaker: If the Solicitor General would take a seat, I believe the member was questioning your credibility. Often members question each other's credibility and the validity of statements made. What would be more helpful would be if members would place questions directly to the ministers from whom they wish to have a response.

Mr Sorbara: Mr Speaker, I will take your advice on that. The point I was simply trying to make is that the Solicitor General, with respect—

The Speaker: Would the member place his question, please.

Mr Sorbara: It is difficult to believe what he says when he says what he says.

1410

My question is to the Attorney General. As members know, two weeks ago the government indefinitely postponed this Legislature's consideration of its Sunday shopping legislation. Last Friday afternoon at 3:30, when most of us were in our constituency offices and most of the press had filed their stories for the day, the Solicitor General brought out his amendments responding to one month of public hearings where most people condemned the bill to regulate Sunday shopping.

Surprisingly, the amendment which was brought forward was to allow an appeal to the Ontario Municipal Board. Maybe one person asked for that during the public hearings, and that is the only amendment we have had from the government.

As my friend the member for Oakville South suggested—

The Speaker: Your question, please.

Mr Sorbara: —there is a 13-month delay at the OMB right now. When the government passes this legislation, every storekeeper who finally gets permission to open a store on Sunday is going to have to wait some 15 to 20 months before a final determination. In this economy that business will probably no longer exist.

The Speaker: Would the member quickly place his question.

Mr Sorbara: What specific steps is the Attorney General taking with the funding of the Ontario Municipal Board? He should not look to the Solicitor General, because the OMB is the Attorney General's responsibility. What steps is he taking to provide additional resources immediately to the OMB so that a storekeeper who is the subject of an appeal from a decision by a local council can get a decision expeditiously and inexpensively in these very difficult economic times?

Hon Mr Hampton: I think it is probably most appropriate that the Solicitor General respond to the honourable member's lecture.

Hon Mr Pilkey: Could I simply respond to the question by making two points? First, the amendment will in fact expedite the situation, which is what we want to do. Second, if both the members from both opposition parties who have urged that this matter get dealt with promptly are concerned with amendments that may cause delay, I suggest to them that if they will meet me and my colleagues at 3:30 this afternoon in the clause-by-clause and co-operate, we might proceed to get this matter dealt with expeditiously and avoid any delays they are alleging.

Mr Sorbara: I am rather glad actually that the question was referred from the Attorney General, who has now abdicated his responsibilities for the OMB to the Solicitor General, because now in my supplementary I can address the question of credibility. The Solicitor General has said he is anxious to proceed with amendments to the bill. Yet the very reasonable amendments that we have put forward to make it somewhat easier for a storekeeper to get through the administrative morass he has created with this bill have already been rejected by him and his ministry and his government. There is no intention at all on his part to give reasonable consideration to the amendments we are putting forward.

The Speaker: Your supplementary.

Mr Sorbara: Although he is not responsible for the OMB, I ask him what additional resources he has requested from the government to provide to the Ontario Municipal Board and to the court system, because he has also allowed for an application to be made to the courts by an agreed individual. Will he please answer me specifically? What additional resources has he asked for for the OMB and the court system in order to handle the very significant increase in case load that will arise because of his bill and these unnecessary amendments? I want to know specifically what resources he has asked for.

Hon Mr Pilkey: The involvement of the Ontario Municipal Board will allow for sober second thought to applications of municipal bylaws for which exemptions are being requested. It is also my understanding that the Ontario Municipal Board will be able to deal on a very expeditious basis and without undue delay or concern. We simply do that in order to help expedite those businesses that are found to be appropriate to have the exemption under the tourism criteria.

AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE

Mr Tilson: I have a question for the Minister of Financial Institutions. Recently the Toronto Star published a story that the government had spent $5 million to study the impact and cost of government-run auto insurance in this province, and this presumably resulted in the minister backing off from his promise to nationalize the auto insurance industry in Ontario. I will say that certainly I think the people of Ontario are, generally speaking, in favour of the policy the government put forward. What it has done by spending this $5 million is something our party was telling it to do long ago and which it could have done for free. My question to the minister is, what did he spend the $5 million on?

Hon Mr Charlton: The member is correct that over the course of the last 10 months we spent approximately $5 million studying the question of automobile insurance delivery in Ontario. Part of the moneys was spent looking specifically at the question of moving to public auto insurance, the transition to get there and the impact that transition would have on the province, but in addition we also studied in depth the marketplace questions around which the former Liberal government claimed to have made its product and price decisions. This government, as a result of the time, effort and money we spent coming to understand the auto insurance system in this province, is in a better position to ensure, through legislation, regulation and discussion with the insurance industry, that the consumers of this province get a product that is fair and equitable at a reasonable and affordable price.

Mr Tilson: With spending like the minister's, no wonder the Treasurer is going to have to cut several hundreds of millions of dollars. It is a complete waste.

My second question to the Minister of Financial Institutions is that while in opposition, the minister and his party were certainly in full support of full access to the courts with automobile insurance legislation. They were clearly opposed to the Liberal's no-fault auto insurance legislation, which took away full access to the courts by the public of this province.

On December 20, 1990, prior to the minister's appointment, Bill 20, An Act to amend the Insurance Act, was moved by the member for Leeds-Grenville. It passed second reading. The intention of this bill was to reinstate full access to the courts to auto accident victims, including the right to sue for full economic loss. The minister voted in support of this bill on December 20. If it were brought forward today, which way would he vote?

Hon Mr Charlton: It is nice to hear a member of the opposition stand in his place and make the case for the $5 million we have just spent, which he said was a total waste of money. The private member's bill to which he refers from last December was a bill that was brought forward based on a number of things, including the emotional perspective of the member in question. We have taken the time to understand the marketplace in this province and have done precisely what we have said from the outset that we intended to do, and that is to pursue the question of how best to deliver fair and adequate compensation to accident victims in this province and how to put the best package in place.

Interjections.

The Speaker: We seem to be straying from that which we had agreed upon earlier: a calm and reasoned approach.

1420

CHARITABLE GAMING

Mr Kormos: I first want to thank the member for St Catharines for his offer to me to take his slot in question period. As it is today, I do not need it. There may be a time in the very near future when I do. I hope I can take that as something of a rain check.

I rise today to ask a question because of my great concern. In fact, I am very troubled about the status of the Ontario Head Injury Association here in Ontario. Ray Rempel and his organization have been providing services and leadership.

My question is of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. Ray Rempel and the Ontario Head Injury Association have been providing an invaluable service to people in this province for some years now. That organization, to the greatest extent, has been self-funded. The hard work of the volunteers and the people who are committed to its goals have enabled it to pay its own way. They recognize that there is going to be less and less money available from governments by way of grants.

They want the opportunity to sell break-open tickets, Nevada tickets, those modest fund-raising efforts that enable them to keep on providing the service. I want the minister to please tell us why the ministry persists in making it more difficult for the Ontario Head Injury Association to sell those tickets, rather than making it easier.

Hon Ms Churley: I am sure the member knows from his experience with the ministry that it is a little more complicated than that. I have met with the organization he mentioned, as well as many other organizations. I certainly understand their concerns and this government and I are very pleased about the contribution they are making. But as the member knows, there are thousands of organizations attempting to raise charitable funds by using break-open tickets for very worthwhile causes. That is why this venue has to be very carefully managed to ensure a level playing field for everybody. The new gaming services act will address the over 50,000 organizations that are trying to raise money through this venue.

Mr Kormos: With great respect to the member, I happen to recall the minister's briefing note on this issue, and it is not thousands; it is a relatively modest number of organizations, including the Ontario Head Injury Association, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind and the Variety Club. These are responsible people who want an opportunity to legally and legitimately raise money to carry on the service they have been providing. The fact is that the Ontario Head Injury Association is deeply in debt and risks literal foreclosure, and the fact is that if it is not there to provide that service, the government is clearly not in a position to fill the gap or fill the vacuum that is created.

When will the minister act, and I say promptly, to make sure the Ontario Head Injury Association can carry on with the fund-raising it has traditionally conducted, without the frustration being encountered from the ministry?

Hon Ms Churley: The updated regulatory framework will deal with this problem, as I said in my previous answer. The problem is that there are many organizations. There is a problem with oversaturation of the market. There are many more charitable organizations out there having the same problems and competing for fewer dollars. The reality is that we have to be fair. I refuse to deal with this piecemeal, because if we make a regulation to deal specifically with break-open tickets, we are going to create another problem for somebody else over here who is doing just as valuable work raising money through other charitable means. That is why I want to deal with the whole issue in one big piece of legislation, so that everybody is playing on a level playing field.

ONTARIO ECONOMY

Mr Phillips: My question follows along the questions my leader was asking of the Treasurer. As the Treasurer knows, in any presentations we have had, and I certainly think in his budget, there are four key economic indicators that the Treasury officials use: the unemployment level, the CPI or inflation rate, job creation and gross domestic product development.

Based on my analysis, at least, of those four key indicators, all of the four things seem to be performing better than the budget called for. The unemployment rate appears to be running below his estimate of 10%. The CPI appears to be running somewhat lower than his estimate, albeit slightly, but none the less better. The job creation activity: I think he anticipated in the budget 184,000 fewer jobs; I think there are about 135,000 fewer jobs. His gross domestic product numbers are running somewhat better.

I think one of the components of the budget is the economy. Will the Treasurer confirm to the House that the economy year-to-date, based on the Treasury officials' estimate for the rest of the year on those four key indicators, actually is performing modestly better than he anticipated at budget time?

Hon Mr Laughren: Yes. I would stress that the operative word in the member's question, though, is "modestly." The improvement in the numbers he cites, which as I recall are virtually spot on, as the Leader of the Opposition is wont to say, is quite marginal and is not substantial enough to increase our revenues to the degree that would allow us to look after the increased expenditure pressures we are trying to cope with now.

Mr Phillips: The supplementary then follows obviously on that. The economy is performing slightly better than the Treasurer thought. This is the line of questioning my leader has been pursuing. The revenue, presumably, of the economy as it is performing will be spot on, as the Treasurer expressed it. Therefore, can we assume that the budget problem is solely related to expenditures? The economy is performing well; therefore the expenditure needs relative to the economy should be spot on. Without being overly aggressive, can we assume that the out-of-control budget problems are a result of the inability of the government to control expenditures, not the economy but the inability to control expenditures?

Hon Mr Laughren: The member opposite uses an unfortunate series of words to spin together his question, which contrary to his views I find quite aggressive. I think the member opposite should understand, first of all, that he is right in the sense that it is the expenditure problems we are coping with. But to say they are out of control is not fair when the very actions we are taking are to ensure they do not get out of control.

It is not unusual that we have these in-year pressures. Any large organization has them. Other governments have had them as well. We are trying to be more open with the Legislature and with the people of the province by saying what those problems are. That is why on Wednesday I intend to make a full statement to the Legislature, to make sure it is not all done behind closed doors. We really believe that we have to share information. That is not what previous governments have tended to do, and we want to change that.

ASSISTANCE TO FARMERS

Mr Villeneuve: I go back to the lead question. It is my understanding the Premier will not be here, nor will the Minister of Agriculture and Food, so in their absence I will go to the Treasurer, the Deputy Premier, the man with the purse-strings.

The Treasurer is well aware that the crop crisis in Ontario is at its worst in many years. From Huron to Essex to Brant-Haldimand and throughout eastern Ontario, farmers are suffering very much. This major problem is being discussed today in this Legislature on opposition day and also in the standing committee on resources development.

The Treasurer has had money for many things, but he has not had very much for agriculture: a 3.2% increase in this year's budget over last year, compared to many larger increases in many other ministries. This is a basic industry in deep trouble. They are not crying wolf for nothing. He should have looked. He should have been there. He would have gotten experience. If he visits Essex county any time, he will see the drought. Let him visit the Niagara Peninsula. When will this government bring on some real assistance for our farmers, who are really suffering now?

Hon Mr Laughren: I appreciate the views of the member opposite. I know he shares our concern about the problems in the agricultural community, and he does not exaggerate them one little bit. I want to assure the member as well that the Minister of Agriculture and Food will be here for the debate on agriculture this afternoon, but he simply could not get back in time for question period.

I agree with the member opposite, and I would just ask him to be patient for a very short period of time and the Minister of Agriculture and Food will have a statement to make.

1430

Mr Villeneuve: I appreciate that, and I heard in some of the news broadcasts this morning that the minister does have some sort of emergency assistance. However, there is an emergency across Ontario. Certain areas of Ontario have been hit with a double whammy. I speak of Essex and parts of Kent county, where indeed they have had a drought this year. They have had either a flood or a drought for the last three out of four years. That is not a usual situation, but that is the situation this year.

Will the Treasurer provide them with some additional assistance? Indeed the crop prices are down throughout Ontario, we know that, but that area has been hit by a double whammy. Will the Treasurer be using crop insurance? Crop insurance, as he knows, does not work when you get three bad years out of four, so will they who are in dire straits be getting something supplementary to the rest of the province?

Hon Mr Laughren: I know the member for S-D-G & East Grenville appreciates the fact that the problems in the agricultural community are not just in Ontario but are elsewhere as well. I can assure the member that the Minister of Agriculture and Food has been most aggressive on this issue in fighting for his constituents, the farmers of this province. I do not want to pre-empt what he will have to say, but I can assure the member that he is very much aware and will be making a statement which will contain some assistance.

Mr Villeneuve: Before the Minister of Agriculture and Food makes his statement for whatever the surprise, whether it is good or bad, I want to remind the Treasurer that de Havilland, for example, is receiving $151 million now and maybe another $150 million for 4,900 jobs. Those people are Canadian Auto Workers; for some reason they seem to have priority. Elliot Lake, $250 million for 650 jobs. We are not opposed to this; we are putting it in context of one of the very major industries in this province. Auto insurance: as was spoken of today, $5 million thrown away. Civil service increase in salary: $512 million in 12 months, almost the entire budget of the Ministry of Agriculture and Food. TVOntario. We could go on.

The Treasurer had dollars for all of those. We are looking for real support for one of the very basic industries in this province that provides, directly and indirectly, 20% of the jobs in the province. The Treasurer should remember that. What assistance, in light of what I have just said, will the Treasurer provide agriculture?

Hon Mr Laughren: I appreciate the views of the member, but I regret that he persists and other members of his caucus persist in playing one group of people who find themselves in unfortunate circumstances against another. I was, however, pleased to hear the member say that he supported the fact that this government provided assistance for people in Elliot Lake and Sault Ste Marie and Kapuskasing, and trying to do things in a more creative way rather than simply throwing money where there is a problem.

Mr Villeneuve: They have a union.

Hon Mr Laughren: If the member opposite is saying that if working people happen to belong to a union they should not get any assistance, let him stand in his place and say that. Let him stand and say that. The member is trying to have it both ways. He stands on his feet one minute and criticizes the fact that people who happen to belong to a union get assistance, then the next minute he stands and he says he is glad they got that assistance. I wish the member would get his story straight once and for all.

TVONTARIO

Mrs Marland: My question is to the Minister of Culture and Communications. In the minister's own words, in the statement which she chose not to share with this House today and gave in the media studio earlier at 1 o'clock, she said, "It is evident from the report that there have been excesses that are unacceptable to this government and to the people of this province."

Why has the minister agreed to allow Mr Ostry, the person who must ultimately take responsibility for these excesses, to stay on as chairman and CEO until after a conference on public broadcasting at the end of November? In my opinion, it is inappropriate that a person who has compromised public confidence in TVOntario be allowed to represent TVOntario at that conference.

I ask the minister, why is she allowing Mr Ostry to stay in his position as chairman and CEO until December 15?

Hon Mrs Haslam: Mr Ostry offered his resignation to me. I accepted his resignation, effective December 15. This allows TVO a time of transition, it allows Mr Ostry to attend a very important conference, and it allows time for us to find a replacement for him.

Mrs Marland: The minister has said also, in this same statement, "I will be requiring the vice-chair to report to me monthly about these matters." She was referring to expenses and human resources actions. The minister obviously has already bypassed the chairman, the same chairman she is going to continue to pay for two and a half months at $110,000 per year. I simply ask her, if she has already bypassed him by asking the vice-chair to report to her, then why would she continue to pay the chairman for another two and a half months? Why would she simply not appoint the vice-chair as acting chair in the meantime?

Hon Mrs Haslam: I can only reiterate that Mr Ostry did offer me his resignation, that it is effective on December 15. There were reasons which I have originally stated for leaving Mr Ostry in the position while we put a process in to replace him.

TAXATION

Ms Harrington: My question is also to the Treasurer. This morning on the 8:30 CBC news, I was quite surprised to hear a statement on behalf of the Greater Toronto Home Builders Association in which it claims that our government plans to impose a capital gains tax on people's principal residences. These Toronto home builders also claim that this was somehow buried in our Ministry of Housing discussion paper entitled A Framework for Ontario.

I need to know, does the government in fact plan to impose a capital gains tax on principal residences?

Hon Mr Laughren: I was surprised when I saw that in one of the Toronto tabloids as well, because I do not know where that story came from. But when I saw it, I went back and checked. I do not want to tease the bears over there, but I want to quote from a document I have heard them quote from time to time. This is what it says, "New democrats would deter real estate speculators by introducing a speculation tax on property that is not a principal residence." That was our position when the Agenda for People was written and it still is today.

Ms Harrington: With regard to the tax situation in Ontario, I understand the Fair Tax Commission is looking into all aspects of taxation, including this type of situation. When would the tax commission be reporting to this House?

Hon Mr Laughren: I get questions about the Fair Tax Commission from all over Ontario, so I appreciate the question from the member for Niagara Falls. I have asked the Fair Tax Commission to come back to me on any number of tax questions during the next three years. However, we are not waiting until the end of three years to take action on some of the tax measures. Two of the tax measures we asked them to fast-track and report to me on, hopefully this year, are the corporate minimum tax and the land speculation tax, which was the tax implied in the member's question. I appreciate the opportunity to clarify that matter for the member.

1440

ONTARIO HYDRO RATES

Mr Conway: My question is to the Minister of Energy. Bill 118, An Act to amend the Power Corporation Act, contains within it a dramatic departure from Hydro policy as we have known it in Ontario for the past number of years. The dramatic departure I want to focus on today is the directive power. The bill introduced by the NDP provides for a cabinet, an executive council, to issue any kind of directive, that the directive must be acted upon by the Hydro board and any costs associated with that directive, irrespective of whether that directive has anything to do with the generation or distribution of electrical power, must be passed on to the electrical consumers.

Can the Minister of Energy explain to the hydro consumers of Ontario exactly what the rationale is for so dramatic a departure and for so sweeping a directive power as that which is contained in Bill 118?

Hon Mr Ferguson: Members of the House ought to know we are not breaking new ground here, this is not new ground being dug by this particular government. What the members opposite ought to look at is the legislation that their federal counterparts put in place to establish Petro-Canada as a crown corporation. What we are proposing here is absolutely no different than what their Liberal counterpart friends did in Ottawa in establishing Petro-Canada.

Mr Conway: I have read the Financial Administration Act of Canada and I have also read the Power Corporation Act, as it has been and as the minister wishes to amend it. I can assure the honourable member that what he has just said does not square with reality either in Ottawa or in Ontario.

I repeat: I ask the minister, on behalf of the new government, to explain how this kind of sweeping, unfettered directive power—which has no legislative oversight, I might add, something quite noticeably lacking in the bill—accords with any kind of principle of accountability. Hydro ratepayers across the province want to know why they should pay the kinds of costs that this kind of directive power might impose upon them.

Hon Mr Ferguson: The purpose of the amendments to the act is very clear. It is going to strengthen the relationship between this government and Hydro in the future, as well as future governments. The main goal and objective and purpose of the amendments is not only to strengthen this relationship but to ensure, unlike in the past where Hydro very often used the back door in dealing with the government of Ontario, that in the future they will be using the front door in dealing with the government of Ontario.

LAND REGISTRATION

Mr Arnott: My question is for the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. It concerns her plan to close the Arthur land registry office later this week, an office which has been serving the people of Wellington county for well over 100 years, and incidentally which is located less than 200 yards from the house where I grew up.

Opponents of this office closure have filed an application with the Ontario Court (General Division) seeking a declaration from the court that the minister's decision to close the registry office is invalid. My question is this: Since this matter is now before the Ontario Court, will the minister await the court's findings before closing the Arthur land registry office?

Hon Ms Churley: I have certainly heard about the review that has been asked for. I would just like to point out today once again that this was a cabinet decision made some time ago, and that there was—

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. I imagine the member for Wellington would like to hear the response. He is unable to do so because of a number of his colleagues. Would the minister conclude.

Hon Ms Churley: The decision was a difficult one. An in-depth analysis was made, and as I pointed out before, we are saving the taxpayers of Ontario $1 million a year plus $8 million in capital costs. I might also point out that in most parts of Ontario there is one land registry office per county, in the county seat, and that is what we are doing here. In Arthur the plans are still in place to close that office.

Mr Arnott: That reply only underlines the minister's utter disregard for those concerned about this issue, which borders on contempt. Last week the minister showed blatant arrogance by refusing to acknowledge the importance of the work of the standing committee on general government, which held hearings on the registry office issue last July—incidentally, not one presenter to that committee indicated support for the minister's decision—by refusing to delay the closures until the committee makes its recommendations. Today she is saying that the courts in Ontario do not matter either.

How can the minister justify her contempt for the work of her colleagues on a standing committee of this Legislature, and now her total disregard for fairness and the court process in Ontario?

Hon Ms Churley: I do not think anything I said today or on other occasions would in any way indicate that I have contempt for rural areas of Ontario or the court system. As I pointed out before in a question a couple of days ago, although I was unable to attend the standing committee hearings because I was not informed of the date until after plans were made, I did—

Mr B. Murdoch: You were not informed?

The Speaker: Order, the member for Grey. Has the minister concluded her remarks?

Hon Ms Churley: I did indeed pay careful attention to the comments that were made to the standing committee. I have reviewed again the entire situation and upon the review, I have still come to the same conclusions, for at this time in Ontario it is important to rationalize this system for the taxpayers of Ontario.

CONSUMER PROTECTION

Mr G. Wilson: My question is also to the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. I am sure the minister will agree that the marketplace is much more complex than it used to be. I have heard from some of my constituents, and I am sure this is an experience common to many of the members here, that they are often intimidated by the legal jargon they find on contracts for things as simple as cable TV or even renting a car. I wonder if the minister can tell the House what is being done to make sure that our constituents know what they are signing and what responsibilities they are undertaking.

Hon Ms Churley: As the member knows, my ministry is preparing a new consumer code to replace the earlier consumer legislation. A key element of that new consumer code is to require that all consumer contracts be written in plain, clear language, and that is to help the vulnerable consumer, to make sure that people are aware of the implications of what they are signing. I may add that the new code itself will be written in plain language.

1450

ASSISTANCE TO FARMERS

Mr Cleary: The Minister of Agriculture and Food indicated last week that he will soon be making an announcement of additional assistance for Ontario farmers. The minister is aware that the net income stabilization account program would provide assistance to livestock, fruit and vegetable farmers who are not covered under the gross revenue insurance plan program. The minister knows that the payment under the NISA program could be made quickly this fall. The minister also knows that provincial funding of NISA this year would automatically trigger additional federal funding under the terms of the program. Why will the minister not reverse his government's refusal to fund NISA this year as part of his fall farm assistance package?

Hon Mr Buchanan: NISA would address some of the concerns across the farm community. There are other programs and there are other concerns that need to be addressed. We hope to be able to address all those concerns, not simply the NISA program but some of the other major issues as well in the farm community, and we will make an announcement on that very soon.

Mr Cleary: If the minister does not agree with the opposition arguments, perhaps he could talk to the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. The federation is holding a meeting here in the Macdonald Block at Queen's Park on October 16 in order to pressure the Premier and the minister to finally meet face to face on crisis issues affecting agriculture. Will the minister make a commitment today that he and his Premier will meet with the Ontario Federation of Agriculture to hear the concerns of farmers about the province's lack of commitment to the agricultural industry?

Hon Mr Buchanan: I would like the member to know that I have met with the Ontario Federation of Agriculture from many counties. We met with the county groups. I would also like the member to know that just as recently as noon, I met with the president of the OFA to talk about the farm crisis, along with people from Essex county as well to talk about the drought situation in the province. We have had meetings and discussions with the president of the OFA and we will continue to have ongoing consultations as we look at addressing some of the serious concerns.

ONTARIO STUDENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Mrs Cunningham: I have a question—it is going to be two questions, but I will ask in a different way—for the Minister of Colleges and Universities.

I was encouraged when the minister's government announced last April that he would undertake a comprehensive review of the Ontario student assistance program. His April 23, 1991, news release stated that the review would be completed by August 1991 so that the changes could be implemented for the 1992-93 academic year.

Last Wednesday I met with Laurie Kingston, the chair of the Ontario Federation of Students. She expressed her concern that the timing of the minister's announcement on changes to OSAP has slowed significantly and gave me a copy of a letter from his deputy minister, Dr Bernard Shapiro, stated that the minister will now be accepting submissions until October 15, 1991. When will the minister convene the final meeting of the general advisory committee on OSAP and what is his new time line for completion of the review?

Hon Mr Allen: There is no revised time line. We did in fact complete all the review portion in terms of the steering committee's work. All the information we gathered in that review was put together into a document which then, of course, was fed out again to the community and the universities to respond to. We have a deadline of October 15 for that feedback, and shortly after that date we will be calling the steering committee into place to review the proposals that will be coming from the ministry in response to what we have heard back from the review and the proposals that were contained in it.

BUDGET

Mr Elston: Mr Speaker, on a point of privilege: If I may rise and correct the record, I had suggested that the treasury board bill had not been passed. I was corrected by the Treasurer. I wish to apologize for suggesting otherwise. It received third reading on June 24, 1991, and has been proclaimed. In fact, royal assent was done in June and in August the royal proclamation. The people in treasury board do have full range in this cutting exercise and the fact that the Treasury bureaucrats are excluded is a problem the Treasurer will have to deal with.

PETITIONS

ST JAMES ROMAN CATHOLIC SCHOOL

Mr Carr: I am pleased to table a petition signed by approximately 1,000 concerned residents of Oakville which reads as follows:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas St James Roman Catholic School has a 35-year history of extensive service to the Oakville community and St James has provided quality education and a focus for the development of numerous communities, particularly of new Canadians,

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly as follows:

"For the urgent personal attention of the Minister of Education to provide significant improvement to our vital community school, St James, through the allocation of $1.9 million for an addition/renovation."

RESIDENTS' ALLOWANCES

Mr Cooper: I have a petition presented to me by 102 residents of Sunnyside Home in Kitchener. It is to the Parliament of Ontario, Queen's Park, Toronto:

"We, the undersigned, petition the Parliament of Ontario as follows:

"Residents in homes for the aged receive a comfort allowance each month of $112. Out of this amount, residents must purchase a number of items and services both discretionary and non-discretionary. Residents must purchase their own eyeglasses, clothes, shoes and toiletries. Residents must pay for their own dental care including dentures. Residents must pay for all their hair appointments. Also out of this amount residents may purchase cigarettes, alcohol, gifts for families, transportation, ie taxi charges, telephones, cable TV, and if anything is left over, entertainment.

"There has not been an increase in this amount for at least six years, not since 1985.

"Through this petition we hope to let the Ontario government know we need an increase. If we received 5% per year for the last six years we would now be receiving $150.09 per month. We feel that our comfort allowance must be increased to $150 per month retroactive to January 1991 and we must receive a cost-of-living increase each year following."

ASSISTANCE TO FARMERS

Mr Elston: I have a petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas grain and oilseed farmers in the province of Ontario are experiencing the most severe shortage of cash flow in the history of the industry;

"Whereas the government of Ontario has failed to provide sufficient cash-flow assistance to farmers during the transition from old ad hoc programs to new safety-net programs in order that they may meet their financial obligations;

"I/We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the government of Ontario provide an immediate 1% contribution to NISA—net income stabilization account—for Ontario producers and waive the one third producer premium deduction with the Ontario grain stabilization program and take other necessary measures to ensure the survival of the family farm in Ontario."

This is signed by some 1,500 people from Ontario, and I have affixed my name to the petition.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

Mr J. Wilson: I am privileged to rise today and present a petition to the Legislature of Ontario. It reads as follows:

"Whereas the Queen of Canada has long been a symbol of national unity for Canadians from all walks of life and from all ethnic backgrounds;

"Whereas the people of Canada are currently facing a constitutional crisis which could potentially result in the breakup of the federation and are in need of unifying symbols;

"We, the undersigned, respectfully petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to restore the oath to the Queen for Ontario's police officers."

That is signed by some 100 residents of my riding of Simcoe West, from Wasaga Beach, Collingwood and New Lowell.

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION

Mr Carr: I am pleased to table a petition signed by the residents of the Oakville and Burlington area which reads as follows:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"We, the undersigned, respectfully petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to ensure that our elected officials work to preserve and protect the environment of Ontario for the future of the children of our province."

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS

ARMENIAN COMMUNITY CENTRE
OF CAMBRIDGE ACT, 1991

Mr Farnan moved first reading of Bill Pr68, An Act respecting the Armenian Community Centre of Cambridge.

Motion agreed to.

1500

ORDERS OF THE DAY

OPPOSITION DAY:

FARM INCOME

Mr Villeneuve: On behalf of the member for Nipissing and in his absence, may I have agreement of the House to move this motion on opposition day special debate?

Agreed to.

Mr Villeneuve: Thank you. This is a most important debate.

Mr Villeneuve moved, on behalf of Mr Harris, opposition day motion 1:

That this House, having witnessed the serious deterioration of crop prices through 1991, particularly in grains and oilseeds, and realizing that the new federal-provincial support programs are not in place for the 1990-91 crop year, further realizing that the Ontario government has refused to participate in the NISA program this year, and recognizing that Ontario farmers require the same commitment from their provincial government as farmers across Canada receive from their provincial governments to create a more level playing field, observing that consultations with farm groups have not yielded necessary emergency aid, and recognizing that drought conditions in southwestern Ontario have compounded an already desperate farm income situation, and also recognizing that Ontario agriculture has been neglected as a priority by the government, calls upon the Premier and cabinet to participate in the NISA program for this year and to introduce further measures to give Ontario producers at least the same protection for 1990-91 that they will have under the new safety net programs, in order to meet the commitment made by agriculture ministers at their meeting in Regina in March 1991.

The Speaker: Does the member have opening comments?

Mr Villeneuve: I also ask the indulgence of this House to have not only the opening remarks but also the wrapup remarks, as if the motion were my own.

Agreed to.

Mr Villeneuve: This is a rather sad day to be debating a situation that has been coming to the fore for quite a number of weeks and indeed months. The writing has been on the wall regarding—

Mrs Mathysen: Years. Ten long years.

Mr Villeneuve: The opposition parties are saying, "Ten long years." I have been in this Legislature for seven years and have never seen the prices we have now. I can tell the members opposite that when we consider inflation and cost of input, farmers at this particular time are getting a price 30% lower than in the Dirty Thirties, the Depression time. Opposition members can say 10 long years all they want. Never has agriculture been hit as hard as in the last 12 months, 30% below the Dirty Thirties' prices when adjusted. They can say 10 long years all they want and try to pass on the responsibility which is now theirs but, whether they want it or not, it is now theirs.

As I mentioned in my lead question to the Treasurer, in the absence of the Premier and of the Minister of Agriculture and Food, this government seemed to have many millions of dollars for what it perceived as its agenda. Indeed, when they were fighting this election campaign last year they made promises, particularly in southwestern Ontario, and we did get many elected MPPs from the rural parts of southwestern Ontario.

I hope the members have read some of the letters to the editor in the last edition of Farm and Country. There is an eye-opener there for them. As time goes on I will quote a few just to make sure of reminding them they are the government and that they promised agriculture they would be different from the Liberals and the Tories. They were going to be looking after the problems of the farmers, the basic industry of Ontario, but a 3.2% increase in the budget is certainly not looking after the farming community very well.

I will just quote a little bit here from an editorial by John Phillips, someone everyone reads in the rural community. "Where's Bob Rae When He's Needed?" That is the question. That is the headline. The initial statement says, "When inflation is taken into account, grain and oil-seed prices run 30% below those of the Dirty Thirties." Those are not my statements. Those are accurate statements from a very respected farm writer, John Phillips. The members opposite can say 10 years all they like. They can try to dump the responsibility, but it is their baby. They are in the driver's seat; they have the levers of power.

I am pleased to see the Minister of Agriculture and Food back from Milton. I knew he was in Milton today and was hoping he would be back in sufficient time to answer the question. The Treasurer provided a reply. It was not an answer. He was effectively looking for the minister. He said the minister had a great deal of clout at the cabinet table. We are waiting to see from the minister's announcement this week just how much clout he does have.

These are tough times for agriculture. I will quote a little more. Hugh Zimmer, another highly respected farm writer, stated today, "...we have Premier Bob Rae dodging the issue of giving extra aid to income-strapped farmers. So there's no help for farmers, but he finds millions of dollars for civil servant pay increases."

For the record, Ottawa gave Queen's Park a rebate on Ontario's share of the 1991 gross revenue insurance plan contributions. So what did our NDP government do? They pocketed the money rather than adequately funding the net income stabilization account, NISA, which should go hand in hand with the GRIP program. The Minister of Agriculture and Food knows that. I just wonder how many people who sit with him on those benches know that.

Farmers are not crying wolf for nothing. The Ontario Farm Debt Review Board case load will likely increase by 33% this year and we have already had a large number of farmers in financial trouble having to go to the board to attempt to negotiate some sort of settlement. We are not looking for across-the-board write-offs; we are simply looking at an opportunity to make financial ends meet.

It is rather sad that the minister did not come to Lucknow several weeks ago. I had the occasion to be there with one of my colleagues and we had one of the minister's parliamentary assistants there, the local member for Huron, and we had the Leader of the Opposition there that night. But 1,000-plus farmers of several generations, people in their mid-50s, expressed the same situation, the same problem. They are just looking over their shoulders and wondering whether they will be able to put in a crop next year.

We are not looking at a sector of the population that is not productive; we are looking at a sector that spends money when it produces and spends money when it has income. They have a ripple effect, a multiplier effect, of about seven within the community they represent.

I had occasion to visit Leamington last Wednesday. We have a desperate situation down there. Those farmers were hit with a double whammy. Not only did we have a major reduction in the price of their commodity, but we had a major drought to compound the problem. Many of these people who contract to some of the tomato processors were not even able to meet 50% of their contract, which normally would have been easily met and had a surplus. The grain corn was being harvested at about 30 bushels to the acre. In Essex county you can expect an average of 130 bushels to the acre, so what do you do? There it was and they were harvesting it. They had no choice. It is the same thing with the soybean crop and whatever else they are growing.

This is a major catastrophe. Not only will we see farmers go down, but we will see entire communities go down unless this government is prepared to help. It is not like putting money in the hands of other sectors. I speak of many ministries. With other sectors the money does not have the multiplier effect it has, and traditionally has had, in agriculture in rural Ontario. I say to the minister that we must address this very serious situation and it must be addressed shortly.

1510

Farmers at Lucknow said that on October 1, which is tomorrow, they would nail the mailbox shut and let nothing in and nothing out. What does that do for those very proud farm families and to the community at large? It is nothing but very negative. As the Treasurer deliberates and has deliberated, and if he has the power he said he had today, I hope he will be able to come up with an across-the-board package to cover not only the below-depression prices of grain and oilseeds, but also those hit with the double whammy of drought.

I also had occasion to visit the tender fruit-growing area of Niagara. Our peach growers had 40% less tonnage this year and 25% fewer dollars per ton. That is a pretty serious situation. They are not making ends meet, yet we did not see great reductions in the produce they produced to the consuming public. During the summer's very disastrous drought and low crop prices we have had very little recognition, leave alone support, from the government. The government sat back and did very little for the Niagara area farmers as they submitted reports and waited for some help.

Farm leaders united in July to declare a state of emergency in Ontario agriculture, an unprecedented declaration, a state of emergency, something never seen before in Ontario. Conditions now are in many ways worse than they were at any time. I can recall the early 1980s when we had very high interest rates. I personally paid 22% and I am sure many people in this Legislature and our farmers out there paid the 20%-plus interest. However, we had commodity prices that were reasonably good. We were faced with grain corn at $140 to $160 a ton. That was reasonable. With a little careful management you were able to manipulate. But now we have a situation where tipping a ton of garbage would cost almost double what you can get for a ton of barley, oats or grain corn. It actually makes no sense at all, yet we have the ministry, in the name of farmers and agriculture, spending big dollars to protect farm land. I agree with protecting farm land, but first of all we have to protect the people who own it and try to make a living from it.

My colleagues and our leader have seen at first hand the major problems facing agriculture. We regularly hear from producers and the message is no different. The message is: "We're in trouble. We're prepared to go to Queen's Park. We're prepared to go to Parliament Hill 10,000, 20,000, 30,000 strong if need be, because we've got second-, third-, and fourth-generation farms going down the financial pipe." It is very sad. This is a proud group of individuals and right now they are on their knees, and not because they want to.

Government has followed policies which give more to everyone else, but agriculture is left behind because we do not seem to have many people on the government benches who understand the real problem out there. I go back again to the Treasurer's statement today that the Minister of Agriculture and Food has a great deal of power at the cabinet table. We are watching and the minister should come out with all horses pulling.

The other new announcements have been of national support programs. There has been nothing this government has done for farmers that can be seen as major strictly made-in-Ontario plans for farmers. I live in an area along the Ontario-Quebec border and it is very difficult for me to explain to my grain producers in Lancaster township, in Lochiel township, in Glengarry and Stormont or wherever that their colleagues across the line in Quebec are getting $180 for every metric ton of corn they sell, and yet we have to settle right now for less than $100.

We look at the so-called agriculture task force of the Ontario Round Table on Environment and Economy. That is an interesting one. The task force is chaired by a Toronto politician. The NDP originally decided to exclude any farmers from membership on this task force. Then, when they could not support that position any longer, they decided to refuse suggestions from the Ontario farm organizations for nominees.

They have had one public consultation, a $30-a-head breakfast meeting in downtown Toronto. They visited some Ontario farms, but in two days of visits, do members know what they visited? Each and every farm they visited was a so-called organic farm, right to the parliamentary assistants; I gather they were there. Does that send a signal or a message out to Ontario agriculture? We are waiting for the answer.

North America and even the western world could not be fed from organic farming. The idea may sound really good to some of our consumers. The reality is that it would be very difficult to feed ourselves, let alone provide exports.

They have already prepared their final report. Even though some task force members have not seen it, it is out there. This report calls for higher taxes on inputs in order to finance the government's participation in the NISA program. The ignorance and inhumanity towards farm families shown by the government task force is, for lack of a better word, an insult to rural Ontario and to our farmers.

The government promised at least $150 million and possibly up to $300 million for de Havilland. In dealing with depressed crop prices, Ontario farm families have seen about $124 million. I remind the minister that we have 60,000-plus farm families out there, a lot of people who contribute to the economy and to the communities they live in. They are very proud people. How can the minister equate the little bit of assistance they are getting compared to some of the ones I have outlined?

Last week in the standing committee on resources development, the honourable minister, who is here today, explained that the federal offer to help with NISA participation came too close to the Treasurer's budget, so Ontario did not participate. It is a rather poor reason, that the Treasurer's schedule has a higher priority than the needs of 60,000-plus farm families across the province.

Ontario is lagging far behind in helping its farm families, yet Ontario is Canada's largest agricultural producing province. Look at the price that eastern Ontario corn producers are receiving as compared to Quebec. That will tell members exactly where this government's priorities are.

Essex county, as I mentioned, had a very major drought problem—I know the minister is listening, I know he was down there—and we even have some of them here today.

Interjection.

Mr Villeneuve: What did the Minister of Transportation say?

Hon Mr Pouliot: Of course he is listening and he is concerned.

Mr Villeneuve: Thank you. I am glad to see that the Minister of Transportation is also concerned, because I know the Minister of Agriculture and Food did meet these people earlier today, and they had an excellent presentation. These are not figures that were pulled out of the air. These are facts and figures from commodity groups and they will hold water, so to speak, in spite of the fact that they were short of water in Essex county this year.

The ethanol industry has to be looked at. I know the minister and I have worked on that and have discussed it many times. Now is the time; the time has never been more opportune. We have had occasion to look at some of the background papers from his ministry and it certainly seems it is coming on to the front burner. Let's not hold it back; let's get it out there. It will provide additional markets for grains. It will clean the environment. It will provide jobs. It is win, win, win.

I will not touch on the disposal of dead animals for long. There is a major problem across Ontario with our livestock producers right now: No one is picking dead animals up. The minister knows that. We have discussed that on numerous occasions. We are still waiting for further direction.

In summation, Ontario's agricultural crisis is being discussed throughout rural Ontario and within the hallowed halls of Queen's Park, and indeed in this very Legislature today. Now is the time for action. Tomorrow will be too late. The line is now drawn in the dirt.

1520

Hon Mr Buchanan: First, let me say that I think it is appropriate that we are discussing agriculture here today. I accept the member's analysis that agriculture is in difficulty and requires some assistance, and the government intends to act upon that.

I do want to inform the member and all members that agriculture is going to be a key sector in this government's economic renewal strategy. The government members recently had a retreat. We talked about economic renewal, and it is important for everyone to realize that agriculture will be part of that renewal. In fact, in his opening statement last Monday, the Premier discussed the fact that rural communities and agriculture had to be an important component of economic renewal.

A strong provincial economy depends on a very healthy agricultural and rural economy. The production of food is a very basic activity and requires assistance if the marketplace is not going to provide the necessary money for farmers to continue in production.

I believe, in spite of what the member suggests, that the serious difficulties facing farmers are well known, certainly by the members on this side of the House: the low commodity prices, the low yields, the surplus grain stores, the severe drought, the effects of free trade and the fact that government support programs do leave some gaps from time to time. This affects many producers. Even the fruit growers down in the Niagara region, as the member mentioned, have been affected by the cheap fruit that was dumped into Canada. The grains and oilseeds producers, as the members says, are suffering from very low prices. Some of this is being skewed by international trade policies.

I want the member to know, though, that I did tour the province this summer. In fact, I visited over 25 different counties and districts in July, August and September, in all regions of the province, to get a handle on what the situation was in agriculture. I have seen the drought at first hand. I have listened to the plight of farmers and farm families in their homes, in their kitchens and in meetings across the province. My parliamentary assistants have also been touring the province and meeting with farm groups, and have a good handle on what the problems are out there.

I should also note that my colleagues who form the rural caucus are well aware of the situation and certainly have been keeping me informed and promoting within caucus the importance of agriculture for this government.

In light of all that, and having assessed what the difficulties are, I do intend to make an announcement some time this week which will address the pressures and the concerns of agriculture and the rural communities across this province. We will continue to work with farm leaders and organizations in order to put together a package which we hope will address all of the concerns in the farm community.

We realize there is a serious cash-flow problem, and that needs to be addressed. It is not just drought. It is not just grains and oilseeds. It is a severe cash-flow problem that needs to be addressed in the best way possible. There are some payments that are going to be flowing in the near future that have already been announced. Crop insurance is expected to put about $60 million out to producers across the province. For grains and oilseeds, we managed to negotiate with the federal government to get an interim GRIP payment of about $93 million. Producers say that is 1992 money and they need some assistance for the 1990-91 crop. I accept that challenge and intend to address that, but I did want to note for everyone that this interim GRIP payment will flow $93 million this fall.

In terms of a made-in-Ontario program, I would like to point out the farm interest assistance program. We put $50 million out that has been well received across the province by families who are in serious need.

I want to clear up some misconceptions, however, about Ontario's participation in the NISA program. We are participating in 1992. We want to take advantage of the long-term benefits of NISA for farmers. The NISA program will allow farmers to contribute to the program in good years to cover the bad years. This was intended to be a long-term safety net program. NISA, in my estimation, is not going to solve the short-term cash-flow problems.

The federal government is making an attempt. They modified their program, which I guess is a good gesture, but they gave me 48 hours in which to respond on whether I could be in. I was unable to make that decision in that time frame, and the budget was about two weeks away when the program was modified and put to me. I want everyone to understand that there is a reason we are not in NISA. The only province that is in at this time is Saskatchewan, which had announced it would participate in the program before the federal government modified the program. None of the other provinces is participating.

I do not think it would be fair if the federal government unilaterally decided to use the NISA program as a delivery mechanism for short-term assistance. NISA is not an appropriate third-line defence program. I hope the federal government will flow the funds as quickly as it is promising, but I am not too reassured by what I have seen. The application forms are out now. They are substantial in size and in length; in fact, many farmers are going to have to pay substantial amounts to have the NISA program application filled out. I am not too optimistic that this program will deliver the kind of assistance all of us want.

We have made a commitment to participate next year—we announced that earlier—and will allow farmers to get whatever support the federal government can get out this year.

I welcome this debate and opportunity to set the record straight on what this government has done and what we are willing to do, and announce our commitments and continued concern for agriculture and the rural community. I hope that all parties and political and farm leaders can work together for the good of the people and the economy in agriculture in rural Ontario.

Mr Elston: I was interested in this debate coming today because I wanted to hear from the members of the government party. I am not so much interested, I guess, in what is said on this side of the House, because there have been certain commitments made both by us and the third party with respect to trying to move this issue along.

I am concerned, however, that the Minister of Agriculture and Food has just indicated that he is going to come forward later in this week with something that will address "all of the concerns" that seem to be afflicting the agricultural community at the moment. I am concerned because it leaves some kind of misconception, I think, about how well this government is going to be able to address the things that ail the agricultural community.

I would be the first to say that there are many complex issues over which this minister does not have full and single jurisdiction. However, having said that for him to come into the House and say that he is going to have an announcement which will touch on "all" the concerns seems to me to be leading people to be too much impressed by what they should hear from this minister later in the week. In fact, Mr Speaker, you might have had the Minister of Agriculture and Food saying "a few" of the concerns of the agricultural community, because there are, in fact, far too many for him to manage the way he ought to.

The other thing I wanted to make an observation about was the fact that the minister has made what is probably going to be read as a political statement. When is the minister going to play the part that he plays so well and make a statement that comes clean and clear to the people who are in the agricultural community? He was, I think, first sold to the agricultural community not so much as a politician but as a people person. He has converted himself quite quickly away from what he originally told the people he was, and that was a man of the people.

1530

He has to stop giving these political speeches that are written for him by somebody else, conceived by somebody else—somebody else who shelters him from going face to face into meetings with men and women who are suffering the experiences which he knows about from handwritten reports but not so much close up, on a personal basis.

Interjection.

Mr Elston: The member for Lake Nipigon always likes to interject, because they never let him talk over there. They have hidden him away somewhere. He never has the ability to stand and get the floor because his party has prevented him, in fact "stifled" him, in the words of a TV character popular in my earlier days. I must say that I suspect the member for Lake Nipigon is going through some kind of conniptions right now as he and his buddies cut and slash at some of the programs which he himself must hold dear.

Back to the subject matter: The Minister of Agriculture and Food knows he has to do better. He knows he has to be the person who comes face to face with the men and women in the agricultural communities who can help him shape the policies and the programs that are needed to give them relief. He has to get away from these political speeches, he has to get away from his political handlers and he has to do the groundwork. He has to work at making sure the contacts are real and that he is not spirited away by some of his handlers, the names of whom of course are well known in the communities. Even some of them are well known to me, because I used to run against some of them in other elections.

I would hope that when we have this announcement later in the week he can deal with all of the concerns. I know he cannot. What he has to do is create real expectations of actually performing the tasks he sets for himself. In other words, he has to live within reality and his government's fiscal management and he cannot lead people to believe that the impossible will be delivered to them at the end of this week. If he can do that and get away from his political handlers, he will have done an amazing amount of good work for the farm communities, because then they know they have somebody with whom they can become a real partner. I have been spending a fair bit of my time in the communities telling them that this minister is that sort of individual, but he has to do it and he got to make up his mind that he will do the work that he himself knows he has to do personally.

Mr J. Wilson: I am very pleased to join the discussion today regarding the farm income crisis in Ontario, and I applaud the efforts by my colleague and leader, the member for Nipissing, for tabling this motion for emergency debate.

This opposition day motion highlights the enormous difficulties faced by farmers in this province with regard to making ends meet. The member for Nipissing's motion also serves to demonstrate both our party's commitment to agriculture and the failure of the NDP government to respond to the current crisis. But most important, the opposition day motion brought forward by the leader of the Ontario PC Party also sheds light on a tremendous tragedy that is currently unfolding. In a nutshell, this tragedy pits the farmers of Ontario against insurmountable odds in the face of an Ontario government that is extremely apathetic.

In August, when I met with Mr John Morrison and Mr Paul Wardlaw of my riding, and more recently with Mr Joe Keresturi and a group of farmers in the riding of Brant-Haldimand, I saw at first hand the human element that is very much a part of this tragedy.

Unfortunately, these honest, hardworking farmers are cast in the role of victims within this tragedy. There was a time when working the land and gathering the harvest was one of the most noble and distinguished professions. We appreciated farmers because they provided something we could not live without, that is, food on our tables. But today, when the farmers need us most, some people, and some people in this Legislature, are prepared to turn their backs on them and let them fend for themselves.

The members in my caucus have not forgotten farmers, and we are not prepared to forsake the invaluable contribution they make to the quality of our lives and to the sustainability of our society.

When I met with Mr Morrison and Mr Wardlaw and the members from Brant-Haldimand, one theme kept being repeated. Their pained looks betrayed the singular sentiment that the dream of the family farm is quickly becoming a nightmare. Farmers who are facing the worst crisis in their history are being hung out to dry by a government that pledged to bring relief to debt-ridden farmers.

Who is to blame? It is not the farmers. Ontario farmers are as efficient and as competitive as any in the world, but Ontario farmers are being asked to compete against other provinces and countries on a playing field that is profoundly tilted against them.

By now every member in this House is aware and should be aware that subsidy levels for Ontario farmers are substantially lower than in other Canadian provinces and in most other developed countries.

Here is a quote from a brief that was submitted to the Ontario Minister of Agriculture and Food. It was submitted by the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, the Ontario Agricultural Commodity Council, the Ontario Corn Producers, the Ontario Soybean Growers' Marketing Board and the Ontario Wheat Producers' Marketing Board: "We can compete against Ontario farmers. We cannot compete against other national and provincial or state treasuries without comparable support from our governments."

The equation is simple for this government. Either it supports Ontario farmers or it does not. Either it responds to the income crisis that has battered our farming community or it does not.

Getting back to my meeting with Mr Morrison and Mr Wardlaw of my riding, their message to me was short, sweet and uncomplicated. They called on the government of Ontario to waive the one-third reduction on 1990-91 payments under the Ontario farm income stabilization program, to provide a 1% contribution to the NISA program for Ontario crop producers for 1990 and for a modification of the floating price option under the 1991 crop insurance program for grain and oilseed producers.

It is unconscionable for this government to expect farmers to function while prices are plummeting and operating costs are escalating.

Quoting further from the brief that was submitted by the Ontario farm organizations to the Minister of Agriculture and Food: "And unless corrective action is taken immediately by governments, many of these farmers will not be around to take advantage of new safety net programs next year, or, alternatively, they will enter 1992 in such a desperate financial condition that the new programs will not prevent their ultimate demise."

My leader, the member for Nipissing, has, with this motion, called on the Ontario government to join the fight to preserve agriculture in this province. With this motion, we are urging the NDP government to assist farmers to help remedy the bitter taste left in their mouths by a litany of government betrayals: betrayals that include the $124-million shortfall in promised government support for 1990-91; betrayals such as this government's initial reluctance to join NISA and its refusal to participate in NISA this year, and the ultimate betrayal of this government that pledges to support farmers yet falls silent when the need is greatest. That need is right now, as my colleague for sand, dust, gravel and East Grenville so eloquently explained to this Legislature and to members of the government.

The facts are clear. There has been a drought in south-western Ontario. Prices for grain and oilseeds have bottomed out. Operating costs for farmers are continuing to increase, while realized net farm incomes are lagging well below that of 1989 levels. Market receipts from the sale of crops are predicted to drop by over 3%.

NISA will kick in for 1991-92, but nothing is available immediately. This government must begin to rethink its priorities. Ontario cannot exist without a viable and productive agricultural sector. Thousands of jobs and dreams are hanging on this government's decision.

I quote further from the brief by the Ontario farm organizations for the Ontario Minister of Agriculture and Food:

"It is also a question of jobs"—and the NDP government should be particularly interested and attentive to this point—"One job in five in Ontario depends on food and farming. Are governments willing to let these value added jobs go down the drain, as well as the future of Ontario farmers?"

The ball is in the NDP government's court. I say to the Minister of Agriculture and Food that now is the time to send a positive message to the farmers of my riding and all of those ridings in Ontario. Farmers are hurting, I say to the minister, who is not in the House at the moment to hear my remarks. That is unfortunate, because you would think the Minister of Agriculture and Food would be interested in all members' comments dealing with the farm crisis, and it is extremely disappointing that he is not here.

Interjections.

Mr J. Wilson: It is absolutely pathetic. But Mr Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr Farnan): Please take your seat. I think it is customary, and the member should be well aware of this, not to take notice of a member's presence or absence. We all know that all of the members, including ministers, have responsibilities, and sometimes they draw them from the House. Indeed, on another occasion the member may find that he himself has to leave the House, so I think it is advisable, for the orderly running of this assembly, that we obey that tradition and not make reference to the absence of members.

1540

Mr J. Wilson: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I would hope the absence of the member who was referred to is not an indication of this government's interest in agriculture. This is an emergency debate, and every member of the House should be here for something as important. None the less, I am prepared to discuss not members' absences but to stick to the facts in agriculture.

I will wind up by echoing remarks made by my colleague and our critic for Agriculture and Food that now is the time for this government to address the crisis in agriculture, to sit down, sharpen its pencils and make significant announcements, not just the pappy political announcements it is so capable of doing but significant announcements that really and truly help the farming community in our province. Farmers are starving in my riding. This government can go ahead and bail out all kinds of unionized plants, but the people who put food on our tables are the farmers in our communities. They deserve this government's support and they deserve that support now.

Mr Johnson: I am very pleased to hear that the Minister of Agriculture and Food has an announcement forthcoming. Although I am not apprised of the details of the announcement, it makes me feel somewhat better, understanding the serious conditions that are facing the farmers in this province.

I do not support the motion of the leader of the third party. I have heard some discussion of the NISA program. I understand it was brought to the Ontario government at a late time, and I also understand, and I think farmers would certainly understand, that it is not unlike a farmer would a processor and the processor saying to the farmer, "Sign this blank contract; we'll get to the details later." That is what the federal government did to the government of Ontario, and the members opposite would most assuredly agree that is not the way governments make contracts together.

For that very reason, I cannot support this resolution. I think the minister has made it very clear that he is concerned, and indeed farming is a priority in the province. We still have a Minister of Agriculture and Food, and the minister has been around the province this summer.

We have global conditions that have made farming a very difficult occupation, I guess one might say, but we know too that the climate and the weather have not boded favourably for farmers across the province. There are indeed farmers in my riding of Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings who have suffered as a result of the drought of this summer. I was speaking this past Saturday to Elmer McFaul, who runs Town Line Farms in Wellington. He is concerned about the situation the farmers find themselves in. He certainly understands the need to meet the environmental standards required by the province, but he said it has made his farming operation somewhat more difficult. He says in time, and given the opportunity to get fair market value for his produce and given an opportunity for better conditions for growing, he will survive, and that makes me feel good.

Mr David Harrison from Harrison Foods in my riding has been in to my office. He too is concerned, and his operation, because of other reasons, may be downsized.

I understand, and it is clear now, that Cobi Foods is leaving my constituency and that has made it particularly difficult for farmers in my area. Farmers who have had horticultural crops that they would have sold to Cobi Foods unfortunately no longer have a place to sell or a place to have contracts for their produce, and because of this they find they are having difficult times at this time.

Why did Cobi move? Cobi has moved because it has been bought out. At least they have rationalized their organization, because ultimately what they want to make are profits and ultimately what they want to do is operate in a situation that profits them. What they have done is rationalize their operations. To do that and to have to do that has been largely because of global effects, global trade.

Other countries subsidize their farmers. They may not call it directly subsidizing, but nevertheless in some way they have subsidized their farmers. We have global trade to concern ourselves with. We know the value of produce such as grain and oil seeds is down markedly. On April 29, when the Treasurer brought in his budget, we did not know there was going to be a reduction as dramatic as there was in the price of the produce.

Mr Villeneuve: The federal government knew. They offered you money and you took it.

Mr Johnson: The member says the federal government knew. I guess they were keeping it a secret.

Mr Villeneuve: You took the money and said the farmers won't get it.

The Acting Speaker: When he was speaking, the member for S-D-G & East Grenville had the full attention of the House. It would be appreciated if we could carry on the debate introduced by the member in question. If he would refrain from constant interjections, it would add to the quality of the debate.

Mr Johnson: Thank you, Mr Speaker. It does make it somewhat difficult to concentrate on exactly what one is going to say when one is continually being badgered by the opposition.

Our government inherited the fiscal situation we have to operate in. It was not one of our own making. Given the difficult economic situation the province finds itself in, we have not forgotten the farmers. In fact, we understand that later this week the Minister of Agriculture and Food is going to make an announcement that I expect will be very positive and will help out the farmers in this province.

I must say I cannot support the resolution that was presented by the opposition here today.

Mr Ramsay: It is a great pleasure for me to rise in my place today to enter this debate that has been brought forward by the third party on its opposition day. I am pleased to be able to participate in the debate, which focuses attention on an industry in this province that sadly lacks that focus and attention. I applaud my colleagues in the Progressive Conservative Party for bringing this forward today.

However, I must add the caveat that I am having a little difficulty in serving agriculture today as I am also on the standing committee on resources development, and as a result three weeks ago put forward a resolution in that committee so that we could bring in farmers, people from the land, people from the agrifood industry. That is going on right now, so after my remarks I will be returning to committee room 1 in the Legislative Building, because right now as we speak we have farmers from Kent and Essex counties speaking before the resources development committee for the people at home. It is comprised of representatives in this House from all three parties, as we are very concerned about the agricultural situation in Ontario today. I will be getting back to that in a minute.

I must make a comment in regard to the comments made by the previous speaker, the member for Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings. It seems to me that when a member of this House stands up and starts to bemoan the loss of food-processing jobs and says these companies are only there for profit, we have a bit of the germ of the problem here. Unfortunately many members on the government side do not quite understand how business operates. If we cannot make the agrifood industry and the agrifood producers and processors in Ontario profitable, they will be steamrollered over by the companies in the rest of the world. With the new free-trading blocs that are forming around the world, we will be steamrollered by cheap food coming into Ontario. It is imperative the government work with both the processors and the producers to make sure we can produce food in this jurisdiction of Ontario as efficiently as possible.

What is happening is that our traditional agricultural base is being challenged today in Ontario. As I am sure many members of this House realize, Ontario, being extremely well blessed with soil and weather conditions and incredibly efficient producers and great research and development in the agrifood industry, produces over 200 different commodities. Just to give a comparison for people who are not as familiar with the agrifood industry as many in this House are, the state of Michigan, which shares the same latitude as us and is a neighbour of Ontario, only produces 80 different commodities. Ontario is a world leader in agricultural production. It is an absolutely incredible jurisdiction for agriculture.

1550

But as other jurisdictions are being allowed free access into the markets of Ontario, driven by our consumers who want products year-round on their grocery shelves, what is happening and what we are finding is that the traditional base of 200 commodities is being challenged. I think what is going to happen in the future of Ontario agriculture is we probably will not be producing 200 different commodities in Ontario. We will probably find we are not as highly competitive as some jurisdictions in all the commodities we produce, so sadly, we will probably see a restructuring, a rationalizing of Ontario agriculture. But we will be pursuing and continuing to grow and process those commodities that we do well, that we can do the very best in the world. We can do that.

As an example, what we are probably going to see is that it might be tough for Ontario to compete with California, let's say, to produce tomato solids. Having the Mediterranean-type climate that California has, it is probably the best place in the world to grow tomatoes, so articles such as ketchup and paste and the concentrated forms of tomato products may not continue to be grown here as much as they have been in the past. But because of the challenges of transportation, I am sure we will have a very viable tomato juice industry in Ontario, as it would make sense to be grow tomatoes in Ontario to produce products in 48-ounce cans for Ontario and the rest of Canada. This rationalization does not mean we are going to be denied a fair share of agricultural production in the world. In fact, we will be changing the direction of some of the products we produce.

The question here today, though, somehow posed at this government, and to be fair at all governments in the history of this province and this country is, how does government assist this particular industry? The question may be addressed and may be asked, why does government have some sort of special relationship, as we all as Canadians know it does, with agriculture? I think the reason for that is because most of us feel it is imperative that as a sovereign nation we develop, as much as possible, a level of self-sufficiency. It seems to me for a country to be saying it is a freestanding country on its own, it should have the ability, or close to it, to feed itself.

I think this is why government and agriculture have been partners, especially in this country and in countries around the world, and why probably any ag minister today in any country would probably say what this ag minister today is saying. The agrifood industry is absolutely vital to the citizens of every country in this world and even though we have freer trading in the world, it is imperative that we have a base of self-sufficiency of food production in Ontario.

Yes, we can have freer trade and maybe some commodities might some day be fully supplied from outside of Ontario. I would not like to see that situation develop. For all the different political upheavals we see around the world, we would be putting our food supply at threat. Maybe more important, for environmental reasons, we would not want to put our eggs in one basket. We would not want to say that the American Midwest, which has the capacity to grow cereal grains for this country and its own country, the United States, should be doing that, because what if they have a tremendous drought in the breadbasket in those midwestern states of the United States? What happens to our food supply?

Environmentally we should make sure we can produce as much food as we can, and so it becomes a government question. The business of agriculture becomes a question for the state, unlike any other business government is involved in, and so year after year we start to wrestle with this. We as people elected in a democracy start to wrestle with the concerns of the whole agrifood industry. Up till now what we have come up with are only short-term solutions. We tend to be reacting—of course, speaking as the ex-Minister of Agriculture and Food, I include myself in the very same position—to the demands of the agrifood industry on a crisis basis. Therefore, we tend to react on an ad hoc basis.

What I am proposing is that for today we have to continue to do that. I would like in my heart of hearts to see, and I will certainly help the minister of agriculture today, work on some long-term programs. I think farm financing is essential. We need to be working on that. I have some ideas I wanted to work on that I would like to share, but today we are talking about a cash shortage. We will have to try to find a means to inject some cash into this industry so that this industry can continue and be strong in the future.

Mr McLean: I am pleased to rise today and speak on this opposition day resolution in this House emergency debate with regard to agriculture. I think the timing is right. The problem farmers are facing is there and I believe the debate today will be most stimulating in this House. We all know the problem farmers are facing, especially the grain and oil seed farmers. Grain and oil seed prices are running at about 30% below what they were in the Dirty Thirties, so to speak.

The current crisis in agriculture is not because Ontario farmers are inefficient or unproductive. There are not large surpluses of the products produced on Ontario's farms. Subsidy levels for Ontario farmers are remarkably lower than in other Canadian provinces and far lower than in most other developed countries. Ontario's farmers can compete against other farmers, but they cannot compete against other national and provincial state treasuries without comparable support from their own government.

New safety-net programs, such as the gross revenue insurance program and the net income stabilization account, will offer the expectation of reasonable income support in the future for grain and oil seed producers. But this is little comfort to the large numbers of farm families facing a desperate situation in 1991, because they are confronted with the inability to protect themselves from creditors who are expecting near-term payment for their cropping expenses.

But the major flaw with GRIP and NISA is that payouts for the 1991 and 1992 crop years will not be forthcoming until late winter or early spring of next year, and it will probably end up being late spring of next year. How are many farm families going to survive over the next 7 or 8 or 10 months? It will be very difficult. The answer lies in special payments for the current period. This calls for an immediate response from the Ontario government. This Wednesday the minister will probably announce a piddling little announcement of about $20 million, which will not be effective for anyone.

It is interesting to note that $576 million is the total budget for the Ministry of Agriculture and Food in one year, a 3.2% increase over last year. It is interesting to note that the almost 6% given to the civil servants' increase in pay salary was approximately $512 million. Would it not probably have made common sense to have given them 3% and the farmers the 3% extra? That would have amounted to some $200 million. Obviously the Minister of Agriculture and Food has not got a strong voice around that cabinet table or the farmers of this province would have had a lot more money in their pockets to survive.

The current NDP government rode to power on the backs of Ontario's farmers and is now ignoring their desperate situation. This government has to face up to the fact that a growing percentage of Ontario's farmers live in financially strained circumstances. This government must realize that poverty is just as much a rural issue as it is an urban issue. Farmers may not be unemployed but no matter how long and hard they work, they just cannot make ends meet. They are falling deeper into debt and they are quickly losing hope. Suicide has taken place in many counties of this province because of the desperate situation.

The NDP agriculture policy is neither kind nor just to our farmers. This government does not treat the farm community fairly, as it does the rest of society. It is the responsibility of this government to make sure we have productivity and fair distribution. It must allocate special GRIP and NISA payments now that will assist farmers in surviving their current economic difficulties. We are saying we had better sit up and take notice. The way the minister has travelled across this province, I am sure he knows what the problems are, but does he have the power around the cabinet table to get those funds for the province?

1600

How can the minister really stop and support around that cabinet table a 6% increase for the civil servants in this province, amounting to more than $512 million, when his total budget for the Ministry of Agriculture and Food is about $576 million? Why could he not get more money into the agricultural budget? When we look at the announcement he is going to make this week, it had better be equal to some 3% or more of his total budget or the farmers in Ontario will be in desperate need.

The member for Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings does not support this resolution. I find that absurd because this resolution wants to do something for our agricultural industry, and it will, if the minister will just listen.

Mr O'Connor: I am pleased today to be speaking on this motion, not in favour of the motion, but on the motion itself, because I think that as members of this Legislature we have to recognize that, yes, the farmers of the province have problems right now. I am glad we have this opportunity to speak about it publicly, because it is very important.

There are a lot of things that are of concern to our farmers, in fact just on these programs alone. I am sure the minister will be addressing them quite soon, at the appropriate time and in the right fashion, but last week I had an opportunity to meet with the Durham Federation of Agriculture, which had many concerns. Just to give an example of some of the farmers who were there, there were pork producers, some cattlemen, some dairy producers and some cash croppers, sometimes referred to as cashless croppers in these tight times—because times are tight.

The more than 60,000 families in the province right now that are farmers add an enormous amount to the Ontario economy; I think it is in the order of $17 billion. But we have to make sure we take a look at all the issues and do not try to go too ad hoc in taking a look at some of the problems. I know some things need to be looked at, but if farming is to continue, we have to make sure we continue in a fashion that is going to make sure it continues as a viable industry.

One of the members here in the House mentioned the fact that we seem to be taking care of just the unions and the Canadian Auto Workers, for example. I would like to tell members that I am a Canadian auto worker. I worked in Oshawa in the assembly plant there. In the car pool that I took down to Oshawa there were some farmers. The reason they were working in Oshawa was that they could not quite make enough farming, so what they had to do was subsidize their farming activities by working in the plant in Oshawa. When we take a look at some of these people who work in these unionized plants, some of those people are farmers, so we have to make sure we take a look at all of them.

They did not want to be full-time workers in an assembly plant; they wanted to be farmers. That is what their heritage was and their traditions were and they want to continue. They do not want to have to try to discourage their families from being farmers, but unfortunately times are very tough and they have to take a look at alternatives.

One of the concerns the people at the Durham federation brought up last week was of course the state of emergency facing agriculture right now. Debate is taking place right now down below us in this Legislative Building on that. But they had other concerns, like the use of ethanol for the future as a clean way of producing fuel.

They were concerned about some of the local issues, like the wolf and coyote bounties and the problem of losing crops and things of that nature. They were concerned of course with tax rebates and wealth tax and a number of other concerns, so we have to talk with these people. The Fair Tax Commission will take their consideration as part of it.

They were concerned about farm day care, and they were concerned for a number of different reasons; one was just what we are debating today, that both parents on a farm have to work. They are also concerned about farm safety. For too many years the children were left in conditions that were not necessarily safe. Where else in this province do we have an industry that allows children to be part of it? They are working at trying to solve some of that. They are trying to create an atmosphere that will be safe for day care for farmers.

They are concerned about the environmental bill of rights and how that will affect them. It is something where they wanted to have their concerns heard. There are two members from the Ontario federation who are part of the advisory committee to the Ministry of the Environment, and I am pleased to hear that. These people are concerned about it too.

They are also concerned, as part of my region within the GTA, about the garbage crisis that we have, and the garbage dump. They are concerned that the previous government was taking a look at greenfield landfill sites. They are very pleased with the process as it is being established right now, with the Interim Waste Authority taking a look at trying to come up with something that is more open and trying to come up with a solution for the waste problem we have.

We have to make sure we hear all their concerns and do not stress just a few of them. We have to make sure we listen to all of them.

As a member of this caucus, we have a rural advisory committee, and speaking to the Minister of Agriculture and Food at Honey Harbour, as many of us from rural ridings did, we told him we wanted to make sure we had more say, because the rural communities play an important, vital part in the Ontario economy. I was pleased with the comments by the Premier there a week ago that when we start looking at economic renewal, the rural communities are going to play an active part in that, because that is very important. It is key.

We have a very strong rural advisory committee. In fact, the chair of our committee, who is the parliamentary assistant to the Minister of Agriculture and Food, comes from the Port Huron Federation of Agriculture. I think he is very active and in fact might have been the president. I am really pleased by that because it shows that there are farmers in here. Yes, there are auto workers in this place and there are a few social workers, but we all have concerns about the economy of the province as a whole.

Too often we stand in this House and we just shout back and forth. We never listen to each other and have real genuine concern for each other. I think if we have productive conversation, talk to one another and at times even listen, we can have a lot more productive debate, the needs of the people of Ontario and of the farm people will be taken care of, and due consideration will be the reward for all of us in this Legislature.

Mr Cleary: This province's agrifood and related industry generates $17 billion in economic activity while creating 1 in 10 jobs. Over 200 different food products are farmed on 14 million acres of land, and the industry is the second biggest employer in Ontario. Despite the significance and necessity of the agrifood industry, urban consumers remain unaware of the problems facing farmers, such as why so little of what people pay for food actually goes to the farm.

I was pleased to be at the kickoff in the classroom at the Ontario Agricultural Museum this morning in Milton, where we had many teachers and many from the agricultural groups in attendance. There was a lot of enthusiasm there this morning.

Farmers are facing incredible economic stress. I met with farmers from across this province to discuss the current stress farmers are attempting to survive in 1991: drought as a culmination of four previous years of climatic hardship; declining prices for grain, oilseed, corn, soybeans and wheat, and a declining tender fruit industry. We must promote Ontario fruit and vegetables.

Some of the farmers I met with were concerned about the new legislation in labour laws that might be coming from this government. Even livestock prices are beginning to fall. The drought has seared much of the southwest crop and has even caused much damage in parts of eastern Ontario.

1610

One thing I would like to touch on is beaver control. It is a very serious problem in this province. There used to be a good program in the Ministry of Natural Resources where they would hire unemployed people or people on social assistance through the conservation authorities and they would control the beaver. I think that was a good program and there was really value for the money. It may not be a problem all over Ontario, but in parts of eastern Ontario it is a really big problem.

Finally, while cash cropping is important in eastern Ontario, there are a lot of diversifications into dairy, beef, hog and feather farming, all industries which have their own problems. In particular, I cite the difficulties with the recent closure of some of the pet food and rendering plants in Ontario, and that is not just in eastern Ontario. The farmers have done their part; they have made a presentation to the ministry. I hope we do not step back many generations and I hope that will be addressed shortly. Aside from the physical limitations of effective disposal of the dead carcasses, farmers cannot afford to pay long-distance haulage.

Farmers also face an extra burden of cross-border shopping. Consumers, largely unaware of the impact of a bargain, abandon Ontario agriculture, particularly in poultry and dairy products. The mayors of many communities had a task force about this serious problem, which causes problems in the agricultural community, and they feel they may be getting the runaround.

Interestingly enough, however, the business council conducted a study of grocery prices on each side of the border. A typical basket that would cost in Ontario between $94.41 and $101 in New York state tallied at $93.50, plus exchange and duty.

However, it is not only the customers who are there looking for bargains in the United States. Shopping could significantly reduce the input costs of the farming community, the biggest price differences being largely in oil, grease and fuels. One 700 acre farm operator indicated that if he were to buy in the United States, he could save $10,000 a year.

I have heard a lot about the potential collapse of the Ontario farm economy and the failure of the government to realize the situation. For that reason, my colleagues in the Tory caucus pushed very strongly for an emergency discussion of the current state of the economy facing our rural communities.

While I am disappointed over the delay in initiating the hearings, I feel this is a good first step. The minister and the members of the resources development committee have already heard from the agricultural commodity groups, the Canadian Bankers Association, the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, the Christian Farmers Federation of Ontario and the National Farmers Union. There is no mistake there is a crisis facing the farmers. This afternoon the cattlemen and the wheat producers and the soybean growers are present.

The Ontario agriculture commodity council represents some 50,000 Ontario farmers. Thousands of these farmers are being faced this year with the worst economic conditions in memory. This is particularly true for grain and oil seeds. The situation is labelled as a crisis in Ontario among farm groups in both the financial and the social agony. Ontario grain and oil seed prices have fallen during 1991 from values some 30% lower than usual.

Farmers say: "We can compete against other farmers. We cannot compete against other nations and provincial or state treasuries without comparable support programs from our government." The new growth revenue insurance plan, named GRIP, and the net income stabilization account, will not be fully operational for grain and oil seeds until the next crop season. There is no plan to introduce GRIP for horticultural produce. This is of little comfort to a large number of Ontario families facing a desperate income situation in 1991 and an inability to protect themselves from creditors. While the comprehensive GRIP and NISA programs may be considered a long-term solution, this program will not be provided until late winter or next spring.

Cash-strapped farmers cannot afford to wait for several months. It is with great interest that I read the minister's comments in the September 23 Windsor Star, "I want to signal today that we are very serious about supporting farmers." I think the minister made those same comments today. I know it is a federal-provincial problem, but as long as we use Ontario farmers the same as we use every other group in Ontario, I think everyone will be satisfied.

I believe the Minister of Agriculture and Food said, "All we can do is find some money to try to flow as quickly as possible." Many farmers stated that their income would be actually increased if they were to shut down their operation and collect social assistance. It frightens me to think of the tremendous level of personal and financial stress the farmers in this province are currently enduring. The crisis is plainly there. It is the duty of the Ontario Minister of Agriculture and Food to assist the farmers in the province in this very hour of need.

Mr Jordan: It is certainly a pleasure this afternoon to have the opportunity to speak to our leader's motion. He has certainly from the time of the election over a year ago been very supportive of the farm community, which was especially interesting to me as the representative for the riding of Lanark-Renfrew.

As members know, the riding is made up of many small and mixed farming types. Early in my career last year, as the member for Lanark-Renfrew I had the pleasure to have the Minister of Agriculture and Food visit our riding, of which I was very appreciative and so were the many farm groups who were in attendance. In order to be as educational and as helpful as we could to the minister, I had them organized in such a way that rather than have different ones actually repeating themselves with presentations, I had each group get together and make one person responsible for that group and make the presentation available to the minister.

Hon Mr Buchanan: It was well done.

Mr Jordan: I thank the minister. The follow-up on that is my problem. The minister, I believe, was given copies of the presentations and certainly promised to look into each and every one of them. I know that I cannot single out Lanark-Renfrew as being separate from the province of Ontario, but the nature of our farming operation is certainly the small family farm. It gives me great concern that even though there was great interest shown by the minister and by his government, and assistance promised, to date we have seen no change.

I can say to the minister today that if he were visiting one of those farms, he would find they are facing their tax bill, are facing winter with an increase in hydro and with an increase in many other items, fuel and so on, that directly affect their operation. They do not have alternate means of transportation. They have their half-ton truck or their car to come to town. All these costs are finally bringing down the small family farm.

1620

I think the previous speakers have generally covered the provincial financial problems of the farm. That is why this afternoon I would more or less like to concentrate on that small family farm, because from it are the small general store and many other spinoff businesses in my riding. I would like to mention in particular a provincial law that the minister, I understand, is going to bring in in January 1992. This provincial law is going to require that all eggs sold at the marketplace will require a federal grade. Those eggs will not even be allowed to be placed in a used container. They must each time be placed in a new container. The container alone costs 12 cents. The reasoning behind implementing this provincial law to that standard at this time is of real concern to many of the family farms in my riding.

Many of the farmers, along with their beef operations, have perhaps 400 to 500 hens, which can create enough income to perhaps pay the taxes and the heat. This is going to be a real blow to them, not only to the farmer who is accustomed to that cash income but to the small merchant at the general store and the tourist trade in that area. They are saying they are doing it in the interests of safety to the consumer, but if you think about it for a minute, it is really one of the few products that we get already wrapped. Here we are worrying about whether it is going to be placed in a new container and whether it is going to meet a federal standard before it can be sold to the general store.

I would plead with the minister to rescind his plan to implement that provincial law in January 1992. I do not see the need for it. Certainly in the areas I have visited in Lanark-Renfrew, there has been no problem in any health or safety respect. Perhaps some clarification of the need for bringing that law in at this time would help at least to explain the situation to those farmers who are in such need.

As the members can see from the different presentations this afternoon, the real problem is not the efficiency of the farm. It is not the type of operation. It is the subsidies and some of these regulations that the ministries of agriculture are requiring of the product.

Again, I would ask that the minister try and keep that small family farm in mind when he comes forth with regulations that are going to limit its cash flow. It could be—and not too far in our area—that the production of food would actually not take place, because I know from experience in visiting the actual farm locations that there is no other group anywhere, unionized or not unionized, that would ever be satisfied with the net income the farmers in Lanark-Renfrew have been getting along with, and are prepared to carry on with, if they can expect some protection from this government.

The larger farmers certainly are having a greater debt problem and are expecting the Minister of Agriculture and Food to follow through with the plans he gave when he visited our riding about a year ago. At that time the minister had a group travelling the province which was interviewing the different farm groups, interviewing the different farm businesses and had hoped, within a reasonable period of time, to come back with legislation that would be suitable to sustain and support farm income.

I do not want to take any more time. I want to close with bringing the problem in my riding to the minister's attention. I can say in all honesty that the people, when he visited, had good faith in his promises. They are still hoping that before the end of this year the assistance required will be forthcoming. The regulations such as closing down the farmer's market or regulating it to such an extent that he cannot afford to spend $60,000 on an egg-grading station to meet a federal grade—the minister does have that opportunity. It is my understanding it is a provincial law and I do not see the need for him to be implementing it at this time.

Mr Klopp: I would like to stand and talk about this business of agriculture. It gives me great pride, as a farmer from Huron county, and as one who has been on all sides, I guess, of this issue.

I remember back in about 1979 when the Huron County Federation of Agriculture asked me to get involved in the politics of agriculture, and I said: "Oh no, we do not have to worry about that. We just have to worry about production. I will be a smarter manager, and I will learn how to play the Chicago Board of Trade," and a few of those farmers looked at me.

I remember when I was in one of the local establishments and was telling one of my younger farmer friends to go to school and learn all the economics, "We will just work harder and we will have bigger farms and we will get rid of all our neighbours." Of course, I figured my neighbour would stay, because he was the guy I was talking to. One farmer leaned over and said, "In all the years I have been farming, I have never seen a pencil yet put a crop in or take it off." I remembered that, because you can do your economics and you can learn a lot about production, but you have to also learn how to market the product.

I also soon found out you have to watch the politicians. I found out over the years that politicians would do a lot of smokescreening and tell me they were my friends, but I kept looking for my background as a bit of an economist, and saying I want to see numbers and I want to see facts and figures. They said they were my friends, but I can say with friends like that, who needs enemies?

In fact, the thing that really bothered me the most about this motion today was not that we were finally discovering that agriculture is important in this province—I have been saying it for years and many other people have—but the fact that the third party seems to insinuate that the NDP knows nothing about agriculture and cares nothing about agriculture, which I find to be totally ridiculous.

I think if there is any mistake I have made so far as a member of Parliament—and we have only been here about a year—it is the fact that I did underestimate the federal government's and the past government's entrenchment of trying to put farmers as second fiddlers.

I can think back very clearly when the Minister of Agriculture and Food went to the first meeting he went to last fall and was told third line of defence or any shortfalls would be taken up by the federal government. They would make it up, just gross revenue insurance plan and net income stabilization account, etc, "We worry about the future; the feds will take care of the past."

I guess I should have known far more clearly because of 1989 or 1979 and in many other years when they said, "We're going to take care of the high interest rate policy; we'll help you out," and then they threw a line to us. Of course, I was 10 feet out in the water and they threw the line out four feet and said, "Well, we threw it out."

The fact of the matter is that NISA, under the federal program in which they put all their third line of defence money, is apparently only going to be $30 million or $40 million, which is totally ridiculous. They did a nice job of smokescreening it. They tied it to us and said that if we put in 1%, they would put in 0.5%. The reality is that it is not enough money. They made a commitment that they were going to give what the difference was between the low commodity prices and—they were hoping probably they would go to $4 and heaven forbid, so did I, but it did not happen.

This thing does go back many years, and the sad fact is that it has been going for a long time. We have also had some bright spots in agriculture. We have had the odd Minister of Agriculture and Food who truly did have to pound his fist on the desk in the cabinet room because he was the only person there—or maybe a few of his colleagues in the caucus—who really understood that when farmers do make a living it helps the whole community.

1630

I was glad to hear one member mention the family farm and the smaller family farm, something with which I totally agree. What small is, heaven knows, but at least it is getting away from this idea that the corporations will take it over. Indeed they will: That is where it has come to rest, and we have finally realized this in such a blunt fashion.

The fact is, agriculture has got the few the things it has not because of government but in spite of government. I can think back to the 1980s and the fact that the Economic Council of Canada actually hired agricultural economists who already had a predetermined conclusion that things like supply management should go, when that is one of the few bright spots we have ever had. In fact, we should increase it more to somehow give farmers the power to make a farm-gate price, which is truly what we need. We do not need safety nets; we need planks. We need a time when, if I do a decent day's work, if I am a good business person and do a good job in the field, I can get my just return, just as this government has done for years, standing behind people in unions and non-unions. It actually stood behind federal and provincial ministers who have stood for things that have tried to put farmers in that light.

Back in 1969-70, the economists, the academics, were hired; there was a federal task force on agriculture, because there was a problem in the 1960s with farmers' income. Do members know what those people said? Those people told the federal government—and it is still their policy today—that the problem in agriculture is that there are too many farmers; we have to get them more efficient and bigger. As sure as guns, I always said, how few do we get? Do we get down to 10,000? Right now we are looking at about 30% of the farmers in deep financial trouble. Now everybody recognizes that when a farmer goes broke so does rural Ontario, and I applaud that. We have to work to get that straightened up.

There have been two types of people in the federal and provincial governments over the years, the economists who are only worried about their economic values, then those who think there are bigger things than just economies of scale: the whole idea of the spinoff effects of what agriculture does, what small business does.

Our party has had no problem with that. We have recognized that for years. This has been shown in federal programs, showing that this government actually puts itself into action. One of the first things the federal Tories did back in 1986 was set up the rural transition program. They openly admitted: "Let's get rid of the farmers. Let's not help them with their commodity prices, because everybody has to eat. Let's not look at the issue in the middle, the people there. Their profits seems to be going up, yet the farmers are going down and the consumers are not benefiting."

The shortfall in payouts: As an example, just today a fellow came into the office of the member for Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings and said that last year the federal government gave $15 million to the horticulture sector. They were told they could spend it any way they wanted, basically. They worked with the provincial people and put the money out to the farmers. This year, under this great third line of defence, they said there is $6 million for the horticulture sector. The horticulture sector figured there is $70 million of hurt. Granted, no government has an open-ended book, but $6 million is far from $70 million. In fact, the money—I am going to have to report back on this to this gentleman; I think the member for Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings has already—was not given to the provincial government and the vegetable people to just dole out as they pleased. They were told, “You can’t just give it out so much per acre” or whatever. They were told to make it into different things. This particular farmer said their part of this horticulture money is actually going into research and development. Research and development is very important, but the farmers now need money in their hands. These are the kinds of things that frustrate me very much and I think frustrate a lot of farmers. Of course, he came and talked to us, and it is a federal issue.

We look at farm credit and wonder about their farm debt review board panels. A farmer the other day came to me and asked if I knew the federal government had a program to help farmers write down their debt. It was called schedule B, the Principles Governing the Participants of the Farm Credit Corp in Farm Debt Review. But this was never passed out any more than an order in council, I understand. It made me wonder, as I thought over the last eight or nine years, how some farmers could get a decent write-down and yet other farmers—in the short time we have been here, in this last year and a half, we have spent many hours fighting not only with the Farm Credit Corp but banks, trying to stand beside farmers. Those section Cs, the wonderful things that helped the bank out, which our previous government and a whole bunch of lawyers and accountants set up, but it really did not help the farmer: We are working on those and trying to get them cleaned up finally.

I often wondered why some farmers could get better deals. Maybe the federal government just wanted certain people to know about this order in council. If you are there for all the farmers, do not just put things in for a few. We will see what happens with that issue.

This government knows very well the situation and how bad it is, although it is an issue that has been going on far too long. We need to deal with the long-term issues; we need to deal with the short term. The member is very right.

One of the things we have done as NDP governments in other provinces is put in things like decent long-term interest rate programs. We helped not only with that but tried to find ways to give the farmers a fair shake if debt review were to take place.

One program is called the Execution Act. In the west, they increased that to give the farmers a little more clout if the situation warranted. In our province, we have not made any changes to it since 1930, I believe. They have amended a few things, but they have not helped.

These things are all needed in order to make a fair and level playing table. Indeed, one example which we all know—I will be very short—is the Canagrex issue. The federal Tories did everything to defeat that. There were mixed emotions in their party between big business and those in the rural area. The Liberals also had that. Mr Whelan, indeed, was fighting his own cabinet ministers, which he openly admits, and ironically some of those same people who were in that Liberal bureaucracy went on to be advisers for the Tory party after it was elected. Is it any wonder one of the first things that government did was get rid of Canagrex, one of the few things that might have started giving farmers a chance to get a fair market value at the farm gate? Allow me to go broke if I am a lousy farmer, not because of lousy politicians.

A few members talked about out west where they have better programs and seem to have a little more clout with agriculture. I sit with some amusement, and I am sure Tommy Douglas must be sitting up there also—well, he is probably crying because he has seen things with the divine solution. He must be saying, “We do it to ourselves again.”

The situation shows that many of those programs were started by NDP governments. Many in Alberta and a few places said: “How do we get re-elected? We had better follow those programs or, by God, they’ll put those New Democrats in.” It is not an easy solution. As I pointed out, through the 1960s, 1970s and 1980s, we have had ups and downs. Unfortunately, we are not going to wave a magic wand. I never thought that eight or nine years ago, when I was on the other side as a lobbyist.

I think we can do a lot of things. We are committed to doing a lot of things in this government. As was pointed out earlier, this government realizes that agriculture is indeed an economic kingpin in this province. It was good to see the other night up at Lucknow that the consumer association representative in that area said she was not going to go around like I remember that organization doing in the 1980s, saying that farmers are making too much and we should stop them. She said there that night that she was going to send a different message, that farmers need a fair price, so that is good.

I know some honourable members on the other side of this House are good members and want to make it work, but we definitely do not need this kind of motion because it does not address the problem. Really we are a government that does care. We are going to work at that and we are going to work at it as hard and as fast as possible.

Mr Mancini: I join my colleagues in the Legislature in debating the agriculture motion that has been put forward by the leader of the third party, using one of his and his party’s very important opposition days to discuss an important element of the Ontario economy.

I must disagree with my colleague who just sat down who said that this motion was not necessary or was not important. As a matter of fact, the opposite is true. Agriculture needs to be discussed here in the Legislature today among all parties for a variety of reasons. As a matter of fact, agricultural issues seem to be dominating the early part of this session of this fall’s legislative sitting. Why? Because right now, simultaneously in the standing committee on resources development, agriculture is being discussed, and agricultural organizations and commodity groups from around Ontario are making presentations to the three parties that represent the public in this Legislature.

Here today we are using a full afternoon session to further discuss agriculture. Earlier on today I know that the minister met with a number of groups, one of them being the Essex county drought committee that is with us this afternoon. Why is agriculture being discussed so often in this legislative session? Why is agriculture being discussed in committee and in the Legislature? Why has the Minister of Agriculture and Food already intimated on a number of occasions that emergency financial relief is being prepared for the farm community of Ontario? For one very obvious reason: High input costs, low commodity prices and the international trade war which continues between the European Community and the United States, with no regard to the effects on other producer nations, has forced agriculture in Ontario to its knees.

1640

We are here to ensure that the agricultural community of this province survives to serve Ontario into the next millennium. That is why we are discussing the problems. That is why the minister of agriculture has been under the gun.

I am sorry to say it was only a few days ago when the leader of the government opened this new session with what I thought to be a very valuable speech. In his speech he cautioned all of us in the Legislature to be careful about what we had to say and to do a lot less finger-pointing. He mentioned he wanted to do a lot less finger-pointing at the government in Ottawa and the business community in general. He wanted a new atmosphere to take over the old and existing atmosphere that seems to pervade the legislative chamber and he wanted it all to work in a more collective fashion.

What did we hear today from the parliamentary assistant to the Minister of Agriculture and Food? Did we hear concrete proposals on what was going to happen as far as Ontario policy is concerned? No, we did not hear that. We heard very little of that, I am sorry to say. We heard a full frontal assault on the government of Canada. Far be it from me to defend the government of Canada. It will defend itself. But what do we make of the lecture the Premier gave us only a few days ago? Is that only for the members of the opposition or is it for the government members too? Whom was that lecture for?

Are we now not allowed to question government ministers and NDP socialist policy because the Premier will get up and say: "You're finger-pointing. You're not helping solve the problem"? Is it only us who have to be restrained, and is it only the NDP socialist members of the Legislature who now have the authority to speak freely in the Legislature? Is it only they who can get up and make comments on what is going on in Canada and here in our province? Is that what we want in the Legislature? I do not think so. If that is what the NDP government thinks it is going to receive, it is sadly mistaken.

Mr Mammoliti: What do you want?

Mr Mancini: The NDP socialist members of the assembly are shouting at me, "What do you want?" I want the government to give the same respect to agriculture as it did to nurses. I want them to respect agriculture in the same way they respected doctors when they wrestled them to the ceiling for higher fees. I want the government to respect farmers the same way it respected its own civil servants. Why should civil servants in Ontario receive increases in pay of anywhere from 6% to 13%, when our farmers cannot get 50% of their costs back, let alone an increase in pay? Does the member want to know what I want from the government? That is what I want from the government. I want them to be just as concerned for agriculture as they seem to be for all the large, well-financed public interest groups that greased their wheels into office. That is what I want them to do.

Interjections.

The Acting Speaker: Order. Obviously the debate will improve in quality if two things happen. One is if there are fewer interjections, and two, if the member will be somewhat less provocative in his remarks.

Mr Mancini: My comments were not provocative at all.

Mrs Y. O'Neill: Mr Speaker, on a point of order: The clock was continuing to go during your comments, which were taken away from the speaker's comments.

The Acting Speaker: These are 25 precious seconds that should be returned to the member.

Mr Mancini: Mr Speaker, I say to you with great respect that you have been around the Legislature a number of years, and I remember your defence of a certain hospital in your community. If you were to re-read your comments and compare them with the comments I have made today, one might consider that my comments today are very reasoned.

It is true the members opposite made certain promises to highly organized, large, well-financed interest groups that financed them into office and worked for them on the streets. Members know whom I am referring to. I say to the government that we are not going to sit idly by no matter how uncomfortable it makes the members feel. No matter how uncomfortable my colleagues across the floor feel, we are not going to sit by and allow them to spend hundreds of millions of dollars of taxpayers' money and at the same time ignore the economic segment of our economy that is responsible for 20% of the employment in this province.

I say to my colleagues opposite and to the minister that we have been patient and that we are willing to be more patient. We know that right now the minister is gathering information and that his staff is reviewing information for him. We understand he is meeting on a regular basis with farm groups over the high input costs and low commodity prices and the situation affected by the drought. We know he is doing that. We want to give the minister every opportunity to come up with the best assistance package possible.

It has been said today in the Legislature that the minister indeed carries a lot of clout. I say to him I hope he does. I hope he carries a lot of clout and his cabinet colleagues are listening, because if he does not have the clout that was described today and if his cabinet colleagues and caucus members are not behind him, we will see the withering away of one of the most important economic segments of the Ontario economy. When that happens, small-town rural Ontario will die. There is no doubt about it. If we do not have—

Interjections.

The Acting Speaker: I would like to bring to order the member for Yorkview and also the member for Downsview. The member is out of his seat, I believe. If members wish to contribute in this House, they do so from their seats. I ask you to return to your seat.

1650

Mr Mancini: The interjections we just heard were from members who have not participated in the resources development committee, so they have not been privy to the information that has been made available to members from all sides of the House over the last week or so. They have not had the privilege of hearing that information. They were not with the minister today from about 11:15 until noon to hear from the drought committee. They are very inexperienced members who have had little opportunity to meet farm groups across this province. Sure enough, when they hear that the farm community is in trouble and that rural Ontario may die if we cannot support our farmers, these are strange words to their ears.

They may in fact be comfortable in their own constituencies, but I do not think my friend the member for Essex-Kent, who has worked with me and who has worked with the drought committee, found those words too strong. As a matter of fact, I think he supports those words. He was part of a group, and we worked collectively together, that put together the brief we gave to the minister today. He was part of a group that put together the brief that went before the resources development committee today.

What did that brief say? The brief said in very, very clear terms that because of the drought—we are talking only Essex county now, no other part of the province, and we are not talking about low commodity prices and high input costs; we are only talking about the drought. The factual information that was put forward today shows very clearly that the loss to Essex county farmers over and above what crop insurance will cover will be at least $20 million. That will be the loss to individual farmers.

There is a multiplier effect of seven that is used in rural communities because of the importance of the farm community in the general economy. Every dollar generated at the farm gate will multiply through the economy by seven. We are using the most minimal figures possible. Multiply $20 million by seven and see what that does for Essex county, a region of the province that has probably the highest unemployment levels in Canada. Small towns like Essex, Harrow, Amherstburg, Leamington and Belle River have no future without a vibrant farm economy.

I say to the minister and to my colleagues opposite that we want to work with them. We want to help bring the problems facing the farmers to the fore today and over the next few weeks and we are counting on them to respond.

Mr Arnott: I am pleased to participate in the debate this afternoon on Ontario's farm crisis. I would like to begin by commending my friend the member for S-D-G &

East Grenville for his excellent presentation today and his ongoing efforts. I believe he is one of the most eloquent and strongest advocates for farm issues in this House. I appreciate his efforts, and also my leader for sponsoring this today. He reaffirmed his commitment to agriculture as late as last week in Brant-Haldimand when he spoke at length on the farm crisis.

In my own riding of Wellington county, the farm crisis is probably the most crucial issue facing us at the present time. When we talk about the farm economy we are talking about Wellington's economy, without a doubt. When you look at the effect that a strong agricultural base has on the local economy, the spinoffs are considerable: the small businesses that rely on farmers coming in to purchase various goods, the retail stores, the farm implement dealers who rely on a strong farm economy to make their money. Look at the farm suppliers and the time that they have been having at the present time.

Since my election and prior to that, I have met with a great many farmers in my riding. I have met with them on their farms, I have met with them in our own riding office and I have also met with them at some of their organizational meetings. I have been struck by one thing, and that is the modest requests that they make, the always very reasonable requests that they make for assistance.

When you look at the farm prices and you look at the aggregate situation—there were some figures compiled by the Ministry of Agriculture and Food which talk about the cash receipts by source in Ontario for farmers. When you look at 1987 to 1991, cash receipts have remained stagnant; in fact, they have declined slightly. When you flip over and look at gross farm operating expenses, you see from that same period, starting about 1987 to 1991, that they have just taken off to the roof. When you look at those figures, you can understand how farmers are having a very difficult time making ends meet and paying their bills.

You can look at aggregate numbers and they tell you one thing, but if you speak to farmers themselves who are in trouble, it really hits it home. When you speak to them and they ask your own opinion of the future of agriculture and you see the pain and the anguish on their faces when they contemplate the fact that they may be losing their farms, their livelihood—in some cases farms that have been in their families for many, many years—when their hope and pride is beginning to ebb because of their financial circumstance, it is very difficult to have to face that. That is why we have to deal with this issue today.

Farmers need more hope and they need more support from this government. We can talk about the federal government all we want, but this Legislature is where we can deal with certain things and we have to deal with it at this level as well.

Mr Hope: We have needed it since 1981.

Mr Arnott: We are dealing with today at the moment, and we have to deal with it at the moment.

When you look at the family farm in rural Ontario, it is a social institution that has to be preserved, as far as I am concerned. It is an institution that is worth preserving, and we have to send out that signal at all times. When you look at the requests that farmers are making, they are asking generally for a decent wage for their labour. That is something that everyone asks for and everyone is entitled to. They are looking for a decent standard of living. That is something we should all support. They are looking for a price for their products which is above their cost of production. That is something they need if they want to stay in business. They are looking for some reasonable return on their investments so that they have some security and something for their families in the future.

We need new programs that will give farmers some hope for the future. That is why we are here today.

In closing, I would like to say to the government members that I was very disappointed to hear the member for Huron indicate he would not be supporting this resolution. But if the government members from the urban ridings who are listening today maybe gain some insight into the farm issues, if they will support this resolution, it will assist their Minister of Agriculture and Food when he goes to the cabinet table to seek support for the farmers of Ontario. If they really want to support farmers and support their minister, they will vote for this resolution.

Mr Hayes: I am glad to speak on this resolution and I am really pleased to see how the opposition is paying attention to this very serious issue here.

I would just like to go back a little bit in the history and maybe let the public know how farmers get into some of the situations they are in here today. Previous governments have encouraged farmers for years to be more productive, more efficient, more competitive. At the same time, the friendly banker came in and said, "There's no end to what we can loan you."

Since that time, and this happened back in the late 1970s and the early 1980s, farmers took the advice of governments federally and provincially across this country to do these things: to be more productive, more efficient, more competitive. Interest rates went sky-high. Input costs went sky-high. Prices have continually gone lower.

Some of the things we talk about here are the recession. You hear people talk about the recession we are in, a recession that we have been in for about two years. A lot of people do not realize that farmers have been in this recession for 10 years.

An hon member: Since the last recession.

Mr Hayes: Since the last recession. They have never, ever recovered.

The Minister of Agriculture and Food and the Premier of this province are well aware of the crisis in this province, and in this country for that matter. We are well aware of the drought situation. The minister has travelled this province. I and my colleague the member for Chatham-Kent have been well involved in this.

1700

One of the first things this ministry and this Minister of Agriculture and Food did, just to show members how important we feel agriculture is and the farmers of this province are, was that the first committee that was ever put together was dealing with the agricultural financial situation in this province, and I was very pleased that the Minister of Agriculture and Food asked me if I would chair that committee, along with the member for Lambton and the member for Frontenac-Addington. We travelled the province. I committed myself to do that tour. I told the minister, "I'll do it on one condition, that I talk to the individual farmers." I think that is very important. Then also we talked to the various associations and commodity groups.

The big thing the farmers were talking about in this province and the message farmers have said to us is that they are sick and tired of ad hoc programs.

I realize we get into these situations. We do get into situations such as the drought, and of course we are in a situation here now that puts us in a position where we do not have any choice but to deal with this in an ad hoc manner.

There are a lot of other factors here besides the bad advice farmers have been given over the years from the so-called experts. A good example, I guess, would be Hunt-Wesson, which is in my riding. When Hunt-Wesson closed, of course, the sad part about that situation is that not only did it lay off workers inside that plant, but there were also 25 farmers who had tomato contracts for three years who ended up with one year, because that company folded up and moved to the United States.

I called up the president of that corporation to try to find out just what this government could do to keep it in operation and try to get it to honour the contract it had with those producers. His answer to me was, "There are three factors here that cause us to leave this province and leave this country: high interest rates, free trade and the inflated Canadian dollar." Farmers are also faced with the unfair competition of the United States and the European Community.

As a result of that tour, getting back to that, when the minister asked me to do that, we came up with the $50-million interest assistance program. It certainly appears that we will be going well over that. That money will all be spent, plus. But what we have done is that we are right in the middle of the process right now of trying to address prices and trying to address putting programs together to address the interest rates and the long term.

I do not mean this as pointing the finger at the federal government, but there is something that is really needed in this country. There are things this provincial government can do. We will do whatever we can do with the resources we have, but I think it is very imperative that the provinces get together and start looking at the real crisis in agriculture in this country and try to get the federal government on stream to work towards a national agricultural strategy that would definitely assist farmers in this country, along with this province.

I know there is a lot of talk, and I have said it myself: I do not think the farmers in this country are even 3% now of the electorate. I think this has been one of the problems, that the politicians looked at that and said: "It's only 3% of them. We can take care of other people." This has really been a problem. It has been a problem traditionally. This did not just start September 6.

The thing is that one of the messages we have to send, I guess, to all politicians is showing them just how the communities across this province are affected every time a farmer is put out on the road, and there have been lots of them put out on the road. I have talked to bank managers and I have talked to managers of credit unions and it is very serious. I know one county, for example, where one of the credit unions has 120 clients, and if something is not done and if we do not address this problem, and of course we have to do it in partnership with our federal government; we will do what we can do—

Mr Villeneuve: Support the motion.

Mr Hayes: That is what we are doing, supporting it. I think that as far as the motion is concerned, the minister already addressed that problem and we are dealing with an immediate problem right now. To address this particular motion is not going to do anything immediately for the farmers. We have to do something immediately and then look at the long-term situation.

I can tell the members right now that when we talk about the various programs, had this government had more input in these particular programs, especially the GRIP program, it would have seen a much superior program.

I believe there is a message that has to be made loud and clear here, and that is that we have to educate people. We have to educate the public, not only the politicians but the public. I think there is something the minister committed himself to again today when we were in Milton when he got up and supported and kicked off the agriculture-in-the-classroom program. I think it is very important we start doing this. It is very important that the people in this province, in this country, understand what the farmer has to go through to get that food on the shelf.

One of the things they do not understand is the costs they have, the input costs, the interest rates and all those kinds of things, and then of course the prices they get. They have been underpaid for way too long and I think this is something that all three parties here should get together and work towards, not work towards—

Mr Villeneuve: Support the motion.

Mr Hayes: Listen, Ms Speaker, there was a motion that was made on the federal government by—Mr B. Murdoch: Don't blame the federal government again.

Mr Hayes: I am going to tell the member something. We have to work on support to get farmers a decent price, and that is the big thing. We keep talking about: "Let's have another program. That'll hold the farmer over till next year. Let's have another little program and hold him over for a little while longer." All that is doing is just pushing more farmers out on to the road.

I was at the Canadian National Exhibition and they had a mini-farm down there, with cows and hogs and so on. One of the things they did, and it was very good, was they showed the process about going from the egg to the chicken—

Mr B. Murdoch: Chicken—

An hon member: Atta boy.

Mr Hayes: Yes. He is starting to understand.

They showed the process on how they got that product to the kitchen or to the marketplace. I went to each one of those groups and I suggested to them that what they should be doing, if they plan on doing this next year, is putting in great, big, large signs all the costs the farmer has to absorb to get that food on to their table. That is the message the people in this province, in this country, have to see.

I am in the process right now of chairing the committee looking at the long term, and I appreciate the support and assistance from all members of this House, because our goal is to protect and save the family farm, the family farmer. I think that is very important and we will do the best we can, and the minister has certainly done a lot of work and he has convinced a lot of people in cabinet of the real need that is out there in this agricultural area.

1710

Mrs Fawcett: I am pleased today to participate in this debate on behalf of all of Ontario's farmers and of course in particular my own farmers in Northumberland. But I am rather saddened as well, because it just seems rather sad that we have to debate something that should be happening without the pleading.

The concerns being raised here today echo those from many involved in the agrifood business in Northumberland. Over this past summer, and as recently as this past Friday, I have met with and heard from groups representing the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, vegetable producers, grain and oilseed producers, dairy farmers and chicken producers and they all had the same message: "Please, what can you do to help? How can you help us make it to next year?"

Not in recent memory has the agrifood industry in Ontario been faced with such dramatic pressures that have already forced many of them out of business with more to follow. This threatens to shake the very foundation upon which our agriculture community was built. Should this happen, the ramifications will be felt province-wide, for the agrifood industry is responsible directly or indirectly for one in five jobs in Ontario. That is 20% of the entire workforce in the province. We just cannot overlook those facts. It is sad, whenever I am speaking to farmers, to see the desperate looks on their faces. I do not like seeing the tears in their eyes.

In Northumberland the agrifood industry is a major employer and has played a vital and important role in the local economies of many communities in my riding. That mirrors Ontario in general, where the agricultural industry is second in size only to the auto industry and continues to be the economic foundation for rural Ontario. All members of this House are aware of the plight of the farm families. Ontario producers are facing financial ruin. In a market that is already depressed, prices have fallen an additional 35% for corn, soybeans and wheat. Commodity prices for the livestock industry have been forced down by the linked grain and oilseed prices. Fruit and vegetable growers face continuing pressures from foreign imports under free trade.

Our farm groups are crying out for help. This is not the time to pass the buck to the federal Tory government. We have seen the Tories deal away the family farm in the free trade agreement and continue to bash farmers with the recent Mexico round. The feds have been unable to represent the agrifood industry at the GATT negotiations. Specifically, article XI could spell the death to many in the industry with the downfall of supply management.

But two wrongs never make a right and it is wrong to keep blaming someone else. Let's be leaders in agriculture in this province while we have the chance and show that we want and we need them. The government should flow some dollars to them now and help them so that then it can look at its long-range solutions. But right now we must keep them; otherwise this debate will be useless, because there will be very few left.

Just speaking of supply management, this government's record on supply management is somewhat of a mystery at times. On one hand they espouse the virtues of marketing boards and then just last week the minister okayed orders to the Ontario Chicken Producers' Marketing Board to reduce its prices 12 cents a kilo despite the appeals of the board. The chicken producers in my office on Friday are going to lose between $5,000 and $10,000 this year. That really cuts into their quality of life.

Mr Mancini: That was the minister's order?

Mrs Fawcett: Yes, it was the minister's order. Yet when the federal government has been willing to initiate a program to assist the farm community, this government has been unable or unwilling to go to the table for Ontario farm families. This government's inability to provide funding this year for NISA means not only a loss of provincial assistance but also a lower level of federal assistance under the terms of federal enhancements announced to the programs last spring. Immediate funding for NISA would result in over 50% more assistance in this year's payouts. Surely that slush fund must have some dollars somewhere.

This government's answer to the long-term financing has come in the form of the Hayes report, which of course has some very interesting and beneficial parts, but it in some ways really reflects the NDP's feeling for those in the agrifood business. Basically what it says to me is that the NDP government is saying to farmers, "Fund the financing yourselves." This government believes they could find 10,000 retiring farmers or outside investors to enrol in private mortgage schemes to replace the 10,000 farmers previously covered by the Ontario family farm interest rate reduction program.

Let's be realistic. To find retiring farmers or anyone else willing to receive below-market rates in order to allow the funds to be offered out for loans at lower-than-market interest rates will be very difficult, to say the least.

I say to the members opposite, especially those representing rural ridings, they should get the government's attention and make it put something concrete on the table for farmers today. If they do not, Ontario farmers will no longer be able to put food on the table for us, for Ontario families and for themselves.

The government's implementation of GRIP was a start, but it must find some money and fund NISA this year. They have to provide additional assistance under the farm income stabilization program. They should remove the so-called zero years from the crop insurance averages. They must ensure Ontario's farm interests are represented at the GATT negotiations.

This government cannot continue to ignore the plight of the agrifood industry. Their refusal to consult with farm groups on important issues like the new labour legislation and the environmental bill of rights has got to stop. Farmers and their families helped build this province. They want to continue to play a major role in our province's future. Without it, they are destined to failure. We must be there for them in their time of need, as they have always been there for us.

Mr B. Murdoch: I would like to be fair in this whole debate and mention that the farming problem did not start with this government getting elected. I am going to be fair with the honourable members on that, but they have had a whole year since they have been elected. They are the government and it is time they took over and showed some leadership and did something about this.

We have heard from the member for Essex-Kent all the things we have to do, but they are not doing it. Meanwhile, farmers are leaving the farm. I want to tell the honourable members a bit about up in my area in Grey county, right where I live. I can remember when I went to high school and every hundred acres there was a farmer, but now there is lucky to be two or three farmers left in that whole township, because there is no money in farming.

This government wants to talk about agriculture and how it has people running around the country telling the different counties they have to save this farm land for farming. I wonder who this government is going to save it for. If it does not do something pretty soon, there will not be anybody left.

The government threw the deal it had struck to help new farmers out the window. They just let that go. They said, "We can't help new farmers." They are probably right there. If they are going to start helping somebody get into something that is not going to work, that would not look too good either.

1720

I think of the times this government has come up to Grey county with OMAF and said to the planning department, "You can't build houses in that area because it is prime agricultural land." There are trees growing up and there are stones and everything else. Yet I drive home every week up through Heart Lake Road, probably some of the best farm land in Ontario, and there have to be new starts every week, singles. There are even severances. Agriculture and Food over here says: "Oh no, we are not going to allow any of those. We've got to keep this land so that we can keep producing."

I took a drive across from Heart Lake Road and went across the country the other day, and I noticed a corn field, a good crop of corn, yet all through the field there were roads and all the services they were putting in. Does the minister call that saving farm land? This is good farm land.

I go home and go to the severance committee and we have Agriculture and Food saying, "Oh no, we are objecting to that severance because it is prime agricultural land." They are going to have to get their priorities straight if they are going to do something up there.

We go back to the point that only 3% are farmers. If we look at all the people who derive their living from farming, there is a heck of a lot more than 3%—I think it comes to around 20%—so I do not think this is a debate about votes. They are not that stupid over there. They know there are at least 20% of the voters out there who need farming for a living.

The government's problem again is, how does it solve it? Where does it find the answer? Farmers cannot make a living without the proper price. Grants will not keep people farming. When we have certain areas that have drought and we need assistance, they are going to have to do that. There is no doubt in my mind that they are going to have to help the people of Essex and Kent and places where they have had problems with drought, but grants will not keep farmers farming for ever. They are going to have to come up with a price or they are just going to have to forget about farming in this area.

This is their job. They cannot just keep sticking it on somebody else and saying: "They won't get along with us. The federal government won't help us out." They are big people over there. They are grown up. They have to get on their own feet and start standing up for themselves and come up with the answers. That is what people elected them to do. That is what they tell us.

When they got elected they also told us: "We want to work with everybody. We want to work with the Liberals. We want to work with the Conservatives. We need your ideas." We have come up with an idea today, a real good solution, so I am looking forward to seeing them all vote for this.

When I came to this Legislature I was proud to come here and I was really happy to hear every one of them over there say: "We are going to work with you. We are all going to work together to solve problems." Now we have a problem. We have a solution here that will help. So when the vote comes today I am looking forward to seeing all the members opposite put their hands up and support it, because if they do not, they will have made a mockery of the whole system. They have stood over there for a year now telling us how they want to work together. Here is the chance to do something and try to find solutions for one of our industries that needs help real bad. I will be looking forward to seeing their hands come up in the air when this vote is taken later on.

The other thing I want to emphasize is that grants will not save farmers. Until we start getting a price for our product, we can forget about it.

Mrs Mathysen: I am most anxious to participate in this debate because we have a very serious situation in agriculture. I am very pleased that the members opposite have noticed. Certainly the time has come for fairness, equity and economic renewal for all of Ontario, and that includes rural Ontario.

Last Saturday I had the pleasure of attending the annual fall fair in Ilderton. Ilderton is a village of about 400 people in the geographic centre of Middlesex county. The fair is a wonderful event that gives my constituents a chance to see old friends, to show people in the community the high quality of Middlesex farm production and to celebrate rural Ontario. The fair attracts about 5,000 people from a wide area around the village. The fair gave me the chance this weekend to set up a booth so that I was better able to talk to and meet with the farmers who make up my constituents. I wanted to hear their concerns and bring them back to Queen's Park.

There has been a wide diversity in Middlesex crop yields this year. Some of the crops have been excellent. The hours of hard work in the spring and summer and fall have resulted in some pretty good crops. Unfortunately that hard work and dedication has been met with poor commodity prices and returns well below the cost of that production. Other areas of Middlesex, primarily an area around Delaware township, have been hit by disastrous drought. There has been no reward for the hard work of these farmers in the Delaware area.

Tragically, for all the farmers, the ultimate results will not be all that different. Neither group will get the returns needed to meet the expenses incurred to put seed back into the ground.

As I previously mentioned, the Ilderton fair availed me of the opportunity to talk to Middlesex farmers and their families. Many of these farmers, whom we all depend on in Ontario for our food, have said they may not be around next spring. They have come to a point where many of them need immediate short-term help so that they will be in the fields next spring producing the safe, high-quality food we have come to expect, producing the food we need in Ontario to have the ability to feed ourselves and determine our own course, our own future. We cannot allow our farm sector to disappear and leave us dependent upon outside suppliers. We in this government understand the seriousness of that possibility and we are determined to avoid that possibility.

The members opposite would try to convince Ontarians that government members are not interested in or concerned about rural Ontario. We on this side know that nothing could be further from the truth. We on this side of the House are committed to rural Ontario, not just in the short term but also to finding solutions in the long term, like fair prices at the farm gate, stable funding so that farmers can plan for the future and a recognition ultimately of the importance of the agricultural sector.

Cabinet and caucus have made rural Ontario and the problems connected with agriculture a priority. There are 23 government MPPs from rural ridings, and we have created the rural advisory committee of caucus from this group of 23 because collectively we can find those solutions to a situation that has ravaged the farm community for 10 years. These were 10 lost years for the men and women of agriculture.

I would like to tell members a little bit about the effect of those years on the people in Middlesex, upon the farm families who depend on me. I met with a group of women, my neighbours, to hear their concerns in connection with how the 10-year struggle had affected their families. I heard about how they and their spouses had to leave the farms to find off-farm work so that they and their families could survive high interest rates and low commodity returns.

They talked about the effects of this economic uncertainty upon family life, the tension it creates for the providers, the uncertainty it creates for the children and the ultimate fear that the desperation could drive farmers into police standoffs or even to suicide, which could affect their neighbours, their friends, perhaps even their own families.

This is the measure of the human suffering that accompanies the economic suffering we are discussing here today. We are all aware that farmers have faced years of low prices, years of high interest rates, and now they face a free trade agreement that attacks the prices the horticultural sector can expect to receive for production.

These voices have to be heard. The time for trying to place blame, as so many in here have indicated, is over. It is long over and it is time to act.

This government has agreed to implement GRIP. It is willing to provide interim GRIP payments of over $93 million this fall, and the Ontario decision to enter NISA next year will allow producers to access over $30 million in special federal assistance through NISA this year.

We are listening to our constituents. We have heard them. We have communicated those concerns to caucus, to cabinet, to the Premier and to the Minister of Agriculture and Food, and our government is committed to fairness, equity and economic renewal. We are listening to those people because the economic renewal that we envisage for Ontario has to include the agricultural community.

1730

Mr Conway: I would like to join just briefly the debate led by the member for S-D-G & East Grenville on this matter of the state of the farm economy. I do not think there is anyone here who does not appreciate that the situation is serious and getting more so as each day passes.

I do not profess to understand the intricacies of this debate like some of my friends who are much closer to the agricultural debate than I am, though I can say in my part of eastern Ontario there are several hundreds of people who derive their livelihood in whole or in part from the agricultural sector, and those people have certainly been impressing upon me over the last number of years, quite frankly, that the situation is becoming ever more serious.

From what I can judge, listening to the various reports—and again the farm economy in a place like Renfrew county is obviously not the same as it will be in counties like Kent, Oxford and Essex, some of the more thoroughly agricultural counties in western Ontario—there are some factors that do concern me.

I have listened over the years to a number of governments talk about specific measures that they were going to undertake to alleviate the problems that the farm economy faced from time to time. It seems to me that in the debate at the present time the fundamental issue is prices. The data that have been advanced this afternoon, I think, make plain that one cannot imagine having any kind of a livelihood with the kind of commodity prices we are talking about, but the answer to that price question is very complicated.

I noticed on the weekend a very large group of farmers protesting in Paris, very upset about what is happening as a result of some aggressive tactics being pursued by some of the European countries with respect to prices. I was watching a public television program out of upper New York state the other day, and dairy farmers in New York state are very concerned about what is or is not happening to their price structure. So we sit in a situation that is not local to Ontario, but certainly is something we are facing nationally and internationally.

What I think the farmers of Renfrew county would want me to touch on this afternoon is one other aspect of this debate, and that is input costs. I was again struck the other day to read an article by Alan Freeman of the parliamentary bureau of the Globe and Mail, which report was contained in the Report on Business in the Globe and Mail of Thursday, September 12, 1991. He is reporting on an analysis prepared for the Canadian International Trade Tribunal which looked at the situation comparing Canadian fruit and vegetable processors vis-à-vis their American competitors. The article works through a very interesting accounting of the input costs on either side of the border.

I am not going to deal with that in any great detail this afternoon because certainly part of that touches on the holiest of holy ground, and that is supply management. I would, as a non-farmer, not be as impolitic as to venture into that area. But there is another aspect of input costs that I think we should be looking at and this report talks about it as well.

I was just asking my friend the member for S-D-G & East Grenville about some of these things. If you are a farmer in Renfrew or in Lanark, Hastings, the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, the kinds of costs you are really going to notice, among others, are what I will call the government-imposed prices: hydro, gasoline taxes and, to some extent, workers' compensation costs.

I know some people over there might think that I have gone completely starkers on this hydro bill, but when I talk to farmers in Renfrew county, as I did just a couple of weeks ago, and I have a dairy producer telling me what his hydro costs are in the here and now and he has read in Farm and Country or the Ottawa Citizen that those costs are going to increase by probably 40% over the course of the next three years, that farmer is absolutely distraught. He or she has nowhere to turn. When we in this Legislature debate energy and environmental policies, I hope we tie that debate and all the wonderful rhetoric that goes with it to the farm gate.

I am going to use Hydro as a very good example. When prices plummet and you cannot sell at any kind of advantage your soybeans or whatever else, and prices, as someone said here earlier today, are in constant dollars less than they were in the Dirty Thirties, and someone tells you that your hydro bill, which is absolutely essential, is going to increase by 15% this year, 13% next year and 17% the year after, what are you to do? Because you have no escaping. If you are a farmer in north Hastings, ably represented by my friend the Minister of Agriculture and Food, where do you turn? That is a cost that is unavoidable, it is inescapable and it is an essential service.

When someone stands up in this Legislature or somewhere else and says, "Oh well, but that is all in the name of conservation," I say to my friends opposite, what do they say to the farmer, who will be as interested as anyone in conservation, but if he is running a big dairy herd in Renfrew county, is going to be consuming thousands of dollars worth of electrical services, of necessity, over the course of a given year?

Similarly, when farmers in Renfrew county read this budget, and quite frankly when they looked at budgets introduced by my colleagues, but this budget is particularly noteworthy because in this budget we see a 30% increase in the gasoline tax and increases in the taxes that affect diesel fuels. That, my friends, has a direct, immediate, inescapable and burdensome effect on farmers. They have no choice. There is no TTC running around the farms of Eldon township in Victoria county.

If I were a farmer and I heard some of the arguments advanced in the name of supporting some of these policies, I would be enraged, not because I think some of the goals are not laudable—clearly they are—but if you are a rural resident in Kent county and your gasoline tax increases 30% and your hydro rate is going up 40% over three years, my comment and question is simply this: "What am I to do? If I live in Windsor, I have an alternative. If I live in Pembroke, I have an alternative. If I live in Eldon township, I have none. Don't ask me in the name of conservation or in the name of progressivity or in the name of equity to shoulder a disproportionate share of that burden."

I simply say to my friends that not only do all of us in this Legislature have to find a way to do this with NISA or that with GRIP—I do not profess to understand the Byzantine corridors of those federal-provincial agricultural programs, but I expect that learned members of the farm caucuses on all sides will understand them better than I—but we should not lose sight of the fact that there are government-imposed costs that touch very directly on this question. I cite those three: gasoline—diesel as well—workers' compensation costs, and hydroelectric costs that are going to have a great deal to say about any farmer's bottom line.

As I conclude my remarks this afternoon, there is one aspect I guess I would say to the farm community. There is a great deal of old Ontario wrapped up in this debate, and who could be opposed to the family farm and who could be opposed to some of the rhetoric we have heard flowing beautifully here this afternoon? But it seems to me we are going to have to be practical. My grandfather sat here for many years and one of his best friends was a very successful farmer from Glengarry. His name was Jim Sangster. I used to hear my grandfather say—how did the old line go?—Jim Sangster sat in the seat ahead, he heard the budget and he said, "We're broke." I think Jim Sangster's injunction of the mid-1930s may be applicable to the 1990s.

1740

Farmers I know in Renfrew county understand the straitened fiscal circumstances in which this government finds itself. Any government over there would face exactly the same situation. So we are going to be perhaps a little more tough-minded about the way in which we deliver whatever kind of aid will hopefully be forthcoming in the next few days in the name of the executive council.

I had a very unsatisfying debate with my farm leaders a few years ago around that infernal farm tax rebate program. I was the only person in my entire county who seemed to think there was a better way of doing it, and I lost. Some members may not remember this, but it is the OFA debate about the rebate, whether it should apply to working farmers or whether it applied to productive farm land. In my view—I have not changed my view although I lost the battle—I felt we should have moved, as we initially had wanted to move, to make that money, whatever it was—because those moneys then as now are going to be finite—go to the maximum extent to the working farmers.

It offended me quite frankly that my friend the then Attorney General, a gentleman farmer in Wellington county, was getting however many hundreds of dollars through that program. I was told of course that I did not understand, because the program really supposedly dealt with productive farm land, irrespective of who owned it. My concern is that whatever dollars we have, I want them spent to support the working farmers.

Mr Villeneuve: Mr Speaker, I am wrapping up. Would it be customary for me to do it now or wait until the government is done?

The Speaker: There is still some time remaining for the government to participate.

Mr Hansen: Representing the fruit lands of Niagara, there was one thing I said a week ago in the House, "No support, no farmers, no food." The thing is that the two programs, the GRIP program and the NISA program, would not address the problems of the fruit and vegetable growers in Niagara. I take it that my riding takes in actually all these other commodities, corn, wheat and the dairy industry, but if we came out with just this program, then it would leave out one of the most unique areas in Ontario, the fruit lands.

The Minister of Agriculture and Food met with the fruit farmers down there last week. There are some ideas we have been looking at and one is farm easements so that farmers can keep producing in those particular areas. But the thing is that the farmers down there are so desperate they are taking a look at severing one acre off their lots. As the minister already stated to the farmers in that area: "That is just short term. One year you sever one acre off and that means you have enough money to carry on for another year." In talking to them, we are looking at a more long-range program, not a very short-range program.

Free trade has hurt the fruit farmers down there quite a bit and this is one area where they have been hit since 1987. In 1987, when I ran, it was the same problem also. They were having problems. So over the last four years it has been a real problem.

Another thing too is that commodities coming in from the United States, like sour cherries, wound up having an impact on the sour cherry industry in our particular area. It is just luck this year that there was a frost in Michigan.

I see the clock is getting close to running out. There is I believe one more speaker.

As I say, representing Niagara, I have to take a look at all the farmers, not just a select group. The rest of the province does not have the uniqueness of the Niagara area. I have to stand up here today and say that all farmers need help, not just certain sections.

Mr Villeneuve: I really appreciate everyone participating in this debate this afternoon. I think it brings to the fore the very real problems that are actually unfolding and have unfolded in rural Ontario for the past six, seven or eight months.

Before I go a lot further, I want to emphasize a presentation that was made today, and it was touched upon by my colleague in the official opposition representing the county of Essex. It is a very professionally done paper, The Impact of the 1991 Drought. I think some of the statements in here bear repeating and emphasizing.

"Eight companies that supply agricultural needs in Essex county have at present $1,644,000 past due and outstanding in farm accounts that have balances of 90 days and over." That is a pretty significant figure right there. These are not banks. These are companies that provide fertilizers, seeds, herbicides, what have you, to supply the agricultural community.

Farmers pay their bills when it is at all possible. This says that there is well over $1.5 million outstanding in accounts 90 days and more past due. This same very well done report on agriculture and the impact of the 1991 drought says that the minimum amount—I hope the parliamentary assistant and the Minister of Agriculture and Food hear this one—to help them this year is in the area of $20 million, based on very depressed commodity prices, not based on the commodity prices of last year, two years ago or the average, but based on the real facts and figures of 1991.

So $20 million goes to support the drought conditions—that is simply to give them a break-even point—in Essex and Kent counties this year. I hope that as was mentioned by the Treasurer this afternoon, the Minister of Agriculture and Food does have the clout he claims to have in cabinet.

I was certainly pleased when I discussed with my leader, the member for Nipissing, the leader of the Progressive Conservative Party of Ontario, that we had to bring to the government, to the fore, the major calamities that are being faced by the depressed prices of grains and oilseeds and certainly some of the drought conditions that were faced by some of the tender fruit growers and those farmers in the sun parlour of Ontario.

I am very disappointed that quite a number of people, particularly from the government side, got up and said they could not support this motion. I will put it in a nutshell and I want them to reconsider before we go to a vote. We call "upon the Premier and cabinet to participate in the NISA program for this year and to introduce further measures to give Ontario producers at least the same protection for 1990-91 that they will have under the new safety net programs, in order to meet the commitments made by agriculture ministers at their meeting in Regina in March 1991." Therefore, this simply says that the Minister of Agriculture and Food for Ontario supports this motion and agreed to it in March 1991. Is it possible his colleagues today will stand and vote against him?

I ask government members to reconsider, those who said they could not support this, probably because it has the name of the member for Nipissing on it, the leader of the Progressive Conservative Party. They should think above politics. They should think support for agriculture. That is what they spoke of all afternoon, the great need out there, and they are not going to support this motion? I do not understand. If they want to play politics, they should say it. If they want to help farmers, they should support it. It is that simple.

In the Agenda for People—I will just remind members of the Agenda for People, and we could go on for a lot longer than two minutes—the NDP clearly promised a minimum of $100 million in new programs for agriculture. That was then, of course.

We have had no new announcements. We have had a rehash of the interest support program the previous government had in place. Indeed, the government actually only came up with $50 million when the previous government had at one point $100 million of support, reducing gradually as we got away from election time, and then I presume it would have found another one for the election.

However, I say to government members again that if they cannot support this motion, they are playing politics, pure and simple. They should help Ontario's agriculture and support this motion.

Mr Hayes: Who's playing politics?

Mr Villeneuve: Who is playing politics? That is what I am asking. Who is playing politics? We are looking to help. There is a statement here that says, "No support, no farmers, no food."

1750

The government members should have been in Cuba with the four members of the Progressive Conservatives and the four members of the Liberals who came and they would understand. I think there was a very good reason why the government members were cut off from attending Cuba at the last minute. They would have seen what a real socialist regime is like. Empty shelves, no food; that is what a real socialist regime is like and that is what Ontario is heading for.

In summation, the tax on tobacco products in Ontario is $1 billion a year. The Ministry of Agriculture and Food spends about $550 million a year, not only to administer but in support of farmers. Therefore there is $450 million just out of one tax, from agricultural producers, that goes into the government coffers and is distributed everywhere else but in agriculture.

I say to the government that it had better support agriculture now. They will not forget.

1757

The House divided on Mr Harris’s motion, which was negatived on the following vote:

Ayes–36

Arnott, Bradley, Brown, Caplan, Carr, Chiarelli, Cleary, Conway, Cordiano, Cousens, Cunningham, Curling, Daigeler, Eves, Fawcett, Grandmaitre, Harnick, Jordan, Mancini, Marland, McClelland, McLean, Miclash, Murdoch, B., O’Neil, H., O’Neill, Y., Phillips, G., Poirier, Poole, Runciman, Sola, Sterling, Tilson, Turnbull, Villeneuve, Wilson, J.

Nays–62

Abel, Akande, Bisson, Boyd, Buchanan, Carter, Charlton, Christopherson, Churley, Cooke, Cooper, Coppen, Drainville, Duignan, Farnan, Ferguson, Fletcher, Frankford, Gigantes, Haeck, Hansen, Harrington, Haslam, Hayes, Hope, Huget, Jamison, Johnson, Klopp, Kormos, Lankin, Laughren, Lessard, MacKinnon, Mackenzie, Malkowski, Mammoliti, Marchese, Martin, Mathysen, Mills, Morrow, North, O’Connor, Owens, Perruzza, Pouliot, Rae, Rizzo, Silipo, Sutherland, Ward, B., Ward, M., Waters, Wessenger, White, Wildman, Wilson, F., Wilson, G., Winninger, Wiseman, Wood.

The House adjourned at 1801.

ERRATUM

No.	Page	Column	Line	Should read:
58	2510	2	38	The Speaker: Pursuant to standing order104(g)(11),

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor/Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon/L'hon Lincoln M. Alexander, PC, QC/CP, CR

Speaker/Président: Hon/L'hon David Warner

Clerk/Greffier: Claude L. DesRosiers

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Committees/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des comités: Smirle Forsyth

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Journals/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des journaux: Alex D. McFedries

Sergeant at Arms/Sergent d'armes: Thomas Stelling

Abel, Donald (Wentworth North/-Nord PC) government whip/Whip du gouvernement

Akande, Hon/L'hon Zanana (St Andrew-St Patrick ND)
Minister of Community and Social Services/
Ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires

Allen, Hon/L'hon Richard (Hamilton West/-Ouest ND)
Minister of Colleges and Universities, Minister of Skills
Development/Ministre des Collèges et Universités,
ministre de la Formation professionnelle

Arnott, Ted (Wellington PC)

Beer, Charles (York North/-Nord L)

Bisson, Gilles (Cochrane South/-Sud ND) PA to Minister of Northern Development and Mines, PA to minister responsible for francophone affairs, Vice-Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/
Ap du ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines,
ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones,
vice-président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario
au sein de la Confédération

Boyd, Hon/L'hon Marion (London Centre/-Centre ND)
Minister of Education, minister responsible for women's issues/Ministre de l'Éducation, ministre déléguée à la
Condition féminine

Bradley, James J. (St Catharines L) opposition House leader/
Chef parlementaire de l'opposition

Brown, Michael A. (Algoma-Manitoulin L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on general government/ Vice-Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales

Buchanan, Hon/L'hon Elmer (Hastings-Peterborough ND)
Minister of Agriculture and Food/Ministre de
l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation

Callahan, Robert V. (Brampton South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Président du Comité
permanent des comptes publics

Caplan, Elinor (Oriole L) Chair, standing committee on social development/Présidente du Comité permanent des affaires
sociales

Carr, Gary (Oakville South/-Sud PC)

Carter, Jenny (Peterborough ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability
issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre
des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des
personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

Charlton, Hon/L'hon Brian (Hamilton Mountain ND)
Minister of Financial Institutions/Ministre des Institutions
financières

Chiarelli, Robert (Ottawa West/-Ouest L)

Christopherson, David (Hamilton Centre/-Centre ND)
PA to Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/
Ap du Trésorier de l'Ontario et du ministre de l'Économie

Churley, Hon/L'hon Marilyn (Riverdale ND) Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ministre de la
Consommation et du Commerce

Cleary, John C. (Cornwall L)

Conway, Sean G. (Renfrew North/-Nord L)

Cooke, Hon/L'hon David (Windsor-Riverside ND) Minister
of Municipal Affairs, government House leader/
Ministre des Affaires municipales, chef parlementaire du gouvernement

Cooper, Mike (Kitchener-Wilmot ND) deputy government whip/
Whip adjoint du gouvernement

Coppen, Hon/L'hon Shirley (Niagara South/-Sud ND)

Minister without Portfolio, chief government whip/
Ministre sans portefeuille, whip en chef du gouvernement

Cordiano, Joseph (Lawrence L) Vice-Chair, standing committee
on social development/Vice-Président du Comité permanent
des affaires sociales

Cousens, W. Donald (Markham PC)

Cunningham, Dianne (London North/-Nord PC) Progressive
Conservative chief whip/Whip en chef du Parti
progressiste-conservateur

Curling, Alvin (Scarborough North/-Nord L) opposition deputy whip/whip adjoint de l'opposition

Dadamo, George (Windsor-Sandwich ND) PA to Minister of Transportation/Ap du ministre des Transports

Daigeler, Hans (Nepean L)

Drainville, Dennis (Victoria-Haliburton ND) PA to Minister of Municipal Affairs; Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/Ap du ministre des Affaires municipales, président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario au sein
de la Confédération

Duignan, Noel (Halton North/-Nord ND) Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative, coprésident
du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire

Elston, Murray J. (Bruce L) Leader of the Official Opposition/
Chef de l'opposition officielle

Eves, Ernie (Parry Sound PC) Progressive Conservative House
leader/Chef parlementaire du Parti progressiste-conservateur

Farnan, Mike (Cambridge ND) First Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Premier vice-président du
Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Fawcett, Joan M. (Northumberland L)

Ferguson, Hon/L'hon Will (Kitchener ND) Minister of Energy/Ministre de l'Énergie

Fletcher, Derek (Guelph ND) PA to Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ap du ministre de la Consommation
et du Commerce

Frankford, Robert (Scarborough East/-Est ND)

- Gigantes, Hon/L'hon Evelyn (Ottawa Centre/-Centre ND)
Minister of Housing/Ministre du Logement
- Grandmaître, Bernard C. (Ottawa East/-Est L)
- Grier, Hon/L'hon Ruth A. (Etobicoke-Lakeshore ND)
Minister of the Environment, minister responsible for the greater Toronto area/Ministre de l'Environnement, ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto
- Haack, Christel (St. Catharines-Brock ND)
- Hampton, Hon/L'hon Howard (Rainy River ND) Attorney General/Procureur général
- Hansen, Ron (Lincoln ND) Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs; Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/Président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques, président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi privés
- Harnick, Charles (Willowdale PC)
- Harrington, Margaret H. (Niagara Falls ND) PA to Minister of Housing/Ap du ministre du Logement
- Harris, Michael (Nipissing PC) leader of the Progressive Conservative Party/Chef du Parti progressiste-conservateur
- Haslam, Hon/L'hon Karen (Perth ND) Minister of Culture and Communications/Ministre de la Culture et des Communications
- Hayes, Pat (Essex-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (agriculture)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (agriculture)
- Henderson, D. James (Etobicoke-Humber L)
- Hope, Randy R. (Chatham-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Community and Social Services/Ap du ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires
- Huget, Bob (Sarnia ND) PA to Minister of Energy/ Ap du ministre de l'Énergie
- Jackson, Cameron (Burlington South/-Sud PC) Chair, standing committee on estimates/Président du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses
- Jamison, Norm (Norfolk ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology, responsible for small business/ Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie, délégué aux Affaires des petites entreprises
- Johnson, Paul R. (Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings/ Prince-Edward-Lennox-Hastings-Sud ND)
PA to Minister of Revenue/Ap du ministre du Revenu
- Jordan, W. Leo (Lanark-Renfrew PC)
- Klopp, Paul (Huron ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (food)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (alimentation)
- Kormos, Peter (Welland-Thorold ND) Chair, standing committee on resources development/Président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources
- Kwinter, Monte (Wilson Heights L)
- Lankin, Hon/L'hon Frances (Beaches-Woodbine ND)
Minister of Health, minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ministre de la Santé, ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale
- Laughren, Hon/L'hon Floyd (Nickel Belt ND) Deputy Premier, Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/Vice-premier ministre, Trésorier de l'Ontario et ministre de l'Économie
- Lessard, Wayne (Windsor-Walkerville ND) PA to Minister of Colleges and Universities/Ap du ministre des Collèges et Universités
- Mackenzie, Hon/L'hon Bob (Hamilton East/-Est ND)
Minister of Labour/Ministre du Travail
- MacKinnon, Ellen (Lambton ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative
- Mahoney, Steven W. (Mississauga West/-Ouest L) chief opposition whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition
- Malkowski, Gary (York East/-Est ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/ Ap de la ministre des Affaires civiles, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales
- Mammoliti, George (Yorkview ND) PA to minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ap de la ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale
- Mancini, Remo (Essex South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on general government/Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales
- Marchese, Rosario (Fort York ND) PA to the Premier, PA to Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Ap du premier ministre, ap du ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales
- Marland, Margaret (Mississauga South/-Sud PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on estimates/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses
- Martel, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Sudbury East/-Est ND) Minister of Northern Development and Mines/Ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines
- Martin, Tony (Sault Ste. Marie/Sault-Sainte-Marie ND) PA to Minister of Education/Ap de la ministre de l'Éducation
- Mathysen, Irene (Middlesex ND) PA to Minister of the Environment, government whip/Ap de la ministre de l'Environnement, whip du gouvernement
- McClelland, Carman (Brampton North/-Nord L)
- McGuinty, Dalton J.P. (Ottawa South/-Sud L)
- McLean, Allan K. (Simcoe East/-Est PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Vice-Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux
- McLeod, Lyn (Fort William L)
- Miclash, Frank (Kenora L) opposition chief whip/ Whip en chef de l'opposition
- Mills, Gord (Durham East/-Est ND) PA to Solicitor General/ Ap du Solliciteur général
- Morin, Gilles E. (Carleton East/-Est L) Deputy Speaker and Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Vice-Président et Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
- Morrow, Mark (Wentworth East/-Est ND) Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman; Vice-Chair, standing committee on administration of justice/Président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman, vice-président du Comité permanent de l'administration de la justice
- Murdoch, Bill (Grey PC)
- Murdock, Sharon (Sudbury ND) PA to Minister of Labour/ Ap du ministre du Travail
- North, Hon/L'hon Peter (Elgin ND) Minister of Tourism and Recreation/Ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs

O'Connor, Lawrence (Durham-York ND) PA to minister responsible for the greater Toronto area; Vice-Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/
Ap de la ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto, vice-président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi privés

Offer, Steven (Mississauga North/-Nord L)

O'Neil, Hugh P. (Quinte L)

O'Neill, Yvonne (Ottawa-Rideau L) opposition deputy whip/
Whip adjointe de l'opposition

Owens, Stephen (Scarborough Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Financial Institutions, government whip/
Ap du ministre des Institutions financières, whip du gouvernement

Perruzza, Anthony (Downsview ND) PA to Minister for Skills Development/Ap du ministre de la Formation professionnelle

Philip, Hon/L'hon Ed (Etobicoke-Rexdale ND) Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology/Ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie

Phillips, Gerry (Scarborough-Agincourt L)

Pilkey, Hon/L'hon Allan (Oshawa ND) Solicitor General, Minister of Correctional Services/Solliciteur général, ministre des Services correctionnels

Poirier, Jean (Prescott and Russell/Prescott et Russell L)

Poole, Dianne (Eglinton L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Vice-Présidente du comité permanent des comptes publics

Pouliot, Hon/L'hon Gilles (Lake Nipigon/Lac-Nipigon ND) Minister of Transportation, minister responsible for francophone affairs/Ministre du Transport, ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones

Rae, Hon/L'hon Bob (York South/-Sud ND) Premier, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Premier ministre, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales

Ramsay, David (Timiskaming L)

Rizzo, Tony (Oakwood IND)

Runciman, Robert W. (Leeds-Grenville PC) Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux

Ruprecht, Tony (Parkdale L)

Scott, Ian G. (St. George-St. David L)

Silipo, Hon/L'hon Tony (Dovercourt ND) Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet/Président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement

Sola, John (Mississauga East/-Est L)

Sorbara, Gregory S. (York Centre/-Centre L)

Sterling, Norman W. (Carleton PC)

Stockwell, Chris (Etobicoke West/-Ouest PC)

Sullivan, Barbara (Halton Centre/-Centre L)

Sutherland, Kimble (Oxford ND) PA to Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet; Vice-Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs/Ap du président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement, vice-président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques

Swarbrick, Anne (Scarborough West /-Ouest ND)

Tilson, David (Dufferin-Peel PC)

Turnbull, David (York Mills PC)

Villeneuve, Noble (S-D-G & East Grenville/S.-D.-G. & Grenville-Est PC) Second Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Deuxième vice-président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Ward, Brad (Brantford ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology with responsibility for trade and technology/
Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie et délégué au Commerce et à la Technologie

Ward, Margery (Don Mills ND) PA to Minister of Government Services/Ap du ministre des Services gouvernementaux

Wark-Martyn, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Port Arthur ND) Minister of Revenue/Ministre du Revenu

Warner, Hon/L'hon David (Scarborough-Ellesmere ND) Speaker; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président, coprésident du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire

Waters, Daniel (Muskoka-Georgian Bay/Muskoka-Baie-Georgienne ND) PA to Minister of Tourism and Recreation; Vice-Chair, standing committee on resources development
Ap du ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs, vice-président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources

Wessinger, Paul (Simcoe Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Health/Ap de la ministre de la Santé

White, Drummond (Durham Centre/-Centre ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman/
Vice-président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman

Wildman, Hon/L'hon Bud (Algoma ND) Minister of Natural Resources, minister responsible for native affairs/Ministre des Ressources naturelles, ministre délégué aux Affaires autochtones

Wilson, Hon/L'hon Fred (Frontenac-Addington ND) Minister of Government Services/Ministre des Services gouvernementaux

Wilson, Gary (Kingston and The Islands/Kingston et Les Îles ND) PA to Minister of Culture and Communications/
Ap de la ministre de la Culture et des Communications

Wilson, Jim (Simcoe West/-Ouest PC)

Winninger, David (London South/-Sud ND) PA to Attorney General, PA to minister responsible for native affairs/Ap du Procureur général, ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires autochtones

Wiseman, Jim (Durham West/Durham-Ouest ND) PA to Minister of Correctional Services/Ap du ministre des Services correctionnels

Witmer, Elizabeth (Waterloo North/-Nord PC)

Wood, Len (Cochrane North/-Nord ND) PA to Minister of Natural Resources/Ap du ministre des Ressources naturelles

Ziemba, Hon/L'hon Elaine (High Park-Swansea ND) Minister of Citizenship, minister responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

STANDING COMMITTEES/COMITÉS PERMANENTS

Administration of justice/Administration de la justice

Chair/Président: Mike Cooper
Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Mark Morrow
Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Jenny Carter, Robert Chiarelli, Derek Fletcher, Charles Harnick, Irene Mathysen, Gordon Mills,
Jean Poirier, Gregory S. Sorbara, David Winninger
Clerk/Greffière: Lisa Freedman

Estimates/Budgets des dépenses

Chair/Président: Cameron Jackson
Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Margaret Marland
Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Hans Daigeler, Mike Farnan, Paul R. Johnson, Wayne Lessard, Dalton McGuinty, Lyn
McLeod, Lawrence O'Connor, Anthony Perruzza, Gary Wilson
Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Finance and economic affairs/

Finance et affaires économiques

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen
Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Kimble Sutherland
Members/Membres: David Christopherson, Norman Jamison, Monte Kwinter, Gerry Phillips, Norman W. Sterling, Chris Stockwell, Barbara Sullivan, Brad Ward, Margery Ward,
Jim Wiseman
Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

General government/Affaires gouvernementales

Chair/Président: Remo Mancini
Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Michael A. Brown
Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Gilles Bisson, Dennis
Drainville, Margaret H. Harrington, George Mammoliti, Rosario Marchese, Bill Murdoch, Yvonne O'Neill, Ian G. Scott, David Turnbull
Clerk/Greffière: Deborah Deller

Government agencies/Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair/Président: Robert W. Runciman
Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Allan K. McLean
Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Jenny Carter, Robert Frankford, Bernard Grandmaitre, Pat Hayes, Rosario
Marchese, Dalton McGuinty, Chris Stockwell, Daniel Waters,
Jim Wiseman
Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Legislative Assembly/Assemblée législative

Chair/Président: Noel Duignan
Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Ellen MacKinnon
Members/Membres: Mike Cooper, Robert Frankford, Norman Jamison, Margaret Marland, Irene Mathysen,
Carman McClelland, Gilles E. Morin, Hugh P. O'Neil, Stephen Owens, Noble Villeneuve
Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Ombudsman/Ombudsman

Chair/Président: Mark Morrow
Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Drummond White
Members/Membres: Alvin Curling, Joan M. Fawcett, Christel
Haeck, D. James Henderson, Peter Kormos, George
Mammoliti, Bill Murdoch, Margery Ward, Paul Wessinger,
Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer
Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Public accounts/Comptes publics

Chair/Président: Robert V. Callahan
Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Dianne Poole
Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Sean G. Conway, W. Donald Cousens, Christel Haeck, Pat Hayes, Paul R. Johnson, Ellen MacKinnon, Lawrence O'Connor, David Tilson, Drummond White
Clerk/Greffière: Tannis Manikel

Regulations and private bills/

Règlements et projets de loi privés

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen
Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Lawrence O'Connor
Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Mike Farnan, Derek Fletcher, Leo Jordan, Ellen MacKinnon, Frank Miclash, Tony Ruprecht, John Sola, Kimble Sutherland, Drummond White, Jim Wilson
Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

Resources development/Développement des ressources

Chair/Président: Peter Kormos
Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Daniel Waters
Members/Membres: Ted Arnott, John C. Cleary,
George Dadamo, Bob Huget, Leo Jordan, Paul Klopp,
Sharon Murdock, Steven Offer, David Ramsay, Len Wood
Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

Social development/Affaires sociales

Chair/Présidente: Elinor Caplan
Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Joseph Cordiano
Members/Membres: Charles Beer, Christel Haeck, Randy R. Hope, Gary Malkowski, Tony Martin, Lyn McLeod, Stephen Owens, Paul Wessinger, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer
Clerk/Greffière: Lynn Mellor

SELECT COMMITTEE/COMITÉ SPÉCIAL

Ontario in Confederation/

Rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération

Chair/Président: Dennis Drainville
Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Gilles Bisson
Members/Membres: Jenny Carter, Alvin Curling, Ernie Eves,
Charles Harnick, Margaret H. Harrington, Gary Malkowski,
Irene Mathysen, Steven Offer, Yvonne O'Neill, David Winninger
Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

SPECIAL COMMITTEE/COMITÉ EXTRAORDINAIRE

Parliamentary precinct/Enceinte parlementaire

Co-Chair/Coprésident: David Warner
Co-Chair/Coprésident: Noel Duignan
Members/Membres: Dianne Cunningham, Remo Mancini, Kimble Sutherland
Clerk/Greffier: Smirle Forsyth

CONTENTS

Monday 30 September 1991

Members' statements

Local Government Week	2585
Mr Mahoney
Police services	2585
Mr J. Wilson
Waste Reduction Week	2585
Mrs Mathysen
Ontario Human Rights Commission	2585
Mr Curling
School breakfast program	2586
Mrs Cunningham
Conservation	2586
Mr Abel
Chambers of commerce conference	2586
Mr Miclash
Developmentally disabled	2586
Mr B. Murdoch
International plowing match	2587
Mrs MacKinnon
Ministerial statements	2587
Mrs Marland
Mr Cooke
Mr Elston

Oral questions

Budget	2587
Mr Elston
Mr Laughren
Retail store hours	2589
Mr Carr
Mr Pilkey
Mr Sorbara
Mr Hampton
Automobile insurance	2590
Mr Tilson
Mr Charlton
Charitable gaming	2591
Mr Kormos
Ms Churley
Ontario economy	2592
Mr Phillips
Mr Laughren
Assistance to farmers	2592
Mr Villeneuve
Mr Laughren
TV Ontario	2593
Mrs Marland
Mrs Haslam
Taxation	2593
Ms Harrington
Mr Laughren
Ontario Hydro rates	2594
Mr Conway
Mr Ferguson
Land registration	2594
Mr Arnott
Ms Churley

Consumer protection	2595
Mr G. Wilson
Ms Churley
Assistance to farmers	2595
Mr Cleary
Mr Buchanan
Ontario student assistance program	2595
Mrs Cunningham
Mr Allen

Budget	2595
Mr Elston

Petitions

St James Roman Catholic School	2596
Mr Carr
Residents' allowances	2596
Mr Cooper
Assistance to farmers	2596
Mr Elston
Oath of allegiance	2596
Mr J. Wilson
Environmental protection	2596
Mr Carr

First readings

Armenian Community Centre of Cambridge Act, 1991, Bill Pr68	2596
Mr Farnan
Agreed to	2596

Opposition day

Farm income	2596
Mr Villeneuve	2596
Mr Buchanan	2599
Mr Elston	2600
Mr J. Wilson	2601
Mr Johnson	2602
Mr Ramsay	2603
Mr McLean	2604
Mr O'Connor	2605
Mr Cleary	2605
Mr Jordan	2607
Mr Klopp	2607
Mr Mancini	2609
Mr Arnott	2611
Mr Hayes	2612
Mrs Fawcett	2613
Mr B. Murdoch	2614
Mrs Mathysen	2615
Mr Conway	2616
Mr Hansen	2617
Mr Villeneuve	2618
Negatived	2619

Lists of members

Members and their responsibilities
Committees of the Legislative Assembly

61 1991

61 1991

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly of Ontario

First Session, 35th Parliament

Official Report of Debates (Hansard)

Tuesday 1 October 1991

Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

Première session, 35^e législature

Journal des débats (Hansard)

Le mardi 1 octobre 1991

Speaker
Honourable David Warner

Clerk
Claude L. DesRosiers

Président
L'honorable David Warner

Greffier
Claude L. DesRosiers

Table of Contents

Table of Contents for proceedings reported in this issue appears at the back, together with an alphabetical list of members of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at (416) 325-7400.

Table des matières

La table des matières des séances rapportées dans ce numéro se trouve à l'arrière de ce fascicule, ainsi qu'une liste alphabétique de députés de l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario.

Il existe un index cumulatif des numéros précédents. Les renseignements qu'il contient sont à votre disposition par téléphone auprès des employés de l'index du Journal des débats au (416) 325-7400.

Numbering of Hansard

Effective with the opening of the Second Session of the 35th Parliament, Hansard issues and pages will once again be numbered on a sessional basis. Hansard numbering therefore will become consistent with Orders and Notices and Votes and Proceedings, and with other parliamentary publications throughout Canada.

For the last two years Hansard has been numbered according to the calendar year. Under this system, the numbering of issues and pages was restarted with the first issue in the calendar year, regardless of session or Parliament.

Under the new system, the sequence of numbering started in January 1991 will end with the final House and committee sittings of the present First Session. A new sequence will begin on the opening day of the Second Session, and each succeeding session, which will be issue 1 and begin with page 1. Committee reports likewise will be numbered from the first sitting of each committee in a parliamentary session.

Numérotation du Journal des débats

A partir du début de la deuxième session de la 35^e législature, les pages et les numéros du Journal des débats seront de nouveau numérotés par session. La numérotation du Journal des débats correspondra donc à celle de Feuilleton et Avis et de Procès-verbaux, ainsi que celle des autres publications parlementaires au Canada.

Depuis deux ans, le Journal des débats était numéroté par année civile. Avec ce système, la numérotation des numéros et des pages recommençait au premier numéro de l'année civile, quelle que soit la session ou la législature.

Avec le nouveau système, la numérotation commencée en janvier 1991 s'arrêtera à la dernière séance de la Chambre et des comités de l'actuelle première session. Une nouvelle série commencera le jour de l'ouverture de la deuxième session et des sessions suivantes : numéro 1, page 1. Les rapports des comités seront également numérotés à partir de la première séance de chaque comité pour une session parlementaire donnée.

Subscriptions

Subscription information may be obtained from: Sessional Subscription Service, Publications Ontario, Ministry of Government Services, 5th Floor, 880 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 1N8. Phone (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 or toll-free 1 (800) 668-9938.

Abonnements

Pour les abonnements, veuillez prendre contact avec le Service d'abonnement parlementaire, Publications Ontario, ministère des Services gouvernementaux, 5^e étage, 880, rue Bay, Toronto (Ontario) M7A 1N8. Par téléphone : (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 ou, sans frais : 1 (800) 668-9938.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Tuesday 1 October 1991

The House met at 1334.

Prayers.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

VILLAGE OF EGANVILLE

Mr Conway: I would like to rise today and pay tribute to the residents of an historic community in my constituency, namely, the village of Eganville, which this year is celebrating the centennial of its municipal incorporation in 1891.

In a very personal way, I want to pay tribute to the community for the organization of its centennial efforts over the past number of months, but most especially for its efforts in the course of the summer, during which time it hosted a spectacular series of centennial events, culminating in a marvellous ecumenical service and parade on the Sunday of the long weekend in August.

In a very personal way, I want to pay tribute as well to Mr Gerald Tracey of Eganville, who was the chair of the centennial committee. That committee worked incredibly diligently over the course of three years. In addition to their efforts previously referred to, they constructed a spectacular waterfront park in the heart of the village of Eganville along the shores of the beautiful Bonnechere River, as well as producing a history book highlighting the history of this very famous community in my part of eastern Ontario. I have a special word of congratulations to Mr Tracey and his colleagues at the Eganville Leader, who published a 225-page centennial supplement to their July 24, 1991, edition.

As the local member, I want to pay particular tribute to the marvellous history of that community and to the almost incredible volunteerism that made this centennial celebration the spectacular success it so evidently was.

RED HILL CREEK EXPRESSWAY

Mr Turnbull: Last night I was one of 400 people who attended a fund-raiser for the continued fight against the government's decision to axe the Red Hill Creek Expressway. Of the six NDP MPPs invited to attend this event, none had the courage to face the people. The Conservative Party is the only party in this House that has consistently supported the construction of the Red Hill Creek Expressway.

There can be no argument about the tremendous economic and social benefits this highway would bring to the region of Hamilton, and $70 million has already been spent on this project and is now just wasted money.

The party that always billed itself as one in favour of consultation cut off this important project without consultation or good reason. The government has broken its fundamental promise to listen to the people and be fair in its action. As one speaker, a steelworker, said last night, "The NDP has been in opposition so long they are now in opposition to the people." The very competence and moral fibre of the NDP is questioned by its actions in this matter.

What I saw last night was an incredible amount of citizen anger and energy focused on the task of trying to have this government listen to reason and right. Governments have an obligation to make decisions that are seen to serve the best interests of its citizens. This ruling fails that test. I urge the new Minister of Transportation to review his government's anti-expressway stand.

UNITED WAY CAMPAIGN

Mr Martin: Today I would like to congratulate all those individuals across Ontario, and particularly in Sault Ste Marie, who are devoting their time and energy to the United Way fund campaign. During these difficult times, particularly in my own riding, we must support and encourage the efforts of the United Way volunteers. This fund drive is a 99% volunteer effort. What we must remember is that without a strong volunteer network, human care needs would not be sufficiently met.

In Sault Ste Marie, we are facing a difficult winter. The demand is great and the challenge for the United Way volunteers is even greater. I encourage all those who are presently employed to recognize these fundamental needs and come out and join these volunteers. I urge you to contribute to this vital cause in our community and across the province.

Our theme this year at the United Way in Sault Ste Marie is appropriate in light of our present situation. This theme is, "Let's Pull Together." I am personally asking that we, as a caring community, support our local United Way fund campaign. Let's truly pull together.

1340

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION

Mrs Sullivan: New Democrats whom I have met and others who are members of the party must be reeling in dismay at the environmental record of this government, because it is truly one to be ashamed of. There is no sense of what the Minister of the Environment's rules are or what they will become, since the minister puts forward inconsistent and disconnected rhetoric in virtually every area.

Her statement on the municipal-industrial strategy for abatement is a perfect example. It is a vague reiteration of environmentalist lingo, and while it was being put together fully one year was lost in dealing with toxic discharges into our waterways.

If a total loading reduction approach is to be taken, where are the minister's interim load reduction targets? Where are her time lines? If elimination in the manufacture, use, generation and release of toxic substances is to engendered, where is her list of toxics that must be phased out of industrial use? What reporting mechanism is to be utilized? What kind of centralized data bank will be required, and what information will be made public?

There is a need for a systematic, coherent process involving government, industry, municipalities and the public, a process that specifies the timetables and the legal mechanisms for bans and phase-outs and analyses the volumes of toxic chemical use, the availability of alternatives and the process changes required.

None of these are on the table and there is no indication of when they will be. We have waited for a year while we have simply heard rhetoric.

Time lost is air and water polluted, and that is this government's record: adding to the environmental problems and not solving them.

GARBAGE DISPOSAL

Mr Jordan: I rise today to bring to the attention of the Minister of the Environment yet another injustice that is being done to eastern Ontario. Seven municipalities—Smiths Falls, Carleton Place, Pakenham, Prescott and the townships of Beckwith, South Elmsley and Kitley—are being dealt a raw deal over garbage.

The municipalities, because of new regulations set by the Minister of the Environment, are facing a $20-per-tonne increase for continued garbage disposal at the Carp landfill site. At $90 per tonne, the municipalities are already paying a $44 premium above the regional rate of $46. The $20 will be added to the $90 rate.

To a town like Smiths Falls, the January 1 increase would result in an $80,000-a-year expense and force additional taxes on residents who are already paying over $600,000 in unsubsidized dollars on waste disposal.

The Ministry of the Environment is forcing the municipalities to dispose of their waste in Carp, but is driving costs out of control. Constantly changing rules set by the ministry has made locating a waste disposal site a nightmare over the past 20 years in Lanark-Renfrew. The responsibility lies with the minister.

KOREAN HERITAGE DAY

Ms M. Ward: Today I would like to pay tribute to all Ontarians of Korean descent.

Five years ago, the Ontario government proclaimed October 4 as Korean Heritage Day. On this Saturday, October 5, the Korean Canadian Cultural Association of Metropolitan Toronto will be celebrating Korean Heritage Day at its community centre at 20 Mobile Drive, which is located in my riding of Don Mills.

The Korean Canadian Cultural Association of Metropolitan Toronto has a membership of over 2,500 people. The association provides information and referral services for immigrants, seniors and those in need. English as a second language training and other educational programs are also offered.

Korean Canadians are one of the smaller ethnocultural groups within Canada in terms of population size, but they have made significant contributions to our economic, social and cultural life. Many of them are active members in the professional and retail business sectors of our economy. I know the members of this House who are from Metropolitan Toronto can look around their ridings and find Korean Canadians operating successful businesses in their communities.

The Korean heritage is rich in folk traditions. They have brought us their music, dance, cuisine and crafts. This week is a fitting time for us all to applaud Korean Canadians for their successful integration into Canadian society while preserving their cultural heritage. Let us wish them a joyful celebration on Korean Heritage Day.

OPP CUTBACKS

Mr Bradley: I had the opportunity last Saturday to be in downtown St Catharines on the main street, St Paul Street, as the Niagara Grape and Wine Festival parade was going by. It was indeed a beautiful parade. We had the lovely floats it has become famous for. We had the smartly marching bands which come each year. We had everyone who was part of the parade, but something was missing: It was the hum of motorcycles I could not hear and the pipes and drums I could not hear.

The Golden Helmets of the Ontario Provincial Police added so much to that parade over the years. So many people commented on its wonderful part of Ontario tradition. Then I listened for the OPP Pipes and Drums. They too were absent from the parade, as they are absent across Ontario now because this government has decided to destroy this vestige of history and heritage in this province. Indeed, the last time they performed was in Perth when the Premier was present. The St Catharines Senior A fastball team members told me how much they enjoyed the Golden Helmets at that time.

With Prince Charles and Lady Diana coming to Ontario, how appropriate it would be to return the Golden Helmets and the Pipes and Drums to our province.

TECHNOLOGICAL TRAINING

Mrs Cunningham: I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the London Board of Education for stating its long-range plans to update and expand technological education in London schools.

Trustees approved a comprehensive plan to extend education and technology from grade 1 to grade 12. The plan is comprehensive and considers the age and ability of the students. For example, in grades 1 to 6 eventually every classroom will have a technology corner where tools and materials will be available for projects, much like most junior classrooms now have a reading corner. The same kind of idea, an extension of opportunities to young people in technological studies, will extend to grades 7 and 8 and again the curriculum in grades 10 to 12.

In their deliberations they underlined the fact that mandatory grade 9 technical studies courses are not an option for this government but something the government should move towards quickly. Co-operative education programs have been expanded. This board has been a leader in this province in working with the business community and industry and the unions.

I urge the Minister of Education not only to take a look at what is happening in schools in the London board and around the province in technological studies but to work very carefully with the Minister of Colleges and Universities, who is also Minister of Skills Development, in making a comprehensive program realistic to all young people across Ontario.

PETERBOROUGH ECONOMY

Ms Carter: I want to draw the attention of the House to the consequences to Peterborough of free trade, the high dollar and related federal government policies.

Local trade unionists realized years ago that jobs would leave if tariffs were removed. Outboard Marine, Raybestos, Nashua, Alfa Laval, Purity Packaging, Johnson and Johnson and many others have pulled out. General Electric has downsized. Two more firms have gone in the last couple of weeks, Kendall and A-L Stainless. Within the city, nearly 16% of all children are on social assistance. The real unemployment level is also 16%.

I want to thank all the groups in Peterborough, such as the Peterborough Social Planning Council and the many agencies and volunteers, beginning with the United Way, which are fighting these trends and assure them the government at Queen's Park is working with them. We established a wage protection fund. We are improving retraining programs and social services. We will protect the rights of workers and do all we can to create good new jobs.

There are some exciting new growth points in the Peterborough economy. A locally based firm is making energy-efficient light fittings and another is developing high-tech metering equipment. Our GE factory may take on a new lease of life with energy-efficient technology. All these developments will not only provide jobs but also help in the urgent task of protecting our environment. We will work together for a better future.

1350

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY

ENVIRONMENTAL BILL OF RIGHTS

Hon Mrs Grier: I wish to take this opportunity to advise the members of the Legislature about the progress of the environmental bill of rights and the next stage in its development.

My commitment to this bill has long been a matter of record in the Legislature. Our goal is simple but of profound importance: to give the citizens of Ontario the right to act to protect the environment.

I am pleased to advise the Legislature today that I have now established the minister's Task Force on the Ontario Environmental Bill of Rights. This task force is made up of representatives from business, environmental groups and government. The members will draw upon their expertise and experience to design a draft bill.

The task force is co-chaired by my deputy minister, Gary Posen, and Michael Cochrane, a senior counsel with the Ministry of the Attorney General. Members of the task force are Bob Anderson from the Business Council on National Issues, George Howse from the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Rick Lindgren from the Canadian Environmental Law Association, John McNamara from the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, Sally Marin from the Ministry of the Environment, Paul Muldoon from Pollution Probe and Andrew Roman of the law firm Miller, Thomson.

Co-chair Michael Cochrane will also meet directly with groups that have a special interest in the proposed bill, such as the Ontario Federation of Labour, the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, the Association of Municipalities of Ontario and the Canadian Bar Association.

I believe this is a balanced and thorough way to proceed in the development of this bill. Because the bill is closely related to many other pieces of provincial legislation, it requires a detailed and careful drafting of its provisions and a complete understanding of its implications.

Everyone on this task force has agreed to work within the framework of some principles which I have indicated are fundamental to this bill. These include the public's right to a healthy environment; the enforcement of this right through improved access to the courts and/or tribunals, including the enhanced right to sue polluters; increased public participation in environmental decision-making by government; increased government responsibility and accountability for the environment, and greater protection for employees who blow the whistle on polluting employers.

Our earlier consultations, which were with the public, an interministerial committee and an advisory committee of 26 organizations, concentrated on a broad discussion of principles. This task force will focus on the specific provisions of a draft bill. When the draft bill has been completed, there will be a further opportunity for public review.

In closing, I would like to thank the members of the task force and the members of the Legislature, whom I welcome in joining me in delivering this important reform to the citizens of Ontario. Representatives of this task force are in the gallery today. I would like them to stand so that they can be recognized for the hard work I know they are going to do.

ASSISTANCE TO FARMERS

Hon Mr Laughren: I am about to make an announcement on agricultural assistance. The Minister of Agriculture and Food is not here right now, but he will be here later on in question period to answer any questions, just on the outside chance that members have any questions of him.

At the start of this session of the House, the Premier outlined the challenges that lay ahead for the government in the economic renewal of this province. In his statement, the Premier noted that rural communities in Ontario are in difficulty due to the collapse in farm incomes. He renewed this government's commitment to work with farmers towards the renewal of the rural economy. Agriculture is and remains a key sector in the province's economic renewal strategy. We have always maintained that a strong provincial economy depends on a healthy agricultural and rural economy.

Everyone is well aware of the serious financial difficulties Ontario farmers are facing. Low commodity prices, low yields, high grain supplies, a severe drought in parts of the province, the effects of free trade and gaps in government support programs have all combined to create this financial hardship. It is a hardship that affects many producers.

The fruit growers have had cheap fruit dumped in Canada. Grains and oilseeds producers have suffered low prices because of international trade subsidies driving down world prices.

The Minister of Agriculture and Food has toured the province this summer, about 25 counties and districts in total. He has seen the severity of the drought and has listened to the financial plight of farmers and their families. His parliamentary assistants have also met with many farmers and farm groups and have discussed their findings. Our colleagues in the rural caucus have regularly shared the concerns and needs of their constituents with the minister.

In response to these consultations and in keeping with our commitment to renewing and revitalizing the agricultural and rural communities of Ontario, we are pleased to announce today that the Premier and cabinet have approved the emergency assistance package for Ontario farmers for 1991. The program will consist of the following components.

First, there will be additional funding to our existing 1991 farm interest assistance program. Earlier this year we announced a $50-million farm interest assistance program to offset interest costs to Ontario farmers. The program was well subscribed and funds fully committed. Consequently, we are adding another $11 million to benefit all applicants to the program.

Second will be a payment to grains and oilseeds producers, as originally requested by the commodity council, equal to their premiums in our provincial farm income stabilization program for these crops. This premium exemption will provide $15 million to participating grains and oilseeds producers.

Third is a payment to producers of edible horticultural crops equal to 1% of net sales as calculated under the net income stabilization account for the 1990 tax year. This 1% payment amounts to $5 million for producers of edible horticultural products.

Fourth, we will negotiate with the federal government to include apples, honey, onions and fur as eligible commodities under the net income stabilization account program. The province will contribute 1% of eligible net sales for these crops for the 1990 tax year, which amounts to $1 million.

Fifth, we will provide $3.5 million to farmers and farm families experiencing financial stress from market prices or drought. Details of this component will be determined after consultation with farm groups.

Together, these components of the assistance package amount to $35.5 million in assistance to alleviate the difficulties faced by our farming communities.

The Minister of Agriculture and Food has spoken to the federal Minister of Agriculture, Mr McKnight, about this package. We have emphasized that our province has been singularly hard hit by the current recession. Yet despite our declining revenues and difficult fiscal situation, we have drawn on our resources once again to aid our farmers. We call on the federal government to live up to its commitment to provide financial assistance to Ontario farmers in these extraordinary times.

We recognize that money is not the solution to all the problems pressing on our farms and farming communities. We know that this money alone is not enough, but for the present it is what we can offer in times of very tight provincial budgets. We remain confident that this new injection of funding, coupled with the cash flow which will result from the interim gross revenue insurance plan payment, will help bridge financially troubled farmers until next year when long-term programs take effect.

We wish to acknowledge the efforts of farm organizations, local farm groups and the rural caucus in bringing to the attention of the public the need to direct new money towards agriculture in Ontario, even in these times of limited resources.

Although this package is designed to alleviate short-term difficulties, we will continue to have discussions with our farm and rural community leaders to develop long-term options for the economic restructuring and renewal of the agricultural sector of Ontario.

Interjections.

The Speaker: The normally quiet member for Quinte is blocking his good colleague.

1400

RESPONSES

ENVIRONMENTAL BILL OF RIGHTS

Mr McClelland: No doubt the member is excited, and as a former Minister of the Environment, he well ought to be.

A year ago, the member for Etobicoke-Lakeshore was sworn in as minister. She made a commitment as she travelled this province throughout the campaign. Among those promises she made, the very cornerstone of her environmental policy was the introduction of the bill of rights.

A year later, she is advising the House today that she is putting together a ministerial committee. I wish it well. She has great people there, tremendous resources. But where is the bill of rights she promised immediately to the people of Ontario? She travelled the province and told them she was going to do it. When the minister was in opposition, she stood in her place and hammered away at the government of the day, asking for that environmental bill of rights. She tabled one when she was in opposition. With all the help she has from the bureaucracy, all the able people she has, she still has not been able to produce. The member for Halton Centre has put a good bill before the minister. Why can she not do it?

Furthermore, the minister has had the opportunity to do it. It is amazing that the minister has not been able to produce in the time she has had.

I also want to draw to the minister's attention and ask, in spite of all the good people she has in there, where is some representation from the agricultural community? Farmers are very concerned about the impact this bill may have on their operations. They have been left out in the past. They were left out of the advisory committee she introduced in this House on December 13. The farmers are wondering when she is going to talk to them, when she is going to include them in the discussions.

On December 13 she announced an advisory committee and we have not heard yet what it has done. Where have they been for the past few months? What have they done? She has enunciated that it agreed with the broad principles. Is she going to allow this group to build on the work it has done? Is she starting afresh? When can we expect her to introduce her legislation—a year, two years, three years? What does “immediately” mean to the minister? Where is it? She has not reported back to us on what she has done. I want to know what kind of work she will be doing.

I wish her well. The people she has are great people, but let's get real here. When she and the Premier travelled the province, she talked about what she was going to do immediately. She put that in her agenda for power. She put it to the people of the province. They expect action. They have waited a long time. She will do well with these good people. It is too little, too late. The minister has lost it in terms of what she said she was going to do.

ASSISTANCE TO FARMERS

Mr Cleary: We are pleased on this side of the House that the government has finally recognized the crisis in agriculture. Our party has worked with farm groups throughout the summer and the fall to stir the government to action. The five-month delay in the announcement has caused serious problems in the agricultural community. Farm leaders appeared before the standing committee on resources development, criticizing the government's inaction. It is no wonder that farm leaders believe the government has no long-term commitment to agriculture.

The government today announced $35 million of the $124-million gap in financial support that farmers face this year. Farmers will be left to face the reality of dealing with the rest of the crop themselves. Farmers in Essex county, facing over $40 million in crop damage, will be wondering how $3 million in extra assistance will allow them to keep farming. Farmers will be disappointed to learn that the announcement does not contain the provincial funding for NISA that they demanded.

Many of the farm groups we met with are going to be very disappointed. They are going to say it is just another patch on the boot. Anyway, I hope the Treasurer has good luck dealing with the federal government. He has said there are some things he is going to do in agriculture, and I wish him all the best and hope the good message keeps coming, because this is just a stopgap measure until the new programs kick in. Maybe he will get generous and announce a few more things for the agricultural community.

MINISTERIAL STATEMENTS

Mr Bradley: I was interested in the statements that were made today because I was waiting with baited breath for yet another statement that would be made to the House by the Minister of Energy. I did not know whether it would relate to the statement made by the Treasurer or to the statement made by the Minister of the Environment, both of which were interesting statements for which we made very good responses.

But there was a statement I was waiting for from the Minister of Energy and I thought with the news media all sitting here, he would perhaps want to make this particular announcement to the House today. We are quite willing as a party to extend the time of statements for ministers, if necessary, so he can make his statement.

ASSISTANCE TO FARMERS

Mr Villeneuve: The $35.5 million is certainly better than nothing, and I understand that because of a debate that occurred right in this Legislature yesterday, the package was enriched by $15.5 million this morning. So I guess it does help from time to time to jar them, and if we need a prod, we will use a prod. However, there is a recognized need out there of $194 million just to meet the falling commodity prices, and it was exactly outlined by both the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and the horticultural producers. Quite obviously we have a major shortfall.

It is amazing that this government had $151 million for de Havilland and it had $250 million for communities in northern Ontario such as Kapuskasing and Elliot Lake, but worst of all, it had $515 million of additional income to civil servants in the province. The $35.5 million pales in comparison to that kind of money. That is for 60,000 farm families that are out there producing to make sure that everyone is well fed in Ontario and producing lots for export.

The Minister of Agriculture and Food, when he made the statement in Mississauga at 12:30, said the presentation by Essex county farmers yesterday had no bearing at all on his statement today. That is how this government listens to the public. The farmers made an excellent presentation and showed why $20 million just for drought assistance is absolutely required in Essex county, but the minister said their presentation made absolutely no difference to him or his government. That is how they listen.

Some 60,000 farm families will say, “Thank you for the $35.5 million,” but it will not save their farms from going under. I say to the Treasurer, the minister and the Premier that they are going under, and it is a rather sad situation. As a matter of fact, it is a shame.

ENVIRONMENTAL BILL OF RIGHTS

Mr Cousens: The Minister of the Environment may have forgotten that on May 15, 1989, she had all the answers with regard to the environmental bill of rights, and even the Liberals came out with the identical bill. The minister should not rush it. She should take her time, do it right. She made the promises before she got in there, but she should do it right. We are faced with the fact that she had all the answers at one time, and now I am afraid of what she is going to do.

She has what she did before. She had all the answers then. She should come along to this House now and understand at least a couple of the points that should sink in.

The first is that her bill encourages the use of the courts to address environmental issues and environmental harm. The minister should think twice about how she is going to use the courts. Her bill encourages a breakdown in the relationships between the environment, municipalities and other groups. She should make sure that when she comes out with her environmental bill of rights it is not going to be nearly so destructive as the Liberal bill of rights or the ones she brought in before. She should allow some common sense to creep in. May she, who has been selected, come out with some bright ideas that will help this government, which is going down deeper and deeper in the hole.

1410

Mr Stockwell: Under her regime, the Minister of the Environment has taken this province to a sad low. She stood in this province during the campaign and made promises she could not keep. The minister promised people at Keele Valley and in Mississauga she would not expand landfill sites without full environmental hearings. She did not tell the truth. She stood in front of the people of this province and said—

The Speaker: The member for Etobicoke West should not be suggesting that another member of the House is not telling the truth. Would you withdraw that statement.

Mr Stockwell: I will withdraw that she did not tell the truth.

I do not think the minister was being forthright with the constituents in this province. She promised the bill of rights. She has not delivered on the bill of rights. The minister has the piece of legislation before her. I do not know what is taking her so long. It is not being fair to the people. It is not being fair to the environmentalists. I do not know what is taking her this length of time.

VISITOR

The Speaker: Before continuing, members may wish to welcome to our midst this afternoon, seated in the members' gallery west, a former member of the assembly from Kitchener-Wilmot and a former minister of the crown, Mr John Sweeney.

ATTENDANCE OF PREMIER

Mr Bradley: I rise on a point of order—a point of order which was raised by former members of the House such as Ian Deans and Elie Martel and the present government House leader—to ask where the Premier is today and to register a complaint with the government that the Premier has not been present in the House to answer questions on a number of occasions, surely one of the most important responsibilities a Premier has. I recognize that he can play national statesman, because that is a role the Premier has to play, and that he has other things to do, but surely a person who sat over here and wanted the government to be accountable would be present in the House on more occasions than this Premier.

Hon Mr Cooke: I certainly appreciate the comments from the House leader for the official opposition, but I think it is fair to say that the attendance of the cabinet and of the Premier has been absolutely outstanding. We have respect for this place and we have respect for the process, and we have shown that by our attendance. I think the House leader for the official opposition should be a little fairer than he seems to be this afternoon.

The Speaker: To the point of order raised, while the Speaker has many duties and responsibilities, taking attendance is not one of them. It is time for oral questions.

Mr Elston: I find it interesting that most of the announcements that have been made recently by this government have not been made in this House. I would think that should come to the attention of all the people who think this place is supposed to be where the people do their business.

In any event, just before I start my questions, I would like to thank the Minister of Agriculture and Food, who I know now has gone to the wall twice with his cabinet colleagues, first, at the retreat up at Honey Harbour to try to get agriculture on the list of the 10 top items they should deal with and, second, with respect to the funding that has been announced. I want to thank him for that, as I have undertaken to do on any occasion when I think some work has been done for the benefit of the province.

ORAL QUESTIONS

BUDGET

Mr Elston: Let me deal first of all with my favourite minister, the current Treasurer. The Treasurer has noted that his deficit increase above and beyond the reckless $9.7-billion level which he talked about in April 1991 is the result of, among other things, pension deficits, forest firefighting, increased use of health care and welfare costs, but he has not yet been able to tell us the numbers that are associated with any of those problem areas to any degree of accuracy, although he does go out to the media from time to time and drop more specific hints about the numbers.

Can the Treasurer commit to us today that when he delivers his expenditure statement tomorrow, he will give us a program-by-program accounting of all the increases in each of the program areas that he has underlined as problematic for his budget plan?

Hon Mr Laughren: I do appreciate the question again from the leader of the official opposition. It is my intention tomorrow to provide more details to the Legislature not only on the pressures that have been mentioned here but on some of the others as well that are not in such large numbers but nevertheless are there as pressures. Yes, I think the member will get the details he is seeking tomorrow. When the second-quarter finances come out, there will be even more details than that, of course, but I think we are going to provide tomorrow the kinds of details the leader is seeking.

Mr Elston: It is very helpful for us to get the issue of the problems before us after the minister tells us about what solution he is giving us. It does not help us prepare to assist him in his dilemmas.

But I would like to indicate that, after repeated questioning yesterday, the Treasurer finally admitted that he had at least a few management principles which he was applying to the examination of his expenditure crisis. He did not tell us what they were in here, but he did tell the media that it was a "use it or lose it" type of principle he was applying in some cases.

Can the Treasurer tell us that basically what he was telling his ministerial colleagues was, "If you don't spend your budget, we'll take it back," and as a result any of the efficient people who are managing their expenditure crises better than others are going to be penalized to make way for those administrators who are not performing well? And can he tell us whether or not there are any other management principles which he is applying along with the "use it or lose it" guide?

Hon Mr Laughren: While I do think that this community and the province are well served by the tabloids that are published in Toronto, they are not always spot on. I do not recall ever using the term "use it or lose it," at least not in a polite way. I want to assure the leader that what we are trying to do as we try to contain our expenditures is to do it in a very sensitive way and in consultation with the people who are recipients of the service and also the people who deliver the service. We are very serious about going through this exercise in a more sensitive way than I think other jurisdictions have done in the past.

Mr Elston: In addition to the types of line-by-line examinations, or perhaps more program-by-program examinations, which he will give us tomorrow, will the Treasurer undertake today to us that he will refer his expenditure plan to the standing committee on finance and economic affairs so that we can examine him and his minions, either in treasury board or in the Treasurer's department, who have put together this program so that we can understand where the principles have been used effectively or whether there have been any real principles at work?

Hon Mr Laughren: First of all, I certainly have no objections to getting advice from all members in the House and, of course, members opposite as well. On the matter of referring it to the standing committee, I would make one suggestion only, that the matter go to a meeting of the House leaders to determine, with the Chair of the standing committee, if that is what they want to do.

Mr Elston: I hope I heard the minister say he is not opposed to that so that we can get on with the work of the committee, but I do not think he really said that. I hope he is in favour of it.

1420

NURSING HOMES

Mr Elston: My next question is to the Minister of Health. It has been described by the Treasurer and reported in the tabloids recently that there are some problems with respect to quality care for our senior citizens in the province and in fact there are some crises being spoken about.

I would like the Minister of Health to tell me that the seniors who are resident in nursing homes across this province are not at risk and, if she finds that there are people at risk in those nursing homes as a result of financial difficulties, what action she intends to take to guard their safety.

Hon Ms Lankin: I think the issue that the member raises is an important issue for all members in the House. There has been a lot of attention lately in the media with respect to the funding levels of nursing homes and the fact that a number of nursing homes in the province are facing very difficult situations right now. I think 12 to 14 are actually in receivership, and there is some suggestion that there could be many more that would go into receivership except there are no buyers at this point in time, so the banks have sort of stepped back from that as a tactic.

It is a very serious situation that we face, and I think we have been looking at it with respect to the redirection of long-term care and levels of funding to care for our seniors in the various types of homes as being a very important part of that reform. The question that gets raised, by virtue of the problem they face, is whether they can wait that long. I think that we see light at the end of the tunnel, and they do in terms of stabilization for the beginning of 1993. The question is between now and then.

The one thing I have become convinced of, as a result of which the Ontario Nursing Home Association actually sees some hope, is that we are the first government to say to them that we believe they are right in the claim they have been making for a number of years, that the level of care required by patients in nursing homes is in fact of an equivalent nature to those in other types of homes. As a result of that, I have undertaken to look at this issue and to try to do something in an interim way.

Mr Elston: I again would want the minister to tell us that none of the seniors in residence in any of those facilities are at risk. Second, since she has described the problem as one between then and now, then being the time when the new funding mechanism comes into place, would she describe to us what she intends to do to prevent any seniors falling into the risk category and what she intends to do to take care of any potential staff layoffs which could jeopardize the level of care those people are receiving?

Hon Ms Lankin: There is a lot of information here and I do apologize. I did not address one of the specific points of the honourable member's question.

At this point in time our analysis is that there are no seniors who are at risk, and we are ensuring, if there are any homes that we think are in that sort of situation where they would be looking at closing the doors, we have a plan in place. However, I do not think that is sufficient, and I would like to move to have a bit more of a comprehensive response to the problem between now and then. I am looking at whether or not we are able to do an interim phasing-in towards level of care funding. As the member knows, that has been announced for January 1993. I am hopeful we might be able to do some phasing towards that.

It is a very difficult fiscal time, as the member has heard, and he has been pursuing that line with the Treasurer. I am not in a position to tell the House today what steps I might be able to take, but I am pursuing that and I hope to be able to inform the House in the very near future.

Mr Elston: What is first and foremost necessary is that everybody should understand that the current government has postponed the implementation of the level of care funding formula. It was supposed to take effect very soon, but the government has put it back to 1993; what that means in fact is that some of the lending institutions are now concerned about whether or not they can carry the operation.

My concern is that, between the time when the minister acts to take the problem of funding away from the people who are administering the nursing homes that are in receivership or otherwise, she guarantee us that no senior who is currently resident or about to be resident in any nursing home will be left at risk, and that she share with us the emergency plans she has put together to take effect if there are staff cuts which jeopardize the care of seniors in those homes.

Hon Ms Lankin: First of all, on the issue of the delay, moving new levels of care funding to 1993, that is part of the redirection of long-term care. Perhaps I was not clear enough in my previous answer to say to the member that in fact I hope in the next fiscal year we will be able to take steps to move towards that so the delay will not be felt in the same way. What I am actually working on right now is whether in the short term, or immediately, there is some sort of assistance we might be able to give, and it is a very difficult proposition.

The member talks about pointing out there is that delay and says that should be made very clear. I know everyone wants this to be a kinder, gentler place, and everyone is saying we should not point fingers, but I do have to point out that the reason we have this problem is because no government has ever agreed that nursing home clients require the same level of care funding as clients in homes for the aged or charitable homes. This government recognizes that and is committed to that, and we have said it publicly for the first time.

SOCIAL ASSISTANCE

Mr Jackson: I have a question for the Minister of Community and Social Services. The Premier, late this summer, indicated to the Canadian Press that our social welfare system in this province, as administered by the minister, needed some changes. To quote him directly, "We are simply going to have to do a better job of cutting down on the bureaucracy, cutting down on the overlap and the amount of administrative confusion and try to get services delivered more efficiently," Mr Rae said."

Given that the Premier has used every word except the word that every mayor and municipality in this province has used, and that word is "accountability," could the minister please advise this House what new initiatives and what specific recommendations she is putting in place for greater and enhanced accountability on the issue of the social welfare dollars that are spent in this province?

Hon Ms Akande: This question is one which has been emphasized again and again not only by the Premier but also by the ministry staff and by me myself.

The real issue here is that we have initiated several steps towards making this a more accountable system. One of the things we are focusing on is the use of the computer material and the sharing of that information so the information that is collected through various other systems, such as unemployment insurance and others, will also be shared through the welfare system when people move off that unemployment insurance listing.

We have moved in a way so that our workers have more meaningful contact with the social assistance recipients to the extent that they will be counselling them and moving to support them back into the workforce and back into training and other skills areas.

Mr Jackson: Today is October 1, and it marks the day on which 63 of the 88 recommendations contained in the SARC report are put into effect. The concerns expressed by mayors in municipalities all across Ontario are still out there; they have not been addressed. They have legitimate concerns such as, what direction is this ministry giving on recommendation 33? I will read that into the record: "Employable persons, age 16 and 17, who are in need and who are living outside the family home should be eligible for assistance unless there are special circumstances that indicate that they should not be eligible."

My understanding from the government's last communiqué is that this is an as-of-right recommendation and guideline from this government and that the onus is on the very workers who are managing the public purse to prove it, and not the applicant or the recipient having to prove that need.

These are fundamental questions which some mayors in this province have referred to as an outrageous recommendation in the absence of a framework of accountability. I ask again of the minister, when is she going to publicly state in this House and advise municipalities how she is going to bring an accountability model to these social assistance reforms? When is she going to talk publicly on this issue?

Hon Ms Akande: In fact, there is a framework of accountability that we have discussed in this House and that we have in fact stated we seek to extend.

The recommendation the member raises here in the House as one of great concern to the mayors of many municipalities has been the subject of discussion with many of those mayors, and the Association of Municipalities of Ontario has come to meet with us around it. We have not implemented that recommendation today, October 1, which was the slated day, because we are developing a better implementation strategy. It might be noted that this implementation strategy is being done in concert with, discussion with and consultation with the very mayors to whom the member refers.

1430

Mr Jackson: I do not doubt for a minute that the minister is terribly concerned about this issue, but the facts out there are that the municipalities do not know where she stands on this issue. Today the Treasurer had to stand in this House and talk about substantive cuts in spending in this province, and the Minister of Community and Social Services and the Minister of Health control some 50% of all expenditures that occur in this province.

This is a legitimate question that municipalities have raised for the minister. It is a legitimate question for any member of this House to ask the minister what she is doing about accountability. The truth is that the single largest contributor to property tax increases in this province this year is the growth in the cost of our social assistance programs. We have an obligation to those people to understand that there has to be an accountability in this system.

In light of the fact that there have already been cabinet document leaks that indicate the minister's programs with SARC improvements were not accurately costed, in light of the fact that the Treasurer has put an order out to all cabinet ministers to look at restraint, I ask her again, when will she assure the property taxpayers in this province that she has a system of accountability in place which will ensure that our social assistance system support net does not turn into a social service assistance safety hammock?

Hon Ms Akande: I will repeat for the member that in fact we have developed an accountability framework and continue to refine it and extend it, and so we shall, and we shall be talking about it in this House. I will also remind the member that it is in recognition of the fact that we are responsible for people that we are determined this recession will not be carried on the backs of the poor, that we are determined to focus our view on economic renewal and that we have set our course as we have.

I wanted to tell him then and I will tell him now that we are developing and improving an implementation strategy for the 16- and 17-year-olds. We are committed to ensuring that families are maintained where it is appropriate but that 16- and 17-year-olds are not in danger of suffering abuse if their being on social assistance is more appropriate.

LABOUR LEGISLATION

Mrs Witmer: My question is for the Minister of Labour. The sweeping changes to the Ontario Labour Relations Act, as outlined in the Burkett committee report and his own cabinet submission, have alarmed businesses across this province. Having received no concrete answers from either the minister or the Premier about what changes their government plans to proceed with, businesses in this province are either putting investment decisions on hold or are looking very seriously at transferring their operations elsewhere, to another jurisdiction. The uncertain investment climate he has created by the release of these two documents is having an extremely negative impact on job creation, not only for today but for years to come.

In order to repair some of the damage that has already been done by the uncertainty surrounding these proposals, I would like the minister to provide us today with some straight answers to my questions. The cabinet submission states that the minister intends to introduce legislation prior to the end of this year. Could the minister specifically indicate to us today when he intends to bring forward his legislation into this House?

Hon Mr Mackenzie: I am sure the member recognizes that any document that goes to cabinet and that is to outline a consultative process has to go through the cabinet first. That will be done as soon as we can make the arrangements.

Mrs Witmer: I am extremely disappointed that the minister's response continues to be vague. It is simply not acceptable. If we are going to give the business community an opportunity for further investment and to create further jobs in this province, we need some answers.

In response to my question last Wednesday, the minister said: "We do not have a set position or a recommendation as yet." However, we have the minister's signature on a cabinet submission, and that included 61 specific recommendations. The minister's signature on that document, which seeks cabinet approval for the amendments, would seem to indicate to me that this government has very set views on this matter.

The Speaker: Would the member place her supplementary, please?

Mrs Witmer: The minister has indicated he is going to issue a discussion paper for 8 to 10 weeks. I would like to ask the minister, when will the discussion paper be released and will it contain all 61 recommendations?

Hon Mr Mackenzie: First, I think the member will recognize that any submission to cabinet to set up a discussion paper will have possible recommendations, will have options, will have directions the government may wish to take. I am also certain she will recognize that the intent of any consultation we set up is to see whether or not, given the kind of economic conditions that exist in this province of ours today, we can do anything that will replace the confrontational approach between business and labour that has been there for a good many years now in Ontario with a co-operative and consultative approach, which is exactly what this government is trying to do. One of the ways to do that is by making sure that you are going to involve workers and working people in the decisions that are going to affect them and the future of plants and jobs in this province, and that is exactly what we are trying to do.

Mrs Witmer: I am pleased the minister recognizes the uncertain business environment. Certainly we have no further wish to increase the confrontation. We are looking for consultation. But I want the minister to know that businesses across this province are forming coalitions to express their concern. They are telling the minister that these proposals are ill-timed and they could have very serious consequences on future business investment in the province. We have Project Economic Growth, with 100 businesses that are concerned. We have the More Jobs Coalition, with 40 companies. We have the All Business Coalition that represents 25 business associations.

The Speaker: Would the member place her supplementary, please?

Mrs Witmer: These companies are devoting a great deal of time and effort to get this government to listen to their concerns. They are concerned about the future of jobs in this province. What, if anything, will these changes the minister is proposing do to seriously create more investment and the much-needed jobs in this province?

Hon Mr Mackenzie: I want to tell the member that I welcome the forming together of the positions from any of the various groups she is talking about and any of the various coalitions that may organize on this. I would hope, however, she recognizes that to make the kind of changes we want to make in Ontario, it takes two to tango. You simply have to listen to what is there, present your views and then make sure you represent both sides of the equation, workers and employers, in the discussions, because workers have a lot to contribute.

1440

LAKEFILL

Mrs Caplan: I know the Minister of the Environment is very embarrassed today with her announcement, as she should be. She has also been known over the years for her opposition to lakefilling. I remember over the course of time she asked many questions in this House on the subject and she even prepared a press release entitled "Fishable, Swimbable and Drinkable." This press release was tabled in May 1988 and it contains the following statement:

"Lakefilling has changed the shape of the shoreline. It has created bays where contaminated water is trapped and has reduced the wave action that previously scoured the area. The accumulation of sediments presents a serious problem and no level of government has yet addressed it."

That was in 1988. Will the minister tell the House today whether the practice of lakefilling ceased when she became minister last year?

Hon Mrs Grier: No, it did not because many projects were under way and being completed, but what has ceased is the wholesale approval of new lakefilling projects that change the shoreline, create embayments and trap contaminated sediments. What has changed is lakefill quality guidelines which will make sure that in the projects being completed, the fill that goes in is not contaminated.

Mrs Caplan: The truth is that since the minister took office, over a million cubic metres of lakefill have been dumped along the Toronto waterfront. There has been no sign that the activity is slowing down. In fact, it may increase in the wake of the Metro Toronto and Region Conservation Authority's East Point Park initiative.

This activity, I would suggest to the minister, is curious in light of what she has just said. The Crombie commission last week released its report entitled Shoreline Regeneration for the Greater Toronto Bioregion. The document contains extensive discussion on lakefilling and it has three recommendations. I would ask the minister today to consider those three recommendations: (1) a moratorium on new lakefill projects, which would allow operations to continue at existing sites, (2) increased restrictions on material used in lakefill and (3), which I know will appeal to the minister, an absolute ban on lakefill. Given the minister's past statements and her statement today, an obvious ban on lakefilling would be her choice.

The Speaker: Would the member conclude her question, please?

Mrs Caplan: In the interests of fairness, will she adopt the recommendation and when will the decision be announced? Because of her knowledge, I expect—

The Speaker: Order.

Interjections.

The Speaker: I appreciate the member's interest and the question was quite detailed. Perhaps on another occasion when we have extremely detailed questions, it might be better suited to the Orders and Notices paper. I am sure all members are also aware of the fact that we are trying to conserve time.

Hon Mrs Grier: I will try to be as precise as possible. Let me assure the member that no final approval has been given for East Point Park with respect to lakefilling for that project. Second, let me point out to her that where a project had been begun, it would have been far more dangerous to the environment to suddenly stop with an unprotected edge of fill for those projects that were under way when I took office, as opposed to completing the contours and preventing further erosion of the fill. Third, I am sure the member and all members of this House are aware of this government's support for the recommendations of the Crombie commission. The recommendations in his shoreline regeneration report I have read with interest, and look forward to responding to specifically when we have had an opportunity to review them in detail.

LANDFILL SITES

Mr Stockwell: My question is to the minister responsible for the greater Toronto area. I have a letter from Metropolitan Toronto solicitor Ossie Doyle. He has reported to the Metropolitan works committee—I am not sure if it is in camera or not, but from the solicitor—outlining numerous statutory approvals and legal impediments involved with the extension of the Keele Valley landfill site.

Just to itemize a few, the minister has problems with Environmental Protection Act approvals, the Ontario Water Resources Act, the Aggregate Resources Act, the Lakes and Rivers Improvement Act, the Municipal Act, official plan amendment and zoning bylaw amendment under the Planning Act, approvals under the Regional Municipality of York Act, approvals under the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act, the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority and Metro's contractual agreements with Vaughan.

These could tie up the expansion of Keele Valley for years and years and years. How does the minister propose to get past all these acts, some that were put in place to ensure environmental sensitivity, when approving specific projects? How is the minister going to get around the three to five years, potentially 10 years, of time taken up in the courts so she can have Keele Valley expanded so it can accept municipal waste in the not-too-distant future?

Hon Mrs Grier: I am sure the member has had an opportunity to review, if not memorize, my statement to the House earlier this year when I outlined the program of this government and the actions we would have to take in order to solve the long-standing crisis of GTA waste. I am pleased to be able to inform the member that omnibus legislation, in accordance with the policies I announced at that time, will be introduced in this House in this session.

Mr Stockwell: I find it unbelievable that the minister would legislate away every one of these acts. They are designed to protect neighbourhoods, regions and municipal governments maybe from environmental holocausts, for all we know, with respect to expansion of sites. The minister is not allowing one minute of hearings on either of these sites in Britannia or Keele Valley.

The most ironic part of all is that the solicitor of Metropolitan Toronto has suggested on the last page of his statement that if the minister introduces her environmental bill of rights—that joke she just came forward with here today about putting it off for a little while longer—her first piece of legislation will be to introduce her environmental bill of rights and her second piece will be to exempt Keele Valley and Britannia from it.

Is it not the ultimate hypocrisy for her to stand on this side of the House for five years crowing about an environmental bill of rights, introduce it, and in the very next piece of legislation exempt two sites with not a minute of environmental assessment hearing? How does she respond to the residents with that statement being made?

Hon Mrs Grier: I will not respond to the rather extravagant hypothetical question contained in the latter part of the member's question, but I would like to assure him, and I think he has known me long enough to know, that I take no pleasure in the actions I had to take to try to resolve the crisis we inherited. Emergency legislation in order to make sure there is not waste on the streets of Metropolitan Toronto is not something I do with relish, but something I do because it is environmentally safe and sound.

Interjections.

Mr Cousens: This is very upsetting.

The Speaker: Yes, indeed. We have managed to hit that first axiom again. There will always be questions we do not like and responses we do not like. I ask that members attempt to have a calm and reasoned approach to question period. It is time for a new question.

1450

GAS LEAK IN JARVIS

Mr Jamison: My question is for the Minister of Natural Resources. As he is aware, on Thursday, September 26, the city of Nanticoke initiated a state of emergency for the municipality of Jarvis due to a gas explosion and continued gas leaks. The entire town was evacuated. While all the residents have returned, there is still a number of outstanding issues, outlined in the council's resolution I sent yesterday to the minister. MNR and Ministry of the Environment experts were available onsite and were tremendously helpful with the emergency situation. Can we expect this help and expertise to continue?

Hon Mr Wildman: The member's concern for the people of Jarvis is certainly well known to me, as he raised these issues immediately at the time of the disaster, right after it happened and throughout the weekend. I know he has been involved with the municipality and the mayor in attempting to ensure that the concerns of the people of Nanticoke are resolved. As the member indicated, MNR staff have been onsite ever since the beginning of this situation and lending their expertise for the short term to the municipality.

With regard to the resolution passed by the municipality of Nanticoke, the Ministry of Natural Resources is leading the technical committee which will respond to the recommendations with regard to the short-term study, and will assist the municipality in how to deal with the situation. We expect the interim report to be available on Friday and hope the final report for short-term measures will be available by the end of the month.

There are five members of the Ministry of Natural Resources staff assisting the municipality, in addition to staff from the Ministry of the Environment and the Ministry of the Solicitor General. The government is also considering how we will deal with the cost implications of the study by the technical committee.

Mr Jamison: This response has been swift and helpful. I would like to ensure this will continue as the situation moves into a preventive stage. It has been identified that the gas leak was a natural occurrence and that there is a potential that this could recur in the future. I would like to know what steps the ministry is taking to address the needs of this community.

Hon Mr Wildman: As the member knows, the Ministry of Natural Resources is co-ordinating the work on the long-term strategy involving the ministries of the Environment, Municipal Affairs and the Solicitor General. We will review the recommendations of the technical committee and determine how to implement its recommendations for the longer-term strategies to deal with the problems of naturally occurring gas leaks. As I said, we will be looking at the long-term funding implications and the sources of funding. The technical committee group will be meeting in the next day or two, and I will keep the member and the House informed of its progress.

ONTARIO HYDRO RATES

Mr McGuinty: My question is for the Minister of Energy. For some time now the minister has been pushing and shoving Bill 118 along; this in the face of overwhelming opposition we have heard from organizations such as the Municipal Electric Association, the Association of Major Power Consumers in Ontario and, perhaps more important, from ordinary ratepayers.

The time is certainly ripe for any kind of statement the minister might care to make. It was certainly ripe prior to the beginning of this question period.

In any event, the provisions the ratepayers are in opposition to are, first, that they allow the government to direct Hydro to do things that have no relation whatsoever to Hydro's mandate to supply power at cost and, second, that they allow this government to force Hydro to pay for some ratepayers to switch to natural gas at the expense of others who stay on the Hydro system.

In light of this overwhelming opposition, will the minister not concede that his bill is fundamentally flawed and either withdraw it completely or amend it to reflect the public will?

Hon Mr Ferguson: This bill was originally introduced for first reading back in June. After being appointed, I suggested I was prepared to consult and listen to all parties, all stakeholders affected. Having had the opportunity to speak and meet with the Municipal Electric Association, I had a much better appreciation and understanding of its concerns. They understood the government's position. Essentially, I asked the MEA, "What is the biggest difficulty you have with this bill?" They replied they were concerned that the government, for example, could direct Ontario Hydro to assume the SkyDome debt. Any reasonable-minded individual would know that is not the intention of the bill. The intention of the bill is to direct Hydro in order to fulfil the mandate of the government of the day.

As a result, I have asked both opposition parties to permit me to take five minutes today to present some remarks and introduce some minor amendments that will be brought forth in committee, which will assure the MEA of its concerns as well as put to rest its fears about what might possibly happen and further clarify the government's position on this matter.

Mr McGuinty: It is indeed unfortunate that all we have is a hint of what the minister's intentions are when he could have seized the opportunity earlier today to advise us fully of his intentions.

We have another concern as ratepayers in this province in addition to our Bill 118 concerns. We are concerned about the track record this government has set with respect to its initiatives at Elliot Lake and Kapuskasing. How can this minister argue that $65 million donated to the northern Ontario heritage fund is associated somehow with Hydro's mandate to supply power at cost? Our party is concerned that this behaviour might be repeated in the future.

Will the minister assure this House and the people of this province here and now that our Hydro bills will never again under this government reflect any costs other than those related to Hydro's fundamental mandate to supply us all with power at cost?

Hon Mr Ferguson: The purpose of this act is to bring Hydro under control and provide direction where in the past no direction whatever existed. The goal and objective of Hydro is to provide power at reasonable prices. Essentially, what has to be fundamental in Hydro's mind and in this government's mind is to obtain the best deal we possibly can on behalf of the ratepayers of Ontario. That is the goal, that is the objective and that is what we as a government are going to achieve.

REMARKS BY APPOINTEE TO POLICE SERVICES BOARD

Mr Runciman: My question is for the Solicitor General and concerns an NDP appointee to the police services board of Peel region. The minister's appointee, Mary Nnolim, in a recent Toronto Star article charged that Peel regional police routinely lie in court to protect fellow officers. The alleged comments of his appointee have, in the view of the police services board, "sullied the reputation of our police by calling into question the integrity of its police officers."

As the minister should know, the board has asked him under provisions of the Police Services Act to authorize an immediate investigation into this situation, and its request last week was endorsed by the Peel regional council. Could the minister tell us how and when he intends to respond to the request?

Hon Mr Pilkey: I have received an official request that the commission conduct an inquiry under section 25 of the Police Services Act, as has been indicated by the member. I am pleased to inform him we are presently reviewing all the material we have received and as soon as a decision is made I will inform the member and this House.

Mr Runciman: I am not sure what information the minister has to review. He has had this request in front of him for more than a week. This is an NDP appointee who apparently has made some comments that are having a very negative impact on the Peel Region Police Force, and certainly the Peel regional council is very concerned about this as well.

The minister has the authority. I emphasize again that this is an NDP appointee. Many communities right across this province are concerned about individuals who will be appointed by this government to police services boards. It is sending out a very bad message not only to communities but to policemen and policewomen across this province. In my view he has an obligation to act quickly. If the minister deems that this individual did make these comments, in my view he has an obligation to remove her from office.

Hon Mr Pilkey: I agree with the member that there is an obligation to review. In fact, the matter will be reviewed, as I indicated. I will be pleased to report back the factual findings of the circumstance. I do not disagree with the member.

RENT REGULATION

Mrs Mathysen: My question is to the Minister of Housing. There are tenants in an apartment complex in the northeast part of my riding who have been battling their landlord for several years to have him comply with municipal work orders to bring the buildings into conformity with the Ontario Building Code. This highly publicized case has been dragging on for several years while the landlord has pursued a number of appeals of these city repair orders.

My question is on behalf of these tenants who feel they are fighting a losing battle in their attempts to force the landlord to accept his responsibility to the occupants of his buildings. Tragically, during this process they have met with derision, contempt and racial harassment. What is our government doing about new provisions for the enforcement of maintenance standards to remedy this situation?

Hon Ms Gigantes: In response to the question raised by the member for Middlesex, I would like to express my personal regret to those tenants that they have not, under existing legislation, been able to get satisfactory action from the government of Ontario.

We are going to be moving forward on the question of adequacy of maintenance. Within Bill 121 there are two provisions. The first says that if there are outstanding work orders, as there have been in this case, there will be no allowance for the landlord to increase rent while those work orders are outstanding. Second, under the new legislation, tenants will be able to make application to have the rent lowered where maintenance standards are not being met.

Mrs Mathysen: When can tenants look forward to this protection and what can they do in the meantime?

Hon Ms Gigantes: We will be bringing forward the legislation for clause-by-clause consideration early this fall. We hope to have it passed by Christmas and in place by relatively early in the new year, in the spring. In the meantime, I am going to go back over the file on this particular apartment complex and try to find out whether under existing legislation we can provide more effective enforcement for these tenants.

1500

SABRINA PANETTA

Mr McClelland: My question is for the Minister of Community and Social Services. I want to say at the outset, and reflect a sentiment that is written in editorials in my local newspaper and indeed is expressed by the family in question itself, that it is unfortunate a family has to take its personal tragedy to the press and make it public to deal with an issue. I am speaking of the Panetta family situation. Members will be aware of the case of young Sabrina Panetta, a nine-year-old who weighs some 16 pounds, whose physician has said she is terminally ill. She is on a day-to-day basis. Her physician has indicated the best hope for her to extend her short life is to do so at home. The minister has the power to do something about that.

I want to acknowledge the work done by my colleague the member for Yorkview. We went to the minister on a non-partisan basis and tried to establish an order in council that would allow this young child to die at home. I do not know how to put it more bluntly to the minister.

I have held this little child in my arms. I ask the minister if she is prepared to consider and to reconsider. She has the power to issue an order in council that would allow this little child to die at home with her parents, where they want her to be. What is the minister's response to that position I put to her?

Hon Ms Akande: Indeed it is a tragic case. It is a case about which we have been very concerned and the staff in the ministry have done a great deal of work. We have been in consultation with the doctor. We have been in consultation in terms of finding out from the doctor exactly what the bottom-line needs of this child are in order to ensure that if the child were taken home, she would not be at risk.

We have received a great deal of conflicting information. The member should recognize, though, that we already have in place services that are paid for, a housekeeper for that family. We have offered to this family to extend the special services at home to the fullest extent. We have offered the family placement in a group home near the family home so that in fact the child can be taken home for every weekend.

The Speaker: Order.

Hon Ms Akande: I will continue my answer after this.

Mr McClelland: What the minister has said she has done is all well and good. I appreciate that and the family appreciates it. That is not the issue at hand.

The issue at hand is this, and she has summarized it well: There are conflicting reports. But the family physician who has dealt with this child consistently over the past nine years since her birth says that one of the fundamental factors that has contributed to her wellbeing is the care and the nurturing she receives at home. That is undisputed evidence from that physician.

I have a letter here that was sent to the minister on September 26. So that it does not get bogged down, I am going to ask one of the pages to bring it over to her. I want the minister to read the letter. It is from the Panetta family. They say to the minister: Please take time out of your busy schedule, contact the doctor and find out the facts from the child's physician personally.

There is also a letter here which says as follows, "Premier Bob, why can't the province of Ontario grant my daughter's only wish when it is within your power to do so?" This is a nine-year-old child who is literally living day to day. Weekends are meaningless at this point in time.

I urge the minister, I implore the minister to personally look into this matter and not to leave it with her staff. Some of her staff were very concerned about this and they have been sidetracked. They have been pushed off the case. I wonder why. I will leave that for the minister to determine. Would the minister look at it, please? Would the minister talk to the family, talk to the physicians? The minister has the power to do something about it. The minister and her staff are the people who stood there and said they care about people.

Indeed, in her answer just a short while ago, the minister said her job was to help people. Here is a nine-year-old child who needs the minister's help, and the Premier's. The minister can do it. She should do it.

Hon Ms Akande: That child is indeed receiving our attention. As a matter of fact, rather than staff being sidetracked, more staff have been added to the focus. The important issue here, in terms of the confusion of medical information, is that we must be absolutely certain this child is not at greater risk if taken out of the hospital. We have no confirming information from the medical practitioner that will allow us to believe that. We have asked for it repeatedly.

In addition to that, in order to assure this family and to give it all the support we have, we have also promised that if we had that confirming information, we would do whatever we could to support this child's being at home as much as possible. If the member has information which will confirm this situation, I suggest he make it available to me.

TVONTARIO

Mrs Marland: My question is for the Minister of Culture and Communications. Yesterday TVOntario's chairman and CEO, Bernard Ostry, offered his resignation and the minister accepted it. When asked at her press conference about a severance package for Mr Ostry, the minister said the matter had not been discussed. Given the litany of excesses at TVOntario under Mr Ostry's leadership—$35,000 for nine televisions, $1,800 for parties at his home, $607 for a dinner party for three people—I would suggest that Mr Ostry has already helped himself to his severance benefits. Taxpayers should not have to provide him with a severance package.

What does the contract say for Mr Ostry—I do not want the minister to hide behind the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act—and is the minister going to give him some kind of sweetheart deal, or will the minister promise the people of Ontario that she will not in fact give him a further severance package?

Hon Mrs Haslam: I can assure the honourable member that there is no settlement package from the Ontario government, commonly called the “golden handshake.” While the member might not want to be governed by the freedom of information act, I on the other hand must be. I can assure the member I take very seriously the position of the taxpayers in this option.

1510

Mrs Marland: If this minister took very seriously the position of the taxpayers, she would not be allowing Mr Ostry to stay on for another two and a half months.

I am also concerned about the response of the TVO board of directors on this whole issue. On the one hand, we have the TVO board of directors supporting the excesses and actions of their chairman, Mr Ostry. On the other hand, we have the auditor saying, “Several of our findings prompt questions as to the adequacy of administrative practices, in particular those related to the feasibility of major projects and the exercise of prudence concerning travel and other business expenses.”

Also, the director of finance for TVOntario said: “For the third year in a row, there has been inadequate planning and control in the management of leasehold projects. Firm estimates have not been obtained for projects, nor have the expenditures been monitored. Consequently the actual information is available after the fact, which can cause potential overruns.”

Given this information, a board that continues to show strong support for a chairman who had to resign obviously is not a board that I would expect this minister to support. Does the minister support a board that obviously does not know what is going on, or is she going to ask for the resignation of those board members?

Hon Mrs Haslam: This is amazing. First the member says, “Would Mr Ostry please resign.” Mr Ostry has resigned. Now she wants the entire board to resign. If the member wants blood, she should go to a slaughterhouse. That is not my style. I have every confidence in the board. This is a healing process and I intend to work with that board.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order.

ROAD CONSTRUCTION

Mr Hansen: My question is for the Minister of Transportation. Residents in my riding are concerned about the traffic congestion on residential streets caused by trucks bypassing the Queen Elizabeth Way. For many years now, the town of Grimsby has requested that the MTO extend Clarke Street from Nelles Road easterly to Book Road to ease traffic congestion. What attention is the minister giving this matter?

Hon Mr Pouliot: Mr Speaker, I had, and understandably so, with respect, some difficulties hearing the question. I believe the member was concerned about the situation that actually concerns all of us, that of Grimsby.

I appreciate the member for Lincoln’s diligence regarding this matter, and yes, we are right on top of the issue. I have asked our parliamentary assistant, the member for Windsor-Sandwich, along with MTO officials, to meet as soon as possible with the mayor of Grimsby, his worship Nicholas Andreychuk, to look at the situation with the understanding that the township of Grimsby will be the proponent of any new road construction. Therefore, we encourage them to seek our expertise, to seek our reputation in terms of road construction.

Interjections.

Hon Mr Pouliot: The point is very well taken. I do apologize for the noise around us. Standing order 20(b) should have allowed me better time to present. Thank you kindly, Mr Speaker.

TUITION FEES

Mr Daigeler: I appreciate that I still get an opportunity to ask my question, even though, Mr Speaker, I would appreciate perhaps that in future question periods you would be a little bit tougher on the amount of time being used by the members to pose their questions or for the replies by the ministers.

My question is to the Minister of Colleges and Universities. In a recent letter to the minister, the Ontario Federation of Students had this to say about his leadership:

“Frankly, Dr Allen, Ontario students expected a great deal more from you and your government. When you increased tuition fees in violation of your own party’s policy, we were disappointed. When you threaten to take away what little funding you have promised us, we are outraged.”

The students are very concerned that the minister will hit them with a major tuition fee increase soon. Traditionally in this province, as the minister will know, tuition fee increases were tied to the increase in transfer payments. Can the minister confirm today that this policy will be maintained? In other words, can he confirm that tuition fees will rise by only 2% if transfer payments will increase by only 2%, as the minister has advised the university presidents?

Hon Mr Allen: I would ask the member to do his own research as to the performance of the minister and the ministry over the past year. He might come to a slightly different conclusion than the students he has quoted. Indeed in that respect, I met, for the first time of any Minister of Colleges and Universities, with all the representatives of all the student councils of all the universities of Ontario for a full day to discuss their concerns with them. We went over this question in great detail.

What I want to say to the member in regard to that and what I want to say to the students is that inasmuch as we have not completed our evaluation of the circumstances of the system at this point in time vis-à-vis our revenues and our capacity to respond, therefore it is not possible for me at this point to confirm any policy with regard to tuition fees.

Mr Eves: On a point of personal privilege, Mr Speaker: On behalf of the Minister of Energy, perhaps the Speaker could inquire whether the tirade by the Minister of Culture and Communications did any permanent damage. None is apparent, but—

The Speaker: Point of order?

Hon Mr Ferguson: If I might, Mr Speaker, very briefly, I am going to send the honourable member one of the new energy-efficient light bulbs that we have for one of the brightest comments we have heard in this Legislature in quite some time.

The Speaker: Who said this is not good theatre?

I have had an opportunity to review Hansard from Thursday last, and under the circumstances which resulted from question period, I will now allow the member for Parkdale to pose a question to the minister concerned.

EXPO 98

Mr Ruprecht: This is directed to the Minister of Tourism and Recreation. One of the fundamental rights that we have and must maintain as members of Parliament is to ensure that we can ask questions on commitments by this government in questions of tax incentives or whatever that has to do with money that is being spent.

The Minister of Tourism and Recreation to this point has not come clean and told this Legislature just how much money he has committed to help Expo 98, how this money is going to be spent and whether provincial investigators and inspectors will be hired. All we know is what the minister has decided to drop while he is walking down the hall or what we read in the press in terms of rumours and innuendo.

I ask the minister today to make a statement in this House and tell us specifically what he has in mind so that we are informed as well.

Hon Mr North: At this point, what I can tell the member across the floor is that we are going to spend $400,000.

Mr Ruprecht: As the minister can see, that may not be good enough. As he knows, Metro council recently made a decision, last Wednesday. They made clear what they are going to spend: $150,000, specifically itemized, and $250,000 five weeks from now.

The Minister of Tourism and Recreation comes to the House today, after having had notice over months to tell this House specifically how he will allocate this money. I think we have a right in this Legislature to know specifically about the innuendoes in the press where the minister has said he is going to hire a host of investigators to co-ordinate the finances among three levels of government. I want to know, and we have the right to know today, is he spending that $400,000 on a host of investigators or will he spend that $400,000 specifically on Expo 98?

1520

Hon Mr North: I would like to tell the member across the floor that I do not put out innuendoes or any of these things. He has spent a lot of time, wind and water filling up this House with all kinds of statements about whether or not we are hiding. It is innuendo this, innuendo that.

The bottom line is, at this point we are going to spend $400,000. We have put together a fairly decent bid, I believe. We have put together partners, for the first time, on a decent bid. We have got partners from all three levels of government. We have partners from the private sector. We have Max Beck, who runs Ontario Place, who incidentally is the man who is co-ordinating all of this at this point, and we have a lot of good things happening.

If the member thinks there is some value in bringing this to the House every other day and making a big thing out of it, fine. I hope he enjoys it. It is good for his politics. That is great. The bottom line here is, we put together a very good bid and I see it going together well. We are after the bid and we wish to win it.

PETITIONS

NURSING HOMES

Mr Daigeler: I have a petition here signed by some 19 residents of the Ottawa-Carleton area. They came together some two weeks ago at a rally of 900 people, very concerned about the lack of funding for nursing homes in this province. They have asked me to put forward this petition:

"We, the undersigned, request that the government of Ontario immediately rectify the inequity in funding between nursing homes and homes for the aged. We strongly support the Ontario Nursing Home Association in their efforts to provide better care for nursing home residents through increased funding."

I am pleased to sign this petition.

Mrs Y. O'Neill: I too have a petition with 19 names, and I would like to affix my name as well.

"We, the undersigned, request that the government of Ontario immediately rectify the inequity in funding between nursing homes and homes for the aged. We strongly support the Ontario Nursing Home Association in their efforts to provide better care for nursing home residents through increased funding."

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

Mr J. Wilson: I have the privilege of presenting a petition to the Legislature of Ontario that reads as follows:

"Whereas the Queen of Canada has long been a symbol of national unity for Canadians from all walks of life and from all ethnic backgrounds; and

"Whereas the people of Canada are currently facing a constitutional crisis which could potentially result in the breakup of the federation and are in need of unifying symbols;

"We, the undersigned, respectfully petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to restore the oath to the Queen for Ontario police officers."

That is signed by some 50 residents in my riding of Simcoe West in the towns of Wasaga Beach and Stayner, the village of Angus and the townships of Sunnidale, Essa and Nottawasaga, and I too affix my name to this petition.

NURSING HOMES

Mr Grandmaître: I also have a petition:

"We, the undersigned, request that the government of Ontario immediately rectify the inequity in funding between nursing homes and homes for the aged. We strongly support the Ontario Nursing Home Association in their efforts to provide better care for nursing home residents through increased funding."

I have signed this petition.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

Mrs Sullivan: I have a petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario reading as follows:

"Whereas Her Majesty the Queen at her coronation in 1953 took a personal oath to the people of Canada, and Canadians have always reciprocated with oaths of allegiance in service to the people of the sovereign; and

"Whereas it is our right and duty to take oaths of allegiance in service in such form; and

"Whereas Ontario regulation 144/91 made under the Police Services Act, 1990, denies Ontarians this right;

"We, the undersigned residents of Ontario, loyal to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, Queen of Canada, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to resolve that His Honour the Lieutenant Governor in Council be requested to revoke Ontario regulation 144/91 and restore the traditional oath of service to Her Majesty for police personnel in Ontario."

I have affixed my signature to this petition.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

POWER CORPORATION AMENDMENT ACT, 1991

LOI DE 1991 MODIFIANT LA LOI SUR LA SOCIÉTÉ DE L'ÉLECTRICITÉ

Resuming the adjourned debate on the motion for second reading of Bill 118, An Act to amend the Power Corporation Act.

Suite du débat ajourné sur la motion visant la deuxième lecture du projet de loi 118, Loi modifiant la Loi sur la Société de l'électricité.

The Speaker: When we left off last day, the member for Brampton North had the floor.

Mr McGuinty: That is correct, Mr Speaker. He had every intention of continuing speaking to the matter today and we are just making efforts now to bring him in.

The Speaker: Do we have unanimous agreement to wait for a moment?

Agreed to.

Hon Mr Cooke: Perhaps the more appropriate way to go would be to allow our member to speak and we will agree to give the floor back to the member when the member for Victoria-Haliburton has completed.

The Speaker: Okay.

Mr Drainville: It gives me a great deal of pleasure to rise in the House today to speak on Bill 118, An Act to amend the Power Corporation Act.

Last week we heard from a number of members in this House, and in that period of time there were many questions that came up about the rationale of why the government was approaching this particular bill in this particular way. There were also criticisms, if I might say, about the government's approach, and its lack of consultation I believe has been raised by a number of members.

I have to say that consultation, at least in the parliamentary forum, is not something that just happens before the drafting of a bill, but rather also something that happens when the bill is coming before Parliament and when it goes into committee stage and afterwards. In terms of that consultation, we have been very responsive, I believe, as a government to the criticisms that have been put forward, as well as to the comments that have been made by the general public on where we can increase the bill's effectiveness. I would like to talk a little bit about that as I begin my remarks today.

There has been considerable concern and indeed misunderstanding about the scope and nature of provisions in Bill 118 regarding policy directives of this government. During the committee stages of this bill, it is the government's intention to move changes that will address this misunderstanding and will clarify the government's intentions.

The key to Ontario's new energy future is the implementation of the government's new energy directions. The primary goal of these new directions is to protect the environment while ensuring that the province continues to have a reliable supply of energy at reasonable prices.

Ontario Hydro has a unique role in helping the government meet new energy policy objectives. Ontario Hydro and the government must work together to meet the commitment to concentrate more of our resources on controlling growth in the demand for energy and to ensure that we use energy efficiently.

The changes that will be moved during committee will make it clear that the intent and the purpose of the legislation is to provide the framework for this new partnership and to remove the barriers to the implementation of new energy directions. The changes will ensure that the government's policy directives will be applied to matters within the scope and the mandate of Ontario Hydro as set out in the Power Corporation Act.

It is my understanding that the government proposes to change sections 2 and 6 of the bill to make it perfectly clear that any policy directives that are issued must relate to the corporation's exercise of its powers and duties under the act and not lead to an extension of those powers and duties by means of government directives.

The government shall also move some minor wording changes to section 4 of the bill, dealing with the substitution of other forms of energy for electrical energy. These changes will clarify the government's intentions and address the misunderstandings surrounding this matter.

Fuel substitution is an important element in the government's strategy to make Ontario more energy-efficient. The government is determined to proceed with amendments to the act that will enable Ontario Hydro to encourage—

1530

The Speaker: The member for Victoria-Haliburton, sorry to stop you in midflight, but we have a point of order.

Mr McGuinty: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I appreciate the member's comments, but they are more appropriately delivered by the minister in the form of a ministerial statement. That is the exact information we were seeking earlier today. It is unfortunate it is being given at this time by the member and not by the minister so that I could properly respond to it.

The Speaker: We are in second reading debate, I understand, and all members of the House have an opportunity to contribute their ideas and thoughts, unless I have misunderstood the member's point of order.

Mr Conway: On that point of order, Mr Speaker: I was in the lobby for a brief moment, but I think the member's point of order has to do with the fact that what we are getting now are amendments to a central piece of legislation, and those amendments can only be moved by either the responsible minister or his parliamentary assistant. I have a great deal of regard for the member for Victoria-Haliburton, but in this case I do not think he is either.

Mr Drainville: If I might clarify the situation, I have discussed this with both the parliamentary assistant and the minister in terms of the remarks I was going to be making today. This is not moving the amendments; rather, it is giving indications of the government's goodwill about some of the criticisms and some of the issues that have been raised. If the honourable members think that is anything except food for discussion, I am sorry, they will have to take that up with the minister. But I believe it is my prerogative as a member of the House, in discussion with the minister, to bring forth these comments.

The Speaker: I appreciate the point raised by the member for Renfrew North. I was listening carefully to the member for Victoria-Haliburton, who spoke about amendments which will be placed, it is his understanding, when the House is in committee. There is nothing out of order about any member speaking about items which will subsequently be placed as amendments, provided the member does not attempt to move them as amendments during second reading debate.

Mr Conway: If I might speak to that, Mr Speaker: I do not intend to prolong this, but I will certainly be spending a lot of time over the next 12 hours to prepare a point of order for tomorrow. I have been here 16 years and I have heard a lot of interesting things procedurally, but never this.

We are all aware that the government is planning to make some changes, and I respect that. Our standing orders provide ministerial statements. Ministers are getting up all the time and indicating changes or additions to policy. I am simply making the point, and I will say this and sit down: Never in 16 years in this Legislature have I been witness to a situation where government policy, in this case significant government policy, is being changed and the first word the House hears of that change is from neither the leader of the government nor the responsible minister but, in this case, the estimable member for Victoria-Haliburton, who is neither Minister of Energy nor parliamentary assistant. I think that is a first in the annals of the Legislature. It is something I want to spend some time researching over the course of the next 12 hours.

Hon Mr Cooke: I would like to respond. I am out of breath because I saw the member on the floor on the TV downstairs. I think he knows—I certainly know his House leader knows—that we discussed this matter yesterday in a House leaders' meeting. I indicated that we were going to make a request today, when the debate on this bill resumed, for the minister to make a statement, and I was asking the two opposition House leaders for unanimous consent so that could be done by the minister. We needed unanimous consent because the minister had already spoken on leadoff on this bill.

The policy initiatives referred to by the member have already been communicated to the opposition parties. I was informed today just before question period by the House leader for the official opposition that he would not grant unanimous consent. The third party agreed that it would grant unanimous consent. So the only way we could communicate this matter during the debate on Bill 118, which is the appropriate time to do it, was with the member who has just spoken.

I think we made our best effort to communicate to the Legislature quickly and promptly, but I cannot do it the way the member for Renfrew North refers to if I cannot have the co-operation of the official opposition. If it does not want to co-operate, we had to try to communicate it some way, and I think this was the appropriate way to do it.

Mr Conway: On that point, Mr Speaker, if I might, I want to raise this additional point: The member for Windsor-Riverside knows perfectly well that the standing orders of this Legislature provide something called ministerial statements. This afternoon there were some six to seven minutes left in the time ordinarily allotted to the Treasury bench for ministerial statements. It is absolutely the case that this is the more appropriate way to have announced what the government wants to announce.

He is quite right that I am the person denying unanimous consent. The reason I will deny him unanimous consent in this fashion is that we are about to get a major policy announcement from the government. In my view, that should come from the responsible minister. Failing that, it should come from his parliamentary assistant. Without any doubt, it seems to me, it should come first as a ministerial statement. There was sufficient time remaining today after the Treasurer and the other minister spoke in that period. I might add that the responsible minister has been questioned on two or three occasions in the last 25 or 26 hours. He made absolutely no hint of the change that the member for Victoria-Haliburton is now about to introduce.

Again, my point is that, in my view, it is not appropriate and, I think, out of order for a private member—an outstanding private member none the less—to advance government policy, particularly significant changes in government policy, as a first order of business without the minister or the parliamentary assistant hinting that the change was about to be made.

I find it additionally peculiar that we should be engaged in this kind of chicanery in the context of a bill where the government says it wants both energy policy and Hydro itself to be more public and more accountable. What they want to do is announce a major change in the direction of their Hydro policy. That is their right. I respectfully submit to you, sir, that the better way is to do it in ministerial statements. They had six minutes of that today that they chose not to use. Never in 16 years have I ever known a private member just willy-nilly, in the course of a routine debate on behalf of the government of which he is not a cabinet minister, to make a significant policy announcement first.

The Speaker: Rather than debate the point of order that was raised, I take seriously the matter the member raises. If I understood him properly, he volunteered to do a bit of work on this. I will be reviewing Hansard. I will be reviewing the events that have unfolded this afternoon. If the member for Renfrew North or any other member of the House would like to provide some thoughts on the matter, I would be delighted to receive them.

Perhaps at this juncture we could continue. The understanding was that the member for Victoria-Haliburton will have the floor until the member for Brampton North reappears. He would then wind up his remarks and the member for Brampton North would have the floor, because he had it on the previous occasion.

Mr Bradley: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I know how carefully you observe what goes on in the House. During the period for responses to the statements made by government, because I did not want to be out of order, I made allusion to the fact that we were expecting a statement from the Minister of Energy which would be a fundamental, substantial change in a bill that has been put before the Legislature. Even if it required the extension of the period of time for ministers' statements, we as the opposition and I as House leader were quite willing to agree to that.

1540

What has happened, quite obviously, Mr Speaker—I do not ask you to necessarily make a judgement on this—is that the government is embarrassed by its retreat on this bill and has decided it wants to do it through the back door at a time later on, when the news media are gone, when they are not in the press gallery. We have seen examples of it happening: An announcement the member for Mississauga South was involved in was made in a press conference downstairs. But now, when there is bad news in the minds of some, good news in the minds of others, but bad news for the government because it has to retreat, it wants to retreat to a position where it has a private member—a backbencher, even though he is sitting in the front benches—make an announcement of government policy at 3:40 in the afternoon, when no media are around here.

Mr Elston: On a point of order, Mr Speaker.

The Speaker: On the same point of order?

Mr Elston: Not quite on the same point, Mr Speaker. It is with respect to whether it is within the ambit of the member for Victoria-Haliburton to carry on debate at this time when he is privy to knowledge that the rest of the members, backbench members and the rest of the House, are not privy to. He has been given advance notification of material which should have been made available to us. With an advantage that is, to us, substantial, he is going to enter the debate. It will not allow us as members to either counter or agree with his assertions, because there is nothing in our hands that would allow us to deal effectively with the points he raises.

The whole issue of inside information has afflicted this administration from almost the very moment of its inception. We had it with respect to the leak of prior information to Mr Hinkley in Hamilton, now a mayoral candidate, where he got information about the Red Hill Creek Expressway which of course put him and his colleagues in the New Democratic caucus of the Hamilton city council at an unfair advantage. We have had it with respect to other materials in this government's administration. Here we have it now, where the minister has been questioned in this House this very day by our critic, the member for Ottawa South, who has received not a hint that there are substantial changes or, if I were to agree with the government House leader, the fine-tuning now alluded to—not only alluded to but asserted by the member for Victoria-Haliburton.

How unfair this type of operation is to our House is without precedent. It is a very unkind act this administration has done to the people when we are dealing with a fundamental difference of opinion about how Bill 118 will affect the current and the about-to-be-formulated policy with respect to energy consumption in Ontario. What is more important for us is that we have been told that a set of facts exist under the current Bill 118 which promote increased costs for energy consumers, particularly electrical energy consumers, as they are fully subject to the new implemented programs of Hydro under the auspices of this New Democratic government.

How we can be expected as members of the Legislative Assembly to defend both the taxpayers of this province and the ratepayers of Ontario Hydro under yet-to-be-announced or made-public amendments to this series of amendments is beyond me. In that way, my point should have been a point of privilege. My privileges as a member have in fact been violated by this type of government activity.

I have been willing, and I have spoken it most often, to co-operate with this administration to pursue the business of the province on a cordial and co-operative basis, but if this is the way in which the government pretends to treat us as opposition people who are required to defend the public, then we cannot but fail to co-operate when the time comes. How can they spring this stuff on us in the middle of a day when this was well established last week to be a debating day for Bill 118?

Hon Mr Cooke: No, it wasn't. You changed it because your Labour critic can't be here. Get your facts straight.

Mr Elston: When they change their direction, things do not amount to being fair ball.

I have to apologize to the member. Our Labour critic is ill, and that is one of the reasons this is reprogrammed, but it still does not alleviate the necessity for us to know what the government pretends it will next do with this legislation, so that we can carry on a reasonable debate. That is the point. I think it will not be fair for that member to carry on, nor will it be fair for any of those members over there who have advance notice of what that government is doing, to our disadvantage. I think those members should uphold our rights as the minority to make sure that our privileges are not breached because of this transgression by that administration.

Hon Mr Cooke: Mr Speaker, there has been an accusation made—

Mrs Marland: It's our turn.

The Speaker: Whoa. Just a minute, before we get too carried away here. I am listening carefully to the points of order. I would appreciate if there is any new material that would assist the Speaker, I would be pleased to hear it. But I have mentioned—I realize some members were not in the House at the time—that I will reserve judgement on this. I have taken the point seriously. I think it is my responsibility to try and get the debate rolling again and to recognize the member for Brampton North. If there is additional information from the member for Mississauga South, I have not heard from the third party yet.

Mrs Marland: On the same point of order, Mr Speaker, I realize that the member for Victoria-Haliburton has been put in a difficult position by his government. The fact is that because of a rescheduling of House business today, we are here to debate Bill 118. However, apparently the government policy as prescribed in that piece of legislation now is going to be radically changed, and if that is the case, then we are no longer here as opposition members debating Bill 118 as we know it in its printed format on the floor of the House. So personally I take very strong exception on behalf of our caucus to this avenue we are now walking down with this socialist government.

Hon Mr Cooke: That is not what your House leader said.

Mrs Marland: I think it is really unfair, and I say to the government House leader who is contradicting me as I speak, which is a great courtesy on his part, that we are in a position here where we are ready to debate Bill 118. We have not given unanimous agreement for the Minister of Energy to bring in an amendment and we certainly have not agreed that a backbencher, which I say with due respect to the member for Victoria-Haliburton, now be the messenger.

I am not about to kill the messenger, but I certainly think this government makes a mockery of the traditions of Parliament and the rules of procedure. If they want to make a major amendment to this garbage piece of legislation known as Bill 118, then why do they not do it properly? But as has been said by other members of the opposition, what we are now entertaining this afternoon is totally unacceptable. It is also unprecedented, and I would ask you, Mr Speaker, to rule on whether or not the statement from the member for Victoria-Haliburton on Bill 118 is in order, in light of the fact that those areas to which he is now speaking are not in fact contained in that bill today.

The Speaker: On that same point of order, the government House leader.

Hon Mr Cooke: Very briefly, Mr Speaker, I just think it is important, because of the points the leader of the official opposition has raised, to make a couple of things clear to you when you are determining whether this is an appropriate point of order or not.

I met with the opposition House leaders and shared the information with regard to Bill 118 with both opposition House leaders at 5 pm yesterday afternoon, so any accusation in this House that there are some games up and that we are not sharing information with the opposition parties is really unfair of the leader of the official opposition. I shared that information with him yesterday, about an hour after I was informed, as government House leader, about the changes that were going to be announced with regard to Bill 118.

I then asked, since we could not do Bill 70 today because the Labour critic for the Liberal Party is ill, if we could do Bill 118, and I asked if the minister could make a statement at the beginning, since we were debating Bill 118, indicating some changes, not radical changes but some changes to the bill in response to the Municipal Electric Association.

Both opposition House leaders said to me that they would discuss the matter with their caucuses today and get back to me with regard to unanimous consent. The House leader for the third party called me at the lunch hour and indicated that his caucus agreed with unanimous consent. That was the phone call I got from the member's House leader.

1550

Then the House leader for the official opposition came to me at approximately 1:40 and indicated to me that they did not agree with unanimous consent and thought instead that we should do a ministerial statement. A ministerial statement could not be prepared at 1:40 and properly distributed in accordance with the rules, so the best way to do it and the only way we could do it to inform the House was the way the caucus proposed.

I take the criticisms from the official opposition party very seriously, and I can assure the official opposition that we will not do this again. We will make sure that it be done outside the Legislature if they will not agree to have it done by unanimous consent in the House.

Mr Conway: On that point, I want to make a final observation. I have to pay due regard to what my friend the member for Windsor-Riverside has said. I was not at the meeting. I know some of the instructions, and I am very pleased to see the member for St Catharines here, because on the basis of what I know, I think the member for Windsor-Riverside has, and not for the first time in my experience, presented a highly personalized and very idiosyncratic version of the truth.

The Speaker: If there is new information, the member for Brampton North.

Mr McClelland: I want to comment if I may. You asked for some assistance, Mr Speaker. In my own humble way I will attempt to do that on two points, first on a point of privilege and second in terms of a point of order, on which I would ask you, if necessary, perhaps to recess and rule.

On a point of privilege: I had adjourned the debate on 23 September and accordingly, but for the fact that I was detained outside, I would have commenced the debate this afternoon.

I am a private member who has a responsibility to represent the people of Brampton North, who have entrusted me to do that. I have a broader responsibility in terms of my exercise of that responsibility in this Legislative Assembly to respond to legislation that will dramatically impact this province for some time to come. It has significant implications to many many people. My responsibility and my privilege, entrusted in me by my seat in this House and by the people of Brampton North, are to comment and to do so on an informed basis, as is customary and expected in the parliamentary process.

We are here today in a position where I am to resume the adjourned debate and respond to a statement given by a member which I have not had an opportunity to review, which is to be considered in the context of the debate that I have the privilege of continuing. I would suggest to you, Mr Speaker, that my privilege to continue effectively and responsibly in dealing with this has been breached.

On a point of order: Surely, given that the minister was here today and had the opportunity to put a statement forward and to provide us with the framework within which I could at least respond and perhaps if necessary change the comments, and perhaps even be persuaded that maybe my view was not entirely correct—indeed, how could it be, if this is a substantive change?

The government House leader says it is a small, cosmetic change. I happen to have a different opinion, and I am entitled to have that opinion, I say with respect, Mr Speaker. I suggest to you that it is a matter of, first, order and, second, privilege. I put to you that if we were to proceed without the minister's statement, my privilege as a member to continue this debate effectively is being violated, and I ask you to rule on that, Mr Speaker.

The Speaker: With respect, I have heard a lot of information, which I am very pleased to receive.

Mrs Marland: On a point of privilege, Mr Speaker—

The Speaker: If there is new information, fine. Otherwise I can reserve on this and we can move on and recognize the member for Brampton North to continue the debate.

Mr Eves: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I would just like to reiterate what was my understanding of the House leaders' meeting that I went to.

I think the government House leader is quite correct in stating that he brought forth this information at 5 pm yesterday and asked the two opposition parties if we would agree to revert by unanimous consent to have the minister—nobody else—bring forward some statement as to how he was going to address a resolution and some concerns that the Municipal Electric Association had at a meeting I believe it had this past Sunday.

We on our part agreed that we would give unanimous consent, provided that both opposition critics also had an opportunity to respond with equal time and thus speak twice on second reading debate. We also indicated that during ministerial statements would be the most appropriate time for the minister to make such a statement. There was some concern apparently whether the minister would be here today in time. I note that the minister did make it for question period today.

The only point I would like to make is that surely the most appropriate time would have been during ministerial statements. That is why we have provisions for them in our standing orders. There was ample time today for the minister to have made such a statement and for replies by both opposition parties. I just think that perhaps in the future—we have learned a lesson here—we can all abide by the standing orders that we have all, by consensus, agreed to have in the first place. That is the purpose of ministerial statements and responses.

The only thing I do not think was appropriate on the part of the government House leader was the fact that he indicated that in the future we will just do it outside this chamber. That is not the point; I think he has missed the point. The point is that there is a period of time called ministerial statements and there is a period of time for responses. There are rules that all three parties have agreed to by consensus. I would suggest that we just put this behind us and get on with the business of the House.

Mr Bradley: There is a different version of history, or interpretation of history perhaps is a better way of putting it, by the government House leader than by myself on what took place at the meeting. The member for Parry Sound may speak for the Progressive Conservative Party; he does not speak for me.

My understanding was that the government House leader presented a piece of paper at the meeting which was from the Municipal Electric Association, I believe, and said, "We would like to introduce some amendments in compliance with this demand from the Municipal Electric Association."

I indicated at that time that the government has the right to make any amendments it wanted but, when asked about when it should be done, clearly indicated that the best time to do it was during the time allotted for ministerial statements and that if additional time were required, we would give additional time if the government had other statements. I did not even indicate that we would be wanting extra time for response on our part. I also indicated I would discuss this with our caucus this morning, which I did.

It is our view, as I have expressed earlier, that a significant change of government policy—as I interpret this to be; the government may not—a significant change in a bill and a significant change in policy should in fact be announced in the period for ministerial statements, when the news media are all here, when the action is taking place in the Legislative Assembly, instead of being left until later on in the afternoon.

Members can see there is nobody at all in the press gallery right now, there are only a few people in the public galleries and it is an excellent time for a government to sneak changes through if it wants to. I am not saying this government is doing that; I am saying it is an excellent opportunity for a government to do that. I would not want to suggest that motive for this government, but certainly that is a conclusion that some would draw.

If the minister were to stand up in the House and announce these changes to his legislation in a public way tomorrow, I would be more than happy to see that happen. If it took additional time tomorrow for ministerial statements, on behalf of our party, I would be happy to allow additional time for that purpose. What I am concerned about is that, when it has something embarrassing, the government tries to do it somewhere else—later on in question period, gets a private member to do it, a press conference or out in Mississauga.

The Speaker: New information? The member for Mississauga South.

Mrs Marland: On a point of privilege, Mr Speaker: The government House leader had the arrogance to say a few minutes ago that the member for Mississauga South was wrong in her recollection of what the House leaders had agreed to. I would appreciate the government House leader's apologizing to me since he has now heard what the agreement was. The agreement was for the minister to make the statement in the ministerial statements period of routine proceedings in the afternoon.

I think it is impossible for us to continue to debate Bill 118 this afternoon when we do not have the opportunity to have a copy of the speech of the member for Victoria-Haliburton, which is bringing into this House an initiative and a change in policy as contained in Bill 118, the bill we are familiar with, which we were willing to come into this House this afternoon to debate.

Mr Speaker, I would appreciate your ruling on what exactly is the bill that we will be debating this afternoon, with or without the change in policy of this socialist government.

The Speaker: This is new information. The member for Halton Centre on the same point.

Mrs Sullivan: Mr Speaker, I am rising on a point of privilege. I believe that my privileges as a member of the Legislature have been breached. I intend to speak on this bill and participate in the debate on Bill 118, and in order to do so, I need full and complete detail on the government's policy and approach on this particular issue.

To date, the government has officially made that known through the introduction of Bill 118, which is what we are debating to this point, but what we are hearing today is not from a member of the executive council who participated in setting that policy and introducing that legislation, but from a member of the caucus who is not a part of government. I think it should be recognized that the government introduces the bills, which are public bills. This member is not a part of that government.

What the member appears to be telling us is that the government has a significant change in its direction on this bill. However, those changes he is discussing are not being presented to us by government. In effect, a member of this chamber who is not a part of this government has been privy to information in advance of other members of this chamber.

I believe that is a breach of my privileges as a member, and indeed a breach of the privileges of all the other members of this chamber.

The Speaker: The member for Brampton North: I trust this is new information.

Mr McClelland: Yes, it is, Mr Speaker. It is something that I would ask you to consider and something you said in your closing comments.

Mr Speaker, you said before my friend the member for Mississauga South spoke that you would make a judgement and proceed with the debate. I say with great respect that to do that completely nullifies the point of order and the point of privilege I brought to you. If you were to rule that I must proceed at this present time, with the greatest of respect, you certainly cannot have considered my point, it being that I as a member have had my privileges violated.

If it is a point of privilege with respect to my being able to proceed on the substantive portions of this bill, if it is being changed and you are telling me to proceed on this matter but you will reserve judgement until later, how then can you come back to me in the event you say that my point is well taken and say, after the fact, "You were right, but I am sorry, you have had your kick at the can."

Furthermore, Mr Speaker, I draw your attention to the standing orders, which I think you would be pleased to have brought forward at this point in time. I suggest it is potentially possible for significant cost issues to be raised with the statement being put forward here, the change in direction.

Is it appropriate, in terms of the orders of this House, for a private member to stand in his place and bring forward a statement that may have significant financial implications with respect to the introduction of this bill and the change? I put that question to you, Mr Speaker. I ask you to consider ruling, not at the present time but to hold it in reserve and stand this issue down. If you rule that I must proceed, then you cannot, in fairness, have dealt with my issue.

The Speaker: I always appreciate it when members are familiar with the standing orders. I assume all members are. Second, members may be aware that for better or worse, the Speaker is not aware of House leaders' agreements nor is he privy to those discussions.

I have listened very carefully. The point raised by the member for Brampton North is taken very seriously and I will reserve judgement on this. The House stands recessed for 10 minutes.

The House recessed at 1604.

1609

The Speaker: Indeed, as is the tradition in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, the three House leaders have reached an agreement as to how we should best proceed, so there is not a point of order to be dealt with. While I appreciate the very swift progress that was made, it would be very much appreciated if the discussions involving the three House leaders could take place outside the chamber, rather than having to debate in the chamber the concerns that each individual House leader has. Having reached the agreement then, I understand the member for Brampton North once again has the floor.

Mr McClelland: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker. I would say at the outset that I find myself at somewhat of a disadvantage, but having said that, I will proceed as best I am able, simply to summarize some comments I put forward in this place on September 23.

We hear today that there will be a change in the fundamental nature of the legislation, in my view, that would indicate that any directive given by the cabinet to Ontario Hydro must be within the mandate of Ontario Hydro. I welcome that as good news if in fact that is the case, and I will be interested to see precisely how that is done.

Might I suggest that having done that, the government has fundamentally changed the very nature of this bill. If they have done that, if they have recognized that, if they have gone back home and talked to some people and found out this is not going to fly, then they should reconsider the whole thing. It is a fundamental change, in my view, to the whole principle of the bill. It is one of the three significant points put forward by Bill 118, and they have taken one out, apparently. We will have to wait and see what actually comes to pass with that.

I think it is consistent. There is a tremendous amount of parliamentary tradition that would say that when you fundamentally change the nature of a bill, you do one of two things: You either kill it or you start afresh. I think they are determined to go ahead with certain aspects of it, and that means they have to change the bill significantly. Better yet that they do it all over.

We have a situation here where the cabinet is now going to say, "We give you a directive within the mandate of Ontario." We will be interested to see how that plays out, for the minister to stand in his place and say: "Let's not be absurd. I am not going to use by any means the authority we would have pursuant to Bill 118 to make directions to Hydro that have significant policy implications."

All we have to do is look at history, at what has happened over the past few months. Over the past few months, that is exactly what has happened. The bill has not even yet had second reading in this place and the minister is doing the very thing. He stood in his place and said: "I'm not prepared to do that. The directives coming from cabinet are going to have to be within the strict mandate of Ontario Hydro," which my good friend the member for Ottawa South has said is very clear and plain: to provide energy, electricity, at cost, to the consumer in Ontario. Having said they are going to ensure that any directives do that, history tells us in just the couple of months past that they have done anything but, that they have gone significantly beyond that mandate.

I say to the people of Ontario that with the appointee of the current government demanding a salary of some $400,000-plus, they want to put increases of at least 11% to the people of Ontario. They are saying: "Don't worry about this. We're not going to give you any directives that aren't going to fit nicely." The people of Ontario have to wonder what is being said here, "What are these people in government, the current New Democratic government, trying to tell us?" "We're not going to do it, but don't worry. We've already done it." The people of Ontario have to ask themselves that question. What is going on here for a government that says: "Don't worry. It won't happen in the future. By the way, we're sorry we have already done it a couple of times"? The bill is not even proclaimed yet or even had second reading.

All the while they are talking about significant rate increases to the people of the province, "It's all right for my friends to come into a new job at $400,000-plus a year." I just wonder how well that sits with the people, certainly back in Brampton North.

We had some discussion a few moments ago about my privileges here in this House. One of the responsibilities I have is to represent the people of my community and suggest in this place that they are not getting a good deal.

I do not know exactly what is going to be forthcoming from the minister in his statement tomorrow, but I do know this. I know the chairman of Ontario Hydro has said: "You're going to look for very significant increases this year. Over the next three years, you can expect 44% or more increase in your hydro rates." I think the people of Ontario have a right to know that. I think they ought to have put to them very plainly by this government that, "We are going to hit you with significant costs." They ought to know that.

I will tell them again and again until my friends opposite in government understand that the people of Ontario are not prepared to accept that kind of hidden tax. If you voted NDP, I say to the people of Ontario, what you are getting is taxes that are being put to you through your hydro rates by virtue of this bill. If you like that happening, then re-elect this government when you have that opportunity a few years down the road, because you have not seen anything yet in terms of the costs that are going to be coming to you either directly or indirectly. I suppose I object to that more than anything else.

I think any government at any level is going to take a lot of criticism for increasing taxes, but that is the cost of leadership. I have said before in this place that if they are going to do it they should stand up and do it forthrightly and directly. They should not slide it off on Ontario Hydro. They should not slide it off on the monthly billings that people across this province are going to get coming through the mail or on their automatic billing plans from their local hydro commission. That is not the way to tax people in this province. The government should rethink this in terms of what it is doing to people who are desperately trying to hang on to jobs.

Many people in my community are losing their homes. I have never had the kind of traffic in my four short years here as I have had in the past few months in terms of economic hardship. They say, "Well, what's 11% on my hydro bill?" This is what it is: When you do not have anything left, when there is no money in the cookie jar, 11% is sometimes the final straw. There are people who are barely hanging on and the government is going to add to their cost of housing, 44% over three years.

My backbench friends should think of that when they go back home. The people who put them in, who gave them the responsibility to represent them here, do not want a 44% hydro tax increase. I use that word advisedly, because that is what is happening. It is not power for cost. It is not provision as mandated by Ontario Hydro. This is an opportunity for the government to do its northern development program—all well and good; my seatmate from Elliot Lake is delighted that the government has responded to a need in that community.

But let's be forthright about it. Let's do it the way the government is entrusted to do it, up front, not sliding this tax through people's mailboxes in the form of Ontario Hydro rate increases. They should not insult the people of Ontario by hitting them with that kind of increase and saying, "The friend we brought in to run this organization is worth $400,000-plus a year." They should not insult them that way. People are tired of that kind of thing. They are tired of the new limousines; they are tired of them having their offices renovated.

I stood in the House today and asked a question of relative insignificance in terms of dollars and cents, and all the while thousands of dollars are being spent at another ministry in terms of office renovations. People do not like that. The government has to understand that they are not going to sit back idly and accept it from the government, so it should reconsider that.

I say to the people of Brampton North that I will not go back to my community without having voiced my opinion as strongly and as emphatically as I can that the people of my community ought not to have a 44% increase in hydro rates over the next three years, as projected by the friend of the New Democratic Party who is now at the helm of Ontario Hydro, that large institution. People cannot afford it and they will not accept it willingly.

I want to talk very briefly about what the government is going to do with this. The government has the majority and it says: "We're prepared to go to public hearings. We want to get this bill in quickly because we've got to get this money flowing. In fact, we've got to continue what we're doing, but we'll put this to public hearings."

The minister is not here right now and the government House leader, unfortunately, is not here right now. I want to know what they are talking about when they talk about public hearings. Are they talking about Toronto? Are they talking about a committee room down the hall at Queen's Park where they can invite a few people, energy consultants or people from the natural gas industry, who are happy about this bill which is going to increase hydro rates by 44%?

I am still amazed that on September 23, when I debated this, the minister stood in his place and said, "The people who sell natural gas are happy that we're increasing." Is that not a wonderful surprise? Of course they are happy. I would be happy too if one of my competitors were having a 44% increase in the product he was supplying.

What kind of people are they going to invite to the public hearings and where are they going to do it? Are they going to do it just down the hall here? Are they prepared to take it to the people of Ontario? Are they prepared to go to Victoria-Haliburton, I say to my friend opposite, and let the people in his community tell him what they really think about it? Are they prepared to go to northern Ontario, to Cochrane and areas, and hear what they want to say about this increase? Are they prepared to go to rural south-western Ontario, where farmers who have tremendous energy costs are struggling, and say to them, "If you want to voice your displeasure, come on down to Queen's Park and we'll listen to you"?

I challenge the government that if it is going to go to public hearings it should take it to the people of Ontario across the province and give them ample opportunity to put their case before the government so it has a sense of how they really feel about this.

1620

I could go on at length, but there are other people who want to speak, and I already had an opportunity a couple of weeks ago to voice some of the concerns I have. I simply want to say in summary that I find this to be one of the more distasteful things I have experienced in my years here.

I do not mind taking the heat for tax increases, as I did in the former government as a backbencher. That is what I get paid for. I say to members opposite, take it. Be prepared to stand up and say, "That's what we're doing and here is our rationale for it." They should not slide it off through the mailbox, I say to the Minister of Natural Resources, by saying, "We're just going to up the ante a little bit month to month on your hydro bill." If they want to do something, they should say they are doing it and stand up and deal with it on a direct basis.

I would hope as we have this new act—it is being changed somewhat, I think in large measure due to the very wise thoughts put forward by my friend the member for Ottawa South. He put forward a very compelling case. I am delighted that the Minister of Energy has responded and considered, apparently, the member's position that the mandate of Ontario Hydro ought to be the framework within which government policy is enacted through the vehicle of Ontario Hydro.

I am delighted that this apparently is going to happen. I am anxious to see it. I maintain that I would have liked to have had the opportunity to address it more fully. I would have liked to have seen what it was before I was required to continue the debate here this afternoon.

The people of Ontario are not going to be happy about this. I will go back to my community and say I have put it very plainly to the government that I think it is wrong. I think it is doing a disservice to the people of Ontario. I think it is doing a disservice to them in terms of the immediate cost. I think it is doing a disservice to them in terms of the impact it may have, and I believe will have, in terms of the attractiveness of business investment in this community. I think it will regret very significantly the day it pushed this forward.

If they are going to do it, I implore them to at least hold public hearings in a broad range geographically across this province. Go to each region of this province and hear what those folks will say. Go to the people of Elliot Lake, I say to the Minister of Natural Resources, and ask them how they feel about the appropriateness of having the program his government has put in place for Elliot Lake paid for by all the people of the province through their hydro rates. I hope the government will have the courage of its convictions and go forward to every corner of this province and allow the people to express their concerns and their views with respect to this legislation.

I hope the government will reconsider. It reconsidered in part; that is a good start. It should rethink the whole thing and make sure the people of Ontario get what they have always had: power at cost, provided to them in an efficient manner. Let's have that as part of a comprehensive energy policy which we need very badly to build the kind of economy we need for Ontario and for the kids in this province who are looking forward, hopefully, to a happy future here.

Mr McGuinty: I want to reinforce some of the statements made by the member for Brampton North. In particular, although we are spending a lot of time addressing what the bill does, we are not addressing one of the major issues we are all facing which this bill does not address, that is, this business of our rates and the substantial hikes we have to contend with.

Our rates are going up 11.8% next year. This year they went up 15.6% due to the combined effect of the goods and services tax, and they have been predicted to go up over 44% over the next three years by the chairman of Ontario Hydro. We now know that Ontario's residential ratepayers are paying on average 33% more than ratepayers elsewhere in Canada. Our industrial and commercial ratepayers are paying on average 60% more than their equivalents elsewhere in Canada.

The question we have for the minister is, what is he doing to help control these rate hikes? What is he doing to ensure that our existing ratepayers are going to be able to manage these increases? What is he doing to ensure that we are going to keep Ontario an attractive place for investors, who will be comparing the different jurisdictions with a view to determining who charges the most for hydro? We have farmers, single-parent families, all trying in the context of a recession to manage these. Of course, when it comes to hydro, we cannot shop elsewhere. We have to buy our electricity from Ontario Hydro. This bill does nothing whatsoever to address those spiralling rate hikes.

Hon Mr Wildman: I always enjoy the comments of my friend the member for Brampton North. I have heard his remarks and I know he feels very strongly on this issue.

I want to put before members of the House the question in regard to his comments about this bill: Why is it considered unusual or surprising that a government in this province would indeed believe that Ontario Hydro should be used as a development tool in directing development across the province? This is certainly nothing new. Ever since Sir Adam Beck in 1905 dreamed up the idea of Ontario Hydro, it was conceived and thought of as a development tool for the province.

Frankly, this is not unusual in Canada. Everyone in this House is aware, particularly my friend the member for Ottawa South, that Hydro-Québec is used as a development tool by the government of that province. It is quite a legitimate approach, just as we might use transportation infrastructure, just as this country has always used things like railways as a development tool. We have always believed in this large country, with the resources we have, the distances we have and the problems of climate we have, that we should indeed make certain that the agencies of government are used in such a way as to try to deal with those distances and those disadvantages we face in many parts of the province. That is what this bill will do. This bill will make it possible for Ontario Hydro to become part of the economic solution in this province, rather than continuing to contribute, through price hikes and so on, to the economic difficulties we face.

Mr McClelland: I will be brief. I appreciate the historical reference made by the honourable minister, the member for Algoma, to the advent of Ontario Hydro in 1905. I suppose I wait with some relish to hear the historic rendering the member for Renfrew North will afford this House and the people of Ontario as he reviews the history of Ontario Hydro and indeed speculates on the future of it in light of Bill 118.

The honourable minister said in his concluding remarks that he did not want Ontario Hydro to be part of the problem by contributing to rate hikes. The minister will know that this is not only exactly what is going to happen, but it is going to happen with a greater percentage increase than has ever been occasioned in this province before. I would suggest to him that I agree with that portion of his statement. Very soon, the people of Ontario are going to see those bills coming in. They are going to wake up and smell the coffee and say: "Boy, you're right. We don't want to see Ontario Hydro becoming a problem in terms of our household expenses, in terms of our business expenses, in terms of the investment climate in this province." It is one more ingredient in the mix that says: "Are we sure we ought to come to Ontario? Do they really know where they are going in terms of energy costs?"

One of the great competitive advantages we have had in this province is being put in jeopardy. I say again that the people of Ontario ought to know that. I urge them to respond, to take action, to call their members, to write to their members or to the Minister of Energy and the Premier of this province and demand the opportunity to put their case before a committee of this Legislative Assembly that will travel to all parts of the province, hear the good people of Ontario and understand their displeasure about what is taking place, I say again, somewhat insidiously, through the implementation of Bill 118.

1630

Mrs Marland: As I rise today to take part in this debate on Bill 118, An act to amend the Power Corporation Act, I have to wonder somewhat whether this bill is going to be allowed to proceed in its present form or whether the government, in the interim of public hearings after second reading, may have come to its senses. That they have come to their senses is what we might have heard today from the Minister of Energy had he been prepared to make his statement.

However, it seems the government is rushing from bush fire to bush fire in a piecemeal fashion with all its legislation. I understand the little situation that occurred earlier this afternoon was the result of a motion passed by the Municipal Electric Association on Sunday, and here we are on Tuesday afternoon, 48 hours later, and we have a government that is running. Let's hope that instead of running backwards they are willing to look forward, and in looking forward to the future recognize that this province will not have any future if we go down this slippery road Bill 118 would take us.

Particularly, I think it bears merit to read into the record the resolution of the Municipal Electric Association, to which we understood the Minister of Energy was going to try to respond today. We now have assurance that he is going to respond tomorrow. That motion of the Municipal Electric Association reads as follows:

"That the provincial MEA publicity campaign against Bill 118 (Power Corporation Amendment Act) be discontinued, if the Minister of Energy, within the next 48 hours, makes a suitable statement in the Legislature clearly committing the government to restrict the proposed power to direct Ontario Hydro to matters in the act, and commits to effective consultation on the criteria for, impact of and implementation of subsidies or loans for fuel-switching,

"And further it is noted that this does not preclude presentations to committee hearings focused on operational matters regarding the bill,

"And further, the chair and president should write the minister welcoming the new openness and looking for further future co-operation."

I am sure that now, since the 48 hours have elapsed, the members of the Municipal Electric Association wonder whether they can trust this government at all. I think the members of that association share with us, as Progressive Conservatives, in our caucus many of the same concerns about what this bill is exactly about.

When we look at what Ontario Hydro has been under the Power Corporation Act, we can respect the fact that it always has been an arm's-length corporation. It is very significant now when we have the current socialist government wanting to dip its hand right into the cookie jar and control Hydro rates so that if they need more money all they have to do, through the amendments to the Power Corporation Act, which is what Bill 118 is all about, is to cover off any areas they are interested in having more income from.

Is this not rather significant when one reads what the bill actually says? The fact is that this bill gives the government powers over Ontario Hydro. This government has protected itself by appointing its own person to head Ontario Hydro, so it does have control at the top. But the concern we have is that the whole issue of policy as to the future of the provision of power in Ontario will no longer rest with the major provider of power, namely Ontario Hydro. It will be totally under the hand and within the arm of this socialist government.

We know this government is very open about its anti-nuclear stance. We recognize that any government that is against the nuclear generation of electricity in 1991 is a government that is totally in the Dark Ages, to use a pun. We also know that the people who know how much electricity is needed in Ontario today and have very accurate projections of how much will be needed in the future know we cannot provide that amount of electricity and meet those load demands with only coal-fired or fossil-fuel-fired thermal units in combination with Hydro generation.

As an aside, it might have been refreshing if this government had come in with a bill changing the name rather than the direction of Ontario Hydro, because it is rather a misnomer. It is a power supplier, and since the majority of electricity is no longer generated by water, it would be appropriate to change the name of the corporation. That is a direction we would support.

The fact that this bill makes major changes in the operation of Ontario Hydro is something the public of Ontario will never know until it starts receiving its Hydro bills with increased rates, when the public of Ontario no longer has the privilege and opportunity of receiving electricity at cost. It has always been the policy that whatever it costs to generate electricity, those costs and those costs only would be borne by the consumers of electricity.

We have a bill which is doing a number of things. First of all, it is making the chairperson of Ontario Hydro the chief executive officer of the corporation and that would be effective this past June. Any actions taken by individuals other than the chairperson who represent themselves as the chief executive officer will not be binding on the corporation.

If we ever need an example of how wrong it is to have the chairperson and the chief executive officer of an agency or corporation being the same person, we have it in TVOntario. I suggest to the government that where the chief executive officer of a corporation reports to the chairman of the board and is his or her own boss, this is absolutely senseless; it is irresponsible. If this government were really following the rhetoric we have heard from it in opposition in all the years of its history in this province, I think the last thing it would do is to make the chief executive officer also chairman of the corporation, but that is what this bill does.

The bill also increases the membership on the board of directors of Ontario Hydro from 17 to 22. We understand that is purely so they can make their own NDP appointments and have control over that board—pretty straightforward logic on their part. If they want to control the policies of Ontario Hydro and therefore control the future direction of the supply of electricity in this province—and regardless of whether they accept the fact that they will be putting us in the dark, literally—they have to control the board. They have simply done that by increasing the number of appointees to the board.

1640

Another thing that is unique is that they are appointing the Deputy Minister of Energy as a non-voting member of Ontario Hydro's board of directors. Now I accept that he is non-voting, but we would think that if this corporation were to be an arm's-length corporation, the way it was founded and intended to be when it was originally established, as soon as you appoint a deputy minister to the board of directors, you eliminate that arm's-length relationship. But bear in mind, of course, that this is exactly what this socialist government wants. They want to control Ontario Hydro because they want to use the Hydro rates to pay for their social agenda.

We know and everybody who has looked at this knows very clearly what is going on. The sad part is that the public of Ontario will not know until it is too late. Mind you, I am quite sure the public of Ontario will remind this government that they are not to be taken lightly when it comes time for the next election.

This bill also allows the Minister of Energy to issue policy directives approved by the Lieutenant Governor in Council that would be binding on the corporation. For people listening or watching, we perhaps should just explain what this means, because this is the most significant part of Bill 118.

This is the part that allows the Minister of Energy to issue policy directives approved by the Lieutenant Governor in Council. Everyone knows that a policy directive approved by the Lieutenant Governor in Council is in fact a policy directive by the government of the day. We in opposition, with a majority government—which we unfortunately have at the moment with this socialist government—have no power to control what those policy directions will be. The fact is the bill says that whatever those policy directives are, approved by the Lieutenant Governor in Council at the direction of the Ministry of Energy, they would be binding on the corporation.

The irony in this part of the bill is that we might as well do away with the board of directors, even though I have already said the board of directors is going to be controlled by the members appointed by this socialist government. We might as well do away with the board of directors, because whatever is allowed to the Minister of Energy through this bill would be binding on the corporation. If by some fluke the board of directors of the corporation decided it wanted to disagree with a policy directive from the Minister of Energy, it would not matter, because if that initiative or direction had been approved by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, then that is the direction it would be.

I want to speak for a few minutes on one of those major policy directions. In order to do that, I want to refer back to the standing committee on estimates of Monday, February 11, 1991, at which time the then Minister of Energy, the member for Peterborough, was before that estimates committee.

I was asking the Minister of Energy on what information she based her opinion that we should not have any more nuclear power plants in Ontario. It was very interesting to hear her response, because she referred to the fact that there was evidence about them being unsafe. I just want to read for a moment a quotation from page E-37 of those estimates in Hansard.

"Mrs Marland: I mean, you said on the subject of nuclear generation, 'We're not going to commit ourselves too deeply until the results are heard.' Then you go on to give an example by saying that the source of the uranium is in mines which are unsafe, and I am trying to get very clear from you what your arguments are. Are your arguments against nuclear generation because the mining of the energy source is unsafe?"

"Hon Mrs Carter: There is a certain risk involved in it, I think, yes, even with the best conditions made possible. I do not think any mining is altogether safe and healthy and, of course, when you have radioactive dust as a complication, that does certainly increase the problem. But there are, of course, other related concerns. The health of the miners is not the only one.

"We have the problem of the tailings which are deposited on the surface and which either can blow around or leach into waterways and so on. That is quite a serious problem, I think, certainly south of Elliot Lake. Then, of course, at the other end of the nuclear fuel cycle we have the disposal of the used fuel, which is also a problem that we have not totally managed to solve at this point. So to focus attention on the actual power stations is not to realize the full extent of the problems that we do have with nuclear power.

"Mrs Marland: Would you agree, Minister, that a moratorium is pretty significant? I mean, what is your interpretation of the word 'moratorium'? Would you agree that 'moratorium' is a pretty significant word in its intent?"

"Hon Mrs Carter: Yes, I certainly would. It means something is put on hold until further notice.

"Mrs Marland: Right. So when you say you are not going to commit yourselves too deeply, would you agree that a moratorium is a pretty deep commitment?"

"Hon Mrs Carter: Yes, but it is only a moratorium on the development of new nuclear power."

The problem with the discussion and the debate on nuclear power is that the people who are making passionate arguments against nuclear power almost link it to all the other hazards known to the use and application of nuclear energy. Suddenly the whole situation gets out of the world of relativity.

When I went on to ask the minister if they were looking for alternative generation and about the fact that looking for alternative generation was not a unique idea, she said: "We have quite a range of shorter-term options. Our favourite one is to use less."

This brings us to the whole crux of the problem of a government controlling Ontario Hydro. There is not one member in this Legislature who would not agree and, I hope, who does not practise using less electricity. I hope every one of us has done all the things that we possibly can in our homes and apartments and places of residence to conserve on the use of energy.

What is really significant is that when I went on in this same standing committee on estimates meeting to ask the chairman of Ontario Hydro whether or not the demand for the future supply of electricity in Ontario could be met without any further nuclear generation being built in Ontario, his response was very significant. I would like, for the record, to quote Mr Franklin on page E-38:

"I understood that if we are faced with CO₂ limitations, they may be announced in 1994 but they would not click in, I do not think, until post-2000. I may be wrong about that, but my colleagues will correct me if I am. So I think the CO₂ limitations were more troublesome for us when we are talking about post-2000, which after all is kind of what our demand-supply plan really is all about.

"Our view, as expressed in that plan, I do not think has changed. We may be able to debate the timing of new generation and things like that, but our view is expressed there that when that time comes, if we rely on fossil fuels for base load, we will not be able to meet what we see to be pending CO₂ limitations.

1650

"We have to remember that 28% of our plant will become obsolete and not in existence during this planning process we are talking about. So we not only have to meet the increasing growth, we have to replace what we have. I think the debate is not whether you need new generation, but when you will need it. How long can you postpone the date?

"In our view, as we expressed in that plan, we have taken our best judgement on what load growth will be, what we can get from non-utility generation, what we can get from conservation, etc, what we can get from hydraulic, how much we can buy from other provinces, and we have come to the conclusion in that report, after five years of study, that somewhere in the year 2002-03, in that area, we will need another major generating source. I do believe that if we rely on fossil fuels to do that and these limitations come on that we are talking about, we will bump our heads on those limitations. It is a question of when."

Mr Franklin was the chairman of Ontario Hydro. I say with respect to this government that if it thinks any one of these members in this House today or any of the cabinet ministers, who are not in this House today, think they know more about meeting the energy demand needs and the forecasts for this province than Ontario Hydro, which has studied it for five years, then they are really out to lunch. It is unbelievable that anyone in 1991 can sit there and realistically say, "No, no, we can't have any other nuclear generation." The argument we hear, of course, is that it is unsafe, it is expensive and everything else.

I wonder if any of the people in this House know anyone personally who is dependent on electricity to live. I do, and perhaps, Mr Speaker, you do. You only have to visit someone who is dependent on electricity to live. I am not talking about the luxury—if they think it is luxury—of light, heat or cooling. I am talking of the need for electricity to generate a life-sustaining piece of equipment. Certainly those people in an emergency situation have had to transfer to auxiliary power, but on a long-term basis, those people's lives depend on electricity.

Mr Duignan: Remember Chernobyl? Remember Three Mile Island?

Mrs Marland: I hear the member for Halton North asking, "Remember Three Mile Island?" I would have credited this member with more intelligence than to make that comment, because yes, I do remember Three Mile Island, I do remember Chernobyl and I do know a little about the generation in the nuclear plants that have been built and owned and operated by Ontario Hydro.

If the member for Halton North does not have the benefit of that knowledge, then he is the loser, because the little I know about the Candu reactor is that it has horizontal fuel rods, not vertical ones. In Chernobyl and Three Mile Island the vertical fuel rods were the contributing cause to the problem. In Three Mile Island it was not a meltdown, but in Chernobyl it was a meltdown. If the member knows anything about anything, he should speak, but if he does not, he should not make inane comments that have no significance in this House.

I am not an electrical engineer. I do not pretend to know about the generation of electricity. But I will tell members one thing that I wager no other member in this House did. At the time of Chernobyl—I may be wrong, but I think it was April 1986. I stand to be corrected if that date is incorrect; I am trying to remember. In any case, I recall that it was some time in the spring perhaps of that year. I went to Darlington in August that year. I had not visited a nuclear generating plant before. Because my constituents were suddenly fearful, concerned, wondering if a Chernobyl could happen in Ontario or indeed Canada or the United States, I felt I had an obligation to go and find out something about nuclear generation. So I took a camera crew and I went to Darlington and I spent 10 hours filming, for the benefit of my constituents, a record of how a nuclear plant operates in Ontario. From that 10 hours of filming, we made a concise, 30-minute presentation.

I was doing this as a layperson with a public relations person and an engineer from Ontario Hydro who could put the technical language into language that the layperson, which was myself, could understand. I asked questions about safety in the design of the Darlington nuclear plant. I asked how we could tell the people of Ontario that they did not have to fear a Chernobyl accident in Ontario with Ontario Hydro's operation with the Candu reactor.

I understood at the end of 10 hours—I say again in a non-technical format—why there are differences. I learned at first hand what the built-in safety design is of Darlington, how much additional cost there is to the design and construction of a nuclear plant in Ontario today that is purely attributable to the safety features. We could probably build these plants for half the cost if we did not invest in all the additional design costs that are directly attributable to safety.

For the sake of the member for Halton North, who threw out that comment a minute ago about Three Mile Island—he might be interested to know this—one thing they have at Darlington is a whole structure of volume of space contained within walls into which all the air from the area of the reactor can be transferred.

1700

Where the reactor sits in the Darlington plant I think is called a vault. Maybe my colleague the member for Lanark-Renfrew will know this far better than I, but I think where the reactor sits is a vault and it is in a very large volume of space and, therefore, a large volume of air. The safety feature is that immediately adjacent to this is another large structure. It is just like a big empty can. In the event of a malfunction of that reactor, the air is removed from that area and contained in a standby space so that there is no concern about that air, with any hazard associated with it, as an emission. There is no risk to its being released into the atmosphere.

Before I went to visit Darlington, I probably was ambivalent about nuclear generation, but I knew the reason the Candu reactor was as popular as it was all around the world was because of the safety design built into it. In fact, I felt reassured, as did my constituents who later told me, after seeing that film, that finally they understood why nuclear generation was expensive. But they also recognized that if we are talking about the future of our province and the growth of our province, we need nuclear generation.

Interjections.

Mrs Marland: If these members who are prattling on now with their interjections would care to show me the courtesy of not interjecting and maybe waiting until they get an opportunity to speak, they could rebut my information if they have more accurate information. If they wish to debate the information I am giving them, if they wish to defend the position they hold, that there will be no further nuclear generation of electricity in this province because of unknown risks or safety, and put at risk the very safety of the people who already live here who cannot live without electricity, then that is on their shoulders; it is not on mine.

The fact is that if we want to say to the people who live in Ontario: "Don't have any more babies, because we can't deal with the growth of our province. We can't have any increase in our population. We can't invite anyone here to build industry and develop our commerce and retail sectors because we won't have any electricity for them"—when the chairman of Ontario Hydro refers to its demand-supply report, which took five years to develop, and says we cannot be dependent on fossil-fuel generation, are these members willing to be at the end of the telephone when we get our first brownouts and then our blackouts, when people are in crises, in emergency situations because we are out of electricity?

The fact is that this socialist government, which wants to be all things and do all things for all people, will not have any resources to do that. They will not even have the resources that exist today, because industry and commerce will be gone. Industry and commerce will leave this province because there is no question that without a supply of electricity, industry and commerce are not interested in establishing in Ontario.

Any of the members who have a rebuttal to the former chairman of Ontario Hydro, and if their rebuttal is that they can meet the load-demand projections for the next decade with conservation, then they really are living in Alice in Wonderland. I would hope, with respect, that none of them is going to stand up and say, as did their former Minister of Energy, that the load-demand requirement will be met through conservation.

Yes, we should conserve and we should increase our conservation of electricity. We should be doing that in any case. I can tell members one thing that is going to force the people of this province to conserve their electricity is going to be the rates they will be paying after this socialist government piles all its social agenda and social services expenses on to our Hydro rates and uses Ontario Hydro as a cash cow from which to extract indirect taxation.

In fairness, I should read into the record a letter to myself from Hydro Mississauga, because this Bill 118 is very significant. For those members who would like a copy, I would be more than happy to send a copy over to them. The letter is actually dated September 11, 1991, and reads:

"Dear Mrs Marland:

"On behalf of Hydro Mississauga, I am writing to express our opposition to Bill 118, An Act to amend the Power Corporation Act, which is being considered for second reading by the provincial Legislature this fall.

"Bill 118 threatens to destroy Ontario's long-cherished principle of power at cost by making electricity rates a new source of tax revenue for the provincial government.

"Under Bill 118, the provincial government would be able to issue policy directives that bypass the democratic legislative process, are binding on Ontario Hydro, and that could force Hydro to do things that are outside its current mandate—the provision of safe, reliable electricity. In addition, Bill 118 would force Ontario electricity consumers to pay for these policy directives through their rates. This is unacceptable.

"We also object to the sections of Bill 118 that permit Ontario Hydro to subsidize fuel substitution through electricity rates. This is unnecessary, as market forces alone are enough to encourage certain types of fuel switching.

"Hydro Mississauga supports the campaign of the Municipal Electric Association (MEA) to change Bill 118 in the areas of policy directives and fuel substitution. The MEA position paper is enclosed for your information.

"Bill 118 is flawed legislation that sets dangerous precedents and allows a new hidden 'tax grab' by the provincial government.

"We urge you to speak to Energy critic Leo Jordan on this subject and look forward to your support in our fight to change Bill 118.

"Sincerely,

"Alan E. Bradley, PEng

"Chairman."

It is copied to T. Jennings at the MEA and is on the letterhead of Hydro Mississauga, Mavis Road, Mississauga.

I think it is significant to recognize that this letter from Hydro Mississauga is only one of hundreds this socialist government will have received by now from those people around this province who are responsible for retailing electricity. It is one thing for the government to control Ontario Hydro and to have the power to use the Ontario Hydro rates as a tax grab for its own Treasury, for its own budget to spend money on whatever its priorities are, but the fact is the people who end up with the responsibility at the next level of administration in dealing with the people of Ontario who purchase electricity are the local utility administrators.

1710

Alan Bradley, as chairman of Hydro Mississauga, is saying, without a partisan bone in his body—I could not tell members what political party Alan Bradley belongs to; I can tell them he has been chairman of Hydro Mississauga for a very long time. He is also supported by very excellent individuals who sit as commissioners on Hydro Mississauga, including Mayor Hazel McCallion, the mayor of Mississauga, and Mr Ron Starr. These are people who, for reasons of personal commitment to the service of the people of Mississauga, have said they are concerned about Bill 118.

They are not saying some of the partisan political things that I am saying because I am free to do that; they are simply representing their customers. It is the local utilities that retail Ontario Hydro's product. It is the local utilities that then have to be the retailers of electricity and collect the money for the cost of that electricity. They are saying they do not mind collecting the costs of electricity rates, of hydro rates, but they do not want to have to collect additional costs which may be applied by this socialist government.

Immediately following the September election of last year, the chairman of AMPCO, the Association of Major Power Consumers in Ontario—and I do not think it would take much imagination by the members of this House to recognize who the major power consumers of Ontario are—Mr Lounsbury, who is now retired, commented: "Without nuclear energy, this province is finished industrially. Industry won't grow at all."

Mr Lounsbury later stated: "There is a gradual movement of business development out of Ontario. This is currently in the form of carrying out plant expansion outside rather than inside Ontario. The future availability of a reliable source of electricity at cost has become a major concern."

The people who are responsible for the supply of electricity know full well that there is no one in Ontario today who can live without the use of electricity, unless we are willing to step back into the Dark Ages and go back to coal lamps, maybe even horses and buggies. Maybe when we pull into a gas station to fill up our car we will be happy to operate a hand pump. Any kind of example in our daily lives without electricity, I suggest, would be almost impossible.

We are actually in a situation where the supply of energy has become something we absolutely take for granted, and maybe on that score we have been guilty in the past of taking the availability of that supply for granted. We have not conserved enough, we have not realized how important are all the simple things we can do in our homes, in our offices and in our industrial plants, such as turning off unused lights and equipment that uses electricity when it is not in use.

Some of those things we have not done in the past because we have not had enough of an emphasis on conservation, but I think to suggest that through conservation alone we will meet the increased demand for electricity in this province is totally unrealistic.

On the subject of how we have perhaps wasted, all of us, electricity in the past, I would like to say that AMPCO has defended itself against critics who have cited its members for unnecessary waste of electricity.

The member for Peterborough in her address to AMPCO's annual meeting this year stated that Ontario industry must utilize available technology for the reduction of electricity. AMPCO has responded by citing numerous awards its members have received from Ontario Hydro for their efforts in reducing power consumption. So this minister, who thinks it is realistic to meet the demands for electricity in the future by conserving, obviously does not know what has been going on.

Members can be assured that industry that is dependent on electricity is not going to waste it. Industry that relies on electricity at the cost that it is today, before this socialist government get its hand in the cookie jar and puts everything else on the hydro rates, as I said a few minutes ago, probably has as its greatest operating expense its electricity bills. For that reason alone, they would be conserving as much as they possibly could, and therefore reducing their costs.

The Municipal Electric Association is becoming increasingly concerned with the overall deterioration. They are concerned about what is going to happen with all these plants that need replacement and refurbishing. They have just spent almost $3 billion refurbishing the Lakeview generating plant in my own riding of Mississauga South. That is a coal-fired thermal unit. As Mr Franklin says in his comments, "The cost of repair and refurbishing to our existing plants is going to be a very big expense item that has to be faced."

This government is saying: "We don't need nuclear. We're fine with what we've got." I do not think this government realistically has looked at how old our plants around this province are.

Also, I think it is important to comment on the fact that the Premier has taken a very active role in the Energy portfolio, which is very unusual. That has been demonstrated by his appointment of Mr Marc Eliesen without consulting the member for Peterborough, the then Minister of Energy. Do members not think it is rather significant that the Premier decides who the new CEO will be and does not even consult with the Minister of Energy? Of course, she is no longer the Minister of Energy; nevertheless, at the time she was. I think that was very discourteous.

Since the Hydro-government affair has been an ideological battle to this point, the transition of a few key players will not initiate major changes. Interest groups such as the Association of Major Power Consumers in Ontario and the Municipal Electric Association are concerned about the future of Hydro's power-at-cost pricing formula. The throne speech of November clearly outlines the government's intention to supply power at reasonable cost to users; not at cost—at reasonable cost.

There is growing speculation in the business community that Ontario Hydro could become an indirect taxation arm of the government. Given the NDP's celebrated position on corporate taxation, businesses, particularly the AMPCO members, fear they will be targeted for higher user rates.

It is pretty straightforward, it is pretty black and white what is going on here. The fact, as I said earlier, that this government increased the number of board members so it could have control—not only appointing the chairperson, which was its prerogative, but making him CEO and then increasing the number of board members—all this is a tactic, pure and simple, for this socialist government to control the provision of electricity in Ontario.

1720

Hon Mr Hampton: You get no marks for repetition.

Mrs Marland: I am glad the Attorney General is listening. I really appreciate the fact that he, as busy as he is, has time to pay attention to my speech. He is probably in the House doing his House duty, I would suspect, but I appreciate that he is here listening to what I am saying, because as a member of the cabinet, and I would think a heavyweight member of the cabinet as the Attorney General, perhaps he will be able to sit at the cabinet table and convey the concern we have for the future of electricity in this province, how we are going to get it and how much it is going to cost.

I would like to place on the record some concerns of the member for Lanark-Renfrew. He has a number of concerns. One is that he feels that Bill 118 should be withdrawn and that it is only required to enforce the government's anti-nuclear policy and social programs. He also feels we should restrict the proposed power to direct Ontario Hydro only to matters now within the act, with effective consultation through this House on any directive outside the Power Corporation Act. He feels the fuel switching should be left to the marketplace and that the implementation of any conservation program for customers in municipalities be decided, funded and implemented by the utility commission for that municipality. That all makes sense. The member for Lanark-Renfrew makes a great deal of sense and he comes from a very strong base of experience, as a former staff person with the provider of power in Ontario.

Interjection.

Mrs Marland: I could not hear all of the question from the Attorney General, but I am sure in the two-minute responses he will give me the opportunity to hear the question again.

Simply, what we are dealing with here is very evident. We are talking about electricity and whether this province has a future and whether our future will include the supply of sufficient electricity. The cost of power is a major cost of doing business.

I also believe that government should finance alternative fuel options. I hope this government will see its way clear to getting involved in financing research and development of alternative fuel options. I actually had the pleasure this past week of driving an alternative fuel vehicle; I drove a natural gas powered vehicle. I know, Mr Speaker, that you yourself drive an alternative-fuel-powered vehicle; I think it is ethanol. In any case, I appreciate the fact that you are progressive, Mr Speaker, in driving an alternative fuel vehicle.

During this week while I drove a natural gas powered vehicle, courtesy of Consumers' Gas Co, I actually was delighted to find that alternative fuels are very realistic. I did not know whether I was driving on gasoline or natural gas in terms of the performance of the vehicle. This was a dual-fuelled vehicle, so should I run out of natural gas, had a little switch on the dash that I pressed and then the engine reverted to gasoline as a fuel.

It just seems realistic, when we are concerned about the downside of generating electricity, even with the equipment we have today in Ontario—I am talking about the environmental downside in terms of emission from fossil-fuel-fired plants—that we should all be looking towards and willing to invest in alternative fuel options. But in the meantime, if there is no option—and I would suggest that for the major industry in this province there is no option other than electricity—then we had better be sure that electricity supply is there. It must be there for industry and commerce. It would not be very realistic, I would suggest to the Attorney General, to have all our high-rise office buildings in downtown Toronto with candles in their windows.

What we have to talk about is providing electricity at cost. We have to find if there is a way it would become less expensive rather than more expensive. We have to try to find ways to make it more plentiful. We have to realize that energy use at the consumer level, for example, at the household level, should be conserved but has to be guaranteed.

The fact is that in Ontario today we are very secure. We turn on our furnaces, and whether they are oil furnaces, gas furnaces or our houses are electrically heated, there is electricity used in our homes. Our homes are warm in the winter, and for some people who have the luxury of air-conditioning they are cool in the summer. What we have to learn to do is to have the temperature lower in the winter and obviously higher in the summer. But that is a very small portion of the amount of electricity that is used in this province. The major use of electricity is in industry. On that note, I will say to this socialist government that if it thinks it can put on a direct taxation for an indirect purpose such as funding its own social agenda and get away with it, it is majorly wrong. It is majorly mistaken.

The people of this province will not accept a direct taxation by increasing their Hydro rates. They want and expect and have a right to energy at cost because energy is not a luxury. I say to this government that if the Minister of Energy's statement tomorrow says to this House that it is willing to continue the operation of Ontario Hydro as an arm's-length government agency without control from the government of the day, whatever that government is, whether it is this socialist government for the next three years and our Progressive Conservative government following that, I would still be standing in this House saying that government should not control Ontario Hydro.

It is very important that energy at cost is protected. It is very important that the future of energy supply in this province is guaranteed. If this government thinks it is possible to meet low-demand projections of Ontario Hydro without adding new generation sources, then I hope that the first time somebody dies in this province because there is not enough electricity, that person realizes a decision was made by this government that we can only generate with generation from existing plants. If they are happy to pollute the atmosphere by building more coal-fired thermal units and have the CO₂ emissions going into the atmosphere, that will be on their heads too.

1730

They are the party we have listened to for years with their rhetorical comments about being the preservers of the environment, and now we are talking about being conservers of energy. It will all come back to roost. We will find out what they really stand for, what they really mean and if they are capable of setting priorities in the format in which they should be set.

In closing, I wish to quote from an address to the annual meeting of the Association of Major Power Consumers of Ontario in April 1991. Falconbridge Ltd president and CEO, Frank Pickard, stated:

"It simply is no longer a question of whether or not major generating capacity will be required in this province. The only question left is when. Quite frankly, the ongoing uncertainty over energy cost and supply is the biggest issue industry is facing in this province; bigger than any other, bar none. The simple truth is that if we cannot be sure of the supply, we cannot with any confidence plan a future in Ontario."

The president of this major corporation has made a statement that could have been made by any corporate head of any industry or large corporation in Ontario today. The simple truth is that if we cannot be sure of the supply, we cannot with any confidence plan a future in Ontario. This is a government, this socialist government of today, that claims to be interested in the people. This is the government that wants to protect workers and jobs.

Hon Mr Hampton: Gosh, you're repetitive, Margaret.

Mrs Marland: I say to the Attorney General, who finds my comments humorous, that if he wants to protect jobs and his workers, as a socialist government in Ontario, I suggest that he start by protecting the industry that employs them. That industry will not be here if it does not have electricity. They cannot be here if they do not have electricity.

I say also, in fairness to those same workers whose jobs the government wishes to protect—that is what we hear from the government all the time. They are supposed to be the only people who worry about people, nobody else. No other government, no other party, has ever worried about people, to hear their comments and their platform. If that part is even true, how could the government possibly want to burden these same people with additional costs of living in Ontario today by adding to the cost of the operation of their businesses and their homes by increasing the cost of electricity?

I would suggest that if this government does not protect the mandate of Ontario Hydro today, which is energy at cost, then it becomes a betrayal of the people of this province who were guaranteed in the Power Corporation

Act that they would have a supply of energy at cost. But probably what we will find is that this government does not care. It already has almost a $10-billion deficit. It needs more money.

On a personal basis, I think my friend the Treasurer is great, but as a Treasurer with a socialist government, I feel sorry for him. He is looking in one pocket, he is looking in another and he has a $10-billion deficit.

No wonder somebody came up with this idea, "We could control Ontario Hydro and then we could control Ontario Hydro rates." If the government does not care about the people it is going to be putting out of their homes and their businesses, if it does not care about the industries that are going to leave this province because they can no longer afford electricity—more important, in another decade there will not even be the electricity for them because the government has not planned for the future supply—if the government does not care about the future of this province, then it should go ahead and pass Bill 118. In so doing, the legacy the members pass on to their children and grandchildren will be a legacy of which I would dread to be a part.

All I can say to the government is that there are some things that should be protected. I think it is the right of the public of this province to live in a clean air atmosphere and to have as part of that atmosphere a reduced amount of generation of electricity that does not pollute by burning coal in our old, antiquated coal-fired thermal units. I say to the government members that if they do not care about those things, they should not go around saying they are the great environmentalists that they are.

If government members care about the fact that people already are taxed to death in this province, that people are hanging on by their fingernails to finance the cost of living in their homes and apartments and other accommodations, that they cannot bear another increase in that cost or any of those costs over which they have no control, then I simply say to them that they should not ask to control Ontario Hydro so they can use this loophole of Lieutenant Governor in Council orders from the Minister of Energy. They should not put the Minister of Energy in charge of Ontario Hydro. Let it stay as an arm's-length corporation and let the people of this province continue, with difficulty—Hydro rates have had to go up because the cost of operating for Ontario Hydro has had to go up. The government should not add to that burden, which ultimately is passed on to the consumers whether they be business or residential consumers, because in so doing, in the long run, it is going to eliminate their jobs and their ability to buy electricity at any cost.

I appreciate the opportunity of being able to speak to Bill 118. I think rather than be repetitive, as the Attorney General has suggested I might become, I would rather just close by saying to each member of this socialist government in the House today and those members who are not here that the responsibility is theirs. It is not mine, because as an opposition member I am part of a group that does not have the power in this House. The members opposite have the power. They have the numbers in their majority government to realize that Bill 118 should be withdrawn. It is not a piece of legislation any one of them will be proud of in the long run.

1740

Although the public of Ontario and the constituents of the members' ridings today do not know what Bill 118 is—they do not have a clue unless they are electrical engineers and perhaps have heard from their professional associations what Bill 118 is about—the members opposite should not think the public will not know what it is about when the next election is called.

Their constituents are going to come to them and say: "What was wrong with what Ontario Hydro was doing when it was providing energy at cost? Why is industry no longer looking at Ontario to invest, to be established and to create jobs?" Because the first thing industry looks at when it is going to locate anywhere in any province, in this country or in the world is whether there is going to be a supply of energy for its operation.

We have the former chairman of Ontario Hydro, Mr Franklin, saying on the supply of energy, of alternative generation: "So we not only have to meet the increasing growth; we have to replace what we have. I think the debate is not whether you need new generation but when you will need it and how long you can postpone that date."

I say to each one of the members opposite that if they are willing to postpone that date, then they had better be willing to take the full wrath of the people of this province when they are thrown into the brownouts and blackouts that will be the result of their decision on Bill 118.

Also, if the members opposite are not willing to help Ontario Hydro make the investment it needs to replace the equipment that is already outdated and past repair in this province, then they are simply saying: "Don't tell us what is going on. We don't really care. We're antinuclear. We want some way of raising money and we realize that if we control Ontario Hydro by having our own person as chairman and chief executive officer"—the two jobs in one person—"nobody answering to anybody, everybody being their own boss, we will control Ontario Hydro by having our own people appointed to the board. The only way we can do that right away is not by waiting for the board members' terms to expire. We'll increase the number of board members."

That is what this government is doing to Bill 118. It is finding a way to control Ontario Hydro. I say to the members opposite it is a dangerous precedent they will come to regret. If each member opposite stands in this House and votes on Bill 118 in the future, I hope he or she will realize what a significant implication Bill 118 is.

I hope the members opposite will not just vote blindly because it is their government's legislation. I sincerely hope they will recognize the significance of the decision they will be making by supporting this bill, because it is historic in its significance.

I say to the member for Cochrane South, who does not even know how many years the Progressive Conservatives were the government in this province—I do not know whether he has children; he is certainly too young to have grandchildren—the significance of this decision cannot be underestimated. If he is willing to support this bill, then what is next? What will the next arm's-length organization or corporation of this government? What will be the next one they will decide to control because they seen it as a means of inserting their particular socialist philosophy?

That is not what these corporations were about. If that were the case when we were the government for all those 42 years, we would have chosen to control these government agencies, boards and commissions. We would have been trying to tell Ontario Hydro what to do, but we did not. We chose to establish them under the independent act. As the Power Corporation Act was designed by our government, it was very purposeful in its design so that government would not have the kind of control and interference into an area that was not in the best interests of the province.

Perhaps in its response to my speech today this government will be able to tell me what is next. What is the next government arm's-length corporation they plan to take over so they can get some form of additional taxation?

The Acting Speaker (Mr Villeneuve): I wish to thank the honourable member for Mississauga South for her participation. Questions and/or comments on the member's participation? The honourable member for Oxford.

Mr Sutherland: There is certainly a lot to respond to since the member for Mississauga South spent a long time talking about things, but the thing that kept hitting me was that she kept talking about electricity at cost, and this is certainly an issue that comes up in this discussion on a regular basis.

I would like the member to define what she means by electricity at cost because, quite clearly, as we have been going along we have not been paying electricity at cost while we were supposed to be. It has been a great myth and I think the debt load of Ontario Hydro shows that.

At the same time and in typical Conservative fashion, almost speaking out of both sides of her mouth in terms of saying we have to worry about supply, the member does not say how we are going to pay for future supply and creating future supply. She does not want hydro rates to go up, but she does not have any answers on how we are going to create future supplies of energy. Quite frankly, if we are going to be able to do that we have to start paying the real, true cost.

I do not like it. I know many constituents in my riding do not like it, particularly those on fixed incomes, but the reality is that for the last 10 or 15 years we have not been paying the true cost. We have not been having electricity at cost as the member is saying. I think that issue needs to be brought out and all members, if they are going to be quite frank with their constituents and the people of Ontario, need to deal with that issue in our discussions on the future of Ontario Hydro.

I am sure other members will deal with some of the other inconsistencies that seemed to come through in the member's presentation.

Mrs Sullivan: I was quite taken with the remarks of the member for Mississauga South. I sat with the member on the select committee on energy during the time we were dealing with Ontario Hydro's demand-supply plan. Her arguments about power at cost are telling ones. I suggest to the member for Oxford, who has just commented on the concept of power at cost, looking at the demand-supply plan and the hearings surrounding the issues that were before the committee at that time. The concept is one of long and historical standing. Clearly he did not understand the points the member for Mississauga South was trying to make.

1750

Mr Turnbull: I would like to congratulate the member for Mississauga South on her presentation. I would like to point out that some of the ways Hydro could save money would be, for example, the pension fund, which is fully funded. If they never paid another penny into the pension fund for the next 10 years, it is still fully funded, and yet this year they are being forced to put $250 million into that fund. Why, when it is fully funded? As well, the new chairman of Hydro, who as a deputy minister was being paid about $135,000 a year, is now being paid $400,000 a year. If these are not reasonable ways of saving money, I do not know what is.

Is the suggestion that he would not do the job of chairman of Hydro for the same sort of money as for a deputy minister? I would suggest that is patent rubbish. But unfortunately this is a party, the NDP, that wants to pay off its friends. All the hypocrisy that was suggested over the years when they were in opposition, of payoffs by other parties, and they do the same thing themselves. Would they please have some consistency? Let's go back to the basic reason for Hydro, and that is to provide power at cost.

Mr Jordan: I too would like to congratulate my colleague on her excellent presentation this afternoon and her interest in the energy supply to Ontario, and on the fact that she took the time to go and spend a full day at a nuclear plant in order to relieve herself of the fears that were so easily instilled in people a few years ago relative to nuclear energy.

I think that if my colleagues on the government side visited our nuclear plants and understood the Candu system, they would not require this bill at all, because they would have no fear whatsoever of nuclear energy. They would have no fear of the storage of our spent fuel bundles. With that knowledge, we could restore to the province an electrical industry equal to the industry we have enjoyed over the life of Ontario Hydro until the present time.

I feel strongly that unless this bill is completely withdrawn—the government should put its confidence in its new chairman; the government should put its confidence in the people it placed over there. They have a new chairman, a chief executive officer. They have their deputy minister or assistant deputy minister sitting with the board of directors. They have the means of excellent communication and exchange, without giving themselves the right to destroy the Power Corporation Act through directives bypassing the House over to the board without the people of Ontario being aware of it until such time as they see it on their Hydro bills.

Mrs Marland: I was disappointed that more members of the government did not use an opportunity to place on the record the comments they had been throwing out during their interjections to my speech this afternoon. It proves they really do not want to be on the record. They are happy to sit there and throw out the snide comments, but they are not willing to stand on their feet when they have the opportunity and be on the record.

The member for Oxford, who suggested I might be speaking out of both sides of my mouth, should look in the mirror as a member of this socialist government that campaigned on government-run automobile insurance in the last election one year ago. Suddenly, no deal. There are so many areas where this government has to be accountable to the public of this province.

The good news for the public of this province is that all those promises that they campaigned on, including the protection of the environment, have not been kept. The fact is that they think they can fool the people of this province, but they cannot. They can run a campaign and make promises and then not fulfil them, but when it comes around to the scorekeeping and the accounting at the next election, they will find that people do not forget. Whether they backtrack on their promises for the environment—promises and questions that were raised by their Minister of the Environment when she was in opposition, while she now has let the people of Peel and York and Durham regions down—those people will not forget, as the people of this province will not forget when they know what the implications of Bill 118 mean to them in real costs of electricity supply.

Mr Drainville: It is again an honour to speak to this House with some revised remarks that I would like to make on Bill 118. I think it would be appropriate just to say that I am very glad to speak to this bill because it is a very important piece of legislation that is being put forward by the government.

I must say that as I was sitting down listening to the honourable member for Mississauga South, I was reminded of the words in Shakespeare's Macbeth that "Fair is foul, and foul is fair." We constantly hear this invective and this venting of spleen from the opposition members, particularly the members of the third party, indicating I might say a lack of concern and commitment on the part of the government in putting forth particular measures.

I want to say that in this measure of Bill 118, the government has been very clear about the mandate it has and very clear about the direction it believes the province should be going in. There may be all sorts of disagreements on the part of the opposition members, and it is certainly their right to disagree, but to say somehow that the government is not considering the issue or is not fair to this issue or has not done its homework is patently false and unacceptable.

On top of that, inaccuracies have been trotted forth in this exposé of interest we have heard today in the House, particularly when the member for Mississauga South indicated, or at least implied, some nefarious action on the part of the government in trying to have the chairman of the board become the chief executive officer. I find this incredible, really. I think the word is "incredible." Under the Tories, the very chairperson of the Hydro board was the chief executive officer. That was under the Tory government.

More to the point, I might add that in terms of all the blue-chip companies in Canada, there are very many companies in which the chairperson of the board is the chief executive officer. This is not a strange thing. Coming from the particular perspective of the honourable member for Mississauga South—that is a Tory perspective and we know, let's say, their penchant for being in relationship with those in the business community—I would have thought she would know that the chief executive officers are often also the chairpersons of the board.

That being said, I would also like to speak about the member for Brampton North. The member for Brampton North indicated that the hydro rates we are paying in Ontario happen to be exorbitant and that we cannot continue to increase the amount of money people are paying for hydro. I want to say that it is the view of this government, and it has been clearly stated by the ministers, that the amount of money we are paying is indeed great and that we have to get hold of the fiscal dynamics of the present situation. But we cannot see that in a vacuum. The reality is that we have seen over many years that Ontario Hydro has had its own agenda in terms of spending, and that the overruns have been so great that they have not been able to contain them in such a way as to help us fend off this day of reckoning which is swiftly coming.

I see you motioning me, Mr Speaker, and I look forward to speaking again to this House.

The Acting Speaker: Yes, the honourable member will have an opportunity to resume this debate.

The House adjourned at 1800.

COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

STANDING COMMITTEES/COMITÉS PERMANENTS

Administration of justice/Administration de la justice

Chair/Président: Mike Cooper

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Mark Morrow

Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Jenny Carter, Robert Chiarelli, Derek Fletcher, Charles Harnick, Irene Mathysen, Gordon Mills, Jean Poirier, Gregory S. Sorbara, David Winninger

Clerk/Greffière: Lisa Freedman

Estimates/Budgets des dépenses

Chair/Président: Cameron Jackson

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Margaret Marland

Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Hans Daigeler, Mike Farnan, Paul R. Johnson, Wayne Lessard, Dalton McGuinty, Lyn McLeod, Lawrence O'Connor, Anthony Perruzza, Gary Wilson

Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Finance and economic affairs/

Finance et affaires économiques

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Kimble Sutherland

Members/Membres: David Christopherson, Norman Jamison, Monte Kwinter, Gerry Phillips, Norman W. Sterling, Chris Stockwell, Barbara Sullivan, Brad Ward, Margery Ward, Jim Wiseman

Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

General government/Affaires gouvernementales

Chair/Président: Remo Mancini

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Michael A. Brown

Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Gilles Bisson, Dennis Drainville, Margaret H. Harrington, George Mammoliti, Rosario Marchese, Bill Murdoch, Yvonne O'Neill, Ian G. Scott, David Turnbull

Clerk/Greffière: Deborah Deller

Government agencies/Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair/Président: Robert W. Runciman

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Allan K. McLean

Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Jenny Carter, Robert Frankford, Bernard Grandmaître, Pat Hayes, Rosario Marchese, Dalton McGuinty, Chris Stockwell, Daniel Waters, Jim Wiseman

Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Legislative Assembly/Assemblée législative

Chair/Président: Noel Duignan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Ellen MacKinnon

Members/Membres: Mike Cooper, Robert Frankford, Norman Jamison, Margaret Marland, Irene Mathysen, Carman McClelland, Gilles E. Morin, Hugh P. O'Neil, Stephen Owens, Noble Villeneuve

Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Ombudsman/Ombudsman

Chair/Président: Mark Morrow

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Drummond White

Members/Membres: Alvin Curling, Joan M. Fawcett, Christel Haeck, D. James Henderson, Peter Kormos, George Mammoliti, Bill Murdoch, Margery Ward, Paul Wessinger, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer

Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Public accounts/Comptes publics

Chair/Président: Robert V. Callahan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Dianne Poole

Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Sean G. Conway, W. Donald Cousens, Christel Haeck, Pat Hayes, Paul R. Johnson, Ellen MacKinnon, Lawrence O'Connor, David Tilson, Drummond White

Clerk/Greffière: Tannis Manikel

Regulations and private bills/

Règlements et projets de loi privés

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Lawrence O'Connor

Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Mike Farnan, Derek Fletcher, Leo Jordan, Ellen MacKinnon, Frank Miclash, Tony Ruprecht, John Sola, Kimble Sutherland, Drummond White, Jim Wilson

Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

Resources development/Développement des ressources

Chair/Président: Peter Kormos

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Daniel Waters

Members/Membres: Ted Arnott, John C. Cleary, George Dadamo, Bob Huget, Leo Jordan, Paul Klopp, Sharon Murdock, Steven Offer, David Ramsay, Len Wood

Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

Social development/Affaires sociales

Chair/Présidente: Elinor Caplan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Joseph Cordiano

Members/Membres: Charles Beer, Christel Haeck, Randy R. Hope, Gary Malkowski, Tony Martin, Lyn McLeod, Stephen Owens, Paul Wessinger, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer

Clerk/Greffière: Lynn Mellor

SELECT COMMITTEE/COMITÉ SPÉCIAL

Ontario in Confederation/

Rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération

Chair/Président: Dennis Drainville

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Gilles Bisson

Members/Membres: Jenny Carter, Alvin Curling, Ernie Eves, Charles Harnick, Margaret H. Harrington, Gary Malkowski, Irene Mathysen, Steven Offer, Yvonne O'Neill, David Winninger

Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

SPECIAL COMMITTEE/COMITÉ EXTRAORDINAIRE

Parliamentary precinct/Enceinte parlementaire

Co-Chair/Coprésident: David Warner

Co-Chair/Coprésident: Noel Duignan

Members/Membres: Dianne Cunningham, Remo Mancini, Kimble Sutherland

Clerk/Greffier: Smirle Forsyth

CONTENTS

Tuesday 1 October 1991

Members' statements

Village of Eganville	2621
Mr Conway
Red Hill Creek Expressway	2621
Mr Turnbull
United Way campaign	2621
Mr Martin
Environmental protection	2621
Mrs Sullivan
Garbage disposal	2622
Mr Jordan
Korean Heritage Day	2622
Ms M. Ward
OPP cutbacks	2622
Mr Bradley
Technological training	2622
Mrs Cunningham
Peterborough economy	2623
Ms Carter

Statements by the ministry

Environmental bill of rights	2623
Mrs Grier
Assistance to farmers	2623
Mr Laughren

Responses

Environmental bill of rights	2624
Mr McClelland
Assistance to farmers	2625
Mr Cleary
Mr Villeneuve
Environmental bill of rights	2625
Mr Cousens
Ministerial statements	2625
Mr Bradley
Visitor	2626
The Speaker
Attendance of Premier	2626
Mr Bradley
Mr Cooke
Mr Elston

Oral questions

Budget	2626
Mr Elston
Mr Laughren

Nursing homes	2627
Mr Elston
Ms Lankin
Social assistance	2628
Mr Jackson
Ms Akande
Labour legislation	2629
Mrs Witmer
Mr Mackenzie
Lakefill	2630
Mrs Caplan
Mrs Grier
Landfill sites	2630
Mr Stockwell
Mrs Grier
Gas leak in Jarvis	2631
Mr Jamison
Mr Wildman
Ontario Hydro rates	2631
Mr McGuinty
Mr Ferguson
Remarks by appointee to police services board	2632
Mr Runciman
Mr Pilkey
Rent regulation	2632
Mrs Mathysen
Ms Gigantes
Sabrina Panetta	2633
Mr McClelland
Ms Akande
TVOntario	2633
Mrs Marland
Mrs Haslam
Road construction	2634
Mr Hansen
Mr Pouliot
Tuition fees	2634
Mr Daigeler
Mr Allen
Expo 98	2635
Mr Ruprecht
Mr North

Petitions

Nursing homes	2635
Mr Daigeler
Mrs Y. O'Neill
Oath of allegiance	2635
Mr J. Wilson
Nursing homes	2636
Mr Grandmaitre
Oath of allegiance	2636
Mrs Sullivan

Second readings

Lists of members

Power Corporation Amendment Act, 1991, Bill 118	2636
Mr Drainville	2636
Mr McClelland	2642
Mr McGuinty	2644
Mr Wildman	2644
Mrs Marland	2644
Mr Sutherland	2652
Mrs Sullivan	2652
Mr Turnbull	2653
Mr Jordan	2653
Mr Drainville	2653
Adjourned	2654

Members and their responsibilities
Committees of the Legislative Assembly

TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Le mardi 1 octobre 1991

Deuxième lecture

Listes des députés

Loi de 1991 modifiant la Loi sur la Société de l'électricité, projet de loi 118
Débat ajourné	2654

Les députés et leurs responsabilités
Comités de l'Assemblée législative

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor/Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon/L'hon Lincoln M. Alexander, PC, QC/CP, CR

Speaker/Président: Hon/L'hon David Warner

Clerk/Greffier: Claude L. DesRosiers

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Committees/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des comités: Smirle Forsyth

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Journals/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des journaux: Alex D. McFedries

Sergeant at Arms/Sergent d'armes: Thomas Stelling

Abel, Donald (Wentworth North/-Nord PC) government whip/Whip du gouvernement

Akande, Hon/L'hon Zanana (St Andrew-St Patrick ND) Minister of Community and Social Services/Ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires

Allen, Hon/L'hon Richard (Hamilton West/-Ouest ND) Minister of Colleges and Universities, Minister of Skills Development/Ministre des Collèges et Universités, ministre de la Formation professionnelle

Arnott, Ted (Wellington PC)

Beer, Charles (York North/-Nord L)

Bisson, Gilles (Cochrane South/-Sud ND) PA to Minister of Northern Development and Mines, PA to minister responsible for francophone affairs, Vice-Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/Ap du ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines, ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones, vice-président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération

Boyd, Hon/L'hon Marion (London Centre/-Centre ND) Minister of Education, minister responsible for women's issues/Ministre de l'Éducation, ministre déléguée à la Condition féminine

Bradley, James J. (St Catharines L) opposition House leader/Chef parlementaire de l'opposition

Brown, Michael A. (Algoma-Manitoulin L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on general government/ Vice-Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales

Buchanan, Hon/L'hon Elmer (Hastings-Peterborough ND) Minister of Agriculture and Food/Ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation

Callahan, Robert V. (Brampton South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Président du Comité permanent des comptes publics

Caplan, Elinor (Oriole L) Chair, standing committee on social development/Présidente du Comité permanent des affaires sociales

Carr, Gary (Oakville South/-Sud PC)

Carter, Jenny (Peterborough ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

Charlton, Hon/L'hon Brian (Hamilton Mountain ND) Minister of Financial Institutions/Ministre des Institutions financières

Chiarelli, Robert (Ottawa West/-Ouest L)

Christopherson, David (Hamilton Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/Ap du Trésorier de l'Ontario et du ministre de l'Économie

Churley, Hon/L'hon Marilyn (Riverdale ND) Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ministre de la Consommation et du Commerce

Cleary, John C. (Cornwall L)

Conway, Sean G. (Renfrew North/-Nord L)

Cooke, Hon/L'hon David (Windsor-Riverside ND) Minister of Municipal Affairs, government House leader/Ministre des Affaires municipales, chef parlementaire du gouvernement

Cooper, Mike (Kitchener-Wilmot ND) Chair, standing committee on administration of justice; deputy government whip/Président du Comité permanent de l'administration de la justice, whip adjoint du gouvernement

Coppen, Hon/L'hon Shirley (Niagara South/-Sud ND) Minister without Portfolio, chief government whip/Ministre sans portefeuille, whip en chef du gouvernement

Cordiano, Joseph (Lawrence L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on social development/Vice-Président du Comité permanent des affaires sociales

Cousens, W. Donald (Markham PC)

Cunningham, Dianne (London North/-Nord PC) Progressive Conservative chief whip/Whip en chef du Parti progressiste-conservateur

Curling, Alvin (Scarborough North/-Nord L) opposition deputy whip/whip adjoint de l'opposition

Dadamo, George (Windsor-Sandwich ND) PA to Minister of Transportation/Ap du ministre des Transports

Daigeler, Hans (Nepean L)

Drainville, Dennis (Victoria-Haliburton ND) PA to Minister of Municipal Affairs; Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/Ap du ministre des Affaires municipales, président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération

Duignan, Noel (Halton North/-Nord ND) Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative, coprésident du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire

Elston, Murray J. (Bruce L) Leader of the Official Opposition/Chef de l'opposition officielle

Eves, Ernie (Parry Sound PC) Progressive Conservative House leader/Chef parlementaire du Parti progressiste-conservateur

Farnan, Mike (Cambridge ND) First Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Premier vice-président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Fawcett, Joan M. (Northumberland L)

Ferguson, Hon/L'hon Will (Kitchener ND) Minister of Energy/Ministre de l'Énergie

Fletcher, Derek (Guelph ND) PA to Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ap du ministre de la Consommation et du Commerce

Frankford, Robert (Scarborough East/-Est ND)

Gigantes, Hon/L'hon Evelyn (Ottawa Centre/-Centre ND)
Minister of Housing/Ministre du Logement
Grandmaître, Bernard C. (Ottawa East/-Est L)

Grier, Hon/L'hon Ruth A. (Etobicoke-Lakeshore ND)
Minister of the Environment, minister responsible for the greater Toronto area/Ministre de l'Environnement, ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto

Haeck, Christel (St. Catharines-Brock ND)

Hampton, Hon/L'hon Howard (Rainy River ND) Attorney General/Procureur général

Hansen, Ron (Lincoln ND) Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs; Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/Président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques, président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi privés

Harnick, Charles (Willowdale PC)

Harrington, Margaret H. (Niagara Falls ND) PA to Minister of Housing/Ap du ministre du Logement

Harris, Michael (Nipissing PC) leader of the Progressive Conservative Party/Chef du Parti progressiste-conservateur

Haslam, Hon/L'hon Karen (Perth ND) Minister of Culture and Communications/Ministre de la Culture et des Communications

Hayes, Pat (Essex-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (agriculture)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (agriculture)

Henderson, D. James (Etobicoke-Humber L)

Hope, Randy R. (Chatham-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Community and Social Services/Ap du ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires

Huget, Bob (Sarnia ND) PA to Minister of Energy/Ap du ministre de l'Énergie

Jackson, Cameron (Burlington South/-Sud PC) Chair, standing committee on estimates/Président du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses

Jamison, Norm (Norfolk ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology, responsible for small business/Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie, délégué aux Affaires des petites entreprises

Johnson, Paul R. (Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings/Prince-Edward-Lennox-Hastings-Sud ND)
PA to Minister of Revenue/Ap du ministre du Revenu

Jordan, W. Leo (Lanark-Renfrew PC)

Klopp, Paul (Huron ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (food)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (alimentation)

Kormos, Peter (Welland-Thorold ND) Chair, standing committee on resources development/Président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources

Kwinter, Monte (Wilson Heights L)

Lankin, Hon/L'hon Frances (Beaches-Woodbine ND)
Minister of Health, minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ministre de la Santé, ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale

Laughren, Hon/L'hon Floyd (Nickel Belt ND) Deputy Premier, Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/Vice-premier ministre, Trésorier de l'Ontario et ministre de l'Économie

Lessard, Wayne (Windsor-Walkerville ND) PA to Minister of Colleges and Universities/Ap du ministre des Collèges et Universités

Mackenzie, Hon/L'hon Bob (Hamilton East/-Est ND)
Minister of Labour/Ministre du Travail

MacKinnon, Ellen (Lambton ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative

Mahoney, Steven W. (Mississauga West/-Ouest L) chief opposition whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition

Malkowski, Gary (York East/-Est ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

Mammoliti, George (Yorkview ND) PA to minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ap de la ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale

Mancini, Remo (Essex South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on general government/Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales

Marchese, Rosario (Fort York ND) PA to the Premier, PA to Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Ap du premier ministre, ap du ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales

Marland, Margaret (Mississauga South/-Sud PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on estimates/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses

Martel, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Sudbury East/-Est ND) Minister of Northern Development and Mines/Ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines

Martin, Tony (Sault Ste. Marie/Sault-Sainte-Marie ND) PA to Minister of Education/Ap de la ministre de l'Éducation

Mathyssen, Irene (Middlesex ND) PA to Minister of the Environment, government whip/Ap de la ministre de l'Environnement, whip du gouvernement

McClelland, Carman (Brampton North/-Nord L)

McGuinty, Dalton J.P. (Ottawa South/-Sud L)

McLean, Allan K. (Simcoe East/-Est PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Vice-Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux

McLeod, Lyn (Fort William L)

Miclash, Frank (Kenora L) opposition chief whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition

Mills, Gord (Durham East/-Est ND) PA to Solicitor General/Ap du Solliciteur général

Morin, Gilles E. (Carleton East/-Est L) Deputy Speaker and Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Vice-Président et Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Morrow, Mark (Wentworth East/-Est ND) Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman; Vice-Chair, standing committee on administration of justice/Président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman, vice-président du Comité permanent de l'administration de la justice

Murdoch, Bill (Grey PC)

Murdock, Sharon (Sudbury ND) PA to Minister of Labour/Ap du ministre du Travail

North, Hon/L'hon Peter (Elgin ND) Minister of Tourism and Recreation/Ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs

O'Connor, Lawrence (Durham-York ND) PA to minister responsible for the greater Toronto area; Vice-Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/ Ap de la ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto, vice-président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi privés

Offer, Steven (Mississauga North/-Nord L)

O'Neil, Hugh P. (Quinte L)

O'Neill, Yvonne (Ottawa-Rideau L) opposition deputy whip/ Whip adjointe de l'opposition

Owens, Stephen (Scarborough Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Financial Institutions, government whip/ Ap du ministre des Institutions financières, whip du gouvernement

Perruzza, Anthony (Downsview ND) PA to Minister for Skills Development/ Ap du ministre de la Formation professionnelle

Philip, Hon/L'hon Ed (Etobicoke-Rexdale ND) Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology/Ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie

Phillips, Gerry (Scarborough-Agincourt L)

Pilkey, Hon/L'hon Allan (Oshawa ND) Solicitor General, Minister of Correctional Services/Solliciteur général, ministre des Services correctionnels

Poirier, Jean (Prescott and Russell/Prescott et Russell L)

Poole, Dianne (Eglinton L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Vice-Présidente du comité permanent des comptes publics

Pouliot, Hon/L'hon Gilles (Lake Nipigon/Lac-Nipigon ND) Minister of Transportation, minister responsible for francophone affairs/Ministre du Transport, ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones

Rae, Hon/L'hon Bob (York South/-Sud ND) Premier, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Premier ministre, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales

Ramsay, David (Timiskaming L)

Rizzo, Tony (Oakwood IND)

Runciman, Robert W. (Leeds-Grenville PC) Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux

Ruprecht, Tony (Parkdale L)

Scott, Ian G. (St. George-St. David L)

Silipo, Hon/L'hon Tony (Dovercourt ND) Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet/Président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement

Sola, John (Mississauga East/-Est L)

Sorbara, Gregory S. (York Centre/-Centre L)

Sterling, Norman W. (Carleton PC)

Stockwell, Chris (Etobicoke West/-Ouest PC)

Sullivan, Barbara (Halton Centre/-Centre L)

Sutherland, Kimble (Oxford ND) PA to Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet; Vice-Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs/ Ap du président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement, vice-président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques

Swarbrick, Anne (Scarborough West /-Ouest ND)

Tilson, David (Dufferin-Peel PC)

Turnbull, David (York Mills PC)

Villeneuve, Noble (S-D-G & East Grenville/S.-D.-G. & Grenville-Est PC) Second Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Deuxième vice-président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Ward, Brad (Brantford ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology with responsibility for trade and technology/ Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie et délégué au Commerce et à la Technologie

Ward, Margery (Don Mills ND) PA to Minister of Government Services/ Ap du ministre des Services gouvernementaux

Wark-Martyn, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Port Arthur ND) Minister of Revenue/Ministre du Revenu

Warner, Hon/L'hon David (Scarborough-Ellesmere ND) Speaker; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président, coprésident du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire

Waters, Daniel (Muskoka-Georgian Bay/Muskoka-Baie-Georgienne ND) PA to Minister of Tourism and Recreation; Vice-Chair, standing committee on resources development/ Ap du ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs, vice-président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources

Wessinger, Paul (Simcoe Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Health/ Ap de la ministre de la Santé

White, Drummond (Durham Centre/-Centre ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman/ Vice-président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman

Wildman, Hon/L'hon Bud (Algoma ND) Minister of Natural Resources, minister responsible for native affairs/Ministre des Ressources naturelles, ministre délégué aux Affaires autochtones

Wilson, Hon/L'hon Fred (Frontenac-Addington ND) Minister of Government Services/Ministre des Services gouvernementaux

Wilson, Gary (Kingston and The Islands/Kingston et Les Îles ND) PA to Minister of Culture and Communications/ Ap de la ministre de la Culture et des Communications

Wilson, Jim (Simcoe West/-Ouest PC)

Winner, David (London South/-Sud ND) PA to Attorney General, PA to minister responsible for native affairs/ Ap du Procureur général, ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires autochtones

Wiseman, Jim (Durham West/Durham-Ouest ND) PA to Minister of Correctional Services/ Ap du ministre des Services correctionnels

Witmer, Elizabeth (Waterloo North/-Nord PC)

Wood, Len (Cochrane North/-Nord ND) PA to Minister of Natural Resources/ Ap du ministre des Ressources naturelles

Ziemba, Hon/L'hon Elaine (High Park-Swansea ND) Minister of Citizenship, minister responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

62 1991

62 1991

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly of Ontario

First Session, 35th Parliament

Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

Première session, 35^e législature

Official Report of Debates
(Hansard)

Wednesday 2 October 1991

Journal
des débats
(Hansard)

Le mercredi 2 octobre 1991

Speaker
Honourable David Warner

Clerk
Claude L. DesRosiers

Président
L'honorable David Warner

Greffier
Claude L. DesRosiers

Table of Contents

Table of Contents for proceedings reported in this issue appears at the back, together with an alphabetical list of members of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at (416) 325-7400.

Numbering of Hansard

Effective with the opening of the Second Session of the 35th Parliament, Hansard issues and pages will once again be numbered on a sessional basis. Hansard numbering therefore will become consistent with Orders and Notices and Votes and Proceedings, and with other parliamentary publications throughout Canada.

For the last two years Hansard has been numbered according to the calendar year. Under this system, the numbering of issues and pages was restarted with the first issue in the calendar year, regardless of session or Parliament.

Under the new system, the sequence of numbering started in January 1991 will end with the final House and committee sittings of the present First Session. A new sequence will begin on the opening day of the Second Session, and each succeeding session, which will be issue 1 and begin with page 1. Committee reports likewise will be numbered from the first sitting of each committee in a parliamentary session.

Subscriptions

Subscription information may be obtained from: Sessional Subscription Service, Publications Ontario, Ministry of Government Services, 5th Floor, 880 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 1N8. Phone (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 or toll-free 1 (800) 668-9938.

Table des matières

La table des matières des séances rapportées dans ce numéro se trouve à l'arrière de ce fascicule, ainsi qu'une liste alphabétique de députés de l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario.

Il existe un index cumulatif des numéros précédents. Les renseignements qu'il contient sont à votre disposition par téléphone auprès des employés de l'index du Journal des débats au (416) 325-7400.

Numérotation du Journal des débats

A partir du début de la deuxième session de la 35^e législature, les pages et les numéros du Journal des débats seront de nouveau numérotés par session. La numérotation du Journal des débats correspondra donc à celle de Feuilleton et Avis et de Procès-verbaux, ainsi que celle des autres publications parlementaires au Canada.

Depuis deux ans, le Journal des débats était numéroté par année civile. Avec ce système, la numérotation des numéros et des pages recommençait au premier numéro de l'année civile, quelle que soit la session ou la législature.

Avec le nouveau système, la numérotation commencée en janvier 1991 s'arrêtera à la dernière séance de la Chambre et des comités de l'actuelle première session. Une nouvelle série commencera le jour de l'ouverture de la deuxième session et des sessions suivantes : numéro 1, page 1. Les rapports des comités seront également numérotés à partir de la première séance de chaque comité pour une session parlementaire donnée.

Abonnements

Pour les abonnements, veuillez prendre contact avec le Service d'abonnement parlementaire, Publications Ontario, ministère des Services gouvernementaux, 5^e étage, 880, rue Bay, Toronto (Ontario) M7A 1N8. Par téléphone : (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 ou, sans frais : 1 (800) 668-9938.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Wednesday 2 October 1991

The House met at 1330.

Prayers.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

HISTORICAL SOCIETY DISPLAY

Mr Cleary: I would like to invite all members to re-discover part of our province's heritage by visiting the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Historical Society's display in the lobby of the Legislature.

The SD&G Historical Society is a proud custodian of the rich heritage of the three united counties, settled first by the Mohawk people, travelled by the French voyageurs and established by the United Empire Loyalists in 1784.

The city of Cornwall boasts two museums. Inverarden Regency Cottage Museum was constructed in 1816 for Nor'Wester John McDonald of Garth and is now furnished with fine Canadian furniture. The United Counties Museum has long preserved the history of SD&G. The distinguished displays feature a badge from the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders Regiment, mounted on a McDonald tartan similar to the one worn by the former member for Cornwall, the first Premier of Ontario, John Sandfield Macdonald. You will also find a beaver pelt linking us with the explorer Simon Fraser as well as other items reflecting the rich diversity of our culture.

I invite members to take a few minutes to see the exhibits, starting next Monday, celebrating the historic greatness of Cornwall and one of Ontario's founding communities.

APPOINTMENTS TO HOUSING AUTHORITIES

Mr B. Murdoch: I wish to bring to the attention of this House and the Minister of Housing a problem which she or her predecessor may have caused in my riding. Perhaps inadvertently, they have given local housing authorities the impression that all appointments to their volunteer boards will be taken over by the province.

This perception was deepened recently when two members of the Grey County and Owen Sound Housing Authority, one appointed by the county and the other by the city, received letters from the ministry telling them that if they wished another term, they must fill out an application form for the province.

I have been assured by the minister's agency appointments office that she has no intention of vetoing appointments from other levels of government. They only wanted additional information and in fact have now stopped sending out those letters. But I warn her she could be facing many angry people in the near future if she does not make this very clear.

The Owen Sound Sun Times ran a negative front page article on this issue yesterday. More will appear soon. The minister must realize what has happened and move quickly to ensure the public understands exactly what it is her ministry is trying to do.

KAREN MORRISON

Mr Dadamo: As a member of this assembly, I would like to take this opportunity to inform members of this Legislature about the Charles E. Brooks Labour Community Service Award, which was handed out recently in Windsor.

Let me add that this distinguished award was established in 1977 by the Windsor and District Labour Council, in conjunction with the United Way of Windsor-Essex County, to honour the memory of the late Charles E. Brooks, president of Local 444 of the Canadian Auto Workers and an outstanding community-minded citizen. In Windsor he is cherished.

I would also like to add that the award is presented annually to a Windsor and district trade unionist in recognition of outstanding contribution in the area of voluntary community services. As the member of the Ontario Legislature representing the riding of Windsor-Sandwich, I am pleased to announce to the members of this House that this year's recipient of the Charles E. Brooks Labour Community Service Award is Karen Morrison of Local 1681, CUPE.

Karen's tremendous contribution and endless hours of dedication to her profession as a nurse and to the labour movement have given her the honour she so rightfully deserves. As well, Karen is also the youngest person to ever win this award. As my constituent and dear friend, I congratulate Karen Morrison on being chosen this year's recipient of the Charles E. Brooks Labour Community Service Award.

SHELTER FOR WOMEN

Ms Poole: I was disturbed to learn that the committee of adjustment in the town of Georgina has rejected a proposal for a vitally needed women's shelter. This shelter would serve women and children who have been victimized by wife assault.

The reasons given for the committee of adjustment decision were not enough parking space and too narrow a driveway. Local residents talked about the proximity of homes for the mentally handicapped as a negative impact on children who would be in the proposed shelter. Do people seriously believe it is better for a child to live in an abusive situation than to occasionally encounter a mentally handicapped person? It is obvious the not-in-my-backyard syndrome is alive and well in Georgina.

Support for assaulted women and their children is needed throughout the province, but the need in Georgina is particularly acute. In 1990 this town had three times the rate of domestic assaults as the rest of York region. In the past two years, five people in Georgina have died as a result of domestic assault.

Just last week members of this Legislature deplored the tragic number of women who are assaulted. We condemned the violent circumstances under which many women must live and we urged the government to act now to deal with the systemic nature of this problem. Was it all just rhetoric?

We have to battle the NIMBY syndrome. This government must intervene and continue the Liberal government's commitment to building that desperately needed shelter in Georgina.

AFFORDABLE HOUSING

Mrs Witmer: On August 14, the mayors of Kingston, Guelph, London, Windsor and Waterloo wrote to the Minister of Colleges and Universities requesting that he meet them as soon as possible to discuss the options his ministry would consider to help alleviate the very serious problems these communities face as a result of the demand for off-campus student housing. To date, the minister has not responded to this request to discuss off-campus student housing.

1340

The increasing need for students to find housing off campus has resulted in a significant decrease in the availability of moderately priced housing for families in these communities. The fact that many students can afford to pay inflated prices for substandard accommodation has forced many low-income families to lower their expectations for the kind of housing their limited incomes can afford.

I recognize this is not a simple problem with easy solutions. However, I do believe the minister has an obligation to work with the various communities to seek solutions which will meet the needs of both the students and the local community. A month and a half ago the mayors of these cities requested that the minister meet with them to discuss their concerns and they deserve a response from him. I strongly urge the minister to make the time to meet with these mayors at the earliest possible opportunity and to work not only with them but with the Minister of Housing to find solutions to this extremely difficult problem.

FACULTY OF SOCIAL WORK

Mr White: I rise to congratulate the faculty of social work at Wilfrid Laurier University on the occasion of its 25th anniversary.

The faculty of social work was established in 1966 with only 28 students. This graduate school was the first in southwestern Ontario, where trained social workers were in great demand. To date the school has graduated 1,730 MSWs, who are providing leadership to local and national social service agencies.

Recently a doctorate of social work program was introduced. As the second doctoral program in English-speaking Canada, the first being here at the University of Toronto, it is designed to prepare future academics, policy-makers, senior administrators and advanced practitioners in the social welfare field.

The centre for social welfare studies, established in 1986, links the school's research program with the community and has been involved with the Better Beginnings, Better Futures program operated by the Ministry of Community and Social Services.

The Easton McCarnie lecture series, which this year will be held tomorrow, is an annual public lecture series on a wide range of topics related to social policy. They have had prominent speakers, including the present Premier. As one among the faculty's many graduates, I am proud of its many accomplishments.

ONTARIO HYDRO LEGISLATION

Mr McGuinty: The Minister of Energy will be making a statement today. I want to speak to the origins of that statement. Members of a powerful lobby group, the Municipal Electric Association, representing 312 public utility commissions, on Sunday past issued a written ultimatum to the minister which said in effect, "If you make a suitable statement in the Legislature within the next 48 hours, we will stop our public campaign against Bill 118 and our chair and our president will each write you to thank you for your wonderful openness and to say we so look forward to working with you."

Yesterday, with the 48-hour deadline running out, rather than making a statement in the proper way through a ministerial statement before question period, a format which allows for response by the opposition parties, instead of following the usual procedure and instead of accepting our party's offer, made in this House yesterday, to allow him extra time to make a statement at the usual time, the minister, to use his terminology, used neither the back door nor the front door. Instead, he used a tunnel.

After the time for ministerial statements had passed, after question period was over and after the minister had removed himself from this House, we the members of this House and the people of Ontario learned of this minister's amendments to Bill 118 through a backbencher in his party.

We can only hope this minister and this government now recognize the gravity of the impropriety committed by the minister in attempting to bypass the rules and traditions of this House. We can only hope something like this never occurs again.

MINISTER OF COMMUNITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES

Mr Carr: I rise today to condemn the Rae government and in particular the Minister of Community and Social Services. In the throne speech, the Rae government said, "We will deal resolutely with violence against women and children."

Theresa Greer, the executive director of the Halton Women's Place, sent a letter to the Minister of Community and Social Services on July 11 of this year. The letter was lost by the minister's office. On August 7 another letter was sent. The minister's office lost that one too. On August 12 another letter was sent. It went astray as well.

Theresa Greer of the Halton Women's Place says it best when she says, "Given the steps taken to date, I was quite dismayed to discover that the seemingly elusive letter has, as yet, not reached the minister and therefore my request for an interview has not been responded to."

In the throne speech the government said it is a government that will listen to the people and respond to their needs to the best of its ability. The actions of the Minister of Community and Social Services show very clearly that the Rae government has no ability to solve our problems. I call on the Premier to appoint a new minister, who is capable of getting results in the Ministry of Community and Social Services.

ONTARIO SUMMER GAMES

Mr Frankford: Mr Speaker, as you are aware, there is a great tradition of supporting amateur sport in Scarborough. Within our city there are many sporting and recreational facilities and organizations.

I am very pleased to draw to the attention of this House that Scarborough has been selected as the site for the 1992 Ontario Summer Games. The games are held every two years and will have almost 3,000 young athletes aged between 14 and 20 competing in over 20 different sports. Last week I was very pleased to be able to present a cheque for $500,000 from the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation to assist the city of Scarborough in hosting the event. It is good to see the ministry encouraging this event, which will be a real boost to young athletes across the province and to sports organizations.

For many of the athletes the games are an important step in their careers. From there, some will go on to the 1993 Canada Games. Many of Canada's Olympic best got their start at the Ontario Summer Games.

I would like to acknowledge the hard work that staff from the ministry and the city will be putting in before the event on August 20 to 23 next year, and the involvement of many volunteers. As I said, we have a fine range of stadiums and facilities and we have an enthusiastic population. We look forward to welcoming athletes, their families and supporters from all across the province.

CERTIFICATES OF CONGRATULATION

Mr H. O'Neil: Mr Speaker, I rise on a point of personal privilege, not only as it relates to me but also as it relates to all the members of the Ontario Legislature. It deals with the congratulation plaques that are being sent out through the Ministry of Government Services on behalf of, I understand, the members of the Ontario Legislature, signed by the Premier.

Just as of the last couple of weeks these plaques have had their wording changed so they no longer state, "On behalf of the Ontario Legislature, I, Bob Rae, congratulate you." The wording has been taken out so that they are, I feel, more politicized. They state that they are from the Premier himself. Also, now these plaques do not state the date they come out on. They do not say where they are dated. They do not give the day or the month or the year. The Premier may not be aware of this. I will send this over to him so that correction can be made on it.

The Speaker: I appreciate the point of privilege raised by the member for Quinte. This matter might best be dealt with by the standing committee on the Legislative Assembly. Perhaps the member would consider forwarding it to the committee so that all-party committee can take a look at this matter.

Mr H. O'Neil: On that same point of privilege, Mr Speaker: I will make sure the standing committee on the Legislative Assembly has a look at it, but I felt that out of courtesy the Premier should also be made aware of some of the things his staff are doing.

EXTENSION OF RESPONSE TIME

Hon Mr Cooke: In the same spirit of co-operation, Mr Speaker, there has been an arrangement with the three parties that the response time today will be increased by two minutes.

1350

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY

GOVERNMENT SPENDING

Hon Mr Laughren: Our government has a commitment with the people of Ontario to manage the province's affairs openly and directly. We have begun to involve Ontarians in finding solutions to a wide range of challenges that we face.

It is with this commitment to openness and dialogue that I am informing members today of adjustments we are making to our spending plans. These midyear adjustments are a common practice of business and governments. They are being made now to manage the expenditure pressures which we are facing as a result of these extremely difficult economic times.

As members know, the recession has had a major economic impact on Ontario and placed enormous pressures on government spending. In particular, our commitment to social assistance has become more costly to sustain. Today, almost one million Ontarians rely on social assistance, many of them for the first time in their lives.

Expenditure management has been made even more difficult by the federal government's capping of transfer payments, which resulted in a shortfall of $1.6 billion this year.

Midway through the year urgent pressures and increased statutory obligations have made it necessary to review and adjust our spending in order to meet our budgetary targets and foster economic recovery. These pressures include $240 million in additional spending for social assistance, $53 million in extra costs for firefighting in northern Ontario and $215 million to cover the increased cost of pensions for Ontario teachers. These costs are a legal obligation for the province.

Besides those statutory obligations, we have had $35 million towards a new initiative to fund farm assistance, as I announced in this House yesterday, and $57 million in additional funding to support a variety of other pressures, including dealing with the Ontario Human Rights Commission backlog and the government's older worker adjustment program.

When we presented the budget earlier this year, the government made a commitment to actively fight the recession and to protect people from its effects. We are committed to maintaining health services, education and social programs.

With the measures I am announcing, we will stick to our budget plan, maintain our anti-recessionary measures, meet our spending targets, encourage economic renewal and free up funds to manage the pressures that I have identified. To do this, we are redirecting approximately $600 million this year. This represents an adjustment of about 1% of our total budget. All government ministries are participating in this process.

We are reallocating money from the following areas:

There is a $100-million reduction in operating budgets for supplies and equipment, consulting services, travel, advertising and communications. This is an immediate and permanent reduction averaging 5% in ministry budgets this year. It will be increased to 10% for 1992-93 and will result in an estimated $300-million cut in spending over the next 18 months.

There is $40 million in savings achieved by ministries managing and absorbing a portion of their current salary budgets. This year, the average salary settlement was 5.8%. We have given ministries a 5% increase in their salary budgets, with the understanding that the remaining 0.8% will be managed within the ministries themselves.

There is $460 million in redirected spending based on a range of saving opportunities. These include $50 million owing primarily to local school board delays in implementing their junior kindergarten programs, $85 million as a result of the late startup of the wage protection fund due to a delay in legislative approval, a $35-million saving on public debt interest payments as a result of good management of our borrowing program, and $50 million as a result of delay in passing legislation on proportional value pay equity. We remain committed to the pay equity initiative. I want to assure members that the money for this will be provided once legislation is passed.

This $460 million is available for a number of reasons. As noted, some new programs have not proceeded as quickly as anticipated due to delays either in government or among transfer payment partners. In some cases, legislation has not yet been passed.

I can assure members that these adjustments will be implemented without sacrificing urgently needed programs and services. In particular, I want to note that we will be maintaining public hospital system support levels for 1991-92 as previously announced.

These measures will enable us to keep our budget expenditures at $52.8 billion and will help us further our goal of encouraging economic renewal in this province. We continue to be committed to a deficit target of $9.7 billion. Full details of the revised budget plan will be provided in the Second Quarter Ontario Finances.

These actions are also consistent with the commitment which I made in the budget to establish an open and active approach to expenditure management. Our goal is to ensure quality service delivery and greater efficiency in the public sector. To move in these directions, we have initiated two strategies. The first strategy is to seek greater involvement of our employees, their bargaining agents, transfer payment employers and their staff and unions in addressing the issues facing the government. The second strategy involves rigorous and comprehensive policy and program expenditure review as part of the preparation for the next budget.

The experience, co-operation and participation of our employees and transfer agencies is needed to effectively address the fiscal and program challenges that we face. In recent weeks we have been meeting with public sector unions and employers to share with them our concerns and to impress upon them the importance of negotiating collective agreements which are affordable and fair to employees, employers and taxpayers.

My colleague the Chairman of Management Board will announce today the government's directions in introducing greater organizational efficiency, as well as our policy on wage increases for elected officials, political staff and senior management executives within the public service.

There must be changes in how this government operates, what it does and how it spends tax dollars. That is why the newly created treasury board, which we announced in the budget, has begun to work with all ministries to undertake an extensive program review. All major programs and expenditures are subject to review. This activity will become an integral part of the government's ongoing financial management and budget planning.

Through the reviews we want to ensure that spending is in line with the government's fiscal framework and consistent with our priorities of rebuilding the economy while maintaining programs that promote social justice. We are determined to realize cost savings which can be directed to achieve government priorities, and we want to identify ways of improving programs and services for the benefit of all Ontarians.

Initially these reviews will concentrate on programs which are experiencing rapid rates of growth, such as the Ontario drug benefit program, government funding for hospitals, commercial health labs and other insured health benefit programs. We firmly believe that if we are going to save medicare, we must begin by controlling its cost.

In addition, we will be reviewing expenditures for consulting and professional services, as well as government communications and advertising.

Ministries are being encouraged to involve their partners, clients and employees in their reviews. Closed door management is no longer acceptable. We will actively encourage input and co-operation to make the best decisions.

Wherever savings can be found, they will be made. Where the need is great, or becomes greater still, we will continue to tailor and redirect our spending, as necessary.

Let me reiterate that we will continue to manage our finances while providing the important services needed and expected by residents of this province. We will continue with the anti-recession program announced in this year's budget.

We must face the reality of these harsh economic times. These latest measures are intended to meet the financial pressures for this fiscal year. However, I can assure members we will take further action if and when it is needed to meet our fiscal objectives.

We have pledged to take the lead and work in co-operation with labour, business, communities and other governments in achieving economic renewal. These measures will enable us to continue the anti-recession strategy of our budget, support greater equity and fairness and set the basis for a vibrant economic renewal which brings jobs, training opportunities and investment to Ontario.

1400

ONTARIO PUBLIC SERVICE SALARIES AND BENEFITS

Hon Mr Silipo: The Treasurer has shared with us the province's financial picture as well as the series of initiatives that we are undertaking to manage the financial challenges we face.

In keeping with the Treasurer's message of asking all government ministries to make fair adjustments, I want to tell the House about this government's approach to public sector wages. I also want to tell the House about our intention to make the operations of the public service more flexible, efficient and effective.

Our fiscal resources come under additional pressure during a recession. Sound management of our public resources will help us create economic renewal. During times such as these, we have to be more concerned about spending money in the best possible way. We have to manage our resources more creatively. We have to be more innovative.

This recession affects all of us, and Ontarians understand that the challenge of restraint must be shared fairly and equitably. The government of Ontario will take up its part of the challenge.

We have seen other jurisdictions where politicians, senior managers and appointees have received substantial increases at the same time as the wages of average workers have been frozen. We have seen also in the private sector, on average, executive salaries increasing more than the salaries and wages of their employees.

This government believes that leadership in sharing the challenge of restraint must come from those most able to make the sacrifice and those with the responsibility for managing our finances. We are looking for equity in how we share the challenge.

I am today announcing a number of measures as part of the government's approach to public sector wages:

1. For the 1991-92 and 1992-93 fiscal years, there will be no pay increases for MPPs, including the Premier, cabinet ministers and parliamentary assistants. MPPs will receive a retroactive 3% increase for the fiscal year 1990-91.

2. For 1992, pay for deputy ministers and the approximately 2,000 most senior managers in the Ontario public service will be frozen at the 1991 level.

3. For 1992, ministers' allocations for political staff will be frozen.

4. For 1992, pay for approximately 120 persons appointed to government agencies, boards and commissions will be frozen.

These measures show that the government, as the second-largest employer in Ontario, intends to lead by example, but not by the example that has been set in other jurisdictions. There they have effectively shut down the collective bargaining process in bad times and have imposed wage controls.

I want to make it very clear that this government believes in collective bargaining. I want to show that the collective bargaining process works during bad times just as it works during good times. For the process to work during times such as we face today, people need to know the problems. They need to know the fiscal realities. They need to know the facts in order to make reasonable decisions at the bargaining table. That is why we are talking and will continue to talk to public sector employers. That is why we are meeting and will continue to meet with public sector union leaders.

We spend 45% of the provincial budget, or almost $24 billion, on salaries and benefits for government employees and people such as teachers, hospital workers and municipal workers who work in the broader public sector. Each 1% average increase in combined Ontario public service and broader public sector wages costs provincial taxpayers almost one quarter of a billion dollars.

We are aiming for low wage settlements in forthcoming negotiations with bargaining agents in the Ontario public service. We are confident that they will understand the fiscal difficulties which we face and will work with us to achieve negotiated collective agreements that are fair to both our employees and our taxpayers.

We also want broader public sector union leaders, employers and workers to consider seriously the fiscal realities that we face and to incorporate them into the many and various collective bargaining processes that are under way and will soon be under way for future negotiations.

We know that cost adjustments in the government involve more than having an approach to public sector wages. As a government, we have to look at our own internal operations. We are considering measures to cut costs while at the same time making the public service more effective, efficient and flexible.

Among such measures are redeployment of resources, enhanced and innovative management practices and streamlining. We are also undergoing a fundamental rethinking and redesign of business processes to more fully use the capabilities of information technology.

Here too we want to involve our employees and their unions and associations in seeking solutions to the fiscal problems we face. We want to do this in the context of our continuing commitment to equity and fairness in the Ontario public service. That process has already started by way of employee relations committee meetings at each ministry. These are joint union-management committees. I am pleased to inform members that the Premier has asked every minister and deputy minister to convene these meetings specifically for the purpose of discussing ways to enhance government operations.

The Treasurer has made it clear that sound fiscal management is not just reacting to problems. Sound management involves constant monitoring and the ability to recognize problems and correct them before they become serious. Equally, sound management means involving all parties, management and workers, in the setting of priorities and the adjustment of spending patterns.

I am convinced that all of us, members of this House, broader public employers and public sector workers, will take this responsibility seriously and act in the interests of the people whom we all serve, the residents of this province.

ONTARIO HYDRO LEGISLATION

Hon Mr Ferguson: When I opened debate on Bill 118, I indicated that the government would be listening closely to what was said. I also informed the House that the government would be responsive where appropriate. We are responding.

The changes that will be moved during committee will make it clear that the intent and purpose of the legislation is to provide the framework for a new partnership with Ontario Hydro and remove the barriers to the implementation of our new energy directions. The primary goal of these new energy directions is to protect the environment while ensuring that the province continues to have a reliable supply of energy at reasonable prices.

We propose to make it perfectly clear that any policy directive that is issued must relate to the corporation's exercise of its powers and duties under the act and not lead to an extension of those powers and duties by means of government directives.

I have had the opportunity to meet with the representatives of the Municipal Electrical Association and a number of other stakeholders in this process, and I want to tell members that we as a government are responding to their concerns. We will continue to listen as the legislative process unfolds.

The government shall also move some minor wording changes dealing with the substitution of other forms of energy for electrical energy. The government is determined to proceed with changes to the act that will enable Ontario Hydro—

Mr Bradley: This is not what you said in the union halls in St Catharines.

The Speaker: Order, the member for St Catharines.

Hon Mr Ferguson: Mr Speaker, do I have to compete with this guy day in and day out? I want to tell the member how it works here. We have our turn and they listen, and then they have their turn.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. Would the member sit down.

Interjections.

The Speaker: I ask all members to come to order.

Interjections.

The Speaker: I ask the members of the House to come to order, please. If members are not capable of coming to order, then we will have to take a recess.

To answer the Minister of Energy's question, yes, we do have to put up with each other. I would trust and hope that would be in a little calmer and more reasoned approach than we have seen in the last couple of minutes. I would ask all members of the House if they could restrain themselves from pearls of wisdom and allow the minister to complete his remarks and then we can have the responses from the opposition parties.

Hon Mr Ferguson: In conclusion, the government of Ontario is determined to proceed with changes to that act that will enable Ontario Hydro to encourage fuel substitution because this could save over 700 megawatts of electricity by the end of the decade, an amount roughly equivalent to a Candu reactor, but at considerably less cost to the electricity customers than building new supply and enough to supply the electricity needs of a community the size of Ottawa.

1410

RESPONSES

GOVERNMENT SPENDING

Mr Elston: I wish to thank the Treasurer for providing us finally with an answer to what several hundreds of millions of dollars has meant. He would not tell us last week. Far from being open and consultative, he has been rather close-mouthed about all of the things he was doing as we led up to this grand announcement today. It is interesting that they have chosen to provide us with at least part of the picture as they see it today.

But as we look at one of the documents—a document I was able to recover from his spin doctors' area, I guess; we have all of the communication messages that he wishes to put out through his caucus officials—it is interesting to note that at one stage the suggestion is that there will be, if necessary, even further changes made when those items arrive on his doorstep. It seems to me that what we have today is only partly a confession about how far off their budgetary target these people actually are.

In Ontario, it looks like the piper is setting the tune, but the taxpayers are paying the price. This stuff is really interesting reading. This group of people—

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order.

Mr Elston: It is unusual but in this new Parliament and this new era of no finger-pointing, a kinder, gentler era, the New Democrats figure they can push us around a fair bit. I am suggesting that I am only going to outline for the public of Ontario the stuff that the government members have been told to tell the public. "Is this just fat-cutting?" it says. Answer to question 86 is, "No, we are closely scrutinizing our planned spending and are making decisions for reallocating money that have the least impact on people we serve."

All of this stuff is really interesting, but what it tells us is that there is not an independent thought among those people at all, that they have to really bow and scrape to the people who are spinning the story out of the Premier's office and out of the office of the Treasurer.

It seems to me that what we have not quite got yet is the full story behind all of the problems that an unaware group of people sprang on the people of Ontario in April 1991. It seems to me, after eight months leading up to their first budget, they should have known what was going on in this province. Now, some five months later, as they tinker around with some of these things, they should have the nerve to tell us the full story.

Perhaps there will be another day when I come back to ask the Treasurer whether his accusations about things being spot on, as they were suggested to be when he told us that. Certainly there are things in here that lead us to believe that the message is softened around the edges so that these people can retrace their steps if they have to, when the Treasurer comes back to this House again to explain how far gone wrong his whole economic scheming has really been.

While I am on my feet, I just wish to note one really good thing about this statement. The party that has long stood for universality of everything has told all its caucus members to go out and explain that essential services are being maintained, but what these people are doing is ending universality in health care. The types of paragraphs which were underlined by the Treasurer as he said, "All of these items are under scrutiny," ie, being controlled, mean there will be an end to the day when people can count on this government to deliver universal health care in this province. That is why he underscored that particular paragraph. That is why he put his emphasis there. That is why he chose to underscore the areas of real concern. For universality there may yet be a very big problem to come.

The Minister of Health, who I am aware has every intention of doing her best work, is about to be forced by that Treasurer and the member who is at Management Board to undo the things that were done in great ways through the 1960s, 1970s and 1980s. For me, this is a bit of a sad commentary as they refuse to tell us their true intent through this little statement. This tinkering they tell us about now is a forerunner of bigger things to come in health care. I am concerned that they will not share their full plan with us. I am concerned that they have refused to bring into this House, at an earlier date, their plans for long-term care. I am concerned that day by day we have to extract bit by bit, piece by piece, the details around the thinking in that organization.

What it means is there is no overall plan to direct the economic activity of this province. There is no overall plan to deal with the budgetary plan of this province. In fact, far from doing the things they said they stood for in April 1991, far from being the things they stood for in August and September 1990, this government is doing things which the people of the province will not find out about for several more months hence. It is our duty to try and pry as much of the detail from these people as we can. These people, because they merely say they are being open and consultative, cannot be believed, if you go by the series of answers that were delivered in this House in the first week as I tried to get at the basis upon which cuts were being made.

It looks like this is a "use it or lose it" economic statement. It basically says, "If you haven't spent it, I'm taking it back." He says, "There is a delay in spending this, a delay in spending that, so we are taking it back." A full 10% of the value, I think it is, of the anti-recession program is going to come from slower spending in health capital, some $70 million. To me, that is like taking that material out of that area and reapplying it against his anti-recession program, with the same result—still costing jobs in our economy.

1420

Mr Sterling: Before this statement was made, I was hopeful that the Treasurer and his colleagues would come forward with something that would make the people of Ontario optimistic about the future. I thought perhaps the Treasurer had come to his senses and was ready to face the music. We have seen today in terms of his statements that he has not accepted his responsibility in terms of fiscal management for this province. All he has done today is delay the inevitable. He has done nothing today to restructure the basic problems of the debts and the revenues this province is engaged in in order to provide the necessary programs for its people.

Today, for instance, we saw a $240-million enrichment of the teachers' pension fund. This government insists on helping those people who are earning $40,000, $50,000 or $60,000 a year, while avoiding meeting the needs of pensioners, aged people and our health care system.

Last April the Treasurer had all the facts in front of him in order to determine what budgetary decisions he should make. Those same facts are present today. He knew what the federal government was doing with regard to transfer programs. He knew what other provinces were doing with regard to holding down their expenditures. Yet this province and this Treasury decided to do something else. As a result, he should find no surprises, save and except some very minor ones, with regard to his shortfall in revenues and in terms of expenditures. He had the facts to determine that his social welfare payments would be what they are today, yet he finds himself short on money and therefore having to take these very temporary measures.

Many of the measures he is taking today are merely a postponement of paying the bills from this year to next. A prime example is the wage protection fund on which he plans to make payments next year instead of this year, yet it is still a liability of this government.

Perhaps the most important matter we should be discussing today is the confidence of the people who generate wealth in this province in this Treasurer, in this Premier and in this government. Today's statement does nothing to restore that confidence, nothing at all.

I find one of the most tasteless parts of this whole speech and show today is the whole attack with regard to payments or increases in MPPs' salaries. We have across from us 72 members of the government. Not one of those members receives only an MPP's salary. Every one of those members has another sinecure. Cabinet ministers are earning the equivalent of $117,000 in this province. The Premier earns the equivalent of $124,000 in this province. Each and every government member in this Legislature has essentially received a 30% increase in his salary over the last single year. I would challenge any member on that side to provide the figures to me and I will show him that is the case.

For them to preach restraint when in fact they are at the trough is absolutely unacceptable. If this Premier and this cabinet want to engage in the tasteless political trick of plying to the public on MPPs' salaries, I suggest they do as the Prime Minister and his cabinet did in 1987 and take substantial pay cuts.

Mr Stockwell: In April we had a $9.7-billion deficit. That deficit was intended to jump-start the economy of this province to fight our way out of the recession. On the date of that budget there were 893,000 people in Ontario receiving social assistance payments; in July there were 961,500. In the months of that budget, 85 layoffs affected 8,300 people; by August those numbers climbed to 150 layoffs affecting 16,000 people. In Ontario, 40,000 workers a month are exhausting their unemployment insurance benefits, by between 10% and 13%. That $9.7-billion deficit did nothing to jump-start this economy.

The $600-million tinkering plan of the Treasurer will do equally as little; absolutely nothing. The Chairman of Management Board says he is going to get tough with the employees. It is too late. They gave them a 14% increase in payroll last year. It is closing the barn door long after the horse has gone. They have to get it together. If it is going to save, it better roll back.

ONTARIO HYDRO LEGISLATION

Mr Jordan: I ask the Minister of Energy once again to please withdraw Bill 118. This bill is so flawed that he could not get his own government people to accept it. The minister is saying he needs it to remove the barriers so he can have power at a reasonable price in Ontario. What barriers? He has his own chairman, his own chief executive officer and he has loaded the board with his members. What barriers is he talking about?

ORAL QUESTIONS

GOVERNMENT SPENDING

Mr Elston: I notice with some interest that the Treasurer has tried to continue to say that he is fighting the recession rather than the deficit, that his directions or instructions to his caucus colleagues are to make sure they tell everybody, "We're not spending less." That is right here under "Other Points to Remember." Can the Treasurer confirm that in dealing with other areas of capital allocation, in colleges and in health, he was only able to retain his $700-million capital anti-recession program intact by those other ministries having sacrificed their capital budgets so that his alone would survive?

Hon Mr Laughren: Absolutely nothing could be further from the truth, which perhaps should not surprise me. The member should know that any of the capital holdback was only because it could not be spent in this fiscal year. Perhaps the member opposite would insist that we go out and spend money whether it was appropriate to spend it at this time or not. This government does not share that view.

Any kind of capital expenditures that are not being made, are not being made because the work simply will not be done in this fiscal year. It is not an attempt to decimate the capital expenditures whatsoever. We feel very strongly that the capital aspect of the anti-recession package is very important to start the whole process of economic renewal in this province. We feel very strongly that those were selected on a priority basis, and there is no attempt to cut back on capital expenditures. That is simply because of delays in construction, planning and so forth, not because we are taking back money on capital expenditures.

Mr Elston: I have been involved in the business of managing expenditures and I know exactly who is in control of approvals. You, Mr Speaker, will know as well that the Treasurer of this province is the person who can mandate approvals going out, with the assistance of his ministers. There are some delays which I am told are occurring due to an inability of his people to deliver approvals on plans that have been in front of his various ministries for several months.

Will this Treasurer confirm that his $700-million anti-recession program is less effective because of the lateness of implementing the capital programs of other ministries, that the jobs he creates are being partially offset by delays that are being forced on the capital budgets of other ministries?

Hon Mr Laughren: I do not know where the member is getting his ideas from. The $700-million capital expenditure program is virtually all in place. About 85% of it has either been completed, started, or ready to start, perhaps even as we speak. All of that money will be spent in 1991-92. That is our full intention, and there has been no effort whatsoever to slow that down. We want that money to be spent because we believe it creates jobs in the depth of a recession, and also because we think it is important that we are going to trigger economic renewal in this province. We think that is important to do.

The other capital expenditures that are not being done this year are simply because of delays in construction and so forth, not because they are being played off against the anti-recession package and not because we have any intention whatsoever of slowing down those capital projects—absolutely not.

1430

Mr Elston: The Treasurer's remarks about delays in programming seem to fit the bill for most of the areas in which we can look at the savings he indicates.

First, municipalities are going to have to wait another month for payments in lieu of taxes. He has made them carry the burden of his cutbacks in that way by some $9 million. There is going to be a delay in the legal aid tariff for some unspecified time, and it will be $4 million borne by other people in the legal aid system. It appears the communities that have been awaiting the relocation of government jobs to their areas are being asked to carry the burden of the Treasurer's cuts by some $23 million as they await his approval of those movements.

Far from being a partner in these cuts that are being made, he is asking other people to bear the responsibility for his inability to understand how to deliver a budget to the people of the province. What consultations has he had with the municipalities about the lateness of payments? What consultations has he had with the colleges about the change in their base budgets? What consultations has he had with hospitals and others who have been awaiting his largess?

Hon Mr Laughren: First, the member will notice there are not major alterations in our commitments to those transfer agencies, so I think he is being unfair when he implies that in his question. As well, I remind the member that the total reallocation announced today is about 1% of our budget, roughly 1%. I can recall that about a year ago today we learned there was a 5% mistake in what was predicted by the previous government.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. The member for Scarborough-Agincourt has the floor. New question.

Mr Phillips: The question is to the Treasurer, just to try to get a good understanding of his thinking on the budget. I think the Treasurer can appreciate that the last few days have been rather unsettling for many individuals out there in terms of the impact the budget might have. Now that we are halfway through the year, I wonder whether the Treasurer can assure the House that he now has a very firm grip on the expenditures and that we will not be seeing any further significant budget changes over the next six months, that this is the final major adjustment we will be looking at.

Hon Mr Laughren: I respond first to the comments of the opposition critic about unsettling times. I really believe previous governments would not have gone through the open dialogue we have had about our expenditure problems. They would simply have been buried and resolved at the end of the year. We are committed to a more open process of talking to the people about things such as expenditure problems, and we intend to continue to do that.

On the question of what happens in the balance of the year, I simply say that to the best of our knowledge what has been laid before the Legislature today is accurate. There are some imponderables that are more difficult to forecast than others, and I will give a couple of examples.

The majority of sales tax revenues are not computed until well into January because of the November-December shopping period, in which there are a lot more sales tax revenues coming in. Second, corporate income tax revenues come in even later because of the way they are reported in the year. It is usually even March before they all come in. Finally, there is that volatility in which the payments from the federal government are made to the province on the provincial income tax sharing arrangement we have with the federal government.

Given all those precautions, to the best of our knowledge what members see before them is what they are going to get.

Mr Phillips: Just on the openness, I think we will all look back on the stories in the paper over the last few days and wonder where they came from and how they came, because that has contributed to it. I have no idea where they came from, but I think that has contributed to the unsettledness.

As a follow-up to what the Treasurer said, in terms of what his decisions will be if the revenue comes in lower, he will know that the federal government has its first-quarter numbers out. He will know that personal income tax is the number one source of revenue and corporate tax the third largest, and those numbers are substantially lower than the numbers he has in his budget.

I wonder whether the Treasurer could tell us what his plan is if revenues from those two sources come in lower. Is his plan to maintain the $9.7-billion deficit or is his plan to maintain the spending?

Hon Mr Laughren: That is a good question. First, I want to reassure the member that the stories about the size of the cuts and reallocations that have been around the last couple of days really came because I and the Premier responded to questions from opposition members. We think that is our job in this assembly and we will continue to do that. That is why the stories are out there. Previous governments would have sat tight on them and not announced anything until they were read in the House.

On the more serious question the member asked, about what happens if revenues do not meet our expectations, we have every intention of not allowing the deficit to go beyond $9.7 billion. We are quite fierce about that. It is our intention to manage our expenditures in such a way that this will not happen.

Mr Phillips: I think there are numbers out of the federal government that will allow the Treasurer to look at his revenue estimates now, but be that as it may.

I think many people were looking at this announcement today as some indication that the Treasurer may be moving off his long-term financial plan. I gather that is not the case. Therefore, I would like the Treasurer to confirm or deny that it is his plan—he is really laying plans now for the next fiscal year—to maintain the deficit at the $8-billion to $9-billion range and look at brand-new taxes in the $5-billion range. Is it the Treasurer's expectation to maintain the fiscal plan in his budget over the next four years that does call for those two things: deficits in the $8-billion range and brand-new taxes in the $5-billion range?

Hon Mr Laughren: We had this discussion in the standing committee on finance and economic affairs earlier this year. The member and others should look at the numbers in the budget as a commitment by us not to exceed those deficit numbers, because I think they are high enough as they are.

I say to the member, who is trying to ask a serious question, that the deficit numbers are achieved—no surprise here—by some combination of revenues and expenditures. Whether that combination is precisely what we see in the budget from the spring I do not know, but our deficit goal will be the numbers that are in that budget document from earlier this year.

Mr Sterling: I am not here to celebrate that we are going to hold to a $9.7-billion deficit and the doubling of our deficit over the next four years when this government is in charge of the Treasury bench.

Even before the Treasurer struck his first budget, he had limited his ability to constrain his expenditures by announcing some very high transfer payments, and also by indicating that he was not going to constrain the operating budgets of many of the provincial institutions and the civil service of this province. Then in his budget of April 19, 1991, he not only promised to maintain the expense base which, in my view, was irresponsible and was formulated by the former government in 1988 and 1989—in some ways I sympathize with the Treasurer. Bob Nixon is in London while the Treasurer is here to face the music. I understand his problems.

But even with the very broad base of the expense floor Bob Nixon had developed in 1988 and 1989, the Treasurer insisted this year on expanding that expense base by creating new social programs, creating new social expenses which we cannot pay for.

The Speaker: Would the member place his question, please.

1440

Mr Sterling: I had hoped that by this time he would have realized the problem he is faced with, that is, that he does not have enough money to pay for the existing promises and continues to expand the base for those expenses.

His leader was quoted recently in a tabloid: "Everybody has to wake up and smell the coffee. We don't have a printing press in the basement." Has the Treasurer woken up and smelled the coffee?

Hon Mr Laughren: I am sorry I missed that quote in one of the three Toronto tabloids.

I did want to respond to my critic from the Conservative caucus in a serious way. He is quite right that when we announced our transfer payments last spring, to the hospitals it was 9.5%, to the school boards it was 7.9%, and to colleges and universities 7.3%. I do not apologize for that. By doing that we maintained essential services in our health care system. We maintained a quality education system at the post-secondary level and at the elementary and secondary school level. I think that is important if we are going to be well placed for economic renewal in this province.

To be fair, the member should appreciate that we are sharing the expenditure problem with the Legislature and with the people in Ontario. Quite frankly, unlike some jurisdictions, we intend to stay within our deficit forecast.

Mr Sterling: I appreciate that. The Treasurer has also maintained the 10,000 new civil servants who have been in place since 1986 under the former Liberal government.

There is absolutely nothing in the Treasurer's statement today which indicates that there are going to be substantial tax increases needed in the next year. Is he intending to introduce substantial tax increases?

Hon Mr Laughren: I was just conferring with the Premier. I did not give him a chance to respond; I jumped to my feet.

It is fair to say, and I do not think it is a secret, that we have just started now, through the process of the treasury board, to look at all the major allocations in government—all of them, without exceptions—to determine what our expenditure base will be next year and therefore, following on that, what kinds of revenues will be required to support that expenditure base. So there really has not been any decision whatsoever on what, if any, tax increases there will be next year.

Mr Sterling: We have heard from the Treasurer, and I believe he is to be congratulated in his last budget by presenting the fact that he expected an $8.9-billion deficit next year. When we add things up, things that have happened over the last six or seven months, the shortfall, even with all the information he had, we can only come to the conclusion that either the deficit is not going to hit $8.9 billion next year or he is going to have substantial tax increases.

What the business community, the wealth providers, and the people of Ontario were looking for from the Treasurer today was some kind of indication that he had realized it was necessary to seriously constrain government expenditures. My concern over his statement today is that he has not really restrained very much, if anything, that he has not really met any pain at this time. He has not indicated to the transferees of the substantial transfer payments, decisions he will be making over the next three or four months, that those transfers may not be as great as next year.

Does the Treasurer not think that at this time he should perhaps withdraw the budget he presented on April 29, withdraw the bills he introduced in this Legislature and start afresh so that the people of Ontario—

The Speaker: Would the member conclude his question, please.

Mr Sterling: —the business community, the wealth producers and the people will have some confidence in the Treasurer's ability to predict what is going to happen, and an acknowledgement that the paths he has taken in the past were mistakes?

Hon Mr Laughren: There was quite a bit in the question, but basically it was asking us to change the budget halfway through the year, which I do not think would make any sense. I want to remind the member that the budget we brought down in the spring included in it major commitments to essential services in this province. I have not heard the business community, to which he referred, tell us we should not be maintaining a good health care system, a good educational system and good infrastructure in this province so that we are well placed, when we come out of the recession, to take advantage of an economic renewal on which we are all counting.

I will tell the member something as well. The $700-million package, the anti-recession program which was designed to create jobs all across this province at the same time as there were 250,000 being laid off in the private sector, we think was a responsible thing to do. Quite frankly it was the private sector that took advantage, and quite appropriately so, of doing those capital works projects all across the province. I have not heard them complain about that.

Mr Sterling: There is no other business around.

Hon Mr Laughren: No, that is not fair. I believe the private sector agrees we should be maintaining those essential services in this province. I continue to believe that.

ONTARIO PUBLIC SERVICE SALARIES AND BENEFITS

Mr Stockwell: My question is to the Chairman of Management Board. I read his statement very carefully. He talks about "flexible, efficient and effective." He spoke about creating "economic renewal" and that "the challenge of restraint must be shared fairly and equitably." Finally one of his better ones was that he intends to "lead by example" in getting tough with the wage package.

He has at least 92,000 employees under his direction. He is talking tough. He has frozen 2,000 people out of 92,000. Those people he froze, the majority of them, received increases of upwards of 11% this year. Would the minister tell me exactly how that is going to fight the recession and show restraint, when he only shows the capacity to hold back 2,000 employee increases rather than the 92,000 who work for this province?

Hon Mr Silipo: Either I was not clear or the member opposite has forgotten about the other half of the statement. What I said in the statement very clearly, and what I want to reiterate for him and members of the House, is that I think we are showing by example the kind of direction we want to set, and yes, we have begun by sharing the challenge we face equitably in terms of the people in senior management, the MPPs, cabinet ministers, etc.

I think that concomitant with that goes our commitment to the collective bargaining process. We are not going to shut down the collective bargaining process because we are in tough economic times. We are going to show that the collective bargaining process can work even in these tough economic times. We are confident that our employees and their unions understand that and we are confident we can get a settlement that is fair to our employees and fair to our taxpayers.

Mr Stockwell: As I said in a response, the horse is gone. He gave them 14% last year. The time for restraint has passed. We get groans from the front benches.

He hired more people. He should have made the decision in April. This Band-Aid approach is not going to solve the problem. The Treasurer stood in this House and said, when the exact option was outlined to him about freezing public sector employees' salaries at 2%, that this would have saved an admitted $700 million. We would not have to be here today if he had taken the right approach, but the Treasurer said at the time, "No, if we had frozen them all it would have saved $1 billion, but I don't think that's the solution."

How is the minister going to face the Ontario Public Service Employees Union with the Treasurer saying that to freeze salaries is not the solution? He is going to come back to this House and tell us he is going to bring in a tough negotiated settlement at 2% or 3%. The Treasurer has already scuppered him. He has no capacity to do this because he only froze 2,000. What is he going to bring back to the people of the province as far as a settlement is concerned?

1450

Hon Mr Silipo: What I hope to bring back is a deal that is fair to our employees and fair to our taxpayers. If we were to take to its logical conclusion the position the member opposite is taking, he would be arguing that the time for restraint is over.

We are saying, I think very clearly, that we are still very much in a time of restraint. We are still very much in a time when we need to be very careful over the next couple of years about how we spend our money. I think everyone understands that. We are going to do that in a way that respects the collective bargaining process, but still delivers on our commitment to be fair to our taxpayers and deliver our responsibilities in a fair and equitable manner.

Mr Stockwell: The time for restraint was about $9.7 billion ago. It is long since past where he can talk about restraint. The minister has to start acting.

The other point I would like to make to the minister and the question I would like to ask is that he does not want to deal with the retroactivity. He has increased salaries on the payroll of this province of some 14%. He tells me he cannot go back retroactively. Yes, he can. His cabinet has retroactively slammed the landlords in this province. His cabinet is retroactively passing a Hydro bill that will change the Hydro corporation. His cabinet retroactively has talked about the wage protection fund. The government seems to be able to go retroactively when it fits its very narrow guidelines and its political philosophy.

The people of this province are substantially broke. This government is substantially broke. It has $9.7 billion in deficit. Why can the minister not go back retroactively and deal with the 14% pay hike when the government could hammer the landlords, change Hydro and deal with the wage protection fund? Why can he not do it here when we could save the taxpayers some money?

Hon Mr Silipo: Clearly decisions have been made in the past year, both through the collective bargaining process and in terms of decisions that the cabinet has made and the government has made. I think what we are doing is looking to the future and to what our responsibilities are, and as I indicated earlier, we intend to do the job in the best way we can, respecting the collective bargaining process in those areas where we have a responsibility to bargain and to deliver on our responsibilities to our taxpayers.

If the member wants to speak about the $9.7-billion deficit and the slash-and-cut approach that he would make, I think he should be the first to be reminded that in a slash-and-cut approach, the people who would suffer are the ones who can least afford to pay for those kinds of issues and who need the support the most.

ASSISTANCE TO DE HAVILLAND

Mr Kwinter: My question is to the Treasurer. Today Sir Leon Brittan, the European Community commissioner of competition, announced they would be blocking the sale of de Havilland by Boeing to Alenia SpA and Aérospatiale SA. Given the fact that his government had made a commitment to save the 5,000 jobs at de Havilland, given the fact that it had made a commitment to invest up to one third in the new company, could the Treasurer tell us what the government plans to do to keep those particular promises that it made?

Hon Mr Laughren: I think I will refer this question to the Premier.

Hon Mr Rae: I appreciate a chance to answer the question. I can tell the honourable member that I have today been on the phone with Michael Wilson. I intend to speak to the Prime Minister later on today to tell him the seriousness with which we take the decision of the EC.

We will be working with all the parties involved, obviously the two prospective purchasers to discuss whether there is any other possible arrangement that can be made, with Boeing, with the federal government and with any other parties with respect to the future of the company. I think the clear message from this government in terms of our willingness to participate in a one-third participation in the ownership of the company has been that the commitment on our part is there to maintain these jobs in the province to the very best of our ability. That was the commitment we made. We have lived up to that commitment.

We are obviously very disappointed at the decision that was made by the European commission and we are going to do everything we can to see that de Havilland remains not only a viable company, but an effective leader in what we think is a crucial technology to this province and to Canada. We intend to do everything we can to continue in that role.

Mr Kwinter: The reason I directed the question to the Treasurer was that I think that there is a financial implication.

The Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology announced the other day that he would be coming forward very shortly with a new industrial strategy. The response to that by the Canadian Federation of Independent Business was that this industrial strategy was "some cockamammy program designed to give the NDP a warm, fuzzy feeling and little else."

My concern is that the Premier is obviously still going to pursue some sort of financial salvation of de Havilland. He is announcing a financial program, I assume, to implement an industrial strategy. Given the Treasurer's statement today, given the constraints the government finds itself in, how is he going to finance these adventures?

Hon Mr Rae: If the Liberal Party of Ontario is saying that 5,000 jobs and trying to protect as many jobs as possible is an adventure, let the record show that.

We have been working closely with the federal government, whose economic philosophy is well known and is not our own. They have expressed a commitment. I have spoken with the Prime Minister on this matter many times over the last month. He has told me throughout that the federal government attaches importance to this company and will not abandon the province with respect to the de Havilland workers. I would be very surprised if the Liberal Party of Ontario is saying it would do even less than Brian Mulroney with respect to this company.

I would say in all sincerity to the member that the decision that has been made by the European commission is obviously a disappointing one. But I would say to the member for Wilson Heights that it is an investment for this province to maintain our ability to compete in world markets with respect to this technology, an investment that has to be made by the private sector and that has to be made, in support, by the public sector. There is not a country around the world whose aerospace industry is not supported by the public sector in one way, shape or form, and that reality is there.

The Speaker: Would the Premier conclude his remarks, please.

Mrs Caplan: How are you going to pay for it? Floyd has to put the money in place.

Hon Mr Rae: If the honourable member is saying, "Where are you going to get the money?" I can only tell the honourable member that obviously the government is looking very hard at its entire investment portfolio as we begin to look more strategically at what we can do to maintain Ontario's competitive edge—

The Speaker: Would the Premier please complete his response.

Hon Mr Rae: —to maintain our ability to compete in higher technology and to look at those industries that have a strategic value and a strategic future for Ontario. I think it would be irresponsible—

The Speaker: Would the Premier take his seat, please.

NURSING HOMES

Mr J. Wilson: My question is to the Treasurer. What really makes my blood boil when I reflect upon the spending habits of the Treasurer's government is that he was able to find $500 million to increase the payroll of the civil service over the past year, but he is unable to come up with $20 million for seniors and the frail elderly in nursing homes.

Seniors have come to his government; they have asked for just 4% of what he has awarded civil servants and he has said no. In his government's speech from the throne, it was stated, "We recognize that saying yes"—to those persons who are vulnerable—"will mean saying no to others whose claims are presented more loudly." How can he possibly justify saying yes to OPSEU but no to the seniors in nursing homes in this province? Let the Treasurer justify that.

Hon Mr Laughren: I do not recall saying no to nursing homes in the province, to start with. Second, the Conservative caucus persists—this is not the first time it has happened—in trying to play one group of Ontario citizens off against another. I think that is a regrettable thing the Tory caucus is doing in this province. It is not a useful exercise to have people out there, all of whom have legitimate needs, played off against others who also have legitimate needs.

All I can tell the member is that we intend to do what we can, given the fact that we are serious about keeping our expenditures under control and in keeping with the statement in the budget about committing to the economic renewal in this province.

Mrs Caplan: Never shuts up.

The Speaker: The member for Oriole will please come to order.

1500

Mr J. Wilson: We are not playing a game over here. The Treasurer's conscience should be bothering him. He said yes to large pay increases for civil servants and no to residents of nursing homes. Yesterday in this House his Minister of Health said she is strapped, she cannot do anything till 1993, she hopes she can, but nothing specific at this time.

The government's reorganization of senior management resulted in pay increases of up to 11%, or $20 million. Why is it that the Treasurer was able to come up with $20 million for senior bureaucrats but nothing for the seniors in nursing homes? Where are the seniors in this province going to live when nursing homes close after October 15? I ask the Treasurer to answer that question. We deserve a response and the seniors in this province deserve to know where they are going to reside after October 15.

Hon Mr Laughren: I do not think the member was in the House yesterday when the Minister of Health responded, and what he is saying is not quite what the Minister of Health said. She did say she would be responding to that issue.

I want to correct the record as well. This province settled with the civil service, the workers represented by OPSEU, for an average amount of 5.8%. If the member was listening, he heard me say today that of that 5.8%, the ministries would be funded for 5% only and the 0.8% would have to be absorbed in the normal expenditures of the ministry. I wish the members opposite would use accurate numbers, not exaggerated ones, when they are trying to make their points.

ASSISTANCE TO FARMERS

Mr Mills: My question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Food. Over the last few months, my office has been packed with farmers from my riding on a weekly basis. They do many things. They are corn growers, apple growers, chicken producers, fur growers, the whole spectrum of farming. These farmers are up against it. I know yesterday the minister announced his emergency assistance package. What is this going to do for the average producer in Durham region?

Hon Mr Buchanan: The member is correct. Over the past number of months he has been talking to me about the farmers from his region and some of the concerns they have. I would like to inform the member, though, that this program we announced yesterday is not geographically targeted; it is a general program which tries to address the concerns across various commodities.

He mentioned apples, I believe, and he mentioned the fur industry. They will both be assisted in some way with this program. Also, of course, the grains and oilseeds sector, of which I believe there is some in his area of Durham, will be assisted. The farm interest assistance program, which was topped up with $11 million for those people who are in serious financial difficulty, also will benefit producers across the country, including those in Durham. There also is an emergency component to it to help those in serious financial difficulty, and I am sure that some farmers in the member's riding will also be able to benefit from that.

Mr Mills: I am convinced that the farmers in my riding are going to receive this program with open arms, but I guess my supplementary question is, how soon is the money going to get into their pockets?

Hon Mr Buchanan: The cheques are not in the mail yet. In regard to the $11-million top-up to the farm interest assistance program, that program is an ongoing program and the cheques will continue to go out as quickly as possible. We have already put out around $40 million of that $50-million announcement. This additional money will flow immediately.

In the other components of the program, the money will be able to flow this fall. We tried to use existing programs or other programs in which criteria have already been established, so we expect the cheques can flow probably in November and December, certainly before Christmas.

FUEL SPILL

Mr McClelland: I have a question for the Minister of the Environment. Let me recount some facts that took place last weekend. A resident farmer of Perth county phoned the minister's spills action hotline to inform them that he had a full 1,000-litre aboveground gas tank leaking on his property. He wanted direction from her ministry on what he should do with the leaking tank. He was informed there was no one there to assist him because it was lunch-time and could he please call back later.

At 1:05 pm Friday he phoned the hotline back and was informed by one of the minister's hotline officials that he should phone the regional office in London and it would deal with his concerns. At 3:30 pm, after numerous calls, he was finally informed by somebody in the regional office that he should not move "one teaspoon of contaminated soil until officials of the ministry were there to inspect the site."

However, he was informed that the person he was speaking to only worked until 4:30, and after all, it was the weekend. Possibly he could get back to the office and somebody would be in touch with him a little bit later. Nobody called. He did not hear from anybody from the ministry all weekend while the gas continued to leak, and 1,000 litres of gasoline leaked into the soil over the course of the weekend.

Monday, 8:30 am, the same gentleman called the London regional office and was told that the person he had dealt with was now on vacation. They could not do anything. He spoke to another official, who said, "Maybe we can get out there today and maybe we'll be able to help you out." Late Monday morning, they decided to respond and were given permission by the ministry, by an official, to now move the empty tank with 1,000 litres of fuel leaked into the soil.

The Speaker: Could the member place his question, please.

Mr McClelland: So now there is contamination, and the minister knows the problems that are resulting.

Environmental emergencies do not occur between 8:30 and 4:30, exclusive of lunch-hour, Monday to Friday. Obviously in this case the process to deal with this kind of emergency did not work.

I have to ask, is one of the cost-cutting measures imposed by the Treasurer within her ministry resulting in this kind of incompetence with respect to the hotlines? What is happening with the ministry in terms of response?

Hon Mrs Grier: Let me respond to the second part of that question, because I want to assure the member that certainly none of the allocations and adjustments within our budget have affected our programs.

I am very concerned about the facts that the member has just related. I am not aware of them and he has not given me any of the background or the names and the times. I hope he will do that and I would like to take the question as notice. I will undertake to find out the facts and get back to this House as soon as I can.

Mr McClelland: I appreciate the minister's undertaking to deal with this specific issue. On a more general basis, I would ask the minister if she would undertake at this point in time to examine the processes within her ministry to ensure that this kind of thing does not happen again.

I hope that we will not go through a consultative process. The minister introduced yesterday her long-awaited and much-promised bill of environmental rights in terms of its consultative process. Recently, in Traverse City, the minister said she is really concerned about toxins but she has to consult about it. I would hope we could have some definitive action forthcoming from this minister to direct that this kind of thing does not happen again, not just with this specific situation, but to ensure that it does not happen on an ongoing basis. I hope to have that undertaking from the minister as well this afternoon.

Hon Mrs Grier: The member has been a parliamentary assistant to the Minister of the Environment in the past and I am sure knows quite well that the spills action centre is manned or womanned 24 hours a day and is there on emergencies. The response time is often extremely fast in our ministry. I do not know the background of the situation he has described. If the facts are as he has outlined, I am undoubtedly very concerned. I want to get from him the information that he has, and as I have said, I will undertake to find out what the story is within the ministry and get back to the House.

1510

TAXATION

Mr Carr: My question is to the Treasurer. I think the Treasurer has found out something very important today, that all the social programs that the people of this province are so concerned about do not depend upon the compassion of government, but they do depend on having a healthy and prosperous economy to support them.

I was interested in reading the Financial Post of the 27th, and I will read the members a copy of it. "Ontario's tax competitiveness in manufacturing has fallen farther behind that of neighbouring provinces and US states since the mid-1980s." That is a Conference Board of Canada report.

I also hold up a Canadian Federation of Independent Business summary that said the biggest obstacles business is facing are the total tax burden and government regulations.

My question is very simple: Will the Treasurer commit to the people of this province that he will not introduce any taxes that will hurt the competitiveness of Ontario industries?

Hon Mr Laughren: This government would never knowingly introduce any program that would harm our competitiveness. I think, to be fair, the member opposite should appreciate the fact that the conference board study did not include all taxes when it was comparing the competitiveness. They did not include, for example, payroll taxes, and there are lots of cases where payroll taxes are lower in this province than in other jurisdictions. The conference board admits that, by the way. They are not pretending that this is an all-inclusive study.

To be fair, I think we have a lot going for us in this province in terms of competitiveness that is not just measured by comparing taxes. We have an educational system and an infrastructure second to none in Ontario, and we intend to maintain that.

Mr Carr: The problem is that the business community does not believe the Treasurer. The Canadian Federation of Independent Business says: "This government is good at listening. They parrot back what we say, but then we do not see any results." The Ontario Chamber of Commerce says, "There is a widespread business perception that the full burden of Ontario's tax system has reached the point where other jurisdictions are more attractive." That is on page 13 of the Ontario chamber's recommendations. "The overall objective of the Fair Tax Commission must not be greater tax revenue."

It is very clear that higher taxes mean fewer jobs, and that translates into fewer moneys for social programs in this province. My question again is to the Treasurer. The Fair Tax Commission is looking at this right now. Will he commit to the people that he will not introduce any more taxes that will drive jobs out of the province?

Hon Mr Laughren: Of course we do not want to drive any jobs out of the province; we want to attract jobs to the province. I think the member opposite would agree that it is—

Mrs Caplan: But you're doing it. The only thing you're managing to do is drive business out of here.

The Speaker: Order, the member for Oriole.

Hon Mr Laughren: I wish the leader of the official opposition would put the member for Oriole on the question period list so she can vent her anger in a more constructive way.

Mr Elston: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: The member has asked questions to the Minister of the Environment and other people at times and we do not get answers. It is nice to know that the Treasurer has asked me to put this member in question period. I would like him to keep his Premier in the House for more than 30 minutes for every question period. If he wants to have a real decent time in this place, then he should start pointing his fingers at his Premier, because I am fed up with his stuff.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Would the Leader of the Opposition sit down. Things were moving along reasonably well. If we could just have everyone relax a little, we could conclude the question and response between the member for Oakville South and the Treasurer.

Hon Mr Laughren: Thank you, Mr Speaker. There has never been a Premier as accessible to this House or to the people of the province as the Premier who sits in that chair right now.

Interjections.

Mr Elston: On a point of order, Mr Speaker—

The Speaker: What is out of order?

Mr Elston: What is out of order is that he is suggesting things that are completely not true. It is not true that the member for York South is available to this House. He has not been here more than one day this week. He was here two days last week.

We are not going to take this type of shenanigans any more. They cannot create some kind of illusion for that person. He is not paying any attention to this House. He was off in Skokie, Illinois, on Monday. He was at the ball game last night, but he was not in this House. He was in his office yesterday during question period, his itinerary told us. But he had better start coming clean with the people. He cannot take us down that path any more.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. There is nothing in the standing orders that directs the Speaker to be involved in members' attendance. I do appreciate that it is a point of contention between two sides of the House. The clock continues to tick and the Ontarians sitting at home in their living rooms, 350,000 of them who watch us every day, would, I am sure, like us to continue with questions and responses.

Hon Mr Laughren: The member for Oakville South asked a good question, a most appropriate question and a serious one. I want to assure him we are very much aware of the whole competitiveness question of Ontario vis-à-vis other jurisdictions. That is absolutely critical to us. If we are going to have a competitive province and are going to be able to put ourselves in place for sustained economic growth and economic renewal in the years to come, I believe we simply must maintain our level of education and of the infrastructure that is in place, including post-secondary education, I might add.

As well, we get a lot of comments on how the health care system in this province makes us a lot more competitive than a lot of other jurisdictions. It is time we started saying that.

The Speaker: Could the Treasurer conclude his remarks.

Hon Mr Laughren: Finally, I want to assure the member that I do not think anybody has met with the business community and been more accessible to the business community over the last year than I and the Premier.

NON-PROFIT HOUSING

Mr Fletcher: My question is for the Minister of Housing. The need for affordable housing continues to be one of the most pressing problems we face across Ontario. In my own riding there are far too many people who do not have access to safe, secure and affordable housing. During recessionary times the demand for affordable housing rises sharply.

I know her ministry, in co-operation with many community groups, is continuing to develop much-needed housing. However, it has come to my attention that the deadline for the Homes Now program, which was to provide up to 30,000 non-profit housing units, expired yesterday. What happens to those projects which have been working towards commitment but have missed yesterday's deadline?

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order.

Hon Ms Gigantes: I am pleased to recall for the members of this Legislature that the Homes Now program, which was started by the previous government and which had a commitment of 30,000, was extended, in terms of the deadline for the program, as of last October by our earlier Minister of Housing. The deadline is indeed September 30. As of August 1990 only 5,000 units had been committed under that program. As of the end of this week, we expect 25,000 units will be committed. We feel we have made great strides forward in this year.

The allocations that still can be made will be made on a case-by-case basis. We have had a lot of applications from community-based groups, as the member points out. They will be considered on a case-by-case basis from now on.

Mr Fletcher: Exactly how many of the units that have been committed actually have people living in them now?

Hon Ms Gigantes: I am pleased to report that 7,000 units are now completed, and we expect a full 30,000 to be completed by 1993.

MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

Mr H. O'Neil: My question is to the Minister of Health. It relates something today with the Treasurer's announcement about universal health care and long-term health care.

Last June, I made the minister aware of the large number of suicides in the Hastings and Prince Edward area: Seven teenagers and 22 adults committed suicide over the course of one year. At that time she promised to look into the matter to see if she and her ministry could provide assistance. I also mentioned that the Hastings and Prince Edward counties' mental health program had a waiting period of approximately three to six months for mental health counselling dealing with suicidal tendencies and sexual abuse. I am told by many of my members that these same conditions exist in other ridings across the province.

What has the minister done to eliminate this problem?

Hon Ms Lankin: The member raises an important issue, one which I took seriously when he raised it at the time. We did take a look at the mental health budget and the programs that are in place in that area.

I think all of us agree that spending in that area needs to increase over a period of time, but we have to do it in a way that recognizes there is an overall allocation within the health budget right now, and it has to be done by slowing growth in some of the high-growth areas. That is part of the process we are doing, trying to find money for reallocation.

Specifically with respect to the community the member raised, the member knows we have spoken about it since. When he alerted me that he was speaking to some people in the community and was hoping for a more positive response from me in terms of actual dollars at this time, I indicated to him that I was unable to provide any particular grant right now but I would try to get someone from the ministry to work with the district health council and the community mental health agencies there to look at how the money is being spent to see if there is a way they could reallocate within their own program to address this very important need in that community.

1520

Mr H. O'Neil: I realize the minister is telling me she is going to be looking at it, but that is basically what she told me four or five months ago. They tell me that the waiting lists now, rather than being three or six months, have gone up, in some cases, to approximately nine months.

Years ago, when we were in government and the members opposite were in opposition, although the minister was not there, if there were one death in the community or one person held up from being operated on—here I have 20-some people in a matter of one year, not only in my riding but in the riding of the Minister of Agriculture and Food and the riding of the member for Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings, 20-some people who have committed suicide and the minister is telling me she is going to have another look at it and see whether she can get some help or allocate some more dollars.

I appreciate the minister's intentions, but we cannot wait. We have to have something done on it. It is an important matter. I would hate to come back to the House in a week or a month or a few months and say, "We've had another suicide and the minister hasn't done anything about it." Let's get off our butts and let's get moving and get something done about it.

Hon Ms Lankin: I can understand the frustration the member is expressing. I did not say or commit that I was going to look at it again. In fact, I looked at it and was unable to provide any more money at this time. What I did indicate is that we would offer assistance to help the groups in that area see if they could designate or target some of their programs to this, if that is felt to be an area that is lacking and needs more assistance.

At this point, I cannot find more dollars to put into a program until—

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order.

Hon Ms Lankin: Thank you, Mr Speaker—until we successfully work together to try and bring down the rate of growth in some of the institutional areas and other areas.

There are no new dollars. If the member will look at the budget, we have increased dollars in this area. I would hate for him to come back in a week or two weeks and tell me someone else has committed suicide. I am sure he or someone in this House, or maybe even in my own riding, will be able to say that. These are very difficult times. People are facing incredible human problems out there. I look to the north and I see the people facing problems. I look at native communities. In terms of the rate of suicide, it is very serious. We are trying to designate money towards that, but there is not new program money that I can give to the member's riding at this time.

EDUCATION PROGRAM EVALUATION

Mrs Cunningham: I have a question for the Minister of Education. The Minister of Education has stated publicly that Ontario will not participate in the national school achievement indicators program because the test will not match the demographic profile of students in the province.

Last evening, on The Journal on CBC, the Honourable Jim Dinning, the Minister of Education for Alberta stated—

Interjection.

The Speaker: The member for Oriole, please come to order. Will the member for London North take her seat for a moment, please.

Interjection.

The Speaker: I asked the member for Oriole to please come to order. I am trying to hear the question as posed by the member for London North and I would appreciate your co-operation in being able to do that. The member for London North.

Mrs Cunningham: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I will try again.

Last night, on CBC's The Journal, the Honourable Jim Dinning, the Minister of Education for Alberta, whom I know the minister has been in touch with, stated that the Council of Ministers of Education, Canada, could accommodate Ontario's concerns about gender or racial bias and the length of time a student has been in Canada.

Given the short time frame right now and in light of that statement and in light of the positive statements made by the Premier last Thursday, I am wondering if the minister will take the opportunity at this time to advise this House of how the discussions on national testing are progressing and whether she is seriously reconsidering the decision not to participate in the national testing program.

Hon Mrs Boyd: From the very beginning our position has been that if we can come to an agreement among the ministries of education around the issues of demographics, the consultation period, the curriculum tie, all of those issues that are so important in this, if we can come to that agreement we certainly will be prepared to go back into an active stance from our observer stance.

I asked for that in December. I asked for it again in February. Finally, when we had our meeting last week, the rest of the ministers, who of course had begun to encounter exactly the same difficulties in selling this to their own provinces, agreed to try to negotiate a settlement. The position we are in right now is that we will meet again before Christmas. Our deputies are charged with trying to come to an agreement in a memorandum of understanding to which we are all bound in terms of the project.

The Speaker: Would the minister conclude her response, please.

Hon Mrs Boyd: If that occurs we will go ahead with it, but if it does not occur we will maintain our observer status.

Mrs Cunningham: I am obviously encouraging the minister, in the best way I can, to come to some kind of agreement. It was pointed out to me just yesterday by a group of parents from the North York board that indeed in some of our schools—and parents are very concerned about this matter—there is a lack of marking going on around correcting spelling. It may seem like a simple matter, but these are the kinds of questions I think the public is not quite up to speed on when it comes to the kind of expectations we have in our school system, and they of course vary from community to community.

We are looking at standardized testing results, certainly internationally—and we have some results there—and we certainly know about the Benchmarks project in Ontario, but I think at this time in the history of our country parents are very concerned about how we do match up across Canada. I would just like to encourage the minister, and perhaps she would take the opportunity, to tell us whether she has been able to get the teachers to talk more positively with regard to the demands, I would say, by parents that we do have standards within our system and that they are measured across the country.

Hon Mrs Boyd: I think the member is well aware that teachers are also concerned about accountability and they are tired of the attacks on them by the Conservative right that they are not concerned about accountability. Teachers in this province are very concerned about that, but they are equally concerned about the way in which standardized tests have been used to further disadvantage the marginalized in our society, and that is what we intend to protect them against. We are absolutely in concert with our professional teaching partners when it comes to ensuring that any testing that is done does not further marginalize children.

ATTENDANCE OF PREMIER

Mr Mahoney: On a point of privilege, Mr Speaker: You will note that during the question period there was some acrimony over the absence of the Premier. I would like the Speaker to help me out with a ruling.

At approximately 40 minutes to go on the clock, my House leader informed the Premier that I had a question to place to him at some point during question period. He indicated he would stay for that, yet at 24 minutes to go he got up and left. Along with him, of course, the entourage of media leaves. One cannot blame the media because they have to follow the Premier out to get the answers. My point of privilege is that I believe my rights as a member have been violated by the Premier, who shows no interest in staying in this House to hear questions by members of the opposition directed directly towards him.

I would like the Speaker to rule whether or not it is indeed a violation of my privileges and a violation of the rights of all the people of Ontario who would like to hear the opinion of the Premier on legitimate questions being posed by members of the opposition. It is our job and our responsibility, and I submit it is his job and his responsibility to stay in his place so that we can do our job.

The Speaker: To the member for Mississauga West, fortunately or otherwise, there is nothing in the standing orders which is of assistance to either him or me on this matter. It is, however, perhaps just a friendly suggestion, a topic of discussion for the House leaders at their regular weekly meetings, but there is nothing in the standing orders that assists me or him in this matter. I appreciate his drawing it to my attention, however.

1530

Mrs Cunningham: On the same point of order, Mr Speaker: I too would like to take this opportunity. I suppose sometimes the members opposite think the work we do in opposition is somewhat trite, but it happens to be part of the democratic process. I also believe, certainly since the time I have sat in this House, that it has been the priority of the Premier to stay as long as possible. The previous Premier would always tell us if he was leaving early. Specifically, today the Premier did not say he was leaving early. There have been times when he has advised us and therefore we rearranged our questions.

I know it is not within your purview, Mr Speaker, but I think it is our responsibility to advise the government House leader that we too are concerned that this has happened three times in the last two weeks. It is not a good beginning, so we would very much appreciate the Premier staying in the House till the end of question period, as far as reasonably possible, and at least advise us if he is leaving.

The Speaker: If the member for London North, no doubt as she always does, was listening intently to the response I provided for the member for Mississauga West, the same applies of course. I appreciate it whenever members bring concerns to my attention. It reflects of course an interest in the parliamentary process and that is something I naturally applaud.

CERTIFICATES OF CONGRATULATION

Hon F. Wilson: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: In the matter of the certificates raised by the member for Quinte, I would like to inform the House that I have already instituted an inquiry into the matter and I will report to the House when I get the results.

PETITIONS

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

Mr Kwinter: I have a petition signed by about 200 people.

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas Her Majesty the Queen, at her coronation in 1953, took a personal oath to the people of Canada, and Canadians have always reciprocated with oaths of allegiance and service to the person of the sovereign;

"Whereas it is our right and duty to take oaths of allegiance and service in such form;

"Whereas Ontario regulation 144/91 made under the Police Services Act, 1990 denies Ontarians this right;

"We, the undersigned residents of Ontario, loyal to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, Queen of Canada, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to resolve that His Honour the Lieutenant Governor in Council be requested to revoke Ontario regulation 144/91 and restore the traditional oath of service to Her Majesty for police personnel in Ontario."

PORNOGRAPHY

Mr Carr: I am pleased to table a petition signed by concerned residents of Oakville and Burlington and surrounding areas which reads as follows:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"We, the undersigned residents of Ontario, draw the attention of the Legislative Assembly to the following:

"That the production, sale and rental of pornographic and obscene material in Canada has a direct negative and destructive influence leading to sexual assault upon women and children, including degradation, exploitation and humiliation;...

"That elimination of the production, sale and rental of pornographic and obscene material in Canada would decrease the incidence of violence against women and children.

"Therefore, your petitioners call upon the Legislative Assembly to eliminate the production, sale and rental of pornographic and obscene material."

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

Mr J. Wilson: I am privileged to rise today and present a petition to the Legislature of Ontario that reads as follows:

"Whereas the Queen of Canada has long been a symbol of national unity for Canadians from all walks of life and from all ethnic backgrounds;

"Whereas the people of Canada are currently facing a constitutional crisis which could potentially result in the breakup of the federation and are in need of unifying symbols;

"We, the undersigned, respectfully petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to restore the oath to the Queen for Ontario's police officers."

That is signed by several concerned residents from the villages of Angus and Tottenham in my riding of Simcoe West, and I too have affixed my name to this petition.

NURSING HOMES

Mrs Y. O'Neill: I have a petition signed by 23 people, to which I have affixed my signature.

"We, the undersigned, request that the government of Ontario immediately rectify the inequity in funding between nursing homes and homes for the aged. We strongly support the Ontario Nursing Home Association in their efforts to provide better care for residents of nursing homes through increased funding."

Mrs Sullivan: I have a petition which I have signed which reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned, request that the government of Ontario immediately rectify the inequity in funding between nursing homes and homes for the aged. We strongly support the Ontario Nursing Home Association in their efforts to provide better care for residents of nursing homes through increased funding."

ORDERS OF THE DAY

POWER CORPORATION AMENDMENT ACT, 1991 LOI DE 1991 MODIFIANT LA LOI SUR LA SOCIÉTÉ DE L'ÉLECTRICITÉ

Resuming the adjourned debate on the motion for second reading of Bill 118, An Act to amend the Power Corporation Act.

Suite du débat ajourné sur la motion visant la deuxième lecture du projet de loi 118, Loi modifiant la Loi sur la Société de l'électricité.

Mr Drainville: I am glad to rise again in the House to continue my remarks on Bill 118, an Act to amend the Power Corporation Act.

I want to deal with some comments that were made yesterday in debate, in particular by the member for Mississauga South. In her remarks to the House, which I must say were certainly lengthy, she indicated 8 or 10 times that we were a socialist government. In terms of the direction we have tried to take in introducing Bill 118, I want to be very clear about this: Yes, indeed, we are a social democratic government. I am very proud of that fact. I remember the words of an august member of the House of Commons, one of our leaders, J. S. Woodsworth. He spoke these words one time, which I think are germane to our considerations on this particular bill:

"I am not afraid of the word 'socialism,' which comes from a perfectly good Latin word which means 'comradeship.' That means that today we as individuals are no longer living isolated lives, that no nation is any longer living an isolated life, but rather that we are living in a society in 1,001 complicated relationships and that we must adapt our political ideals and our political institutions and our political policies to meet the new situation that confronts us."

When J. S. Woodsworth said these words, he was speaking about times such as we live in today. We have been confronted with difficulties as we have taken government. We look at a corporation which has had its difficulties in the last number of years, specifically in terms of the overruns that have been raised in terms of the nuclear option that Ontario has chosen. The reality is that the people of this province are concerned about the direction of Ontario Hydro. In fact, in my own riding—perhaps those of us who are in the rural areas are closer to these concerns—I can say that people have repeatedly said to me that we cannot continue to see Ontario Hydro go in the direction it is going.

There are members in this House who are against this bill, who say this bill is draconian and the government should not be going in the direction it is. They have a right, as opposition members, to put forward those points of view, but there are very concrete and very necessary reasons why our government has decided upon the course it has chosen.

The legislation and the changes we are bringing in here through these amendments to the Power Corporation Act will increase Hydro's accountability and responsiveness to public concerns and priorities. That is first, and it is important. Second, it will ensure that Hydro's activities are in the best interests of the people of this province. Third, we will remove barriers which up to this point have hindered Hydro's ability to comply with government policy directives. Fourth, we will open up the policy direction process. Last, we will allow Hydro to retain its independence to implement its day-to-day activities.

1540

We are not taking over Hydro, but what we are doing is ensuring that the energy policy which is germinated by the government is given due consideration and that Hydro reflects the policy of this government. If that seems a strange thing to members of the opposition, I am surprised. It seems to me to make perfect sense.

The Minister of Energy, when he stands up in this House, has the responsibility to ensure that Hydro is doing its job. If there is a complaint about Hydro, do we not see opposition members rise in the House and complain to the Minister of Energy? There is a relationship between the government and Ontario Hydro. All we are trying to ensure through these amendments is that this tie between Ontario Hydro and the government is made more effective.

Again, I want to assure this House and assure those members of the public who are watching today that we are saying that the utility itself will continue to be a public utility and will control its day-to-day activities, but what we want to ensure is the economic, environmental and social wellbeing of the people of this province.

Further to that, I would like to talk a little bit, if I can, about the areas where we can be perhaps more proactive as a government. We realize that in terms of the energy policy of the government we need to look very seriously at new ways of dealing with energy sources.

For a decade now we have been hearing of the difficulties with fossil fuels and how limited they are. We have talked about CFCs going into the air. We have talked about the need for conservation. We have talked about the global warming trend. These issues, layer upon layer of issues, are interrelated to how we involve ourselves with Ontario Hydro, so what we need to do is to allow the government the freedom to be able to give the kind of direction which is important. By opening up the policy direction process, what we are going to begin to do is give a clear indication of the new energy directions the government is going to be pursuing.

The changes to this legislation will clarify the government's responsibility to establish these new energy directions and enhance Hydro's ability as a public utility to respond to them. For the future, we see a further refinement of these new energy directions in these areas: enhanced economic benefits to northern and aboriginal people. We also see that we will have increased energy efficiency, including fuel substitution where that is appropriate, and more parallel generation, particularly using renewable resources such as small hydro. This will provide significant opportunities for remote communities and aboriginal communities.

Just recently, since I have been elected and have come to this House, we have had a small hydro generating plant established at Elliot Falls in Victoria county. This local initiative has been a tremendous boon to the community. As we begin to move more and more support towards this kind of entrepreneurial leadership within the community and to seeing more and more power from the local communities, we are not only going to be able to see conservation efforts given the boost that is needed but we are also going to see that we are going to be able to provide much-needed entrepreneurial skills.

Elliot Falls is now producing a significant amount of energy for the local area. We are now looking at Fenelon Falls, which is a significant area for possible generation, and we are also looking at the Irondale River—all in Victoria county.

I am looking forward to those days when we can begin to see these kinds of initiatives take place, strategic procurement to develop a new industrial sector in Ontario which will supply a wide range of energy conservation products. We need to begin to move clearly, as quickly as possible for us as a government and for the private companies, into areas where energy conservation products can be produced across this province.

We might even in five years or 10 years hence see Ontario as a place where there is great leadership in this particular field. Again, this all hinges on our ability to give direction to Ontario Hydro through these amendments to the Power Corporation Act.

I would like to address in a more substantive way some of the concerns I have about the structure of Ontario Hydro, the board, and the chairperson of the board becoming the chief executive officer. Perhaps I should read into Hansard a few bits of the amendments that are suggested. I would like to do that because I think people need to be clear about what the government is doing in this bill.

For instance, we see in section 1 that, "There shall be a board of directors of the corporation consisting of a chairperson, a vice-chairperson, a president, the Deputy Minister of Energy and not more than 18 other directors"; that, "The deputy minister shall not vote at any meeting of the board," that deputy minister being an ex officio member of the board but helping to maintain that all-important link between the government and its energy program, and, of course, the board of Hydro; and that, "The chairperson is the chief executive officer of the corporation."

Those changes to some might seem like window dressing, to others might seem not particularly important or startling changes; but they are startling changes. Some of the members who have raised this issue are quite correct to say these are significant departures, but they are significant in the way that the opposition members have not indicated. They are significant because what it is providing is the framework for government directives to be taken seriously.

There are members in the House who decry this move. I read from yesterday's Hansard some remarks by the honourable member for Mississauga South, who said:

"The bill also allows the Minister of Energy to issue policy directives approved by the Lieutenant Governor in Council that would be binding on the corporation. For people listening or watching, we perhaps should just explain what this means, because this is the most significant part of Bill 118.

"This is the part that allows the Minister of Energy to issue policy directives approved by the Lieutenant Governor in Council. Everyone knows that a policy directive approved by the Lieutenant Governor in Council is in fact a policy directive of the government of the day."

Indeed it is, and that is precisely the point. To have heard the member for Mississauga South yesterday would almost by implication indicate that such a heinous act on the part of the government has never been perpetrated on the people of Ontario, that it is indeed unacceptable for the government to move in this particular direction.

Let me give an example within Canada itself. I have the documents right here—and I would indicate this to the honourable member for Mississauga South—in terms of federal legislation, the Financial Administration Act. In terms of the federal Parliament and its relationship to crown corporations, its legislation is precisely what we are putting in this Power Corporation Act. It is precisely the same kind of thing. Why? Because it has been seen, in the wisdom of those who govern in Canada, that it is necessary to maintain a link between the government, its energy policy and other policies of government and those crown corporations that are there, to make sure that those things are carried out.

I am also going to read into the record the various parts of this Financial Administration Act which will indicate the parallel to our own Power Corporation Act amendments put forth by this government. I read, in division 1 of Corporate Affairs, accountability to Parliament:

"89(1) The Governor in Council may, on the recommendation of the appropriate minister, give a directive to any parent crown corporation, if the Governor in Council is of the opinion that it is in the public interest to do so.

"(2) Before a directive is given to a parent crown corporation, the appropriate minister shall consult the board of directors of the corporation with respect to the contents and the effect of that directive."

Subsection (3), and this is very important:

"The directors of a parent crown corporation that is given a directive shall ensure that the directive is implemented in a prompt and efficient manner, and if in doing, they act in accordance with section 115, they are not accountable for any consequences arising from the implementation of the directive."

1550

Going further down to subsection (5):

"Compliance by a parent crown corporation with a directive is deemed to be in the best interests of the corporation."

Obviously it is understood in the federal House, in the federal Parliament and on the federal scene that it is necessary to maintain both a communications link and a policy link between the federal government and crown corporations. So it is that in the amendments to the Power Corporation Amendment Act, that is Bill 118, the government of Ontario is saying precisely that: no more than that and certainly no less than that.

I would like to dwell just very briefly on some of the comments that have been made about our government's approach to the nuclear option. As the members know, we have a moratorium on nuclear power at this point in time, and there are many reasons why that moratorium was put on, not the least of which is, especially in this recessionary time, that there are very significant questions as to whether we as a government can continue to go in a direction which is going to cost more billions and billions of dollars at a time when we do not have that kind of money to spend.

I might add that we are speaking about billions of dollars of expenditure on the part of Ontario Hydro. In that light we have ensured that we have put a moratorium on the development of nuclear stations, and at the same time, we have directed that Ontario Hydro redirect its spending at this point in time towards conservation.

There are those members again who decry this move to conservation. They say it is a motherhood issue. It is a motherhood issue but, more than that, it is an issue that we have not grappled with in this province up to this point in time. It is so serious for us that we have to begin to make inroads in this area or we are going to suffer dire consequences in this province in the future.

It is time for us to stop equivocating about conservation and saying, "We'll devote a little bit of money to that, but we will go full steam ahead in every other area, spending billions of dollars, and maybe some day conservation will become something that is important." We cannot go that route any more, and the government has been clear on this issue since the day it was elected and put the moratorium on nuclear power. What we have to begin to do is take seriously conservation in the province of Ontario.

The government has also directed Hydro to increase its efforts to develop supply alternatives such as parallel generation to make better use of existing facilities and to give a higher priority to the environmental assessment of Ontario's hydroelectric potential. The Environmental Assessment Board, in its consideration of Hydro's demand-supply plan, will provide its judgement on the future of new nuclear power in the longer term. The board's review will provide an opportunity for the public to participate in this judgement.

I want to say that in the Power Corporation Amendment Act we have tried to bring to bear a rational view of our relationship between the government and Hydro. I was reminded of a quote from Edmund Burke, who once wrote about statesmanship: "A disposition to preserve and an ability to improve, taken together, would be my standard of statesmanship."

I want to say about this bill and this initiative on the part of the government that we have a disposition to preserve. We have not changed Hydro unalterably. We have not tried to mangle it as an agency of the province, as a public utility. We continue to give it the support that it needs to be given.

We also have an ability to improve, because if we do not improve Ontario Hydro's mandate, if we do not improve the link between the government and this public utility, then we will not be able to do the job we must do, and this is create better power for the people of Ontario, more power at a better cost, and in the long run, we will not be able to conserve. That need for conservation is something that is undoubted by anyone in this government at this time.

Mr Conway: Just a very quick question to the member. He made reference to a new hydroelectric plant in Victoria county. I think he said at Elliot Falls. My question is a very simple one. Is that a brand-new facility or is that a small group of people who have taken over an old water-powered plant?

The Acting Speaker (Mr Farnan): Would you like to wait and then in your summation you can respond to the various questions? Continuing the rotation, are there any other comments?

Mr McGuinty: The existing legislation provides that if the government is to issue a directive to Ontario Hydro, that directive must be in keeping with Hydro's mandate to supply power at cost. The member's government recently issued a directive to Ontario Hydro to donate $65 million to the northern Ontario heritage fund. Does the member consider that to be in compliance with the existing legislation, and how can he tell me as a ratepayer that is in keeping with my interest to pay for my power at cost?

Mr Drainville: I am glad that I have been asked these questions by the honourable member for Renfrew North and the honourable member for Ottawa South. I will try to answer them as best I can.

I have spoken about this small project in Victoria county because I take some pride in it, not that I had anything whatsoever to do with it, but rather that it shows the entrepreneurial spirit which is very much alive in our riding and it is very important.

There was at one time a small generating plant there back in the 1920s or 1930s. There was virtually nothing left of that. It was a shell and there were just some outbuildings and a few forms. What they were able to do was take the shell basically and totally rebuild a small generator. In the process of doing so—it was totally on the initiative of some private interests who came in and in a period of time working with Ontario Hydro were able to convince Hydro of their very goodwill—they were able to obtain that property and build that generator.

I was there at the opening of that and I have to say that even in the period of time that they have been generating some electricity, they have been remarkably successful in providing more power actually than they had anticipated. I want to say that is good. Also, in Fenelon Falls they are going to be looking towards doing this, and in Irondale.

I want to say to the honourable member for Ottawa South—and I am sorry that I do not have very much time now to give full value to him—that I do believe, in terms of northern Ontario, that the direction Bill 118 is going in is ultimately for the benefit of the whole province and that the decision that has been made is a decision which is going to benefit the whole province, particularly the people in northern Ontario, but also across the board. The initiative on the part of the government is a sound one in the terms that the honourable member has put forward.

1600

Mr Conway: I am very anxious to participate in this debate on Bill 118. I want to thank the member for Victoria-Haliburton for answering my question, and the answer was more or less what I thought it would be. Let me just say to my friend the member for Victoria-Haliburton, and any other member of the Legislature—they cannot participate in this because their conflict commitments would preclude it—there is no better business in the province today than acquiring water rights that may have been abandoned decades ago.

I am not at all surprised to hear that Elliot Falls is producing not only more power than was anticipated by its sponsors, but I daresay its profit—and I do not begrudge them this at all—is probably much greater than they might have imagined, and I suspect would roll the eyes of most members of the Legislature. I only say that because I have a number of people who are engaged in those kinds of enterprises in my own county and in eastern Ontario. I think it is all to the better and it ought to be encouraged, so I am delighted to know it is going on in Victoria county.

I have a fair bit to say on this bill and I beg the indulgence of the Speaker and the House this afternoon, because I will take a fair bit of time to speak to Bill 118, An Act to amend the Power Corporation Act. I want to set the scene by indicating where I am coming from as I make these remarks.

Firstly and foremost—if that is a word; it probably is not—I am speaking as the member for Renfrew North, a large rural constituency in eastern Ontario where electricity, hydro rates and availability, I can assure members, are what they are today, what they were when my grandfather was here 50 years ago and what they have been since the turn of the century: one of the most, if not the most, significant issues of ongoing public concern to the average household, the average ratepayer, in my county.

I speak also on behalf of two utilities, the Pembroke Public Utilities Commission and the Deep River Public Utilities Commission, both of which wrote me and one of which, the Pembroke commission, actually asked for a lengthy meeting about a month ago to indicate in some detail its very real concern with the policy that informs Bill 118.

I want to be very clear that what I have to say, I hope, reflects the views of the ordinary citizens of Renfrew county, where I would suggest there is a greater than average—in some cases, much greater than average—dependence on electricity than in much of the rest of the province, simply because in those very rural parts of my county there is no alternative, none whatsoever.

As well, I feel duty-bound as the member of the Legislature for the area to reflect some of the concerns that the Pembroke and Deep River public utilities commissions have expressed to me, both in meetings and in formal correspondence.

I want to say as well that in my time as a member of the Legislature, any time a Hydro bill is presented, it is a time of significance for the Legislature. I have been struck, quite frankly, by the relative disinterest in this bill in the early days. I know, as I think most members do, that the Municipal Electric Association has mounted quite an active lobby in the last three, four or five weeks. And I dare say most members have probably been canvassed, as I have, in person or by phone or letter, to express the views of local utilities.

It has been my experience over the 16 years I have been a member of this Legislature that Hydro is, and ought always to be, a matter of the first order of importance to this Legislature. It is for my constituents at present a real concern. They have been reading in the public press in the past number of weeks, in communities like Barry's Bay and Palmer Rapids and Killaloe, and reading reports from the chairman of Ontario Hydro, Mr Marc Eliesen, that he predicts bulk hydro rates are going to increase over the next three years by something like 45%.

In virtually all cases, that is going to be increased by local factors. In my part of rural Ontario, for example, this year's bulk power rate increase of 12% is going to translate, I would suggest, to something like 13.5% to 15% for most of the hydro consumers in my area, simply because of the economies of scale which are not there in rural eastern Ontario. It might be somewhat less in the city of Pembroke, where something like 15% of the power is bought from Pembroke Electric Light, whose source of power is across the river in the province of Quebec. But I suggest that most of my constituents will be looking this year at electrical power rate increases of something in the order of 13%, 14%, 15%.

As the member for Renfrew North in the Legislature, I have to tell the members, my friends in this assembly, that for farmers and loggers and sawmillers who are going through a gut-wrenching depression, where their markets are declining to the point of disappearing, where their colleagues who work in shoe stores in Renfrew and Pembroke and Eganville are themselves having difficulties holding on to a job, to read in the Ottawa Citizen or the Eganville Leader that their power rate is going to go up by probably 15% this year and 50% over the next three years is a matter of very grave concern.

I repeat, if you are a dairy farmer in Westmeath township or if you are a sawmiller in Hagarty township, in Renfrew county, you have no alternative. The illustrious member for Oxford has a county that is famous country-wide for its dairy industry. He will know just what kind of electrical consumption the typical dairy farm requires. To tell that farmer in Zorra township or in Renfrew county that the rate is going to increase by 50% over the next three years while that farmer is faced with the pressures of international agricultural competition is to get that citizen's attention in a way in which I suspect few other things we do in this assembly will get his attention.

I want to say as one member of the assembly that I support entirely the restraint of the government of the day. I deeply regret that they did not understand six or eight months ago what I have to believe their best and good advisers were telling them, that the recession was running much more deeply than anyone had predicted. Speaking on behalf of my constituents, I can say without any fear of political recrimination or contradiction that I, like they, will support this restraint initiative. I am going to debate some of the particulars of that, obviously.

What am I to say to people in rural Renfrew county who read that their electricity rates are going to rise by 44% over the next three years as a minimum, according to the chairman of Hydro? They read in the same paper that the chief executive officer and chairman, newly appointed to Ontario Hydro, is going to have about a 300% increase in his salary. As the Deputy Minister of Energy, he was earning $125,000. As the new CEO at Hydro, he will earn minimally $400,000 and I gather will have a pension entitlement that will make their ears curl.

How can they take this? What are they to do? They will accept the argument of restraint, but to see their Hydro bill increasing by 15% annually for the next three years, and to read in the same paper from the same source that he cannot do the job for less than $400,000, is to present a credibility gap as bad as the one that sunk Lyndon Johnson in 1967-68. They would want me to raise that concern on their behalf, and I shall return to this at a somewhat later point in these remarks.

One of the aspects I hear in my communities is that people are out of work everywhere. In Renfrew county the forestry sector is one of our staples. It is very energy intensive. I totally agree with my friends opposite that we have to do more in the area of conservation. I could not agree more.

I would submit that we could do one thing above and beyond all else that would stimulate activity in that area. In fact, it explains why Elliot Falls in Victoria county is in existence today and was not even thought of 10 years ago. It is simply the buyback rate. I did not check the data, but Hydro's buyback rate in the last six or eight years has increased significantly. If members want to get more of the Elliot Falls or if in my area they want to stimulate very interesting co-generation, there is a way to do it, that is, to fundamentally re-examine the way in which the buyback rate is constructed.

1610

Without any significant government investment, the government will get a lot of entrepreneurship out there that will give it added capacity in places where it needs it and we need it and in ways I think we can all support.

In my county, for example, we are looking now at a situation where there are sawmill residues and all kinds of freestanding junk timber for which there are no markets. In the case of sawmill residues, the Minister of the Environment is saying: "You can't keep doing what you've been doing over the decades. You've got to dispose of that in some way." It appears, on the basis of a lot of the work that people like myself and the very distinguished member from north Hastings have been associated with, one of the potential ways is to get involved with co-generation using that kind of material, the so-called wood-fired electrical generating plants. But I can say that they are probably not going to work in north Hastings or in west Renfrew or in north Addington if that buyback rate does not move upward.

I have to tell my friends that my constituents, who are looking at some of the bleakest economic circumstances they have ever known, are horrified to see some of the government-imposed costs that continually float out of this place; hydro being one of them, workers' compensation being another.

I understand, in a day and age of political correctness, what one can and cannot say, but I talk to Ed Broadbent's ordinary Canadians, whom I represent, not some 10-speed trendy living in the Annex in downtown Toronto, not some wonderful ambassador for high yuppiedom living in—I will not mention another urban community I could think of—who of course have all the answers in these debates because they have disposable incomes, in many cases drawn from the public purse. They have alternatives.

There is a tragic irony in this debate around conservation. I live in Pembroke, for example. The government's off-electricity policy is very easy for me because all I have to do is what I did four years ago, that is, take out my oil furnace, look at the price structure and see that electricity is probably not competitive. And I accepted a lot of the arguments that were being advanced; I sat on the select committee on energy for years and I heard the illustrious member for Ottawa Centre, the now Minister of Housing, go on at some length about these matters. One of the things she would argue and my colleagues argued as well was that electricity is not a very good way to space-heat, for lack of a better phrase. So what did I do? I turned to an alternative I had, which was natural gas.

But my friend from Orono knows that if you live in the heart of rural eastern Ontario, in almost all cases you are miles from natural gas. The thing that my constituents are fed up with, and quite frankly the thing that I am fed up with, is this argument around conservation which ignores the reality of rural Ontario. It is infuriating to hear that lecture—from good people, who believe it no doubt, because in Kingston or in Pickering or in Yorkview or in Sarnia you can believe it, because you have an alternative.

There are hundreds of thousands of people in rural Ontario who have no alternative in terms of natural gas. What are they to do? Because conservation means one thing. I will give credit to the proponents; they have never denied their objective. In pure economic theory, I suppose it makes some sense: Drive the rates upward and drive them up dramatically.

If you are faced with that kind of price pressure in Brantford, you will probably do what I did, if you did not do it before I did it, and you will switch, because you have alternatives.

The dairy farmer in Oxford, the small sawmiller in Palmer Rapids, in west Renfrew county, which probably is the only private sector employer for miles around, employs 25 of these people. I was in a sawmill in my riding the other day and I tell members the wreckage in that sector right now is unbelievable. Few people are working and it is going to be some time before those jobs return. I hope most of them return, but realistically a lot of them are not coming back.

This sawmiller said to me, "Do you know what my Hydro bill here is?" I said no, I did not and he said: "My Hydro bill is $575,000. Do you know what a 45% increase on that base means to me over the next few years? It's almost a quarter of a million bucks. Where am I going to get it? If you've got an alternative out there, will you please come and tell me what it is. I'd be much happier to take that quarter of a million bucks and the $575,000 I am now spending and make the conversion. Give me natural gas, give me something, but don't give me the lecture that in the name of conservation I have to pay 45% minimally over the next three years as I survey the wreckage of this forced economy in 1990-91-92."

That question of equity is going to have to be dealt with and quite frankly I do not expect it to be understood or dealt with by the high priests and priestesses of the energy environmental union. I do not think it is really in their interests to concern themselves with some of those issues that affect Ed Broadbent's ordinary Canadians in my constituency.

Again, as a member from rural Ontario, I want to stress how fundamental Hydro is to ordinary life and to any kind of economic development, whether it is that dairy farmer, a local school board or a small business. It is today what it always has been since the arrival of white coal in the early years of this century.

In this respect I thought the member for Mississauga South made a very salient point, that all of us would do well to understand just how vital electricity is to the economic situation in which we find ourselves. I am not here to argue that it is business as usual, because clearly it is not. We have played out a number of options we have enjoyed over the last number of years, this throwaway society we now live in.

For example, I would like to look at the electricity bill for this Legislative Building in 1991 compared to the bill for this place in 1961. I bet it would be just an exponential rate of growth, but of course the cause has been good. This wonderful televised studio this chamber has now become has not come without a price. This lighting, all of this television business at not just millions of dollars of installation, but with the electricity this place now requires, which I suspect is substantially greater than a decade or certainly two or three decades ago.

That is just the order of the day right across the society. We are fast going to reach a point where we are going to have to get beyond the rhetoric and get right into the marrow and, boy, it is going to be interesting. It is going to capture people's attention.

The whole question of electricity is not important just in my area. When I review the modern economic development of Ontario, I think it is fair to say that one of the ingredients, not the only one but one of the most significant factors this jurisdiction has enjoyed in the quality of life, the level of economic prosperity we have enjoyed in the 20th century, is the availability of relatively cheap and reliable hydroelectric power. I do not think anyone is going to dispute that.

When we look at the economic development of Ontario and at the power policy pursued by all governments, whether it was the Whitney government, the Farmer-Labour government of E. C. Drury, the Tory governments, the Liberal government, or the then long years of Tory government culminating with the Miller government in 1985, there were two interesting ingredients in that power policy. One was that it be as cheap as reasonable, and the other that there be some recognition of a made-in-Ontario component. That is why there was always great interest in the hydroelectric power development in this province, for example, and why 25 and 30 years ago the nuclear alternative looked so attractive. We had the intellectual capacity, much of it in my own community of Chalk River. We had the uranium. We could finance to a significant extent the large capital undertakings that projects like Bruce and Darlington require.

1620

But I submit we may now be entering a point in the history of this province where we want to abandon a significant interest in a made-in-Ontario energy policy. I do not want to be too parochial, but it is very interesting, and I want to review in a moment some of the historical development here. It is not just because I happen to be interested; there are some extremely relevant points. I submit that when one looks at the power policy in this province, one of the very salient facts is that all governments have been particularly interested in encouraging to the greatest extent a made-in-Ontario energy policy, because they understood the enormous vulnerability of this economy if they did not have some meaningful control over the supply of energy.

Since the beginning we have taken the availability and reliability of our electricity almost for granted. I happen to live at the Ontario-Quebec border. One of the things about living at the Ontario-Quebec border is that you know people in west Quebec who understand what it is to have interrupted power. To be fair, in the last very few years Hydro-Québec's reliability along the Ottawa River frontier has improved, but relative to our major province to the east, in the main Ontarians have enjoyed not just relatively cheap and relatively abundant power, but what is perhaps very important for home and industry, reliable power.

If you are running a dairy farm, for example, you are not going to be very excited to be told at 4:30 in the morning, for whatever good or bad reason as my friend from Hastings will know, that Hydro cannot supply the juice, because the Holsteins are on a different cycle and they are going to bloody well expect you to be ready when they are. We had all better think and understand that if we are ever going to commit new capacity of whatever kind, it cannot be done overnight. It may take much less time than in the past, but it is certainly going to take some time.

I want to talk a little about the development of Hydro policy in the province, because I think there are some elements in our past that bear on the question before us now. In the course of this speech I want to look at the context of government-Hydro relations over the years, at our public power, at some of the alternatives and at some of the tax policies we have chosen. I want to look very specifically at this bill in its sections, and finally I want to talk about some related questions.

I want to talk for a moment about the history of Ontario Hydro, and begin by pointing out that at the turn of the century what focused the minds of Ontarians about the great hope that hydroelectricity represented was the coal famine of 1902. I submit that if it had not been for serious shortages in the then staple energy supply, Pennsylvania coal, the power politics of this province might have taken a very different course. In 1902, for a variety of reasons I do not intend to engage in, Ontario faced a severe shortage of Pennsylvania coal. They could not do anything about it. They were powerless.

I suggest that was the time this society, both urbanized and industrialized, began to understand there were some places where one could not afford to be that exposed or that vulnerable. It was against that compelling backdrop of an imposed, contrived shortage—it was not accidental; the Pennsylvania cartel worked a very monopolistic mechanism to produce a shortage—it was under those conditions that people in this province really began to look at hydro electricity, the so-called white coal, the magic alternative that would free them from that kind of hijacking and foreign control.

What they saw at that time was almost as scary. They saw the great cataract at Niagara increasingly taken over by the Toronto plutocrats, the Henry Pellatts, the Frederic Nicholls, the William Mackenzies, the people at the electrical development company who seemed on the verge of taking total control of that public resource, running a line to Toronto and holding that city ransom to exorbitant rates that surely would be charged.

Two things happened. One of the most incredible Canadians ever to walk the public stage, a fellow from London, a cigar manufacturer named Adam Beck recently elected to this Legislature, began to take charge of a public power movement that actually had its beginnings in the honourable minister's own community of Kitchener-Waterloo, then called Berlin, where a former distinguished Liberal member of this Legislature, E. W. B. Snider, began to understand what would happen to the farmers and the manufacturers of western Ontario if this Niagara power were constructed in a way to feed Toronto to their exclusion and to their detriment.

The movement that Beck led to create Ontario Hydro is a movement members all ought to read about because it is not what they think it is. I certainly do not want to offend the sensibilities of the member for London North, but I doubt if there has ever been a member of the Legislature quite as determined, tyrannical and outrageous as Adam Beck was. Adam Beck deserves credit for mobilizing public opinion in this province to create a set of political conditions that would create in this jurisdiction what was not happening in a number of the states in the union that is, public power at least to this extent. In the beginning Hydro was really intended as two things. It was going to allow the private interests to generate the power, but there was going to be a municipal co-operative that would distribute that power across the province. The provincial government would do two things: control the rates and provide the financing. That was the beginning of Ontario Hydro.

I think it is important to understand that in the beginning the people of Ontario faced a shortage. They were terrified about what that shortage would mean to the growth and development of their economy and of their community. Beck understood that in a way the former Liberal Premier Ross did not understand it and in a way a lot of other people did not understand it, so in 1906 he sponsored the legislation to create the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, and from its inception in 1906 to his death in 1925 was its first chairman and its presiding genius.

1630

It is very interesting that as developments took place, the mandate of Hydro began to change. I think it was in March 1906, at a time when I suspect very few people came to visit the Legislature and very few people would ever come to picket, that Adam Beck was able to mobilize a group of 1,500 people on the steps of this chamber to demand that a waffling Whitney government move courageously in the direction of public power.

One of the aspects of the public power movement that has always fascinated me is the way Beck manipulated the municipalities and public opinion to get his way. In almost all cases, he got his way. For Adam Beck, I must say, public ownership never meant public accountability. Never in his wildest dreams did he imagine that his beloved Ontario Hydro was going to be subject to the kind of scrutiny that would ordinarily fall to a department of government, which is what HEPCO, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, was for all of those early decades.

Interestingly, during the First World War, all of the abundance that was imagined turned into shortage. In 1917, Ontario Hydro had to do something that no one had contemplated a decade before: it actually built its own generating station at Queenston. I listen to my friends opposite and they rightly point out, "My, my, isn't nuclear power terrible? Didn't you know that Darlington started out at $3 billion and ended up at $13 billion?" It is true. That happened.

But let me just tell members that when Hydro began its first generating station, the famous Chippewa-Queenston project, it was begun in the middle of the first war at an estimated cost of $10 million, an outrageous amount of money in those days. It was completed about five or six years later at a fantastic overrun of $65 million, a sixfold increase. Does anyone stand here today and say: "My, my, Chippewa-Queenston cost six or seven times what it was supposed to cost. We should never again engage the business of building a hydroelectric station in this province"? That logic, of course, is laughable.

Mr Sutherland: What was his productivity?

Mr Conway: My friend the member for Oxford says, "What was his productivity?" The point, I suppose, is that the Hydro-government relationship, which is what I want to talk about in this part of the speech, has always been at very best a strained and controversial relationship.

The Acting Speaker: Order, please. The member for Oxford, if he wishes to interject in the debate, will do so from his chair.

Mr Conway: It is very interesting, because in the last days of the Hearst administration and after the Hearst government was defeated, the then Premier complained bitterly about being blackmailed by the great, sainted, late Sir Adam Beck. He had an impossible time dealing with his colleague.

When he was defeated in 1919, he was replaced by the farmer-labour coalition. Can members imagine E. C. Drury as Premier dealing with a man who was the farmers' first choice for Premier? But Beck turned down the Premier's job because in his view he had a better, more important job. He was chairman of Ontario Hydro, and incredibly, the farmer-labour government maintained him in that position.

Drury, like Hearst before him, had a hell of a fight with Hydro over a fundamental policy issue. It had to do with radial railways. Adam Beck did not believe the motor car was going to amount to very much, and he was determined that there was going to be more power built, more electrical capacity built, so that there could be radial railways running all across southern Ontario, from Cornwall to Windsor.

Both the Tory Premier and the farmer-labour Premier said: "I don't know, Mr Beck. I think you've probably got it a little wrong here. We think the motor car may have some kind of a future and we think that your scheme for radial railways is overoptimistic and ought not to be proceeded with."

It was a hell of a fight. It was a fight that went on for about six years. In the end, with absolutely every provincial and municipal resource applied, the government won, but it was a very close call. My point is simply that through much of this, Adam Beck was chairman of Ontario Hydro and minister without portfolio sitting in the cabinet.

When I hear all these speeches about accountability, I would just simply ask members, please, please, to some day spend a few moments and look at with some degree of care the evolving history of Ontario Hydro. They are going to find some absolutely fascinating stories about that relationship.

This covers not just Tory governments. In the case of a farmer government, there is another issue I wanted to raise, because a lot has been said in this debate, and much will be said before the bill passes several months from now. In the farmer government time, members can appreciate the debate around power at cost. I do not accept, by the way, some of the argument advanced by the Municipal Electric Association that there was somehow in the beginning a sacrosanct commitment on all sides to some predetermined concept and notion and practice of power at cost, because that was not the case. There was almost from the beginning a big fight around, "Does this mean just to urban concentrations? What about the rural areas?" The debate in this province around rural hydro rates over the period from about 1915 to 1955—actually it is through to about 1985, I should say—has really been quite something.

The farmer government faced a very tough choice, which takes me to the core of Bill 118; that is, whether it as a government decided to make the entire province have uniform rates. There were many people on utilities and in this Legislature who thought that was absolutely unacceptable because it violated the notion of power at cost. Farmers, on the other hand, said that if you applied pure economics, they would never get affordable power.

The farmer government undertook an interesting policy which I would recommend to my friends opposite. It chose not to make the significant subsidies around rural hydro rates based largely on rates. They decided to electrify much of rural Ontario on the basis of provincial grants, a fundamental policy choice that that government had to make and that this government has already made around issues like Elliot Lake and Kapuskasing.

I want to say to my friends in the NDP that the debates we have and are going to continue to have on this fundamental question of power at cost have been debated by virtually every Legislature since power was an issue in this province in the early days of this century. I repeat, the Drury government, a farmers' government primarily, was able to resist enormous political pressure to make the rate base carry all of the added costs to electrify rural Ontario. It decided rather to go by way of provincial subsidy. I think that is a very interesting point and one we should reflect upon as we think about what we are doing in Elliot Lake and Kapuskasing.

Let me say at the outset, Mr Speaker, that I do not think there is any member here who would argue for one moment that something ought not to be done. Obviously, much is owed to those communities. The issue for me in Bill 118 is how we go about ameliorating the devastation in a community like Elliot Lake as a result of the cancellation of those contracts, or the situation in Kapuskasing.

I want, just for a moment, to say again, because this will bear on some of the things I have to say a little later, that I think this Legislature has in the main a pathetic record over 85 years in trying to exact any kind of accountability from Ontario Hydro, whether it was a commission with delegated powers from the cabinet itself or whether it was, as it has been since 1974, a crown corporation at arm's length. What this Legislature has seen, in terms of Hydro development over those 85 years, has been positively breathtaking, whether it was premiers Hearst and Drury bitterly complaining about Beck blackmailing them—there is a wonderful story in the memoirs of E. C. Drury where his man on the Hydro commission, a fellow named Miller from Toronto, admitted that he was there to do the Premier's bidding but he could not, he said, because someone at Hydro, someone very high up at Hydro, found out that in his youth he had a dalliance at university with some young lady, from which I gather issue proceeded, and he was basically being blackmailed. So he wanted to help the Premier, do the Premier's bidding, but he could not, he said, and the Premier was left with an appointee who was essentially neutered. That happened in our Ontario—a wonderful, unbelievable story.

1640

In this debate about the Hydro-government relationship, we ought to know what has preceded before we begin to decide how we are going to redefine this relationship, and I completely support this government's right to redefine that relationship.

I was reading a book the other day—I will not read much of it today—The Beauharnois Scandal. I had forgotten just what a wonderfully rich scandal this was. I mean, if the members want to see good old pure Ontario and Quebec at their corrupt best, they should read The Beauharnois Scandal, recently published by the University of Toronto Press, by a distinguished Canadian historian, T. D. Regehr. My grandfather, when he came here as a member in 1929, I think, was elected on the basis of deals made by Hydro with the private interests in the Renfrew area, where a certain John Aird Jr was paid $50,000. Can members imagine: $50,000 in 1929 to arrange, to facilitate, the purchase of the private power rights on the Madawaska River and the Mississippi River for Ontario Hydro. The Beauharnois scandal was much, much better, because of course the scandal touched the sacred hem of Mackenzie King himself—

Interjection.

Mr Conway: I want to say to my friend the member for Grey that he will enjoy one of the references that is going to come very shortly.

In the Beauharnois scandal, you have a Senate investigating committee, with a principal witness confirming that, oh, yes, R. O. Swezey, the principal in Beauharnois, certainly gave $200,000 to Howard Ferguson, then Premier of Ontario. Now, Howard Ferguson denied absolutely that he had ever received any money.

Later in this province we had a wonderful spectacle in the 1930s involving a Premier and a former Prime Minister of Canada. Hydro bought the Abitibi subsidiary up in northern Ontario. Can members imagine, in 1932 or 1933, buying a bankrupt company, which it was, in which the Premier and a former Tory Prime Minister of Canada had tens of thousands of dollars of stock which, had the company gone bankrupt, would have been virtually worthless, and having it explained on the floor of this chamber that yes, well, Premier Henry did own $25,000 worth of Abitibi stock, but he had forgotten about it. In 1933, that was not exactly what made you popular.

And the behaviour of the Hepburn government, my Liberal friends, was almost as outrageous. The illustrious Arthur Roebuck as Attorney General made a speech in this assembly in 1935 that lasted for nine hours, where he argued that the government ought to do what it actually did, which was to repudiate the Beauharnois contracts. They in fact actually passed legislation the Attorney General himself must have known was as illegal as the Court of Appeal was to find it a few months later. That is not exactly a very high water mark in Liberal administration.

The members might think it was all in the past. When I was first elected here, Billy Davis was riding the province as king of the land. One of the reasons I am always interested in Hydro debates is that when I first came here, we had just finished the Power Corporation Act. We got it in part because of the famous Canada Square scandal, that can be seen, in a sense, by just looking out the front window.

I am going to read something from Jonathan Manthorpe's book, because sometimes I forget just how rich a history there is around this place, but when I look at Bill 118, if I am a bit sceptical, and I am very sceptical about some of what is proposed here, it is because of what I have been asked to believe in the past.

The story, briefly—

The Acting Speaker: Member, may I bring you to order for a moment? The history is very enjoyable and certainly to some degree relevant. I would ask you to bring us back on track as quickly as possible so that we are dealing with the substance of the debate.

Mr Conway: Mr Speaker, you are going to enjoy the connection here. The connection is going to be very direct and it will not be long in coming. I want to set the scene, because what I have to say is not going to be very nice and is certainly probably going to ruffle a few feathers. I want to say it, and I want to say it in the context of the Hydro past, because at one level it is an incredible past that has provided much of what we take for granted.

I am going to tell the members about the history of the shortages and what that has done to public policy. Hydro's mandate changed in the middle of the First World War for one reason and one reason only: There was not enough power. In the context of power shortages, most things went out the window. In the face of the Depression and surplus everywhere, public policy turned dramatically in the other direction. The only possible way Hepburn and Roebuck could defend their outrageous policy was because Hydro had contracted for much more power than it could possibly use. Then another war came along and more shortage and it turned dramatically again.

My point in this little historical survey is that I think we may be coming very close to another situation where shortage sends us scurrying in some directions where none of us might want to go and certainly some of us have never contemplated going.

I want to conclude the little historical lecture by talking about the 1973 situation, because, of course, it gave rise to the Power Corporation Act that we are amending today. Very briefly, the story was this.

Hydro was going to build a new building. Of course, there was an arm's-length relationship—anybody who believes that about any of the previous government-Hydro relationships does not know what he is talking about. It is wonderful political science; I know there are all kinds of illustrious professors around the province who teach that stuff. But it is palpably, demonstrably not true. It never has been, and I do not suspect, given the importance of Hydro to the province; it ever can be. But in 1972-73, the Hydro commission decided to build a new building. They went through a normal process, apparently. They were going to tender, and it appears that the tender was not quite like it was supposed to be, and Billy Davis's good friend Gerhardt Moog got the contract. All hell broke loose.

I want to read something from Manthorpe; it is about three paragraphs. It is the select committee report of 1973 on the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario's new head office building. Do the members know what that committee was asked to believe? Here is what they were asked to believe. I am going to read three paragraphs from Jonathan Manthorpe's wonderful book, The Power and the Tories. He is talking about Gerry Moog and Bill Davis. They are in Europe together on a holiday.

"For one striking example, there was Gerhardt Moog's story of being on holiday in Europe with Bill Davis in the summer of 1971. One day they had a leisurely and very liquid lunch in a restaurant overlooking Lake Constance. Bill Davis wanted to meet some Swiss bankers, and they had an appointment that afternoon in Zurich. They"—Moog and Davis—"started out rather late after their long liquid lunch, with Gerry Moog testing the capabilities of his powerful new sports car, which he was driving. Unfortunately, they had a puncture along the way and arrived in Zurich at the bank's closing time.

"The two men were, in Moog's words, 'well fortified' from their lunch, which could have meant anything from tipsy to drunk, and dishevelled from changing the tire along the way. Consequently, the security guard at the Swiss bank was not impressed with their account of the importance of their visitation and was reluctant to let them in. Eventually, however, he was persuaded to do so and they met senior officials with that Swiss bank.

"While Davis discussed"—

The Acting Speaker: I will have to ask the member to come to the point.

Mr Conway: I am coming to the point.

The Acting Speaker: I say to the member that reading into the record a prolonged quotation—

Mr Conway: Just a couple more sentences.

The Acting Speaker: —is out of character with the direction of the House.

1650

Mr Conway: I appreciate the injunction. I might fall back on the Kormos rule. I really think this is germane. It is just a few more sentences.

This is the point: We are talking about a Premier and a man who is going to build by virtue, no question, of special connection to the government, to the leader of the government. They are in the Swiss bank, apparently a bit tipsy.

"While Davis discussed international finance at one end of the room, Gerry Moog took another official aside at the other end. Speaking in German, which Davis did not understand, Moog asked about the likelihood of getting financing for the Hydro building. Even though Moog's dealings with Hydro were then in the very earliest stages, these gnomes of Zurich might be forgiven for feeling that there was little doubt that Gerry Moog would get the job. Wasn't he sitting in their offices with his friend the Premier of Ontario and wasn't it obvious that they had been having a very good time together?"

Mr Mammoliti: So what are you saying?

Mr Conway: The point is he got the contract, and in the end of course the select committee believed the story that they were in that room together, that they had travelled around Europe and that Billy Davis did not know anything of what was going on. I was not there. Who am I to say what the truth was? But I am from Missouri and you can appreciate how there might be a shred of scepticism.

Members ask, "What is the point in all of this?" The point in this is simply the following: The relationship between Hydro and governments has been very close. There has never been, in my view, notwithstanding the public ownership, very much accountability, particularly to this Legislature. Quite frankly that blame is largely with the Legislature. I accept my share of blame. Most of us have failed a fundamental responsibility of responsible parliamentary government. When you think about what you are dealing with in Hydro, it is probably no surprise. It was very technological, so how do the farmer from Hastings and the graduate student from Renfrew understand a grand design, a great engineering feat like Queenston, or God forbid, the plants at Pickering and Bruce? It is very difficult to meet your requirement as a responsible legislator.

Of course in the beginning—this is the point of the lecture, I suppose—Adam Beck fought fiercely against private power interests that wanted him out of business. There was no question that in the first 25 years of Hydro, largely under his leadership, he was perfectly paranoid, and on a number of occasions he had every reason to be paranoid because the plutocrats, particularly of Toronto, were out to get him. But that created a culture that has coloured much of Hydro's development over the years. Now as a private member, unfettered by cabinet responsibilities, with a new bill that asks me to make some change, to contemplate some change, I get a chance to talk about accountability. I am more interested now than I might have been in the past.

That takes me to the bill. I want to talk a little bit about that bill because it says a lot of things that I do not think a lot of people here understand. Simply put, the thing about this bill which to me is breathtaking is the kind of mechanism it contains for accountability. I want to restate that I have no quarrel whatsoever with the new government's decision to strike a new relationship with Hydro. I have a bit of a problem with some of the rhetoric because, boy, we have heard it all before. It has been equally well meaning and it has generally not amounted to very much.

As I say, when I see Billy Davis reduced to that kind of condition in a Zurich bank anteroom, or I read of the farmer-labour Premier bitterly complaining about this impossible tyrant, genius that he might have been, I understand something about the difficulty. I look at this bill and I think about what the government has said in terms of supporting it. Before I even make those comments, I should raise the circumstances that have been alluded to by previous speakers in so far as origins of this bill are concerned.

Clearly there was a fight, quite a nasty fight from all reports, between the new government and the old board. That in itself is not new. In Viv Nelles's wonderful book, which I have not referred to but which is a great bit of reading, there is an allegation from a pretty good source that a former member of this Legislature, actually a member from Hastings, a long-time chairman of the hydro commission, actually committed suicide because he was so outraged at the innuendoes that were being thrown at him by, actually, the Liberal crowd in the mid-1930s. It has not been a very happy situation, the fights that have gone on between the board and governments. I think it was the distinguished member for Lanark-Renfrew who made the very good point that if the government is looking for accountability, it has it. Theoretically it has it. It has it in so far as it appoints the board.

Mr Mills: "Theoretically"; you said it.

Mr Conway: The member is talking to the converted. I know exactly what the member is saying. Mitchell Hepburn was so fed up with the former editor of the Globe and Mail he made chairman that he fired him, because he would not do the Premier's bidding. In a real sense, what the government encountered is not new.

I have a great deal of respect for Alex MacIntosh and some of the other members of the board whom I know. I gather there is more to this story than I know, but on the face of it, it looked like some on the old board were not very keen about some of the new government's directions. I gather that there is more to the story and that it involves this Premier. I do not know, because I was not there, but some of the members are very responsible, reputable people and they are furious at the way in which the transition occurred.

I will simply say that there is no question in my mind that any government, particularly a newly elected government, has without any question the right to move in any direction it chooses.

Mr McLean: You gave this speech 10 years ago.

Mr Conway: I think I probably did.

Mrs Caplan: That was then. He says the same thing now. Isn't that unique for this House?

The Acting Speaker: Order.

Mr Conway: Actually I am sure I did not make this speech 10 years ago.

I will tell the members who have not read this bill that as one member of the Legislature I am embarrassed. We all should be embarrassed to have in front of us a bill that has this kind of wording. I will read section 9 of this bill: "Any action taken on or after the 5th day of June, 1991 and before the coming into force of this act by any person purporting to act as the corporation's chief executive officer who was not the corporation's chairperson when the action was taken shall not bind the corporation." That is an embarrassment to me as a legislator. I say that against the backdrop of my previous remarks.

To be presented with a statute that has that kind of language is, I think, to insult this Legislature. It is a bit unedifying. I do not know who is to blame, but I am not very impressed. We have done some Looney Tunes things in this place—as I say, the Repudiation Act of 1935 was about as looney as it got—but in 1991 this is rather disquieting to me as a legislator. I just want to put that on the record.

When the government introduced this bill—I think it was June 5, 1991—I was interested to read the minister's statement. The bill was being introduced to do a number of things. It was being introduced to give effect to new energy directions the government wanted to proceed with. It wanted, as part of those directions, to have more emphasis on conservation. It wanted, according to the statement, to make the business of Hydro more open and more accountable. It wanted as well to do that in a way that would be consistent with the traditions of this place. It was pointed out that it would be done consistent with the provisions of the federal government's Financial Administration Act. It is against that backdrop that I want to talk about this bill.

1700

I want to say at the outset that the bill as presented had a very remarkable mechanism. The guts of this bill are as follows. The new government wants to empower itself to provide directives to Ontario Hydro's board. Those directives could be, until today, anything the cabinet chooses and, once a directive is issued on any subject under the sun, the board of Hydro must accept that without delay or debate. That directive then must be incorporated into the mandate of Ontario Hydro, and any costs associated with that directive are passed on to the bulk power users.

There is absolutely nothing in this calling for legislative oversight. There is absolutely nothing in this that requires the cabinet to lay such a directive before the Legislature. There is absolutely nothing in this, until today's amendment, which requires that those directives ought to have anything to do with the traditional mandate of Ontario Hydro.

I understand what my friends say they want to do, and that is their decision to take, but what they say they want to do and what their bill states are not at all the same thing. I want to start analysing that relationship.

The reason I want to do that is I know who wrote the bill. The little history lesson is going to be invoked again. I am more than a little interested in and more than a little upset about the circumstances of the writing of this bill, because I know where this bill came from. I know who wrote it. I know who is sponsoring it. I know who is walking it every critical step along the way.

I have a lot of respect for my friends opposite. It may not appear that I do, but it is because I do, not only because of who they are personally but what they represent, that the knowledge of who wrote this and what he is up to just drives me to a wild Irish rage.

The tragedy for me is to see the lone ranger from Kitchener, the now minister, and it is quite clear to me the minister does not know what is in this bill, and I think I know why. To be fair, he will not be the first Minister of Energy not to know.

We once had a famous Minister of Energy, Jim Taylor, the long-time Tory member for Prince Edward-Lennox, who used to tell us what it was like. Jim was no acme of perfection, but he had some experience that I never had as a Minister of Energy and his public confession of his life and times as Minister of Energy again gave me a lot of sympathy for what the new minister is facing and, God bless her, what the old minister must have lived through in the genesis of this bill.

Let me start into the bill. Section 1 of the bill essentially deals with the board and adds four new people to the board. I gather that had to do with the fight, not entirely, but significantly. Some of my colleagues might carp about a former leader of the NDP being on the board; I have no problem with that at all. A good Liberal researcher, I think, is on the board—she was one of our researchers, Adele Hurley—and I think both she and Michael Cassidy will bring a very real distinction to those responsibilities.

Some people have talked about the deputy minister being on the board as a non-voting member. Knowing something particularly of the relationship between this Deputy Minister of Energy and the chairman of Ontario Hydro, why would I waste my breath on any provision in the statute?

Then we have the situation where the chairperson is now going to be the chief executive officer of Ontario Hydro. That, of course, gets into the question of the fight as well, because I gather the board reorganized itself and promoted a long-time Hydrocrat, Al Holt, who I do not know but who I gather has quite a good reputation as a very good, tough-minded fellow at Hydro. The so-called rump board made a decision to nominate Mr Holt as CEO at Hydro.

That was, I guess, done against the express wishes of the leader of the government and so we get the bill, we get the additional members to the board and we get the statute making clear not only that the chairman is the CEO but that, I repeat, "Any action taken on or after the 5th day of June, 1991 and before the coming into force of this act by any person purporting to act as the corporation's chief executive officer who was not the corporation's chairperson when the action was taken shall not bind the corporation."

It is just—

Mrs Caplan: Silly.

Mr Conway: Well, it is not silly but it is unedifying, and it says something about what we are dealing with here. What we are dealing with here, quite frankly, in two levels of the phrase, is power politics, and members should never mistake it.

Then there are the sections of the bill that I really like that really tell me who has written this. Listen to this: "The directors appointed," by the cabinet, "other than the chairperson, shall be paid such remuneration and expenses by the corporation as may be determined from time to time" by the cabinet, and the remuneration and expenses shall be part of the cost of Hydro. Essentially, the cabinet gets to set the remuneration for the board members.

But a change comes in the next section, because heretofore cabinet has set the salary in terms of employment for the chairperson. But what does subsection 1(4) of this bill say? "The chairperson shall be paid such remuneration and expenses by the corporation as may be determined...by the board." Is that not cute? Is that not clever?

Why do I get mad? Because I believe this government when it tells me that what it wants to do is to exact, on behalf of the people of Ontario, public accountability. That is a perfectly laudable ambition. What have I got in this bill? I have in this bill a very clever scheme developed by the Mephistopheles who wrote this thing that, oh no, he is not going to be bound by any cabinet setting his salary. No, that is going to be a change, presumably in the name of public accountability and public confidence. What we have here is a change so that while the cabinet will still get to set the per diems of the board members, whatever they may be, a couple of hundred a bucks a meeting, the chairman will have his salary set by the board.

I am going to tell members right now that if this government means what it says it means, and I believe as honourable men and women they believe it, then together we are going to do something, and one of the amendments we are going to make is to change that. We are going to give back to this government and to me and to our trustees in this respect, the Treasury bench, the right to set the salary of the chief executive officer of Ontario Hydro. I cannot conceive of an argument that would set that aside.

I have to digress for a moment. Stephen Lewis, when he was here, had a phrase and I have never forgotten it because it used to roll off his tongue with an eloquence that was breathtaking. The word was "chutzpah." I sat here today as a former Minister of Education and I pinched myself. I thought, am I hearing this? Am I hearing from the new NDP government a restraint message, which, I repeat, I totally support?

But who is carrying the message? A former chairman of the Toronto Board of Education. I almost had a heart attack. To quote Stephen Lewis, that is chutzpah with a capital C. It is breathtaking to be lectured by a recent chairman of the Toronto school board about the importance of restraint and all they are going to do and expect from the transfer partners. Bonne chance. Good luck. I just hope there are no Tony Silipos out there because if there are and he delivers that message, there will be a laugh so loud one would think Brian Mulroney has retired.

1710

I just say to my friends opposite that I accept what they are saying about accountability, but I want to serve notice now that I will support any government amendment, and should there not be one coming, I am going to move one. I am going to fight till hell freezes over to remove that section of the act that removes from the cabinet the right to set the salary and the benefits and all the rest of the chief executive officer of Ontario Hydro.

I do not know whether other members have heard it, but I have heard it, and I cannot believe it. I have heard because there are press reports that suggest that at a recent board meeting the new CEO asked for a salary of $450,000 annually, an expectation that he will get a bonus apparently—to be fair, a bonus that has been paid to others but something in the neighbourhood of about $100,000 annually—and a full pension of 75% after six years. That is only one press report. I cannot believe it is true. If it is true, I will fight till I drop before I let this bill pass, and I will let it pass, obviously as I must, but not until I have the sanction of this cabinet on that salary. If that is what the government wants to do, then that is fine. We will debate that here and elsewhere in the day and age of restraint.

When I think that my friend the member for Durham East is out there slogging night and day for his $45,000 or $55,000, and some character who is in the unbelievable conflict of interest of writing a bill that effectively makes him Minister of Energy, and at one and the same time—a shamelessness that makes me think I am reading Gerry Caplan about auto insurance—he writes into this little bill a removal of the power to set his salary from the executive council.

I am getting worked up and I am sorry, but I am going to tell members that there had better be a government amendment to this section because if the minister believes what he says, and I believe he means it, then we are going to have accountability and the cabinet and the Legislature are going to set that salary. By all reports that is the most significant public salary in the immediate or nearly immediate purview of the Ontario government anywhere in this province.

Now I want to deal with section 2 of the bill, and that deals with the directive power. I must say that the minister has introduced amendments, which to his credit are going to respond to what has been out there. Members have all heard it. I am not one of those who is going to go around and say, "I know they're planning a whole bunch of crazy things." I do not think any government wants to do anything obviously crazy. We did one thing pretty crazy and we paid the ultimate price. It is a reminder that—

Mr Hope: That was the election, eh?

Mr Conway: God, the member is not kidding, and that is the joy of being human. I have been watching that fabulous PBS series on Lyndon Johnson, somebody who was so incredibly good, who was so incredibly wrong, as were all the wise men, about Vietnam. It is good to know that you can sin with the best of them.

We look at section 2. We look at the directive power. Now that we have had the confession, my question—for me it is the main point, and I am sorry the member for Cambridge is gone because he was sitting there saying, "Conway was on this rant about Adam Beck and all these people." You see, we have another Adam Beck. That is my point. The government has another Adam Beck. It does not know it. I think I do, and I may be wrong, but I do not think I am. I carried baggage for almost six years for a few characters, one of whom I am going to return to who would give the government members very high praise. They are the men and women, particularly the government members, but we all have to go out for our $45,000 or $55,000 or $65,000 and do our duty and explain government policies, the sins of commission, the joys of success and all the rest of it. I just think we owe it to ourselves to know what we are doing.

The poor minister introduces an amendment and in this it is hard for me to know who is Edgar Bergen and who is Charlie McCarthy. I am not at all surprised, and I congratulate the minister for backing off, but far more important to me is how did that get there in the first place? I know how it got there. I know exactly how it got there. That is why I say to my friends opposite that they had better know what they are dealing with. We all had better know what we are dealing with. We have a real live one here. I have had some experience with the new chairman of Ontario Hydro. I am going to deal with him a little bit later.

This directive power understandably got people's attention because it was open-ended. There was no encumbrance. There was no responsibility to put what was going to be done by way of directive in the context of Hydro's mandate, which is the generation of electricity and the distribution of same and some other things obviously tied to it. But most people, when they think of Hydro, expect a public utility that is in the power business and they do not expect it to be in a lot of other businesses that have nothing to do with power per se. This directive power was sweeping.

What really angered me was to read in the statement of June 5: "Not to worry. What we want to do here is what is in the Financial Administration Act of Canada." I asked a question the other day and I did not ask it innocently, because I saw that and I thought, that is really unusual. I went and I looked. The member for Victoria-Haliburton made a speech today and I am going to look at the Hansard carefully, but I have looked at the Financial Administration Act very carefully and I have spoken to some people in Ottawa who know its workings intimately. I do not intend to go on at any great length at this point, but I am deeply sorry to report that the minister's statement of June 5 to this House about the Financial Administration Act is significantly incorrect.

I cannot say what I want to say, and I have great respect for the member for Peterborough. Just like the directive power stuff, I do not think this is accidental. I do not think it is accidental at all. The Financial Administration Act has a number of sanctions that are similar to Bill 118, but it has some safeguards we do not see in Bill 118. Those are the safeguards members would expect to see. If there is going to be a directive, the Financial Administration Act makes plain that within 15 days of that directive being issued it must be laid before Parliament, that it is not within the power of any of these directives to expand the mandate of the crown corporation beyond that which Parliament has decided.

According to an official with whom I spoke in Ottawa, it is not the intent of the federal act to allow cabinet to use the directive power to materially alter the mandate or objectives of the operating legislation of any federal crown corporation. I repeat, there are a number of very—

Mr Hope: Did you say "in his opinion"?

Mr Conway: I am going to tell the member, it is not just his opinion, but it is the statute.

Mr Hope: Well, that's what you said, "in his opinion."

Mr Conway: The member should just forget his opinion and look at the—

Mr Hope: That's what you base it on.

Mr Conway: I am not a legal counsel. The member should forget what my friend said to me. I just look at the statute. There are significant differences between Bill 118 and the Financial Administration Act. They could not be clearer.

Mr Hope: You should never refer to the statute.

Mr Conway: Well, you see, we are not dealing with inadvertence here. There are places where we are, but here I do not believe we are at all.

1720

Let me just read two sections of the federal Financial Administration Act, section 91c: "No person shall, unless authorized by an act of Parliament, apply for articles that would add to or otherwise make a material change in the objects and purposes for which a parent crown corporation is incorporated or the restrictions on the businesses or activities that a parent crown corporation may carry on as set out in its articles."

Then, in section 95.1 of the federal act: "No parent crown corporation or wholly owned subsidiary of a parent crown corporation shall carry on any business or activity that is not consistent with the objectives and purposes for which the parent crown corporation is incorporated or the restrictions on the businesses or activities that it may carry on as set out in its charter."

Those are very clear legislative sanctions; that, together with the requirement that any directive must within 15 days of its issuance be laid before Parliament. Where do we find those in Bill 118?

To be fair, the government is moving to contain that, and I congratulate it for it and I will support it. I know who wrote the bill. That was not an accidental mistake. I am angry, to say the least, that two responsible ministers in their relatively new government would be made to stand up in this House and speak words that in my view—to use the most charitable phrase I can find—are incomplete relative to the facts of the case vis-à-vis the Financial Administration Act of Canada.

As I say, we will want to look at the amendments, and I congratulate the government for responding to the pressure.

Mr Hope: There is no pressure.

Mr Conway: Clearly the pressure. It is obvious to everyone, and that is the way the system works.

This section is not insignificant and we are going to talk about it at some length.

I want to turn now to the issue of how that directive power has already been used. I should say that I understand that under the Power Corporation Act, as amended in 1989, there were sections introduced that have given the new government some scope to move in the case of Elliot Lake.

I know some members have not read the act. One of the things they might want to do is read the order in council around Elliot Lake, because I have been reading it. It is a very interesting order in council. Orders in council are made public from time to time. They are as a matter of course made public all the time. Legislators tend not to see them very much, because they are an executive instrument.

I think it is fair to say that the public out there is seized of this concept of power at cost. It does not mean the same thing to everybody; as I say, to an urban manufacturer it means one thing, to a farmer it means something else. But there is a great deal of concern that, my God, we are going to have electricity bills that are going to start to carry a whole series of costs and programs that have nothing to do with power.

Of course, they look to the two initiatives the government has taken, one in Elliot Lake, the other in Kapuskasing, and I tell members they have some cause for concern. I repeat that, lest there be some activist in the NDP who wants to run out tonight and say, "You know, Conway's down in that Legislature saying Elliot Lake should be left to its own devices."

I am going to make another slight digression to another interesting report, the select committee report of March 1978 on the uranium contracts which are at issue in Elliot Lake. I remember those days. I was not on the committee at that time, but the committee was chaired by a former leader of the NDP, Donald C. MacDonald. Among the NDP members was a very effective member of that committee, the now Minister of Housing, the member for Ottawa

Centre, then the critic for Energy. She was the member for Carleton East actually at that time.

Bill Davis as Premier referred these extremely interesting contracts to the select committee in the minority government days of 1977-78 and said, "We want the select committee to take a look at these over the course of some months"—I forget; it was late summer of 1977 through the spring of 1978—"and we want you tell us whether you think they're in the public interest." I am not going to bore members with the details. The government members, surprisingly, thought they were very much in the public interest. The Liberals and the New Democrats thought they were not in the public interest, and the NDP, in its minority report, made it very plain that it thought those uranium contracts were very much not in the public interest and that the government ought to nationalize Rio Algom and Denison.

I find it interesting, in light of all the antinuclear rhetoric that is out there, all that has been said about these contracts by the NDP over the last 15 years, that what is the first thing the NDP government does with those contracts when it gets a chance in government? It extends them by three years at a premium cost to the ratepayers of $160 million. The government will say: "Listen, the cause was good. Surely the end justifies the means."

I just want to make two comments. The government is avowedly against the extravagance of those contracts, and it has been avowedly concerned about the high costs of nuclear power. What is the first thing it does in this connection, for whatever reason? It extends these extravagant contracts by three years at a cost to the ratepayers of $160 million, and it decides, obviously, that it may want to do more of the same elsewhere. I simply make the point that if it is concerned about the costs of nuclear power, I hope it has understood what it has done here, for whatever good reason.

The parliamentary assistant is saying, "Yes, but it's only for three years, and when you assess it against, my God, the cost overruns or the differential price of the last 10 years, it's a pittance." That may be all well and true, but I repeat, what did the government say about those contracts and what are its stated concerns about nuclear power? "It is too expensive and those contracts are extravagant." The first thing it does is add to the cost of nuclear power, apparently, in quite a significant way by extending contracts that it always thought were too generous at a premium price of $160 million.

The parliamentary assistant will say and the cabinet would certainly say, "We looked at a range of instruments"—presumably—"and we thought this was the best way to do it." That is fair ball. That is a choice made. We will debate that. Certainly, I am sure the people in Elliot Lake, in light of some of the other alternatives they were probably faced with—and my friend the member for Algoma-Manitoulin is very vigorous in pressing the claims of that area to his colleagues in the Liberal caucus.

At any rate, the order in council on Elliot Lake was fascinating. I am going to read it to members to show them the way Hydro does business, because the government is interested in and concerned about openness, fairness, the Marquis of Queensberry rules and accountability. Let me read the second order in council having to do with Elliot Lake. Members may not have seen this, but it was signed by the Lieutenant Governor's hand on June 6, 1991. It was concurred in by no less a person than the Minister of Health herself, then the Chairman of Management Board, the member for Beaches-Woodbine.

I am going to read this carefully, and I want members to listen:

"Pursuant to section 9a of the Power Corporation Act, RSO 1980, chapter 384, as amended, the Minister of Energy is authorized to issue the following policy directive, and the same is hereby approved:

"(1) Whereas the Hydro corporation is desirous of terminating or amending existing agreements relating to long-term acquisition of natural uranium from producers in the Elliot Lake region; and

"Whereas such action will result in savings for the Hydro corporation"—and I want members to listen carefully to this—"but will adversely affect the said area;

"Approval by the cabinet under section 23 of the Power Corporation Act relating to the acquisition of uranium from other than Elliot Lake sources chosen by Hydro will be granted, subject to the normal government scrutiny and review, if the Hydro corporation does agree to participate in the Elliot Lake region economic development program referred to in a regulation made under the Power Corporation Act."

Is that not interesting? I used to play a lot of hockey—
1730

Mr Mammoliti: You're out of breath.

Mr Conway: I am not out of breath. Did you hear what I just read?

I say to the government, I accept what it wants to do. They want openness, fairness and equity. Basically that is the following. The cabinet is saying to Hydro: "Listen. We know you believe, and we believe it too, that these contracts are extravagant and that you can buy much cheaper uranium elsewhere, and we're quite prepared to allow you to do so. But you understand that if we terminate these contracts, there will be a devastating effect on Elliot Lake, so let's make a deal. Our deal with you is this. We'll let you buy uranium elsewhere than Elliot Lake, but only if you agree to participate in the regional economic development program in Elliot Lake."

Mr Hope: What's wrong with that?

Mr Conway: My friend the member for Chatham-Kent says, "What's wrong with that?" For a government that is talking about openness and accountability that is blackmail, pure and simple. That is exactly what it is. If that is the way the government wants to run Hydro, it is fine. They should go to it. But they can understand my incredulity when they tell me, as the minister did on June 5, that they want a new day and openness and accountability.

I suspect Hydro has been blackmailed before. I suspect the government is not the first to do this. But I suspect I will have to go some to find an order in council that is quite as delicious as this one is. This is the smoking pistol. It is right there for anybody to read. I just make the point. The government is running the Orono public utilities commission, which is sitting back and saying, "I really don't like this business around the directive power, but Mills is a responsible guy and I'm prepared to give him the benefit of the doubt." Somebody then comes along and says: "By the way, have you seen chapter 1 in this book? Have you seen Elliot Lake? Have you seen what they did?"

It was no surprise to me that added to that order in council was this third point: "That officers and directors of the corporation who exercise their decisional discretion in compliance with the policies set out herein will be saved harmless and indemnified jointly and severally from and against any and all liability incurred arising from this exercise."

Believe me, if I were on that Hydro board and I got that, I would want the best lawyer in North America to protect me from what happens. If I were on that board and some beleaguered Hydro ratepayers in Kent county decided to take the corporation to court—I am not a lawyer, but that order in council raises with me grave concerns about the kind of relationship this government wants to have with Hydro.

My only point is this: I hear what the government wants to do and I commend it for that, though I think a lot of the policy is ill advised. But they have a right to be wrong. I look to the speeches, I listen carefully to what they have to say, I look at what this act says and allows and then I look at the first order in council. I have no problem whatsoever if they want to provide assistance to Elliot Lake.

I take them back to my example in the farmer-labour days. The government wanted very much to provide relief to farmers and people in rural Ontario but chose not to do it the way this government is doing it. They are doing it by burdening the ratepayers with costs that have much more to do with regional economic development or regional economic relief, which are entirely laudable objectives. But there is a fundamental question of public policy about which I will fight the government tooth and nail. Premier Drury decided to help the farmers not with a rate-based program but with a very interesting mix of provincial subsidies, some of which taxed Hydro itself.

The Elliot Lake situation gives me great concern. I look then to Kapuskasing. The concern I have around Elliot Lake is what this order in council says and it could not be more clear. If they can do that in Elliot Lake, what are they exposing Hydro to and the people of Ontario to elsewhere? It is a slippery slope from which there is little or no recovery.

Then we have the situation at Kapuskasing. I know the Premier and the Minister for Northern Development and the member for Cochrane North worked tirelessly to get a fair resolution. I know the private sector character with whom they were dealing—and I am going to tell the members that is some character. I am glad the Premier was doing the dealing and not me, because I would not have the patience.

Mr Mammoliti: How does Mike Brown feel about it?

Mr Conway: The member might want to ask him. This is a debate that will go on for some time. I say to my friend who is interjecting I do not think he is understanding the point. The point is not a question of whether they provide relief to Elliot Lake and Kapuskasing. They absolutely want to do that, everybody will concur. The question is how they want to do that. I am not one who would accept a public policy that would deliver that kind of regional economic program on the basis of ratepayers. I think that is a fundamental mistake to be made by this or any other government.

We get to Kapuskasing and we have a different situation. The situation there concerns Smoky Falls. My point there is going to be somewhat more concise. The government directed Hydro to buy Smoky Falls at a cost of about $138 million, and further directed that a number of specific power contracts be entered into with the mill for a period of 10 years at a considerable cost, again for a perfectly laudable objective. I have two questions there. Why should the ratepayers of Hydro pay that bill?

I want to go back to a fundamental question of taxation and fiscal policy. One of the places where I think the NDP has been eloquent, passionate and consistent is in its loathsome detestation of regressive taxes. It does not like consumption taxes, it says, and I understand its point of view because they are indiscriminate. A grandmother living in Orono will pay those taxes at the same rate as some Toronto plutocrat. That is unfair. It is inequitable.

I say to my friend the member for Yorkview that he should think about the tax policy that informs this bill. That grandmother, that single parent in my community who must have hydro and has no choice, is going to pay disproportionately for those regional economic subsidies in a way, for example, that some of the rest of us will not to the same degree. In my case, I got my electrical bill at the house in Pembroke the other day. It was $14.10. I was living at my cottage for the summer and what have you, but it is also because I have a house that is largely run by natural gas.

My neighbours, people on fixed incomes, have no choice. Instead of being $14.10 for 58 days their hydro bill will be $250. My point in this is the equity of a policy that suggests that the bailouts in Elliot Lake and Kapuskasing, well intentioned as they are, are going to be disproportionately carried by the people of Ontario. That is what I object to.

1740

They should be carried, I say to my friend the member for Sault Ste Marie, by the consolidated revenue fund, because we all pay into the fund largely on the basis, more or less, of our ability to pay. In relative terms, relative to Hydro rates, it is a lot more progressive. It is not perfect.

I know my friends from Frontenac-Addington—the Minister of Government Services represents a large county like mine. Those people up in Northbrook and Cloyne and Danby are sitting there. Like most of my constituents, their Hydro bill is going to be a lot more dramatic than that of their friends living in Kingston, because the people in Kingston have a choice.

I just hope the government members understand the tax policy that is incorporated in this scheme. They are not being very realistic if they do not understand that. My friend from Durham I think understands.

Mr Mammoliti: Your speech was okay at first.

Mr Conway: I would put this as a much more fundamental point. I ask members to think about regressive versus progressive taxes. If they cannot understand how Hydro rates are more regressive than, say, an income tax, there is no hope in this debate. For those hundreds of thousands of Ontarians who live in rural environments with no choice but Hydro, it is a doubly iniquitous business.

The second point I want to make around the Smoky Falls business has to do with the demand-supply proposal that Hydro has now before the Saunders panel. I am quite astonished, actually. I thought the reason Hydro was interested in Smoky Falls, in significant measure, was because it fit into the further development of the Moose River basin. I may be wrong in that, but I do not think I am.

What did we see the other day? We saw that the government has gone to that panel, to the demand-supply environmental assessment panel, and withdrawn the Moose River hydroelectric development in light of concerns voiced by the aboriginal community. I understand that. My question is almost a commercial question. Why did we force Hydro to buy Smoky Falls, at apparently a premium price, if we are not going to proceed with the Moose River development? I suspect, on the basis of the announcement the other day, that we are not going to be proceeding for some long period of time, if ever, with the Moose River development.

Where do we stand with the environmental assessment of the Hydro demand-supply plan? Every day the plan changes. I do not know whether my friends opposite understand, but I can appreciate, on the basis of the party position over the years, about no more nuclear. I hope the government understands what it has done at Moose River. It has withdrawn over 50%, I think it is, of the future hydroelectric development in the province. That is its right. So it is not only not proceeding with any more nuclear but it is shelving substantial components of the future hydroelectric development, for whatever good reason.

Hon Mr Buchanan: Who was going to cancel Darlington in 1985?

Mr Conway: My friend the minister says, "Who was going to cancel Darlington?" I am not here saying that Darlington has not proceeded. My point is, what is the integrity—

Hon Mr Buchanan: You guys were going to cancel Darlington.

Interjections.

The Acting Speaker (Mr Villeneuve): Could I call all members to order, please. As you know, interjections are out of order. The honourable member for Renfrew North has the floor and you will have your opportunity to question, to comment and to participate. The honourable member for Renfrew North.

Mr Conway: My question is simply this: What is the integrity of the environmental assessment of Hydro's 25-year demand-supply plan? It changes every day. Not only has the government pulled out the Moose River proposals—again, from its point of view, for admittedly good reasons—but every day the chairman of Ontario Hydro changes the conservation targets. On what basis, who knows? I do not know how the panel can continue to do any business over there. In fact I would expect one of these days they would adjourn the whole proceeding.

At any rate, that is not a major concern, but I must say I am very interested to know what exactly is planned at Smoky Falls in light of what the government has chosen to do with the Moose River development.

In my remaining time, I want to look at some other aspects of the bill. I hope I have made the point around my concerns with the directive power and what they have actually done at Elliot Lake with that actual June 6 order in council. It is not theoretical; it is real. They have done it. I was absolutely blown away by the language of the OIC, and that does not give me great comfort about what they or any other government might want to do in the future. That is why when this bill is amended, if that is what they are up to, I want those kinds of directions tabled in this Legislature. Because they want and I want accountability and oversight where they are not going to be allowed, as I would not want any government to be allowed, to pass that kind of directive and not ensure that it sees the broad light of day in this Legislature.

The points that have to be made around fuel substitution I am going to leave perhaps to another time, except to say that, again, Hydro ratepayers in my area are flabbergasted to think that their Hydro rates are going to be used to subsidize an off-electricity program.

That does not sound bad, but I think one of the first plans the government has, the pilot project, turns out to be in my own constituency. The local reaction is really interesting. Not too many people know about it yet, but I have a feeling when people find out that it is specifically—I gather the cabinet has before it, if it has not already dealt with it, the pilot project to have Hydro subsidize substantially natural gas conversion for the town of Deep River, a town which is in dire straits because it is a single-industry town in my county committed to nuclear power research. So the members can appreciate their agitation at the present time.

But when Hydro ratepayers finish digesting Elliot Lake and they start to think about what the fuel substitution policy is actually going to mean—that fewer consumers in given areas are going to be forced, with substantially higher rates, to pay for friends and neighbours to switch to other sources that will only drive their rate up even higher—I suspect the politics of that are going to be incendiary. I might be wrong, but I have a feeling it is going to attract the attention of a lot of members.

Hydro rates are like insurance rates. We all pay them. They are inescapable. They are a tax that lands on one's head quite dramatically. They really capture the imagination. When you know they are increasing by 45% minimally over the next three years, and much higher than that in some areas, and you read in the local paper that you the Hydro consumer, with rate increases that are going through the roof, are subsidizing—can you imagine being out in the country in Elgin county and getting the Hydro bill one day and just getting mad as hell because you have lost your job and God knows whatever else has happened and the Hydro bill is up 15% and you read in the London Free Press that $350,000 is being provided by Hydro to allow people—not in your town because you do not have the natural gas alternative—to switch?

If you are on the subsidizing end of that, I do not think you are going to be very happy. I do not think you are going to be very happy at all. As I said, I think there are very, very incendiary politics associated with that.

When I deal with the last section of the bill, I want to simply make the point that there is a wonderful retroactivity in this bill. It essentially says that the whole bill comes into force at royal assent, except those parts of section 1 that deal with the empowerment of the chief executive officer. There again, I think we have what this bill is all about.

1750

I want to conclude my remarks today by making some very summary comments around what I think this bill is all about. I think this bill was written by the man who is going to principally benefit from it. I do not think there is any doubt. This bill was written by the now CEO of Hydro, the former Deputy Minister of Energy, Marc Eliesen.

I know Marc Eliesen and I know the following things about him. He is a very bright, he is a very committed, he is a very tireless public servant. I was even asked to take him on as a deputy minister in my time as the Minister of Education. I chose not to do so.

But I have talked to a number of people who know Marc Eliesen. I know he is near and dear to the Premier's heart. Toronto Life tells me so. Could there be a more incontrovertible source of real information than Toronto Life? I doubt it. I think Toronto Life calls him the Premier's alter ego. That is why I want the Premier to stand up in this Legislature and tell me what he as Premier is prepared to authorize as payment and working conditions for his alter ego.

Those who have worked with Marc Eliesen know him to be not just tireless and not just creative, but Marc Eliesen is a man with a mission, and Marc Eliesen's role in the scheme of things is a very important part of that mission.

I have to say this. I want to congratulate the government this week, very directly, for the firing of Bernard Ostry. I think they deserve to be congratulated, just as the Davis, Miller and Peterson governments deserve to be castigated for that man and the incredible misconduct I believe he perpetrated on the public purse of this province. I consider it one of the most shameful aspects of my failure as a minister in the Peterson government that on at least two occasions, if not three, I could not have that man fired.

I wanted him fired not because he is not a bright, capable fellow. He is all of those things, but Bernard Ostry is today what he, in my view, always has been. He is congenitally insubordinate. His attitude to any kind of executive or parliamentary control is today what I think it has always been, and that is a proud and consistent middle-finger salute. Words fail me to describe my upset and outrage that this man was allowed to continue at TVO while I was in the cabinet, and I am just delighted that the Bob Rae government fired this man for the endless obscenities that he perpetrated on the public purse. I do not want to belabour it, but—

The Acting Speaker: Yes, it is Bill 118 we are working on.

Mr Conway: I know, and that is my final point. There is a connection. It is not exactly the same thing, but I am deeply concerned that in a different way, we have ourselves another real live one; that in Marc Eliesen we have a manipulative superbureaucrat who does not give a tinker's dam for this cabinet, for this Parliament, and quite frankly for most of the people of Ontario, as bright and able and creative as he is.

I accuse him of putting this bill in two ministers' hands and I accuse him of knowingly misrepresenting some things that he bloody well ought to have known. I think that is the way he does business and I am horrified to think that, for all his ability, he is being offered up as the new major-domo of accountability.

These are harsh words and I probably should take some of them back, and I would, I suppose, in some respects. Well, I do. But I am really concerned and I am really angry, because I think we have got ourselves another one. When I think that Bernard Ostry dined out here for nine years, with one outrage followed by yet another extravagance followed by yet another unbelievable insubordination, and it took nine years and three governments to finally root that cancer out, I hope we have learned a lesson.

Bernard Ostry is not this government's responsibility, although he is a great credit to its resolve. But Marc Eliesen, mark my words, on the basis of experience that our government had with him, is a man quite prepared to advance public policy completely outside any statute, completely outside the stated aims of any government, because in Marc Eliesen's world, the end justifies the means and any end worth having is an end, rather like Ptolemy's universe, with man, in this case King Marc, at the centre.

This government has a right as a government to make these changes. I have a right as a member of the opposition to point out where I think this is flawed. I think the bill is flawed in some areas where they are not doing the things they want to do. I am quite prepared to absolve them of that, because I think I know the problem, and the problem is the man who wrote this bill, the man who will benefit from this bill, a man who, as it was once said of imperial Britain, has no permanent friends and no permanent enemies, just permanent interests, and those interests are always going to incorporate Marc Eliesen at the centre of things.

I would conclude my remarks by saying this is an important bill. I think it is a bill that does not do some of the central things that the government wants done. I commend the minister for bringing forward amendments to deal with particularly the unrestricted directive power.

I hope every member in this assembly looks at this bill carefully. I hope a lot of people are prepared to debate it and the energy policy that informs it, because I think they are playing with dynamite. I support a lot of the rhetoric, but the reality, my friends, particularly for people in my part of rural eastern Ontario, is going to be pain, the like of which they have not experienced on their Hydro bills ever before.

I think the province, the community, the economy is in dire risk of running serious shortages that are going to compromise not just the social wellbeing but the economic prosperity and prospect of the province and much of the country, and as I look to the developing stages of this bill, I am going to expect some amendments that are going to deal with more accountability and legislative oversight.

I certainly expect this bill will be canvassed not just in this chamber but, during the winter intersession, across the province, because many people I represent will want to talk about this bill, will want to tell the government what they feel, which may in some cases not be what I feel, around the key ingredients of the directive power and the inadvisability, the unfairness, the regressivity of Hydro rates being used to deal with the Elliot Lake and Kapuskasing difficulties, about which we all want something done.

This, my friends, is a very important bill. That is why I felt the need to go on at some length this afternoon. What I say I do not say lightly. I am sorry in some ways that I had to be so accusatory, but I look at this bill and I see some of the old manipulations that would make Adam Beck rise from his grave and beat his breast and say, "My, my, but my legacy of public ownership but with no public accountability is apparently, on the basis of Bill 118, alive and well in the heart, soul and mind of Marc Eliesen, chairman-designate of Ontario Hydro."

Mr Hope: Unfortunately, I missed part of the history class that was given during the speech. But, dealing with the comments about the Chairman of Management Board being a school board trustee and talking about constraints, I must reflect back to the member opposite that he had the ability—I stand to be corrected—at one time of making Ontario Hydro accountable to the people of Ontario but never did so.

Accountability means accountability to the taxpayers of this province—he referred to this, and he referred to the orders in council—and also accountability to the people of that community. But when we talk about private industry, we also want to make sure that when private industries leave they are accountable to the community from which they have taken the fruit off the tree. It is very important that we understand that the management that took place under the direction of Ontario Hydro made some bad decisions, and there are a lot of people who are being affected by those bad decisions. When we look at private industries to make sure they are accountable to the communities they devastate, I think it is important that we also talk, on the same hand, about accountability in our own crown corporations.

It was very interesting that as he generated comments and reflected his concerns about this bill, he focused a lot on the person. The bill itself, I think, is one bill that is needed. I think the government ought to be a part of the decision and process that will lead to the future, dealing with energy. From my own personal viewpoint in looking at this bill, I think it is a very positive step in making sure that the accountability to the taxpayers of the province, and also the accountability to the communities that Ontario Hydro plays a role in, will be there under this piece of legislation.

Mr McGuinty: I want to take the opportunity to thank the member for Renfrew North for making the kind of contribution that only he is capable of making. He has lent a great deal of insight to this debate. I knew we were in for a special treat, judging by the number of books he put forward today. I think perhaps we can make arrangements to get him a bigger desk.

The historical perspective is something we are often lacking, I find, in debating issues in this House, and the member has lent insight into that aspect; that is particularly important in dealing with Ontario Hydro, a very important institution in the development of this province. I know I speak for the government members as well, in saying that we certainly, if nothing else, learned a great deal from the member. They may not agree 100% with everything he said, but I want to express my appreciation.

Mr Sutherland: I, too, want to compliment the member for Renfrew North for a very entertaining afternoon; not only that, but for bringing forward a great deal of historical perspective on Ontario Hydro and certainly a good display of oratory.

I do not agree with everything he said.

I do want to bring out some issues regarding nuclear energy, because he referred to the comments the member for Victoria-Haliburton had made related to the issue of productivity. One of the reasons we are having these rate increases right now is that the nuclear power plants have not performed at the rate that was originally projected, and some of the money Ontario Hydro had borrowed to finance that. If it had produced at that level, then maybe we would not have as much of a debt problem and these significant increases. I guess that is an issue that has not been discussed that much. I do not hear too many of the public utilities commissions on that issue, certainly the ones in my riding that are complaining about the increases.

It does not seem to make a significant amount of the increase. When you look at Darlington at $13.5 billion compared to $2 billion, versus the figures the member mentioned on issues related to Elliot Lake and Kapuskasing, Elliot Lake and Kapuskasing seem to be very small in comparison. To me, that needs to be a focus of the issue in terms of where some of the productivity of that industry has been.

Mrs Sullivan: I particularly appreciated the remarks from the member for Renfrew North, who has been very involved in debates on Hydro in the Legislature over the years since he was first elected, about 16 years ago, and I would suggest to members who are new to the Hydro debates that they review the remarks, particularly those relating to the accountability of Ontario Hydro, which were in fact extremely pertinent.

The accountability that the member was discussing related to the accountability of Ontario Hydro to the government, to the Legislature and to its ratepayers. Indeed, what he was talking about was the separation of the government mandate in terms of the setting and directing of energy policy, and the mandate of Ontario Hydro in delivering electricity and areas surrounding the question of electricity delivery.

I think those remarks are extremely pertinent, that they are important to the debate, and I hope members will review them so that we do not have the kind of misunderstanding we heard from the member for Chatham-Kent on the question of accountability. It was clear from his response to the member's question that there was a clear misunderstanding of what Hydro accountability meant to the government and to the Legislature and to the ratepayers.

The Acting Speaker: The honourable member for Renfrew North has two minutes to reply.

Mr Conway: Just in summary, I repeat that I think it is both economically and socially the most unfair policy to pursue regional economic development strategies on the backs of electrical ratepayers. However laudable the objectives are in these communities, and I accept the importance of those objectives, it is unfair and inequitable to base those programs on hydro ratepayers; that is what the consolidated revenue fund is for.

The second point is, the history lesson is not delivered just out of fun or personal interest or some arcane diversion. The history lesson is delivered to tell you something about how these questions of accountability and relationship have been fought about over the years. I cite the example of the Farmers' government and the way it dealt with rural electrification. They rejected, in the face of enormous political pressure from their constituency, making the ratepayers pay for that added cost. They did that by provincial subsidy.

Finally, on the subject of accountability I make the point that I am very concerned that the bill does not deliver what it wants to deliver, that it empowers a man in a way I am very concerned about, because while I have some regard for the intelligence and the creativity of Mr Eliesen, I know something of his past record, and it causes me great concern as a parliamentarian who wants to assert some reasonable parliamentary control over Ontario Hydro. When I think of the chairman, Marc Eliesen, I can think only of what Sir Humphrey Appleby once wrote in his diary, Sir Humphrey of Yes, Minister fame. Sir Humphrey once observed: "In the great restaurant of government, civil servants are the cooks and the politicians are the waiters. We prepare all the dishes and they serve them up to the customers." Sir Humphrey, I think, spoke well of Marc Eliesen's view of us and the business in which we are engaged.

The House adjourned at 1803.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor/Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon/L'hon Lincoln M. Alexander, PC, QC/CP, CR

Speaker/Président: Hon/L'hon David Warner

Clerk/Greffier: Claude L. DesRosiers

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Committees/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des comités: Smirle Forsyth

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Journals/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des journaux: Alex D. McFedries

Sergeant at Arms/Sergent d'armes: Thomas Stelling

Abel, Donald (Wentworth North/-Nord PC) government whip/Whip du gouvernement

Akande, Hon/L'hon Zanana (St Andrew-St Patrick ND) Minister of Community and Social Services/Ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires

Allen, Hon/L'hon Richard (Hamilton West/-Ouest ND) Minister of Colleges and Universities, Minister of Skills Development/Ministre des Collèges et Universités, ministre de la Formation professionnelle

Arnott, Ted (Wellington PC)

Beer, Charles (York North/-Nord L)

Bisson, Gilles (Cochrane South/-Sud ND) PA to Minister of Northern Development and Mines, PA to minister responsible for francophone affairs, Vice-Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/Ap du ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines, ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones, vice-président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération

Boyd, Hon/L'hon Marion (London Centre/-Centre ND) Minister of Education, minister responsible for women's issues/Ministre de l'Éducation, ministre déléguée à la Condition féminine

Bradley, James J. (St Catharines L) opposition House leader/Chef parlementaire de l'opposition

Brown, Michael A. (Algoma-Manitoulin L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on general government/ Vice-Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales

Buchanan, Hon/L'hon Elmer (Hastings-Peterborough ND) Minister of Agriculture and Food/Ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation

Callahan, Robert V. (Brampton South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Président du Comité permanent des comptes publics

Caplan, Elinor (Oriole L) Chair, standing committee on social development/Présidente du Comité permanent des affaires sociales

Carr, Gary (Oakville South/-Sud PC)

Carter, Jenny (Peterborough ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

Charlton, Hon/L'hon Brian (Hamilton Mountain ND) Minister of Financial Institutions/Ministre des Institutions financières

Chiarelli, Robert (Ottawa West/-Ouest L)

Christopherson, David (Hamilton Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/Ap du Trésorier de l'Ontario et du ministre de l'Économie

Churley, Hon/L'hon Marilyn (Riverdale ND) Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ministre de la Consommation et du Commerce

Cleary, John C. (Cornwall L)

Conway, Sean G. (Renfrew North/-Nord L)

Cooke, Hon/L'hon David (Windsor-Riverside ND) Minister of Municipal Affairs, government House leader/Ministre des Affaires municipales, chef parlementaire du gouvernement

Cooper, Mike (Kitchener-Wilmot ND) Chair, standing committee on administration of justice; deputy government whip/Président du Comité permanent de l'administration de la justice, whip adjoint du gouvernement

Coppen, Hon/L'hon Shirley (Niagara South/-Sud ND) Minister without Portfolio, chief government whip/Ministre sans portefeuille, whip en chef du gouvernement

Cordiano, Joseph (Lawrence L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on social development/Vice-Président du Comité permanent des affaires sociales

Cousens, W. Donald (Markham PC)

Cunningham, Dianne (London North/-Nord PC) Progressive Conservative chief whip/Whip en chef du Parti progressiste-conservateur

Curling, Alvin (Scarborough North/-Nord L) opposition deputy whip/whip adjoint de l'opposition

Dadamo, George (Windsor-Sandwich ND) PA to Minister of Transportation/Ap du ministre des Transports

Daigeler, Hans (Nepean L)

Drainville, Dennis (Victoria-Haliburton ND) PA to Minister of Municipal Affairs; Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/Ap du ministre des Affaires municipales, président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération

Duignan, Noel (Halton North/-Nord ND) Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative, coprésident du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire

Elston, Murray J. (Bruce L) Leader of the Official Opposition/Chef de l'opposition officielle

Eves, Ernie (Parry Sound PC) Progressive Conservative House leader/Chef parlementaire du Parti progressiste-conservateur

Farnan, Mike (Cambridge ND) First Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Premier vice-président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Fawcett, Joan M. (Northumberland L)

Ferguson, Hon/L'hon Will (Kitchener ND) Minister of Energy/Ministre de l'Énergie

Fletcher, Derek (Guelph ND) PA to Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ap du ministre de la Consommation et du Commerce

Frankford, Robert (Scarborough East/-Est ND)

Gigantes, Hon/L'hon Evelyn (Ottawa Centre/-Centre ND)
Minister of Housing/Ministre du Logement

Grandmaître, Bernard C. (Ottawa East/-Est L)

Grier, Hon/L'hon Ruth A. (Etobicoke-Lakeshore ND)
Minister of the Environment, minister responsible for the greater Toronto area/Ministre de l'Environnement, ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto

Haeck, Christel (St. Catharines-Brock ND)

Hampton, Hon/L'hon Howard (Rainy River ND) Attorney General/Procureur général

Hansen, Ron (Lincoln ND) Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs; Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/Président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques, président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi privés

Harnick, Charles (Willowdale PC)

Harrington, Margaret H. (Niagara Falls ND) PA to Minister of Housing/Ap du ministre du Logement

Harris, Michael (Nipissing PC) leader of the Progressive Conservative Party/Chef du Parti progressiste-conservateur

Haslam, Hon/L'hon Karen (Perth ND) Minister of Culture and Communications/Ministre de la Culture et des Communications

Hayes, Pat (Essex-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (agriculture)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (agriculture)

Henderson, D. James (Etobicoke-Humber L)

Hope, Randy R. (Chatham-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Community and Social Services/Ap du ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires

Hugot, Bob (Sarnia ND) PA to Minister of Energy/Ap du ministre de l'Énergie

Jackson, Cameron (Burlington South/-Sud PC) Chair, standing committee on estimates/Président du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses

Jamison, Norm (Norfolk ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology, responsible for small business/Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie, délégué aux Affaires des petites entreprises

Johnson, Paul R. (Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings/Prince-Edward-Lennox-Hastings-Sud ND)
PA to Minister of Revenue/Ap du ministre du Revenu

Jordan, W. Leo (Lanark-Renfrew PC)

Klopp, Paul (Huron ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (food)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (alimentation)

Kormos, Peter (Welland-Thorold ND) Chair, standing committee on resources development/Président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources

Kwinter, Monte (Wilson Heights L)

Lankin, Hon/L'hon Frances (Beaches-Woodbine ND)
Minister of Health, minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ministre de la Santé, ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale

Laughren, Hon/L'hon Floyd (Nickel Belt ND) Deputy Premier, Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/Vice-premier ministre, Trésorier de l'Ontario et ministre de l'Économie

Lessard, Wayne (Windsor-Walkerville ND) PA to Minister of Colleges and Universities/Ap du ministre des Collèges et Universités

Mackenzie, Hon/L'hon Bob (Hamilton East/-Est ND)
Minister of Labour/Ministre du Travail

MacKinnon, Ellen (Lambton ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative

Mahoney, Steven W. (Mississauga West/-Ouest L) chief opposition whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition

Malkowski, Gary (York East/-Est ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

Mammoliti, George (Yorkview ND) PA to minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ap de la ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale

Mancini, Remo (Essex South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on general government/Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales

Marchese, Rosario (Fort York ND) PA to the Premier, PA to Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Ap du premier ministre, ap du ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales

Marland, Margaret (Mississauga South/-Sud PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on estimates/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses

Martel, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Sudbury East/-Est ND) Minister of Northern Development and Mines/Ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines

Martin, Tony (Sault Ste. Marie/Sault-Sainte-Marie ND) PA to Minister of Education/Ap de la ministre de l'Éducation

Mathysen, Irene (Middlesex ND) PA to Minister of the Environment, government whip/Ap de la ministre de l'Environnement, whip du gouvernement

McClelland, Carman (Brampton North/-Nord L)

McGuinty, Dalton J.P. (Ottawa South/-Sud L)

McLean, Allan K. (Simcoe East/-Est PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Vice-Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux

McLeod, Lyn (Fort William L)

Miclash, Frank (Kenora L) opposition chief whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition

Mills, Gord (Durham East/-Est ND) PA to Solicitor General/Ap du Solliciteur général

Morin, Gilles E. (Carleton East/-Est L) Deputy Speaker and Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Vice-Président et Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Morrow, Mark (Wentworth East/-Est ND) Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman; Vice-Chair, standing committee on administration of justice/Président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman, vice-président du Comité permanent de l'administration de la justice

Murdoch, Bill (Grey PC)

Murdock, Sharon (Sudbury ND) PA to Minister of Labour/Ap du ministre du Travail

North, Hon/L'hon Peter (Elgin ND) Minister of Tourism and Recreation/Ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs

O'Connor, Lawrence (Durham-York ND) PA to minister responsible for the greater Toronto area; Vice-Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/
Ap de la ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto, vice-président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi privés

Offer, Steven (Mississauga North/-Nord L)

O'Neil, Hugh P. (Quinte L)

O'Neill, Yvonne (Ottawa-Rideau L) opposition deputy whip/
Whip adjointe de l'opposition

Owens, Stephen (Scarborough Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Financial Institutions, government whip/
Ap du ministre des Institutions financières, whip du gouvernement

Perruzza, Anthony (Downsview ND) PA to Minister for Skills Development/Ap du ministre de la Formation professionnelle

Philip, Hon/L'hon Ed (Etobicoke-Rexdale ND) Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology/Ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie

Phillips, Gerry (Scarborough-Agincourt L)

Pilkey, Hon/L'hon Allan (Oshawa ND) Solicitor General, Minister of Correctional Services/Solliciteur général, ministre des Services correctionnels

Poirier, Jean (Prescott and Russell/Prescott et Russell L)

Poole, Dianne (Eglinton L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Vice-Présidente du comité permanent des comptes publics

Pouliot, Hon/L'hon Gilles (Lake Nipigon/Lac-Nipigon ND) Minister of Transportation, minister responsible for francophone affairs/Ministre du Transport, ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones

Rae, Hon/L'hon Bob (York South/-Sud ND) Premier, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Premier ministre, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales

Ramsay, David (Timiskaming L)

Rizzo, Tony (Oakwood IND)

Runciman, Robert W. (Leeds-Grenville PC) Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux

Ruprecht, Tony (Parkdale L)

Scott, Ian G. (St. George-St. David L)

Silipo, Hon/L'hon Tony (Dovercourt ND) Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet/Président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement

Sola, John (Mississauga East/-Est L)

Sorbara, Gregory S. (York Centre/-Centre L)

Sterling, Norman W. (Carleton PC)

Stockwell, Chris (Etobicoke West/-Ouest PC)

Sullivan, Barbara (Halton Centre/-Centre L)

Sutherland, Kimble (Oxford ND) PA to Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet; Vice-Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs/Ap du président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement, vice-président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques

Swarbrick, Anne (Scarborough West /-Ouest ND)

Tilson, David (Dufferin-Peel PC)

Turnbull, David (York Mills PC)

Villeneuve, Noble (S-D-G & East Grenville/S.-D.-G. & Grenville-Est PC) Second Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Deuxième vice-président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Ward, Brad (Brantford ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology with responsibility for trade and technology/
Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie et délégué au Commerce et à la Technologie

Ward, Margery (Don Mills ND) PA to Minister of Government Services/Ap du ministre des Services gouvernementaux

Wark-Martyn, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Port Arthur ND) Minister of Revenue/Ministre du Revenu

Warner, Hon/L'hon David (Scarborough-Ellesmere ND) Speaker; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président, coprésident du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire

Waters, Daniel (Muskoka-Georgian Bay/Muskoka-Baie-Georgienne ND) PA to Minister of Tourism and Recreation; Vice-Chair, standing committee on resources development/
Ap du ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs, vice-président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources

Wessinger, Paul (Simcoe Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Health/Ap de la ministre de la Santé

White, Drummond (Durham Centre/-Centre ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman/
Vice-président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman

Wildman, Hon/L'hon Bud (Algoma ND) Minister of Natural Resources, minister responsible for native affairs/Ministre des Ressources naturelles, ministre délégué aux Affaires autochtones

Wilson, Hon/L'hon Fred (Frontenac-Addington ND) Minister of Government Services/Ministre des Services gouvernementaux

Wilson, Gary (Kingston and The Islands/Kingston et Les Îles ND) PA to Minister of Culture and Communications/
Ap de la ministre de la Culture et des Communications

Wilson, Jim (Simcoe West/-Ouest PC)

Wininger, David (London South/-Sud ND) PA to Attorney General, PA to minister responsible for native affairs/Ap du Procureur général, ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires autochtones

Wiseman, Jim (Durham West/Durham-Ouest ND) PA to Minister of Correctional Services/Ap du ministre des Services correctionnels

Witmer, Elizabeth (Waterloo North/-Nord PC)

Wood, Len (Cochrane North/-Nord ND) PA to Minister of Natural Resources/Ap du ministre des Ressources naturelles

Ziemba, Hon/L'hon Elaine (High Park-Swansea ND) Minister of Citizenship, minister responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

STANDING COMMITTEES/COMITÉS PERMANENTS

Administration of justice/Administration de la justice

Chair/Président: Mike Cooper

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Mark Morrow

Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Jenny Carter, Robert Chiarelli, Derek Fletcher, Charles Harnick, Irene Mathysen, Gordon Mills, Jean Poirier, Gregory S. Sorbara, David Winninger

Clerk/Greffière: Lisa Freedman

Estimates/Budgets des dépenses

Chair/Président: Cameron Jackson

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Margaret Marland

Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Hans Daigeler, Mike Farnan, Paul R. Johnson, Wayne Lessard, Dalton McGuinty, Lyn McLeod, Lawrence O'Connor, Anthony Perruzza, Gary Wilson

Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Finance and economic affairs/

Finance et affaires économiques

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Kimble Sutherland

Members/Membres: David Christopherson, Norman Jamison, Monte Kwinter, Gerry Phillips, Norman W. Sterling, Chris Stockwell, Barbara Sullivan, Brad Ward, Margery Ward, Jim Wiseman

Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

General government/Affaires gouvernementales

Chair/Président: Remo Mancini

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Michael A. Brown

Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Gilles Bisson, Dennis Drainville, Margaret H. Harrington, George Mammoliti, Rosario Marchese, Bill Murdoch, Yvonne O'Neill, Ian G. Scott, David Turnbull

Clerk/Greffière: Deborah Deller

Government agencies/Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair/Président: Robert W. Runciman

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Allan K. McLean

Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Jenny Carter, Robert Frankford, Bernard Grandmaître, Pat Hayes, Rosario Marchese, Dalton McGuinty, Chris Stockwell, Daniel Waters, Jim Wiseman

Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Legislative Assembly/Assemblée législative

Chair/Président: Noel Duignan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Ellen MacKinnon

Members/Membres: Mike Cooper, Robert Frankford, Norman Jamison, Margaret Marland, Irene Mathysen, Carman McClelland, Gilles E. Morin, Hugh P. O'Neil, Stephen Owens, Noble Villeneuve

Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Ombudsman/Ombudsman

Chair/Président: Mark Morrow

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Drummond White

Members/Membres: Alvin Curling, Joan M. Fawcett, Christel Haeck, D. James Henderson, Peter Kormos, George Mammoliti, Bill Murdoch, Margery Ward, Paul Wessinger, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer

Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Public accounts/Comptes publics

Chair/Président: Robert V. Callahan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Dianne Poole

Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Sean G. Conway, W. Donald Cousens, Christel Haeck, Pat Hayes, Paul R. Johnson, Ellen MacKinnon, Lawrence O'Connor, David Tilson, Drummond White

Clerk/Greffière: Tannis Manikel

Regulations and private bills/

Règlements et projets de loi privés

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Lawrence O'Connor

Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Mike Farnan, Derek Fletcher, Leo Jordan, Ellen MacKinnon, Frank Miclash, Tony Ruprecht, John Sola, Kimble Sutherland, Drummond White, Jim Wilson

Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

Resources development/Développement des ressources

Chair/Président: Peter Kormos

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Daniel Waters

Members/Membres: Ted Arnott, John C. Cleary, George Dadamo, Bob Huget, Leo Jordan, Paul Klopp, Sharon Murdock, Steven Offer, David Ramsay, Len Wood

Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

Social development/Affaires sociales

Chair/Présidente: Elinor Caplan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Joseph Cordiano

Members/Membres: Charles Beer, Christel Haeck, Randy R. Hope, Gary Malkowski, Tony Martin, Lyn McLeod, Stephen Owens, Paul Wessinger, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer

Clerk/Greffière: Lynn Mellor

SELECT COMMITTEE/COMITÉ SPÉCIAL

Ontario in Confederation/

Rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération

Chair/Président: Dennis Drainville

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Gilles Bisson

Members/Membres: Jenny Carter, Alvin Curling, Ernie Eves, Charles Harnick, Margaret H. Harrington, Gary Malkowski, Irene Mathysen, Steven Offer, Yvonne O'Neill, David Winninger

Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

SPECIAL COMMITTEE/COMITÉ EXTRAORDINAIRE

Parliamentary precinct/Enceinte parlementaire

Co-Chair/Coprésident: David Warner

Co-Chair/Coprésident: Noel Duignan

Members/Membres: Dianne Cunningham, Remo Mancini, Kimble Sutherland

Clerk/Greffier: Smirle Forsyth

CONTENTS

Wednesday 2 October 1991

Members' statements

Historical society display	2655
Mr Cleary
Appointments to housing authorities	2655
Mr B. Murdoch
Karen Morrison	2655
Mr Dadamo
Shelter for women	2655
Ms Poole
Affordable housing	2656
Mrs Witmer
Faculty of social work	2556
Mr White
Ontario Hydro legislation	2656
Mr McGuinty
Minister of Community and Social Services	2656
Mr Carr
Ontario Summer Games	2657
Mr Frankford
Certificates of congratulation	2657
Mr H. O'Neil
Extension of response time	2657
Mr Cooke

Statements by the ministry

Government spending	2657
Mr Laughren
Ontario public service salaries and benefits	2659
Mr Silipo
Ontario Hydro legislation	2660
Mr Ferguson

Responses

Government spending	2660
Mr Elston
Mr Sterling
Mr Stockwell
Ontario Hydro legislation	2662
Mr Jordan

Oral questions

Government spending	2662
Mr Elston
Mr Laughren
Mr Phillips
Mr Sterling
Ontario public services salaries and benefits	2664
Mr Stockwell
Mr Silipo
Assistance to de Havilland	2665
Mr Kwinter
Mr Rae

Nursing homes	2666
Mr J. Wilson
Mr Laughren
Assistance to farmers	2667
Mr Mills
Mr Buchanan
Fuel spill	2667
Mr McClelland
Mrs Grier
Taxation	2668
Mr Carr
Mr Laughren
Non-profit housing	2669
Mr Fletcher
Ms Gigantes
Mental health services	2669
Mr H. O'Neil
Ms Lankin
Education program evaluation	2670
Mrs Cunningham
Mrs Boyd
Attendance of Premier	2671
Mr Mahoney
Certificates of congratulation	2671
Mr F. Wilson

Petitions

Oath of allegiance	2671
Mr Kwinter
Pornography	2672
Mr Carr
Oath of allegiance	2672
Mr J. Wilson
Nursing homes	2672
Mrs Y. O'Neill
Mrs Sullivan

Second readings

Power Corporation Amendment Act, 1991,
Bill 118	2672
Mr Drainville	2672
Mr McGuinty	2675
Mr Conway	2675
Mr Hope	2690
Mrs Sullivan	2690
Adjourned	2691

Lists of members

Members and their responsibilities
Committees of the Legislative Assembly

TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Le mercredi 2 octobre 1991

Deuxième lecture

Listes des députés

Loi de 1991 modifiant la Loi sur la Société de l'électricité, projet de loi 118
Débat ajourné	2691

Les députés et leurs responsabilités
Comités de l'Assemblée législative

63 1991

63 1991

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly of Ontario

First Session, 35th Parliament

Official Report of Debates (Hansard)

Thursday 3 October 1991

Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

Première session, 35^e législature

Journal des débats (Hansard)

Le jeudi 3 octobre 1991

Speaker
Honourable David Warner

Clerk
Claude L. DesRosiers

Président
L'honorable David Warner

Greffier
Claude L. DesRosiers

Table of Contents

Table of Contents for proceedings reported in this issue appears at the back, together with an alphabetical list of members of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at (416) 325-7400.

Numbering of Hansard

Effective with the opening of the Second Session of the 35th Parliament, Hansard issues and pages will once again be numbered on a sessional basis. Hansard numbering therefore will become consistent with Orders and Notices and Votes and Proceedings, and with other parliamentary publications throughout Canada.

For the last two years Hansard has been numbered according to the calendar year. Under this system, the numbering of issues and pages was restarted with the first issue in the calendar year, regardless of session or Parliament.

Under the new system, the sequence of numbering started in January 1991 will end with the final House and committee sittings of the present First Session. A new sequence will begin on the opening day of the Second Session, and each succeeding session, which will be issue 1 and begin with page 1. Committee reports likewise will be numbered from the first sitting of each committee in a parliamentary session.

Subscriptions

Subscription information may be obtained from: Sessional Subscription Service, Publications Ontario, Ministry of Government Services, 5th Floor, 880 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 1N8. Phone (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 or toll-free 1 (800) 668-9938.

Table des matières

La table des matières des séances rapportées dans ce numéro se trouve à l'arrière de ce fascicule, ainsi qu'une liste alphabétique de députés de l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario.

Il existe un index cumulatif des numéros précédents. Les renseignements qu'il contient sont à votre disposition par téléphone auprès des employés de l'index du Journal des débats au (416) 325-7400.

Numérotation du Journal des débats

A partir du début de la deuxième session de la 35^e législature, les pages et les numéros du Journal des débats seront de nouveau numérotés par session. La numérotation du Journal des débats correspondra donc à celle de Feuilleton et Avis et de Procès-verbaux, ainsi que celle des autres publications parlementaires au Canada.

Depuis deux ans, le Journal des débats était numéroté par année civile. Avec ce système, la numérotation des numéros et des pages recommençait au premier numéro de l'année civile, quelle que soit la session ou la législature.

Avec le nouveau système, la numérotation commencée en janvier 1991 s'arrêtera à la dernière séance de la Chambre et des comités de l'actuelle première session. Une nouvelle série commencera le jour de l'ouverture de la deuxième session et des sessions suivantes : numéro 1, page 1. Les rapports des comités seront également numérotés à partir de la première séance de chaque comité pour une session parlementaire donnée.

Abonnements

Pour les abonnements, veuillez prendre contact avec le Service d'abonnement parlementaire, Publications Ontario, ministère des Services gouvernementaux, 5^e étage, 880, rue Bay, Toronto (Ontario) M7A 1N8. Par téléphone : (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 ou, sans frais : 1 (800) 668-9938.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Thursday 3 October 1991

The House met at 1001.

Prayers.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BUSINESS

UNSOLICITED FACSIMILE TRANSMISSIONS ACT, 1991

Mr Cousens moved second reading of Bill 134, An Act respecting Unsolicited Facsimile Transmissions.

LOI DE 1991 SUR LES TRANSMISSIONS PAR TÉLÉCOPIE NON SOLLICITÉES

M. Cousens propose la deuxième lecture du projet de loi 134, Loi portant sur les transmissions par télécopie non sollicitées.

The Acting Speaker (Mr Villeneuve): The honourable member for Markham.

Mr Cousens: I would like to speak to this. It has had first reading in the House, and a chance now exists for us to debate a bill that, on a scale of 1 to 10, with all the things that are facing the Legislature—well, I would none the less like to see this be given consideration this morning.

The Acting Speaker: The member has 10 minutes and a two-minute—

Mr Cousens: Gosh, there are so many rules around here it is going to be hard to live within them. Here I am trying to live within the rules of the Legislature, yet I want to have new rules and regulations for the world of finance and the world of business. I look forward to the day when we can deal with many other issues and when people look at this Legislature and say, "What are they dealing with that for?"

It just happens to be one of those issues that needs to be cleaned up, and in the hour we have this morning to talk about unsolicited faxes, we private members have a chance to do something. No one is going to twist our arms, other than our own consciences and maybe the outstanding arguments I present to all of us that we allow this bill to pass so Ontario can join those other jurisdictions that have said, "Let's do something about junk fax mail." That is where I am coming from on this one.

I have a little background information to give. The fact of the matter is, a few years ago we never even heard of a fax machine. I do not know whether we would put our pages to the test: "Have you ever received a fax? Have you ever sent a fax?" Maybe they have. Maybe they are sending their essays to school by fax and the teachers are now doing it the new, technological way.

For a number of years in Europe they have had facsimile machines where people have been able to transmit documents of all kinds to one another, escaping the entanglement of the post office or couriers, doing it far more quickly by virtue of using the communication lines of Bell, CN-CP or whatever to obtain that document more quickly.

Fax machines now are almost universal. In the world of business, if you do not have one, there is a small store not far away where you can send or receive a facsimile. We are seeing now in offices all over this country and this province that people have fax machines. People now can have one for their homes where, for special situations, they too can have their own machine.

Our MPP offices, just in the last little while, have been provided with fax machines, and on most of our business cards, as MPPs now, we will have a number for facsimile. The fact of the matter is, you can get them for cars, so there are portable faxes.

I realize that technology allows anything we have today to be extended further and further out. It is good that automation is expanding, and it seems to be helping business. Business then is able to do a great deal by using these machines. It becomes a legal document, so many real estate transactions now can be handled by a fax. Bankers, lawyers, many people are using these machines to expedite business. Let's face it: Things are getting faster and faster. We just have to have those tools available. We have to understand that it is a requirement just to run business today. The fact that we have it, the fact that we are using it is in itself something that says, "Well, we just have to move with the times."

As technology expands, the old situations we had before continue to exist. When members receive their mail every day, how often do they also receive what they do not want to receive, their bills, their tax bills? Some people think of junk mail as being the letter from their MPP, but I am not including that when I talk about junk mail, especially when it comes from me to my constituents. But people really want to get rid of the junk. They say, "Hey, it's just adding to the accumulation of garbage; it's something I don't want."

Yet I do not know how we deal with that. First of all, it is a federal matter and the post office does not come under our jurisdiction. But one thing that does come under our jurisdiction is the kind of thing that happens with junk faxes.

An organization known as the Canadian Federation of Independent Business did a survey not too long ago. The CFIB asked whether there should be regulations protecting the public from advertising by businesses via fax machines; in other words, regulations that would prohibit people from just using the fax for solicitations of a commercial nature. The results of this survey were that 81% of the respondents believed there should be regulations restricting the advertising by businesses using fax machines; 10% said no, there should not be regulations of any kind; 5% were undecided, and another 4% did not have any interest in the issue. The fact of the matter is, 81% of the respondents to this survey believed there should be regulations protecting the public from advertising by businesses using fax machines.

We have seen a number of jurisdictions take this seriously, and two states in the United States that I am aware of, Connecticut and Maryland, have both passed laws that will restrict the use of fax machines for the transmission of commercial solicitations.

I believe that when you have your own little machine in your own office these days you have made an investment, first of all, in the machine to have it there ready for your commercial activity. If the machine is tied up in receiving an extended advertisement or material that you did not want and that is not part of your normal business life, then you cannot use that machine. You cannot just turn it off. Once someone ties up your machine in sending out a large, detailed brief of some kind that you do not want, what can you do about it? You shut off the machine and then you shut off the communication once it is over.

Mr Curling: You take the phone off the hook.

Mr Cousens: You take the phone off the hook, as my good friend describes, and that is not why you have your business there.

The other thing is that these machines require an expensive coated paper; that paper is expensive for a business to have. When you tie up a fax machine, you are not only using their line, you are using their paper as well.

What we are trying to suggest is not a big move for the Ontario Legislature, when we can deal with the Constitution, the economy, the issues that deal with the environment and every portfolio. I am almost embarrassed to say this is the issue of the day. But it will give a message to business that says we, as the Ontario Legislature, want to see business streamlined. If we can help in some way and remove the impediments that keep people from having the success they want and deserve, that they are really trying for, then through this kind of bill we are at least putting a message out there that indicates that the Ontario Legislature is not close-minded to the needs of business. In that spirit I have brought forward this bill.

1010

It is too bad we did not debate it yesterday. Yesterday was Zero Garbage Day. A number of people will come into their offices in the morning, or even during the day, and receive 20 or 30 faxes that are unsolicited. It is just the kind of garbage they do not need.

If the House is able to consider this a worthy bill, in this one hour's time we will have been able at least to begin on this road of recovery that helps business and say we in the Legislature are working with them. That is part of the message I want to convey through this bill, that we are not isolated from the real world, where things are not all that easy, but from this perspective we are at least making the time and the concern known that we are prepared to do something about it.

Bill 134 is a very simple bill, and what it means is that if someone does use the fax machine for unsolicited commercial solicitation, he could suffer a fine of $1,000. This will not cut into the kind of solicitation that people make of us as politicians, it will not cut into some of the normal ways in which business is communicated, but it will start getting rid of what we call junk fax.

The Acting Speaker: I thank the honourable member for his opening remarks. He will have two minutes to summarize. Every recognized party in the Legislature now has 15 minutes to debate Bill 134, as presented by the honourable member for Markham.

Mr Kormos: There was so much enthusiasm about this legislation that I have to share the 15 minutes with at least two other speakers, and I am relying on the member for Kitchener-Wilmot—why is it that we cannot call people by their real names? Their friends, their families, their spouses call them by their real names. In any event, I am sure Mr Cooper—notwithstanding that Hansard may well correct that—will let me know when I have used up what he deems to be my portion of the time. Of course, depending upon what I say, it may well motivate him to let me speak longer or shorter.

I am especially pleased to be able to speak to the bill of the member for Markham this morning, because I am going to be in Markham this evening, and I know the member for Markham is going to make every effort to be there too. The Zemplin Slovak Ensemble is celebrating its 30th anniversary tonight, Thursday, at the Markham Theatre, 171 Town Centre Boulevard in Markham. That is 8 pm. The Gymnik Orchestra from Slovakia is visiting Ontario and touring and performing, along with the Toronto Slovak Dancers and the Vychodna Slovak Dancers. I know Mr Cousens has been entertained by the Toronto Slovak Dancers and the Vychodna Slovak Dancers because he and I have been at some of the same concerts where these people have performed.

Mr Cousens: Is that a fax?

Mr Kormos: It is a fact, not a fax. That is an event that I am not going to miss in Markham tonight and, I suspect, any number of people who are watching this morning would not miss either.

I was a little bit concerned about the member for Markham's suggestion that pages may not be familiar with faxes. To the contrary, Robert Schmidt, the page from Brant-Haldimand, is very familiar with fax machinery and has used fax technology to communicate not just here in the province but as far away as Europe.

So just by way of correction, and I know the member for Markham takes this in the tone it is intended, I tell him Robert Schmidt from Brant-Haldimand objects mildly and modestly to his suggestion that pages are not familiar with faxes. On the contrary, I suspect these young people are far more familiar with that type of technology than many of the more mature, perhaps older persons here in the Legislature.

I was heartened by the member for Markham's comment that this legislation—and it is clear from reading it—is not designed to inhibit uses of fax technology where it is appropriate. Far be it from me to support legislation that would inhibit people from faxing their government members or opposition members about issues that are important and dear to them.

Surely this type of legislation would not inhibit people from faxing Ontario Hydro about the fact that the chairman of Ontario Hydro is making $400,000 a year. That is surely something that should get people concerned and irate enough that they would not only fax but fax frequently, and fax with some vehemence, about their objection to that sort of obscenity at a point in time when there are a whole lot of people not working in this province and a whole lot of people making a whole lot less. I know people who would do it for half the price. I suspect it is not the intention of the member for Markham, and it certainly is not mine—because I am supporting the legislation—to suggest that it should, can or is in any way intended to inhibit or prohibit people from faxing their concern about exorbitant salaries at a time of overall restraint.

I am convinced it is not intended to inhibit people from faxing their concern to the government, to the Premier's office and perhaps to the office of the Minister of Financial Institutions about the pending changes, as we were promised, in the auto insurance legislation, and about the fact that people out there in Ontario are really concerned that we are not going to keep our promise to restore the right of innocent accident victims to sue. Those people should be encouraged to fax, and fax frequently and fax articulately.

I know that a young fellow from Welland, Jeff Tremblay, did not fax me a letter but wrote me one and sent it through the mail from Roach Avenue in Welland. Jeff Tremblay is a sea cadet in 141 Bellerophon unit there. He writes as a very socially conscious young person, a very community-minded young person who is obviously keeping tabs on what is happening in this Legislature. Members should not think for a moment that people are not watching. They are watching and are concerned and are prepared to be critical, if need be.

Jeff Tremblay, from Roach Avenue in Welland, writes with concern about what has happened with the government's position on automobile insurance legislation, and I know that he is going to be concerned enough, if he has access to a fax machine, to fax those same concerns to the Premier and to as many people as he can reach through that same technology.

As I wrap up, I merely remind people once again that it is at 8 o'clock in Markham, at the Markham Theatre, 171 Town Centre Boulevard. Also, at 7 o'clock on Rogers Community 10, there will be a live program dealing with the issue of auto insurance. There will be Helen Anderson from the Consumers' Association of Canada, consumer advocate; Barb Baptiste from the Rehabilitation Management group here in Toronto, who performed an outstanding role of leadership in the right of innocent accident victims; John McLeish from a law firm; Judy Maddocks, regional manager of Royal Insurance, and myself. We will be participating at 7 o'clock this evening on cable 10, a live program which I believe will also entail a phone-in component, so people are encouraged to watch that and to participate in the debate.

I did mention that I support the legislation. I want to thank Mr Cousens for his interest in the issue, motivated as he was to bring this legislation forward, and I want to thank the NDP caucus for letting me rise and speak on this issue. I hope I have not offended anybody, but we will let the chips fall where they may.

Mr Curling: I want to thank the honourable member for Markham for introducing this. I cannot say I am excited about the bill he has introduced, but I can understand why he is doing it. As a matter of fact, I think his intentions are quite honourable, and I know that most of the things he has done are honourable.

The reason I cannot get excited about it is that there are so many pressing things happening right now in our society, especially in the jurisdiction of human rights, that on a morning like this it would be wonderful to be in this House and have a private member's bill that would talk about some of the things, such as human rights, that are so neglected and which we cannot get the government to do. Quite naturally, some of the private members may bring that forward. I am not looking forward to the government bringing it forward, because as I said, from the government point of view, it is lax in its activities. I would have hoped that the Conservative member who has brought this forward would have brought forward some human rights issues.

1020

The bill is about, are we going to respect the unsolicited facsimile transmissions that come through on the machines here? While I was hearing both members speak, our great member the defender of the auto insurance act and the member for Markham, I was a bit confused that maybe one is the Conservative and the other is the socialist.

To say that we will stop the flow of faxes coming through, to say to someone who would like to send you something on a fax machine, "It's going to waste paper because it was unsolicited," I thought this was a free enterprise system and that people would like to send you something and solicit your concern. In other words, as my honourable friend knows, it is like the telephone. I could equate the fax machine with a telephone. If you do not want it you can unlist your fax machine number. The fax machine is just like the telephone. You could take the fax machine from your constituency office, take it home, plug it into your telephone line and ask your friends to fax you something.

How we are going to stop that will be quite difficult. There is one other thing about it too. How would we monitor this? How would we police this bill and charge $1,000 for those who have violated the act? I do not know if we have any precedent on this. He has shown some precedents in the United States that have been instituted where they have restricted fax. Perhaps we should have done that for the junk mail that comes to our home.

I am not talking about junk mail, as the member has categorized it, as mail coming from a member of Parliament; not at all. I think that with the things I send out, it is a loss if people have thrown them into the garbage. It is good information. It is information about the government's mismanagement of funds. It is information about where we are going on human rights. It is information on some of the wonderful positions that are put forward by my colleagues here. I do not consider it junk mail, but we know the amount of junk mail that arrives at our doorsteps.

I cannot see how we would ever police this in our homes or in our businesses. A willing buyer and a willing seller: What would we do, for instance, if one phoned you and asked, "Are you selling your home?" or, "Would you like to buy a certain product?" I thought the Conservative government would be excited about that, because that is the kind of market we want, but I am hearing the honourable member saying we should cut that off. Therefore, I am very confused. I would have expected that this kind of information and this type of bill would come from over on that side of the fence.

Even if we were able to put this through, what law could we put in? Does it fall under federal jurisdiction or provincial jurisdiction? From my understanding, it comes under federal jurisdiction under telecommunications, so therefore we should put that forward. Members will recall that, I think, last year this bill was introduced for first reading and it died on the table. Here we are putting forward the same bill and he hopes for it to be successful.

Mr Cousens: It wasn't debated last time.

Mr Curling: It did not reach as far as being debated, as a matter of fact, as the honourable member reminded me. We have a chance to debate it this time, a waste of time, I feel, honestly. There are such other pressing needs, pressing issues, that we could deal with.

The fax machine is a very good technological advancement today. The members actually saw the display by the post office. Our mail is coming late and there are the strikes. The fax machine will never strike unless it breaks down mechanically. It is a pity we cannot send our cheques through the fax; I think they would come much quicker.

I feel that to have this restriction on the fax machine would be extremely bad for business itself. As I said, I tried to get excited about this. I ask the honourable member, if he gets a chance to do another private member's bill, to do something about human rights. He is quite an advocate for having human rights issues advanced. We could work together on all sides of the fence here, the Liberals and also the Conservatives—maybe we will be able to push aside this rhetoric that also comes from the government from time to time—to do something and use the time, instead of trying to restrict unsolicited fax machine messages, to do human rights and other issues.

We also hope that as the members look at this bill itself, and I am sure they have almost another eight minutes in which to speak on this matter, we could hear from them as to some of the issues that would be helpful. We could send very good information around instead of restricting it.

I will not speak very long on this bill. I just want to put it on the record that I—of course it is a private member's bill and all members may choose not to speak because they do not find other things to say on this—that I hope the honourable member himself will find it within himself to say, "Having heard these discussions, there are other, more pressing issues to do than trying to restrict the fax machine."

Mr McLean: I am pleased today to stand in my place and support Bill 134, An Act respecting Unsolicited Facsimile Transmissions. It is interesting to note that the Information and Privacy Commissioner of Ontario has indicated the problem we are having with faxes, the large number of unsolicited advertisements that are coming into business offices. Sidney Linden, Ontario's Information and Privacy Commissioner, said he believes Ontario is the first jurisdiction to issue rulings with regard to the number of faxes that are coming into offices.

Junk fax is a reality and junk fax is something like junk mail: It is only junk if the message is not appropriate for the person who is receiving it. When we look at some of the results of some of the questionnaires that have been sent out, it said, "Should there be regulations protecting the public from advertising businesses by fax machines?" Some 83% of the people who were asked that question indicated there should be, so there is an awareness out there. But we do not want to get the notion that they should not be faxing ministries or sending faxes to ministers on anything that is pertinent to what they believe to be important to them. I think that is why the fax machines are there. We all use them.

The essence of this bill is to try to slow down on junk faxes for advertising. There are two states, Connecticut and Maryland, that have passed legislation which prohibits people from sending unsolicited fax messages without prior approval. There are several statistics now where we see that in North America there are going to be some 11 million fax machines by 1993. It is becoming a major issue. When people and businesses want to advertise, they will want to now use the fax machine for advertising.

The other aspect of the whole issue is that looking at the environment, the amount of waste paper that comes out of fax machines can be astronomical. It certainly can affect the amount of garbage we are putting in and not recycling. That is another major issue to it.

Ontario has been urged to solve the junk fax problem. That is what I started out with, talking about the privacy commissioner who has indicated there is a problem here. Junk fax is a reality and I commend the member this morning for bringing this bill through to make the people out there aware of what is happening with the large number and increase in fax machines that are being put in offices and homes around this province. We are making it available for advertising people to be able to use the fax machine for advertising. That is really not, in my estimation, what faxes were meant for. They were meant for businesses to carry on their day-to-day business and meant for people such as us as legislators to deal with the concerns of our constituents in a more appropriate and faster manner.

I want to make it very clear that Bill 134 has its place. It is great that we are debating it here today and bringing it before this Legislature. I am sure honourable members here will support this bill because it is a step in the right direction and it is a good start.

The purpose of the bill is to prohibit the sending of unsolicited transmissions for the purpose of commercial solicitation. The prohibition would not apply to transmissions made in the course of ongoing negotiations or a pre-existing business relationship with the person receiving the transmission. In essence, junk fax is a reality. It is not an epidemic yet, but this bill will bring it to the attention of the people. We do hope it will not become an epidemic.

1030

Mr Frankford: I personally enjoy being part of Marshall McLuhan's electronic village. I really rather like receiving faxes, either at 281-2360, which is my constituency office, or at 325-7128, which I happen to share with a number of my colleagues, including the member for Welland-Thorold. He might well be reading my faxes or I might be reading his. I think this is all part of the process of open government which our party is committed to.

I think faxing saves me being there. I would really encourage faxing. I am rather surprised—and I echo the remarks of my colleague the member for Scarborough North—that the supposed party of business takes this attitude. Advertising is an important part of a business economy and the member's bill seems to discriminate very much against an important part of small business.

The member quotes some study saying that 80% of people oppose it. I did not gather who these people are who oppose it, whether they are people with faxes, whether they are businesses, whether they are small businesses, whether they are members of Parliament, whether they are the executive of the Conservative Party. Perhaps he will enlighten us later on.

Our party certainly stands for openness and we certainly, as has been stated many times, wish to help small business. I think the member who brought in this bill may wish to reconsider the impact his bill would have on small business. Furthermore, it would seem that this bill could only be policed within our province. I would assume we have no way of policing faxes that come in across the border.

I wonder whether the impact of the member's bill would be to drive some of these hardworking small businessmen over to paying phone charges to the phone company in Buffalo. I would appreciate the member's response on that. We are certainly trying to discourage cross-border leakage of funds. I think the member's bill stands a real risk of doing that.

The other issue that has been raised is the environmental question of the paper. I think the member has not given us the full story about what the technology can provide. I did not hear any mention of the fact that you can have fax boards. One can get paperless transmissions to one's computer. I would suggest this is something which is likely to grow. It is very convenient to type your letter on your computer and fax it straight off to someone else's fax. I think the member should realize that technology keeps on moving faster and that this problem of excess use of paper is unlikely to happen.

Neither of my faxes, 281-2360 or 325-7128, are fax boards at this present time, but I am sure it will be a simple matter to do that. We welcome the member's interest in efficient use of communications, but I think the problems he raised are solvable by technology, not by heavy-handed legislation.

Mr Lessard: What about plain paper fax?

Mr Frankford: Plain paper fax as well, but that is an intermediate step. I am glad my colleague reminded me of that. Anyway I would hope this problem will solve itself by technology, that we will not discriminate against small businesses, and I would ask the member to reconsider the wisdom of this bill he is proposing.

Mr Harnick: It is a pleasure to be able to participate in this debate on a matter that I might say has been studied very carefully by my colleague the member for Markham. He is a person who is concerned about the ability of people to protect themselves and what is private to them. Certainly that is the intention of this act. The intention is that people should have a choice as to whether their privacy should be invaded by people who are taking a technological device and using it for a purpose which it was not intended to be used for.

The fax machine was devised and developed for instantaneous communication between individuals. It was devised so that people could transact business in an efficient and economical manner, so that documents could be exchanged in an efficient and quick manner, and that would be an economical device to business people.

What has happened is that these devices can be programmed so that numbers can be fed into them, and commercial entrepreneurs have found that this machine can transmit messages that will help them sell their products, that will help them put out messages to people who do not want them. It defeats the purpose of the private ability to carry on business. A fax machine was not intended as a billboard, it was not intended as a magazine advertisement, it was intended to permit people to communicate privately.

It is interesting to note that the Information and Privacy Commissioner takes that position when talking about the use of fax machines, even by the government of Ontario. They have indicated that people should not leave fax machines in public places so that the information coming across them becomes available to anybody who might be walking by. They have also indicated that the destination fax number should always be reconfirmed prior to transmission, because unlike erroneously addressed mail which may be returned unopened, documents faxed to the wrong number can be read by several people.

1040

The sender should confirm that the fax was transmitted correctly by checking the fax activity confirmation report. The receiver should check the number of pages received against the transmitted fax cover sheet. All of these recommendations were provided by Ann Cavoukian, the director of compliance with Ontario's Information and Privacy Commissioner. The reason she has set out these guidelines for the use of fax machines by the Ontario government is because she recognizes that the use of a fax machine is a private matter. It is the same as a telephone call. It is the same as personal mail. It is almost the same as having a meeting in your office with another individual, but doing it by long distance or at some distance.

These documents and these communications should be private. That is why people have purchased fax machines. They have not purchased fax machines to be inundated by entrepreneurs trying to sell their products, by groups trying to convey a message. It is a matter of personal privacy we are dealing with.

That is why I commend the member for Markham, whose act is straightforward. It is very explicit. "No person shall make an unsolicited transmission to a facsimile device for the purpose of encouraging a person to purchase or lease any personal property, real property or services." It does not affect the private business relations between a constituent and the government, a constituent and his member of the Legislature, but it does protect people from being inundated with requests to buy a product, to obtain a service or to purchase any kind of property, be it real or personal.

The act is very explicit, and in fact there is an exemption in the act that it is important to understand. The exemption states, "Subsection (1)"—which is the subsection I just read—"does not apply to a person making a transmission in the course of ongoing negotiations or a pre-existing business relationship with the person receiving the transmission."

The act is a sensitive act, because it reflects sensitivity towards the private nature of these machines. That is precisely what these machines were intended for and that is precisely why a couple of states have in fact enacted comparable legislation.

As my colleague the member for Simcoe East indicated, there has been a poll done. The poll states, in a question that was asked, "Should there be regulations protecting the public from advertising by businesses via fax machines?" Eighty-one per cent of the people responding said yes.

I think this act is well thought out. The member for Markham is responding certainly to the public by presenting this act, and I would urge members here today to vote in favour of the act, An Act respecting Unsolicited Facsimile Transmissions. I would urge them to refer this to a committee so that we can hear representations from the public, which I know will be in favour of maintaining privacy and will be in support of this act. I would urge members, particularly on the government side, to accept the act as set out by the member for Markham and pass it. I think it would be a credit to everyone in this Legislature.

Mr Wessinger: I would like to speak in support of this bill in principle, probably because of my own personal biases in the matter, having practised law, having had a fax machine, having received these transmissions on my fax machine and having had it tied up when I wanted to use it for my purposes rather than somebody else's purposes. Also, I support it in principle because the fact is that it does impose a cost, although minimal, on the recipient. It is not like something that comes through the mail which does not impose such a great cost. Therefore in principle I do support it.

However, I have some questions and concerns about the workability of this legislation. One aspect I have not looked into carefully, but in view of the fact that it is related to telephone communications I have some concern that it might not be authorized constitutionally. It might be something that would require legislation in the federal rather than the provincial area, but hopefully that could be looked into. Certainly I would like to see it looked into in principle. Last, on the whole question of the amount of paper we are inundated with in our society, anything that would cut down that amount of paper I certainly would be in support of.

Mr White: I would like to say a special thanks to the member for Markham. I think this is an excellent bill. It brings up an important issue.

Interjections.

Mr White: Come, come now. This is private members' hour and we have the opportunity to speak to other private members; that is the whole point.

I think this bill speaks to the whole issue of privacy. It speaks to the way in which modern technology is continually intruding into our personal lives on an ever-increasing level. This is an issue that cuts across party lines. Even the member from the third party is talking about intrusion by business into other people's lives. We certainly see that constantly. We see the opportunities for people's sense of themselves continually encroached upon. Continually we find ourselves withdrawing into huddling spaces in our homes, and even home is no longer a haven in a heartless world but an area where still we have encroachments, these electronic ones.

To draw a barrier such as this law suggests is an excellent one. It allows us to be sure the tools we use are our tools, not something which can be used to inflict unnecessary junk mail, junk electronics upon us.

Along the lines that the member for Simcoe Centre mentioned there may be some problems with the law, but I think generally it was well drafted. I want to compliment the member for bringing this to our attention, and this debate.

1050

Mr Cousens: I thank all speakers who have participated in this debate and I appreciate the guidance all have given. I do not think this is the bill that is going to change the world. I look forward to human rights issues and other issues to be debated as well. This floor is used for many things, but the floor of this House needs to discuss more of the business problems that are being encountered today. As one who has a business background, I believe an imperative should be upon all of us to see what we can do to help to improve the environment for business to prosper and succeed. That is the intent behind this bill. It is more of a symbol of the fact that government is there not always to get in the way of business. I realize this bill has certain restrictions around it, but there are more people out there in business who want us to intervene in this kind of way.

The member for Simcoe Centre raises a point; it was raised by a few others. If there is a question of federal and provincial jurisdiction on this, then extra time will be taken and needed to assure that we are not intervening in a federal area of responsibility. I am sensitive to that. It could well have to be reviewed in a number of ways before it could become law, and I accept the fact that things do not happen overnight in dealing with government matters.

I thank the member for Welland-Thorold for his comments and for going to Markham tonight. I am going to be at the opening of the Markham fair. The Markham fair is on this evening and I look forward to being at that. At least we have two MPPs in town tonight doing the right thing.

Mr Kormos: Eight o'clock, Markham town hall.

Mr Cousens: Eight o'clock, Markham town hall for the other function. I am receiving his fax for the Slovak ensemble.

Also, I went and took a small poll of the pages, and most of them have sent transmissions by fax, so I had better realize it is really pervasive. Technology is with us.

I thank the members of the Legislature for their time on this debate. The spirit of it is right. If we can vote the right way, we can at least lead it another step further, and the people of Ontario will have a chance to see we are not all just thinking about things that pertain to other matters, but that there are things that are pertinent to the world of business.

We in the Legislature have a chance to give that kind of leadership. It is not always that we have an opportunity to do that, because of the financial matters that are facing us, the environmental matters; we know there is a large cross-section of things. When you compare this bill to those others, I know it does not match in importance to them. It does as a symbol to the business community.

I am getting the signal that time is almost up.

This is an opportunity for us to make a statement to the business community. It says we as members of the Legislature are concerned and interested in what business needs to be successful. I do not see this as a bill in which we are trying to take away the rights of people. I get the smile of my friend the member for Scarborough North. He would like me to believe for a moment that I would try to take rights away. When it comes to junk mail and junk faxes I believe there is a certain right we have to be protected from that kind of intrusion, as was so well articulated by the member for Willowdale.

This House is a rich place. We will become the richer to the whole business community when we are able to take an hour, as we have now, to consider the impact we can have to make it a better world for business to prosper and succeed. I thank the members for Welland-Thorold, Scarborough North, Simcoe East, Scarborough East, Willowdale, Simcoe Centre and Durham Centre for all their comments. I think they will be helpful and I know the business community will be awaiting the decision we will be making here in another hour when it is time to resolve this issue. I thank the Speaker and all members who have participated in this debate.

PUBLIC SECTOR FOOD SERVICES ACT, 1991
LOI DE 1991 SUR LES SERVICES D'ALIMENTATION
DU SECTEUR PUBLIC

Ms Haack moved second reading of Bill 133, An Act to require Public Sector Institutions to serve Food grown in Ontario.

M^{me} Haack propose la deuxième lecture du projet de loi 133, Loi exigeant des établissements du secteur public qu'ils servent des aliments cultivés en Ontario.

The Acting Speaker: The honourable member for St Catharines-Brock has 10 minutes for her opening remarks.

Ms Haack: It is a privilege to speak on this subject, the purchase of Ontario food products by the broader Ontario public service. For the farmers of St Catharines-Brock and the entire Niagara Peninsula, this issue is very basic. The Ontario government should support the Ontario farmers by purchasing the food produced by those farmers.

It has become obvious to me and to other government members that something has to be done to help the Ontario grower. Other governments have approached this issue by means of a direct subsidy. Farmers really do not want a subsidy; they want the farm to produce the food their neighbours are going to purchase and enjoy. Farmers find it more than a little strange that the very government that should be helping them does not set the example by making such domestic purchases. It really upsets farmers from my area when they come to Toronto and see farm produce not being utilized even though locally produced food and wine are very much in evidence in the stores.

One farmer told me about coming to Toronto on business at this Legislature. While here, he made the point of finding out the origin of the foods being served here. To take only one example, he was disappointed and frustrated to find that German brandy is served. There is a brandy distillery in Niagara, Rieder Distillery of Grimsby in the Lincoln riding. By the way, that distillery makes the effort to buy the fruit of local growers to make its product. The growers of the Niagara Peninsula, all of them Ontario taxpayers, want to see this government live by this very same buy-Ontario principle.

In looking for guidelines relating to procurement within the public service, I found that very few do exist, and none relating to the origin of products bought. There is no central agency responsible for purchasing. The vast majority of items this government needs and uses are bought through individual tendering processes carried out within each ministry. There is no way to easily oversee purchases.

Farmers in my area say categorically that this government should provide an example by the kind of product it uses. Farmers in the Niagara Peninsula have impressed on the regional municipality of Niagara the idea that this municipal government should have a buy-Ontario policy. In turn, farmers throughout Ontario are anxious for this government to take the lead on this issue.

Local growers have pointed out that the US government is the largest purchaser of food products in the US. Those products are utilized by military personnel, school programs etc. The origin of these products is America. Why would we, as Ontarians, want to support a foreign jurisdiction with our tax dollars by buying American food? I do not understand that and, quite simply, the growers of St Catharines-Brock do not either.

Let me reiterate the theme of my private members' bill, which is that transfer agencies such as school boards, universities, hospitals and correctional facilities must make the effort to buy the food products grown and processed here in Ontario.

The bill does not say that these facilities are forced to buy Ontario field tomatoes in January. There are none. It does not even require them to buy the institutional-size container of tomatoes processed by an Ontario cannery, because there are none of those either. Members of this House may be surprised that the food processing industry in Ontario has shrunk to such a degree that products like institutional-sized containers of anything are not prepared in Ontario.

This bill allows institutions the flexibility of continuing to purchase such products from foreign suppliers. What it does is to require these institutions to look at the Ontario market first to determine what kinds of products are available that meet their needs. For example, Canadian Canners of St Davids still cans fruit cocktail using local cling peaches. A hospital or a school board may be able to utilize the individual sizes canned in this facility.

Canada and Ontario are net food importers. I find this shocking. I grew up in the Niagara Peninsula where it is easy to indulge in the pleasures of tree-ripened fruit, something I personally enjoy and cherish. There is a great variety of fruit grown there, from strawberries to peaches and pears. Taste and quality are second to none. Recent commercials by the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food bring this home. Local produce is of high quality and good taste, and those who purchase it help to keep the farmer farming. The Ministry of Agriculture and Food's slogan, "Buy the food that your neighbour grows," is most accurate. Support local farmers; buy local food products.

1100

I have been asked by members of the public if this bill would see an increase in the costs paid out by the institutions involved. No, the cost of food in Ontario is very competitive within the North American market. Let me expand on this point.

Over the last 10 years, the brokers who purchase food products from Ontario growers have used the threat of US imports to keep the price of fresh fruit and vegetables low. In the case of peaches, only about 4% may come from the United States, but local producers receive a similar price to that of the US producers even though input costs, as well as the seasonal nature of the product, dictate a slighter higher price.

I will not hide my own distaste for the free trade agreement and the problems it has caused. That agreement has brought great hardship to the farming community in the Niagara Peninsula. However, it is clear that for the immediate future the free trade agreement will remain in existence. That means that this kind of blackmail, with the brokers telling growers they must lower their prices to the US level or be shut out of the market, will continue.

I believe it is essential to support our own, to support the important aspect of Ontario life that farming is by making sure Ontario farmers have economic support. Buy the food that your neighbour grows.

What stands in the way of seeing this legislation implemented? There are several things. One is the fact that some suppliers have long-term contracts with those foreign facilities. The same situation exists within the grocery chains. There are very few independent stores left. Where they do exist, local fruit and vegetables usually predominate. The larger food chains have established contracts with brokers in California and Mexico to purchase the products produced there. Only through activism have local farmers been able to convince managers of these large chains to display more Ontario-grown produce. That is a battle this bill does not fight.

I hope that as a result of this debate shoppers will look more carefully at the place of origin of products they consider purchasing. Remember that price is not the obstacle. Availability of the products, whether the store stocks Ontario produce, will likely be the obstacle. Ask for Ontario food products.

Another hurdle that Ontario food products must overcome is bias. I am not sure if all members of the House realize the wide variety of fruits grown in the Niagara Peninsula. I would guess they are unaware that a kiwi variety has been developed to withstand the rigours of a Canadian winter. I know this because my parents have purchased such vines from a local grower and they have enjoyed their harvest very much.

Do members know that the nectarines of the Niagara Peninsula are absolutely luscious? They may not be as large as those grown in California, but they taste far superior.

Similarly many in Ontario and Canada still have the idea that only French wines are good. The wine industry in Ontario has won for Canada the distinction of being the only country to have won 12 gold medals in a single category at a recent wine tasting. The Ontario wineries which produce ice wine have been richly rewarded by these medals. This liquid gold is now enjoyed worldwide, yet the biggest hurdle is at home. Would members believe that the ambassadorial usage of Ontario wines is almost nil?

I see my time has elapsed, so I will continue a little later.

Mr Cleary: With some reservations, I commend the member for St Catharines-Brock in her efforts to support Ontario agriculture. I might note that I was also pleased in 1988 to support the former member for St Catharines-Brock, Mike Dietsch, who initiated discussions on this very topic.

I believe customers should have the opportunity to enjoy quality Ontario food at reasonable prices and be encouraged to do so through effective marketing. This province is very fortunate to have some 200 different products produced on some 14 million acres of land, which generates some $17 billion and creates some 583,000 jobs.

Despite the significance of agriculture in Ontario, it is evident that farmers across this province are in desperate economic conditions. For the past two weeks I have been participating in the emergency hearings before the standing committee on resources development over the crisis facing rural Ontario. With significantly decreasing prices and extensive crop damage, the income of many farmers has dropped by 30% to 60%, while input costs are ever increasing. I can speak from experience. While some of the farmers are selling their produce this year for the same price they got 17 years ago, some do not have any income at all because of severe drought damage.

Farmers are also concerned about cross-border shopping. Canadian shoppers continue to head to the United States for poultry, milk, cheese and novelty dairy products. These same-day Canadian travellers are shrinking the Canadian agriculture market by purchasing products in the United States, therefore causing serious problems to our agricultural community—and not only agriculture, but the transporters, veterinarians, equipment dealers and feed suppliers.

This government, and especially the member for St Catharines-Brock, has only escalated the problem by increasing the taxes on fuel, one of the leading causes of cross-border shopping. While customs officials currently allow Canadians to import $20 in dairy products with a special import permit, the Ontario Milk Marketing Board is seeking tighter restrictions.

Fruit and vegetable growers also face stiff competition worldwide. Canadian grocers sell products from the United States, Mexico, Peru, Portugal, Argentina, New Zealand, Israel, Chile, Australia, Morocco and France, most of the time at cheaper prices. Despite high demand, Ontario prices have to stay competitive with 33-cents-a-pound peaches from New Jersey which area farmers say are of very poor quality. The same goes for strawberries.

It should be noted that one of the major input costs for the horticulture industry is labour. The standard of living is extremely high in Ontario. The agricultural minimum wage is set at $5.40. Subsequently Ontario's agriculture industry often faces strong competition with international labour standards. To cite one example, 56% of the cost of producing asparagus is labour. In Washington state, labour costs are one third of what they are in Ontario.

Just recently, the Ontario Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association informed me that certain countries clearly exploit labour either through the use of illegal aliens or ridiculously low wages. Moreover, the fruit and vegetable growers have indicated that the increased minimum wage, particularly for students, will increase overall costs of production. Subsequently more will undoubtedly be brought into Canada at cheaper prices.

1110

I can appreciate that some Ontarians may question the necessity of supporting Ontario farmers when they can buy from South America or some other country much cheaper. I encourage Ontarians to purchase from our province, not just to support the province's economy but also to relish the superior quality of Ontario products.

Supply-managed commodities are seeking the protection of article XI during the ongoing GATT negotiations, while exporters are attempting to deal with free trade and other international pressures.

Some farmers have indicated that the Canada-US free trade agreement, as well as the trilateral discussions with Mexico, cast additional uncertainty for Ontario agriculture, particularly in the fruit and vegetable industry and other commodities that have a climatic advantage in the south or that are labour intensive.

Obviously, farmers are facing significant pressures provincially, nationally and internationally. I believe there is a clear need to support the farmers of Ontario. To do this, politicians and consumers must come to grips with the importance of agriculture, just to ensure the minimal survival of our communities.

I might take this opportunity to commend the Ontario Food Terminal that services importers, distributors, retailers and exporters.

In any event, I applaud such efforts as the upcoming Agri-Food Week to be held October 6-12. This celebration enters its ninth year.

As well, I hope the agriculture in the classroom program will inform urban students and educators of the importance of agriculture. Just this Monday I was at the inaugural meeting at the Ontario agricultural meeting in Milton.

I also appreciate the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food's recent campaign comparing locally grown produce with US-grown produce.

I believe these are effective and necessary vehicles to promote Ontario agriculture. General awareness campaigns, combined with current proposals brought forward by both the past member and the present member for St Catharines-Brock, are positive developments for this province's agriculture industry. I would like to merely caution that this type of proposal also has drawbacks. Indeed, Bill 133 will certainly hold many challenges in attempting to implement it while adhering to fair trade regulations, both nationally and internationally.

Mr McLean: Being a farmer, I am pleased to stand in my place today and speak on Bill 133, An Act to require Public Sector Institutions to serve Food grown in Ontario.

Some years ago we had institutions across this province that had farms attached to them, and food, vegetables, beef, pigs and dairy products were raised on these farms. I see some of the smaller institutions today are reinstituting that idea and I think it would be appropriate if this government took the issue and dealt further with it in order to have more homegrown food for people in our institutions.

The institution in Orillia also worked in conjunction with the hospital at that time. In Penetanguishene we had the mental health centre there, Oak Ridge, and there was also a farm there at one time which produced homegrown food for the residents who lived there. In Burwash it was much the same idea. I think that is something we should be looking at again.

Bill 133 indicates there are exemptions allowed with regard to fruit and vegetables that are not grown in Ontario, but I think if one took the time to go to the Ontario Food Terminal here in Toronto and observed the amount of food that is coming into that terminal from out of province, it would probably make one stop and think. The number of transports and tractor-trailers that come in there from all over the United States is amazing.

To say that we want the institutions to supply and are going to penalize them if they do not supply food totally produced in Ontario, that an institution would have its funding cut or "could have its funding eliminated or reduced if it was found that a facility on its premises was providing non-Ontario food or wine," is a pretty major statement to make when dealing with the people of this province and the food terminal, especially here in Toronto, where the food comes in on a daily basis.

I applaud the member for bringing this bill forward to make the people in Ontario aware that we should be buying food produced in Ontario. I have reservations many times when I look at some of the cancer statistics that we see and when we look at some of the major heavy-growing areas of vegetables and see that fertilizer is applied at the rate of 500 to 600 pounds to the acre, which gives me some concern. Maybe we are doing it to ourselves, so to speak, with regard to the amount of fertilizer we are using to grow our food and vegetables.

I guess when we look at the extra taxes that are being put on farmers, such as the gasoline tax, that is really one area where this government could look at helping the farmers to produce food at a more reasonable cost. When we look at statistics today and see the number of farmers who are losing their farms, who are going out of business because of what they are getting for their product, that is where the problem lies.

I would like to see the Ministry of Agriculture and Food somehow come up with some structure such as we have in the dairy business. The Ontario Milk Marketing Board saved the dairy industry. I was in the dairy business before that marketing board came in, and I know what it was like to accept a 60-40 payout, a low test. The marketing board saved that industry. I said some time ago that the only way farmers in beef and pork are ever going to get paid for their product is to be involved in some form of a marketing system whereby your input costs are attached to the price that you get for the goods you are producing.

As I heard the Ontario Federation of Agriculture say yesterday, "If the auto market was in trouble, if they were severely losing jobs in the auto industry, governments would be there to help." We are losing farmer after farmer in the agricultural industry, and who is there giving them a hand? It is not as severe as if it was in the auto industry.

When we look at this bill, while I applaud the member for bringing it forward, there are many other aspects that are involved in the agricultural area whereby we could help the farmers. I only mentioned one or two, such as the gas tax. The farm tax rebate should not be on the land at all. Farmers pay their taxes and then they have to come along and apply for a rebate. It is handled totally wrong, and it would be nice if the government would take the initiative to bring it in whereby it would be done once and for all instead of just negotiating year after year.

I want to thank the member for this resolution. I will be supporting it and I hope it will be a further initiative we can deal with in the agricultural industry.

1120

Mr Hayes: I rise in support of the broad intent of this bill. This government does and will continue to support Ontario farmers through its policies and actions. My colleague the member for St Catharines-Brock, in her remarks and in Bill 133, has underlined some of the basic concerns facing our farm families in our rural communities.

As my colleague has stated and as we all well know, farmers do not like subsidies. The minister's announcement of a special assistance package of $35.5 million is needed and it will help many farmers throughout Ontario, including the hard-pressed fruit and vegetable industries, such as those in Niagara and in Essex-Kent.

The farm leaders in this province were pleased by the government's initiative. A lot more has to be done. I would trust that our federal government fulfils its commitment also to assist the farmers in Ontario and Canadian farmers in this period of serious financial difficulty.

My colleague is also correct about the subsidies, but emergency assistance packages are geared only for the short term. The real solution must be found in a fair marketplace for all food products in Ontario.

I fully share my colleague's dismay that Ontario is a net importer of foods. I know all too well the impact of the Canada-US free trade agreement on our food processing sector and on the ability of our fruit and vegetables to compete successfully and fairly in our own markets. We must and should do more to assist our producers in our own markets. We must make our consumers, retailers and institutions, private and public, more aware of the quality, the freshness, the quantity and the competitiveness of our own fresh foods and processed foods.

My colleague the member for St Catharines-Brock has stated that it is not our intent to force or coerce local institutions to buy Ontario products. She has recognized the climatic and legal limits and such limits, but she has also stressed the need to ensure that our consumers, farmers and processors, that the customers are made aware of the bounty of foods that is almost on their doorsteps.

The Ministry of Agriculture and Food has attempted successfully to bring these facts home to Ontario farmers, retailers, food service companies and institutional buyers. In 1991-92, the Ministry of Agriculture and Food will spend close to $5 million on domestic advertising and promoting services through Ontario to support the domestic markets for Ontario growers and processed foods and beverages. I am sure many of the members have seen these new ads linking our farmers, our farm land and our domestic markets. Moreover, the Foodland Ontario marketing campaign is aimed, by our partnerships with the media, the food retailing sector and our food service sector and joint market research, to help our producers and processors meet the demands of the marketplace.

The Minister of Agriculture and Food, the member for Hastings-Peterborough, has taken a personal interest in the opportunities for farmers and our processors in our own markets. The minister has met with numerous groups, farm processing and retailing, to ensure that a fairer, more prosperous market is available to our industry.

The issue of cross-border shopping, one that affects the Niagara region where my colleague is from, as well as Kent, Essex, Lambton, Sarnia and other areas of Ontario, is partially a symptom of the consumers' focus on perceived price differences rather than the value, quality, diversity and long-term competitive strength of their neighbours.

I think we must take up the challenge of my colleague's proposal. We must encourage, educate and reinforce through our own actions the necessity of supporting our own farmers and processors to ensure a safe, secure, affordable food supply for this generation and generations to follow. The Speaker himself has taken steps in this Legislature which I must compliment him for by promoting the wine industries.

Let us look at our own institution, this Legislature. Can we not encourage the presentation and consumption of Ontario foods in our own dining room and cafeterias? I feel that we should sponsor special events to correspond with a variety of crops and harvesting seasons right here in this Legislature. Such an effort would not only help build awareness with all members of this House and their staffs, but provide us with nutrition and variety.

I recognize that such an effort can only be a small step in the long-term initiative to better secure our markets for our own industry through education, awareness and the commitment to compete fairly and effectively, a commitment our industry has made and will continue to make.

I support the broad intent of this bill, but we must build new linkages and partnerships with all segments of the food industry, private or public. This government has undertaken that role and will continue, as my colleague has recommended, to work with the industries and institutions and our customers to purchase and consume the food that our farmers grow in Ontario.

I know there are other members who want to join in this debate and I do not want to prolong things, but I think it is very important that some of the points I mentioned here about our own institutions—we have one right here in our riding. A woman came to me and she said she went to that cafeteria and wanted a bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwich. She said the lettuce was from Quebec and the tomatoes were from California. This is right in the middle of our own harvesting season, and these are the things I think we really have to look at. If we are serious about promoting Ontario, promoting the good-quality food that we have here, we have to do more than just speak about it. I think we have to take some action.

I hope the members from the other side will support this bill and work with us with their ideas so that we can continue to promote Ontario, a small way of helping the farmers and the farm families, to protect the family farms in Ontario.

Mr Cordiano: I am particularly delighted today to have this opportunity to speak on the private member's bill. I think it is important to get the views of what is largely a contingent from the urban centres. I am right smack in the middle of Metro Toronto. I represent the riding of Lawrence, which is in North York. I thought it would be interesting to make some comments on this bill from my perspective, and probably the views of urban dwellers right across the province. I hope I would reflect those views.

I want to support the member's initiative here, because I think it is important in so many ways and in far-reaching ways. I have limited time to speak, but there are a number of issues I want to cover.

First, I think most of our citizens who dwell in the cities do not appreciate what the farmers of this province do for them. The most important thing is that they would certainly provide us with a secure supply of food into the future, when I think that will become more relevant. We have heard a great deal on that, but I think more needs to be said.

The figures are interesting. One in five Ontario jobs results from the agricultural industry, which is quite amazing, when you think about it. That is an incredible economic base.

1130

The other reason I would link the city with the country on this is because farmers are small businessmen. Farmers can understand perhaps as well as small businessmen, wherever they may be, the difficulties which face farmers and small businessmen. There is a great commonality there. I would say to this government the real issue is that we are doing very little for farmers and we are doing very little for small business people who are facing difficult times. I think the policies of this government need to be directed to those very important groups. Farmers provide one out of every five jobs related directly or indirectly to the agricultural industry. Small business people provide a great deal of employment. In fact, they are the sector that increases employment the most. When we have an expansion, and it will come some time in the future, hopefully not too far, we will rely on those people to create wealth. I think it is important for this government to recognize that. It is not doing enough to recognize that important relationship.

So I say to the member, getting back to her bill, that this government is not doing enough for the farmer. Quite frankly this bill, although worthy and admirable on her part, and I will support it, does not go far enough. I hope she takes that message to the Treasurer and to the Minister of Agriculture and Food. There is a financial crisis among farmers, a deep crisis. It is getting worse. It started many years ago, but now is the time to do something about it.

Look at the retail situation with respect to Sunday shopping, with respect to the new policy that has been brought forward by this government. It is not going to help farmers one little bit. It is going to aggravate the problem. I think the government needs to seriously look at that as a factor contributing to this growing crisis.

In addition to that, the NDP's promise to fund the net income stabilization account did not go far enough; $35 million I believe it was. It created a gap. The amount required was $124 million, and that gap is severe. I think farmers would speak to that and have spoken out saying the government did not support them enough.

If we want a secure food supply into the future and if we want an indigenous agricultural economy that still allows for the independent farmer to exist out there, then we have to bite the bullet and say we are going to support our farmers, not just by the good member's initiative here with her bill that proposes to have public sector institutions support the agricultural industry directly, but I think through additional programs which would go a long way to helping the plight of farmers financially. That is the crux of the issue.

The concern I have with the private member's bill relates to international trade barriers. Of course GATT has a role to play in all this. I would say to the member that there are concerns that we comply with what might result out of the latest GATT negotiations, which have not concluded, and attempt to resolve the whole question of subsidies to the agricultural industry. I would be very careful treading in that area. I think we would not like to fly in the face of international pressures with respect to trade measures that would be taken reciprocally, shall we say, against our agricultural industry, which exports quite a few of its products around the world as well. So I would be concerned about that.

I would also like to say to the member, as I am running out of time, that her initiative needs to be looked at a little more carefully with respect to how we are going to enforce the provisions of this private member's bill. I think it is one thing to say that we should do this; it is another to say how we are going to go about enforcing and ensuring that our public sector institutions are complying with this initiative, if indeed the government sees fit to bring this forward as a policy of its own.

I commend the member for bringing forward this initiative. I also suggest to her that she lobby really hard for her government to adopt this and other practices which would enhance and promote the agricultural industry in our province.

Mr J. Wilson: It is a pleasure to rise today and speak about the private member's bill, An Act to require Public Sector Institutions to serve Food grown in Ontario, put forward by the member for St Catharines-Brock. I commend her for bringing that forward.

I know the member to be a good person. I have served on the standing committee on social development with her throughout the summer and found her to be a very conscientious member of this Legislature and one who is very much aware of the needs of her constituents, particularly the farming community in the riding of St Catharines-Brock. Certainly the member is well intentioned with this bill, and it would be difficult for any member of my caucus in the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party not to support the principles of this private member's bill here today.

But it is ironic that this government had to be forced into a debate on the farm financial crisis by the opposition parties, because it went through the first year of its government not spending nearly enough on agriculture and spending money in what we would consider many misdirected areas.

Mr Mills: Give us an example.

Mr J. Wilson: I will be happy to give the member some examples in a few moments.

On Monday of this week the leader of my party, the member for Nipissing, brought forward a resolution to force the government to deal with the farm crisis, and the NDP members in this chamber voted against that. Simply, the leader of my party called upon this government to sign up for NISA this year to make sure farmers receive payments they are entitled to under the federal-provincial program.

It is sad that they voted against my leader's resolution, which was very important and which had specific measures to address the farm crisis, and today they are bringing forward a private member's bill to try to convince the people of Ontario that they are deeply concerned about agriculture.

Yes, the next day in the Legislature, Tuesday, the Treasurer did make an announcement of some $35.5 million for assistance to Ontario farmers, but as you so ably pointed out yourself, Mr Speaker, as the critic for agriculture in the Ontario PC Party, $35.5 million pales compared to the need out there and in comparison to the misdirected spending and priorities of the government.

I point out that the government's payroll for civil servants this year is up 14%; that is $512 million it has given the civil service over the past year. They have also, in addition to that, given $20 million in bonuses to senior civil servants.

When I asked the Treasurer yesterday whether he had any money to help the frail and elderly in nursing homes—there are some 12 to 15 nursing homes in receivership now, and we know after October 15 there will be hundreds of seniors out on the street if this government fails to address that urgent need in the nursing home industry—when I asked the Treasurer about financial assistance in that area, he simply said, as he so often says, that my party is bound and determined to pit one group in society against another.

I want to give a message to the government today that when it comes to assistance for farmers or when it comes to assistance for the frail elderly of our society, my party stands behind the frail elderly and farmers any day of the week. If the Treasurer wants in his responses, time and time again, to try to pit us in the public mind one group against the other, we simply say to him it is a question of priorities, and that this party, through its long and proud tradition in the Ontario government, when it was in government and in opposition, has firmly stood behind farmers, and that is the topic of today's debate.

There are 60,000 farm families in this province. Again, $35.5 million pales in comparison to $150 million for 4,500 jobs at de Havilland. Now, I know Bob White makes a lot of the government's decisions and I know the Canadian Auto Workers union is exceptionally important to this government, but $150 million for 4,500 jobs at de Havilland is ridiculous. That $150 million would go a lot further than $35.5 million in helping to address the farm crisis and some 60,000 families.

Farmers in my riding can only dream of jobs as well-paying as those at de Havilland that this government has decided to prop up.

Mr Mammoliti: Are you saying they're not worth while?

The Acting Speaker: Order, please. You will have opportunities to address this.

1140

Mr J. Wilson: This government has decided to give $250 million for 600 jobs in Elliot Lake—that is a pretty expensive job-maintaining program, I guess you would call it—and $35.5 million for 60,000 farm families that are in serious need in this province.

Again, my farmers and the farmers in the riding of Brant-Haldimand, whom I and many of my colleagues met with recently, can only dream of jobs as good as those at the mines in the north and at de Havilland here in Toronto.

Also, Mr Speaker, you might point out that $5 million was spent by this government over the past few months to study auto insurance, and for what? It has decided to retract on it after $5 million in studies. My recommendation to them, as a former political assistant, would be to simply go to the library and read all the studies that are there. There are decades of them on auto insurance. They did not need to spend $5 million hiring consultants and wasting money that could have gone towards helping to solve the farm crisis.

Any day of the week, my party stands behind farmers and the truly needy in this province. And we understand priority setting, and this government really does not have a clue how to set priorities. We see the Treasurer yesterday having to retract and reshuffle the deck to try and come up with some cost savings which we know are not cost savings but simply deferrals to next year's deficit.

We understand that the Treasurer is admitting that he has made mistakes over the past 12 months, that his April budget was a disaster and that the government is trying to change direction. I simply say that we are here to help, if they need our assistance and our suggestions.

Mr Hayes: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I know that in this House it is a democratic system, and we all have the right to get up and say what we feel. But I think it is really a crime when we have a bill, such an important bill as this, talking about promoting the food of Ontario growers—

The Acting Speaker: I am sorry. That is not a point of order.

Mr J. Wilson: The reason I point out the misdirected priorities of this government is that we know 60,000 farm families should come before the millions of dollars it is spending on all kinds of other very expensive job creation and maintaining programs.

I ask the member for St Catharines-Brock whether she has thought of the implications for this bill on the international scene. In my opinion, from my past experience with GATT, this would likely be ruled another trade barrier. Farmers do not need more trade barriers. Our farmers can compete with the best in the world if they are given the financial support to be on a level playing field with other provinces and with all other jurisdictions in this world. The government has to put more money into financial assistance for farmers. We have to make an attempt to compete with other treasuries and, at the same time, continue the efforts and redouble efforts to get down those trade-distorting subsidies that are so common in the European Community and the United States.

In wrapping up, I do commend the member. She has the right principle, the right thrust. She is going to bat for her constituents, which is commendable, but I would ask her, in her remarks, to respond to the international implications of this and simply whether the bill would be legal if it were passed.

Mr Dadamo: I would like to make something extremely clear this morning. I want to mention that the problems with farmers and what they face today did not start overnight, did not start September 6, 1990. The third party was in power for many years, the Liberals for a number of years. All of a sudden we are faced with this dilemma and trying to do the best we can.

Let me mention also that it was an initiative of our government this past week and the Minister of Agriculture and Food, who made the announcement of $35.5 million for the farmers, and we are doing the best we can, and hopefully we can find some more money for the farmers that we could give to them in the coming months and the coming year. We are doing the best we can.

I also want to say that I am honoured to be speaking on Bill 133 this morning.

Interjections.

The Acting Speaker: Order, please. The Speaker has a great deal of difficulty hearing the member. The honourable member for Windsor-Sandwich has the floor.

Mr Dadamo: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I also want to say that I am privileged to be a member of the rural advisory committee with 24 members of the government side. We meet regularly to talk about the problems of the farmers and we do a lot of work on behalf of the farmers. The members behind me, the member for Essex-Kent and the member for Chatham-Kent, who are also on the rural advisory committee and work along with us, do a lot of work.

This bill put forth by my colleague the member for St Catharines-Brock is in my opinion a very timely and strong statement which this Legislature, and especially the two opposition parties, should take very seriously this morning. This past week the Treasurer announced a commitment and a strong confirmation on behalf of the government that we would aid rural Ontario. The reaching out to our farmers by way of $35.5 million is a strong initiative.

I sat here this morning listening to the member for Simcoe West. I am not sure whether he is going to support the farmers. It was hard to make out what he was saying in the seven or eight minutes he was standing in this House. I feel compelled to support the bill of the member for St Catharines-Brock, which aims at serving Ontario-grown foods in the public sector.

The timing of this bill is impeccable. My colleague should be commended for caring for the agriculture industry in Ontario. I think we should all be supporting the farmers. We should all be buying food from Ontario. I do not think that is even debatable, considering what the farmers in rural Ontario are going through these days.

Bill 133, An Act to require Public Sector Institutions to serve Food grown in Ontario, is aimed in the right direction for the citizens of Ontario. As well, eating food grown here in our own backyard will only enhance our commitment to rural Ontario. We care strongly for and we should be supporting their hard work, their toil, their labour on the farms and their persistence in maintaining high standards in food products in this province. We should be supporting them.

I also want to mention a couple of things before my time runs out. Agri-Food Week celebrates Ontario food—glorious food, I would like to add. It of course is a showcase for the variety, the quality, the freshness and the abundance of the food we eat. We should be thankful the farmers are working for us and are supplying us food. We are blessed to have farmers doing these things for us, even though a lot of them are not making any money in Ontario. Agri-Food Week is an annual harvest celebration in October. It is the week before Thanksgiving. We hope everybody buys pumpkins grown in Ontario.

In closing, Ontario farmers and their families work hard to grow the food we eat. The member for St Catharines-Brock is indeed intelligent for introducing such a timely bill. I would like to urge members of this House to think this through and support Bill 133. Otherwise, I think it would be tough to go home this weekend. For those watching throughout the province this morning—I am sure many farmers and their families are since it could be raining in parts of the province today and they are indoors—our hats are off to them. We hope the $35.5 million will aid them to some point. They can rest assured this government is working hard for them and will continue to work for them, because they are integral to the province.

1150

The Acting Speaker: The honourable member for St Catharines-Brock has two minutes to sum up.

Ms Haeck: I thought we were going to hear some more interesting comments from the members opposite, but I think we have some good points on which to close.

I would like to address the issue the member from the Liberal benches raised with regard to labour costs. It is absolutely necessary for me to recognize the fact that horticulture is a labour-intensive area, a sector of agriculture. The minister recognizes this. In fact, on a recent farm tour to my riding he indicated to the farmers that he and the Minister of Labour are working very hard to minimize the impact of the recent proposed minimum wage legislation.

I also want to recognize that farmers are the first environmentalists. Definitely the farmers in my area feel very strongly about the issues the member for Simcoe East raised. This is something they take very much to heart.

I would like to also indicate that it is nothing new to the farming sector that this recession exists. It has been in existence for over 10 years. I remember that for even longer than that farming has always had some very strong issues. We as the government definitely recognize that this issue is not going to be dealt with overnight. What we are saying is, "Here's some short-term assistance and the long term is something that is very clearly being addressed."

In conclusion, I have presented this bill in support of Ontario food producers, the farmers, the food processors and Ontario wineries. I know my colleagues on the government side who have rural components in their ridings feel as strongly about this bill as I do. I ask all members of this House, the opposition and my fellows here on the government side, to support this bill. By doing so they will send a very positive message of support to an absolutely vital group in our society, our farmers. Their support is needed to see agriculture survive in Ontario. They should buy the food that their neighbours grow.

The Acting Speaker: This is the allotted time for ballot item 34, Bill 133. We have a small problem in that in the standing orders we cannot vote until 12 o'clock. Do we have agreement of the members present to proceed with ballot items 33 and 34 prior to 12 o'clock?

Agreed to.

UNSOLICITED FACSIMILE
TRANSMISSIONS ACT, 1991

LOI DE 1991 SUR LES TRANSMISSIONS PAR
TÉLÉCOPIE NON SOLLICITÉES

The Acting Speaker: Mr Cousens has moved second reading of Bill 134.

Motion agreed to.

La motion est adoptée.

Mr Cousens: Mr Speaker, can this be referred to the standing committee on general government?

The Acting Speaker: The honourable member has requested that his bill go to the standing committee on general government. Is it the pleasure of the House that the bill go to the standing committee on general government? Do we have a majority of the members present?

All those in favour of Mr Cousens's motion going to the standing committee on general government will rise and remain standing. Those opposed to the bill going to the standing committee on general government will please rise and remain standing.

We do not have a majority for the bill going to the standing committee on general government. Therefore, it will go to committee of the whole House.

Bill ordered for committee of the whole House.

Le projet de loi est déféré au comité plénier de la Chambre.

PUBLIC SECTOR FOOD SERVICES ACT, 1991
LOI DE 1991 SUR LES SERVICES D'ALIMENTATION
DU SECTEUR PUBLIC

The Acting Speaker: Ms Haeck has moved second reading of Bill 133.

Motion agreed to.

La motion est adoptée.

Bill ordered for committee of the whole House.

Le projet de loi est déféré au comité plénier de la Chambre.

The House recessed at 1156.

AFTERNOON SITTING

The House resumed at 1330.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

ANNIVERSARY OF GERMAN REUNIFICATION

Mr Daigeler: Today, October 3, is the first anniversary of Germany's reunification and its new date of national celebration. For many Canadians of German origin like myself, this day last year was a momentous occasion. After 50 years of totalitarian suppression, East Germans were finally able to join the democratic and free world community.

Rebuilding the economic, social and political infrastructure in the new German provinces is a difficult task. Many outmoded and pollution-prone factories and shops had to be closed. But I am heartened by the optimistic picture German parliamentarians gave me last night at a friendship dinner here in Toronto.

I also rejoice in the German chancellor's commitment to European integration. At a time when Canada's future is threatened by separatists, it is especially meaningful to hear Chancellor Kohl admit in his October 3 address:

"We achieved reunification under a common European roof. Our freedom and our prosperity are inseparably linked with our membership in the European Community and in the Atlantic alliance. Together with our friends and partners, we want to make our contributions towards building a United States of Europe."

To all Ontarians of German origin, I extend special greetings on this occasion, and to the German people themselves, I wish Godspeed in their rebuilding efforts.

TORONTO BLUE JAYS

Mr Arnott: Stepping up to the plate as the leadoff hitter, I want to congratulate the Toronto Blue Jays for their magnificent win last night at the SkyDome. We can all look forward to even bigger and better victories as the Jays take dead aim on the World Series.

Fifty thousand Ontario residents cannot be wrong. There was a resounding cheer as the American League East champions won their division. There was also a resounding Bronx cheer for the Premier of this province. I have to assume that the cheers in both cases were appropriate.

Not to dwell on politics, though, on such a joyous occasion, I just want to mention here at this time that it was a Premier representing the Progressive Conservative Party that helped to bring the Blue Jay franchise to Toronto.

The attendance record was also a major feature in last night's extravaganza. This is something our left-throwing Premier should keep in mind. His attendance in this Legislature is at the other end of the scale from that of the Blue Jays.

Again, not to dwell on the political, our lefty Premier could take a lesson from the division champs and realize that success does not come from left-fielders alone. We need someone in there pitching for the people, going to bat for the people, covering the bases and hitting home, but not with a tax burden that only a superstar can afford.

The Jays' division title is in no small part due to astute management. This is something our government in left field should keep in mind, before we all have to be dug out.

I am sure all members of the Legislature will join with me in congratulating the Jays on a job well done, and wishing them the very best as they take on the Minnesota Twins for the pennant, and then the World Series. Okay, Blue Jays, let's play ball.

ARTS FESTIVAL

Mr G. Wilson: On Saturday, September 21, I found a pot of gold in my riding of Kingston and The Islands. It was at the end of a rainbow of colourful characters parading through the early morning streets of Kingston to the Grand Theatre. This was the location of the fourth annual Have an Affair with the Arts, sponsored by the Kingston Regional Arts Council.

On display at the Grand was a year's cultural activities concentrated into six hours. The more than 3,000 festival-goers were entertained by actors, dancers, choristers, instrumentalists, marionettists and storytellers. Level of ability ran from novice to professional, and 35 exhibits as varied as book publishing and wood carving provided access to the arts throughout the rest of the year.

Hearing a seniors' choir follow a children's choir reminded me that an affair with the arts could be not only passionate but lifelong. Without support, however, there will not be the opportunity for our children to develop artistically or to share their talent with their community.

I am pleased to commend then the many volunteers who worked so hard to make the day a success. In particular, I would like to mention Annie Milne, parade co-ordinator, and Pat Hodge, event co-ordinator. I also wish to applaud the businesses which advertised Saturday's event by displaying in their windows work by local artists. This is a reminder that the arts are not only to delight the senses but also to generate wealth in the community.

Finally, the city of Kingston helped pay for the festival in acknowledgement of the essential role the arts play in the life of the community. This co-operation among groups in the Kingston area provides the basis for a flourishing cultural life. It is a model other communities might wish to follow.

TORONTO BLUE JAYS

Ms Poole: It gives me great pleasure to rise in this House today to pay tribute. From all corners of this province, from Windsor to Ottawa, from Trenton to St Catharines, from Sudbury to Mississauga, from Timmins to Metropolitan Toronto, even from Listowel to Wingham, from every region of this province, last night we proved that we are the best baseball fans in North America. For the first time in major league history a team attracted four million fans in one season, and that team, as we all know, is our very own Toronto Blue Jays.

Last night there was more good news. In fact, I think it is great news. The Blue Jays did not let us down. In a thrill-packed game, the Blue Jays clinched their third American League East championship in the past six years.

Some days there just does not seem to be much good news going around. People are pessimistic and people are cynical, and to many people of this province there has been precious little good news since September 6, 1990. But millions of people across Ontario and across Canada are just thrilled to celebrate the victories of our talented ball club.

I know I join with all members of this House in wishing our Blue Jays the very best for the coming World Series that we know is in the offing. Go, Toronto Blue Jays.

HOSPITAL FINANCING

Mr J. Wilson: In light of the Treasurer's statement yesterday announcing spending reductions for each ministry and the trimming of $100 million from ministry operating budgets, concerns are being raised regarding certain capital projects for hospitals in Ontario. The Treasurer's announcement yesterday will undoubtedly jeopardize consultants' reports and redevelopment studies for several of Ontario's hospitals. Hospitals such as the Collingwood General and Marine Hospital, Orillia Soldiers' Memorial Hospital, Barrie's Royal Victoria Hospital, Mattawa General Hospital and Joseph Brant Memorial Hospital, to name just a few, deserve some direction from this government so that they can plan accordingly.

In the wake of the confusion that has resulted from the Treasurer's statement yesterday, I urge this government to provide a prescription that enables hospitals to plan for the future. The minister must move immediately to inform Ontario hospitals exactly what capital projects this government intends to cancel and what projects she will commit to. It is difficult enough for hospital boards to budget and plan for the future. I fear the Treasurer's announcement of yesterday, left as it is, will serve to cripple this process.

I am calling on this government to clear up the confusion and on the Minister of Health to start providing desperately needed planning direction for health care facilities and hospital boards.

LANDLORD-TENANT CO-OPERATION

Mr Mammoliti: In light of the heated debates on rent control legislation, I would like to share with every member of this Legislature a series of events that have recently taken place in my riding of Yorkview. What I am about to tell the members opposite and my colleagues will prove that tenants and landlords can work together.

The tenants living at 2850 Jane Street and their landlord, Mr Barry Klady, have successfully come together to work out their differences concerning the landlord's proposal to construct three new apartments in the building.

With the consent of the landlord and the tenants' association, represented by Isabelle Karakatanis, it was my honour to act as mediator for the two parties. I am pleased to say that both groups approached the discussions in a professional and sincere manner and produced an agreement that both can be proud of.

I am happy to report that an agreement was reached on the construction of a recreation centre for the building as well, to coincide with the addition of the new apartments. When both sides finally came to the table, further agreements were made as well. The lobby will also be expanded and three new washers and dryers will be installed.

It is a rare thing indeed when tenants and landlords can work together effectively to benefit both parties. I would like to congratulate Mr Klady and the members of the tenants' association for their efforts and hope that this particular case will serve as an example to all tenants and their landlords.

1340

SHIPBUILDING INDUSTRY

Mr Bradley: The shipbuilding industry in Ontario has been dealt a major blow by the government of Canada, which has selected Montreal-based SNC-Lavalin, a company which has no shipbuilding experience, to build 12 minesweepers for the Canadian navy. Canadian Shipbuilding and Engineering of St Catharines, a firm with unparalleled expertise, a proven track record and a skilled and experienced workforce, has been denied the opportunity to participate in this $500-million contract.

Port Weller Dry Docks has produced a variety of ships on time, within budget and to the satisfaction of its customers. Yet Lavalin, which has been the beneficiary of a government bailout and which was seized less than two months ago by a consortium of banks and resold to Montreal-based SNC Group Inc, has been given the $500-million handshake by the Canadian government. Some 1,000 jobs will be denied to the employees of Port Weller Dry Docks and a much-needed shot in the arm will be denied to the Niagara region and the Ontario economy.

The Golden Horseshoe is no longer golden. The government of Canada must realize this. The jobs are needed. The Ontario government—the previous government negotiating a contract; the present government completing the contract and awarding it—has placed a contract there. The federal government should have followed suit. Something is rotten, not in the state of Denmark, but in the nation of Canada.

ONTARIO HYDRO LEGISLATION

Mr Jordan: I would like to ask the Minister of Energy who he is now trying to mislead. The amendments to Bill 118, as presented yesterday, are a joke.

The Speaker: The member is not suggesting that someone is misleading the House or misleading anyone, I trust. Would the member rephrase his statement.

Mr Jordan: I retract that statement.

The Speaker: If the member would rephrase his statement, it would be appreciated. Could we restart the clock? Perhaps the member could restart his statement.

Mr Jordan: The amendments to Bill 118, as presented yesterday, are a joke. From the beginning, this legislation has been flawed and unnecessary. This week the government bungled the delivery of new amendments by having a backbencher, instead of the minister, attempt to deliver the joke.

I can see the minister being embarrassed to deliver it, because the amendments vaguely address only subsection

9a(1) by the addition of the following: "On matters relating to the corporation's exercise of its powers and duties under this act."

Ontario has no guarantee in the future of a reliable source of power at cost. Policy directives still give the minister too much power. Fuel switching at Ontario Hydro customers' expense is ludicrous and not an acceptable business practice.

The government will not save 700 megawatts of energy. It will transfer it into 2,389,100,000 BTUs of fossil fuels at the expense of the ratepayer. The government will do this in a dictatorial fashion, without the approval of the elected municipal governments.

These powers are in the minister's hands, due not only to this legislation but to the government's political choice of executive control.

ROBERT MIDDAGH

Mr Christopherson: It is my pleasure to rise in the House today to inform members of the appointment of Robert Middaugh as the new chief of the Hamilton-Wentworth Regional Police Force. Chief Middaugh comes to Hamilton-Wentworth with an impressive array of policing and educational credentials. A 24-year veteran of policing, Mr Middaugh started his career in Peel region, moving to Halton as inspector, becoming deputy chief in 1980. Halton officials expressed to Rick Hughes of the Hamilton Spectator that Mr Middaugh was highly regarded in their community and especially respected for his analytic capabilities.

Our new chief also supports the new employment equity goals as set out in the Police Services Act, which call for more minorities and women on the force.

I would also like to commend the outstanding contribution of our outgoing police chief, Mr Colin Millar. Chief Millar joined the Hamilton police department 36 years ago and has served as our dedicated regional chief since 1978.

The Hamilton-Wentworth Regional Police Force is one of the largest municipal policing agencies in the province, with over 900 members. It is a force dedicated to the delivery of superior-quality policing services within our community.

In closing, I would like to join in welcoming Chief Middaugh and his wife, Judith-Ann, to our community.

TORONTO BLUE JAYS

Mr Malkowski: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I was one of the four million fans who watched the Blue Jays last night. I was there at the game and I would like all of the members in the House and all of Toronto to show our appreciation by not only clapping but waving our hands in appreciation of what they did last night.

The Speaker: While the member for York East does not have a point of order, the Speaker can find nothing out of order with the Blue Jays winning.

VISITORS

The Speaker: I would invite all members of the House to welcome to our midst today, seated in the Speaker's gallery, a delegation of parliamentarians from the Federal Republic of Germany, headed by Mrs Eva Ruehmorkorf and accompanied by Mr Walter Leuchs, the acting consul general. Please join me in welcoming our visitors.

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY

WASTE REDUCTION

Hon F. Wilson: I am proud to rise today to announce new measures that demonstrate this government's continued leadership in greening initiatives. Although this government has already cut by 28% waste produced in government buildings with a full recycling program, we are the first to recognize there is more that can be done, more that must be done. This is why the Ontario government has a green workplace program that promotes the 3Rs at work.

Today, in the spirit of Waste Reduction Week, this government takes another bold step forward by announcing new green workplace program initiatives. I want to remind the House that these initiatives not only improve our environment, they also reduce the cost of government and help to foster new, competitive green industries in Ontario. Waste reduction is a vitally important issue in Ontario. We produce enough waste to fill the SkyDome to the roof every three weeks. Our wasteful habits are not limited to home. The average office worker in Ontario creates one kilogram of waste each day. About 72% of that waste can be recycled, or not used at all.

This government, together with 70,000 provincial employees, is working to reduce, reuse and recycle in government buildings and all across the province. Under the green workplace program, we have expanded our environmental protection initiatives. We are continuing with the 3Rs and are now working on better purchasing practices, on energy and water conservation and on air quality and hazardous material management.

Today we are committing $3.2 million to new reduction initiatives. The money will be spent on projects that will deliver real environmental benefits over the next six months. Some of these projects involve high-tech solutions to reducing paper. Paper amounts to 80% of our office waste. We will be composting at psychiatric hospitals and corrections facilities, where up to 70% of the waste comes from kitchens. We will reduce our use of water, both outside on our lawns and inside by retrofitting washrooms. We will install new equipment to improve energy efficiency in government buildings and we will test new equipment to improve air quality. Also, we will be funding training for staff in handling substances harmful to the environment.

These greening projects will contribute to the economic revival and renewal in this province as well. Our program has the potential to create new jobs and stimulate economic development by creating markets for Ontario's new green industries.

1350

In a global marketplace that is more and more environmentally conscious, sunrise industries developing in this province will increase their export opportunities. This in turn creates jobs here in Ontario. By reducing what we use and what we waste, we are achieving real cost savings in the way we work and in the way we operate our buildings. This government is not content to sit back and watch. We are ready to move further and faster, and government employees tell us they are ready to move forward with us. Waste reduction and long-term savings are our goal. Through our broad efforts and the participation of our employees, we can make government offices a model for resource conservation.

POLITICAL ACTIVITY BY POLICE OFFICERS

Hon Mr Pilkey: I am pleased to announce that a new regulation on permissible political activities for municipal police officers has been passed under the Police Services Act. This regulation strikes a balance between the rights of all Ontarians to receive a high degree of impartial and politically neutral policing services and the rights of individual police officers as members of their communities. This regulation supports the concept of community policing which recognizes that police today are a part of, not apart from, their communities. This regulation permits municipal police officers to engage in most political activity while off duty and not in uniform. Officers may express views as individuals as long as they do not associate their position as a police officer with the issue or represent their views as those of their police service.

I wish to remind members that the old Police Act did not address the issue of political activity for municipal police officers. Consequently, this resulted in widely varying local practices. This new regulation will clarify and guarantee the political rights of municipal police officers while ensuring province-wide consistency and fairness. This regulation has been developed in consultation with both public and police.

I am most pleased to inform this House that the regulation has the full support of Ontario's police leadership, which is represented today in the visitors' gallery. I wish to recognize Chief Rick Zanibbi of the Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police, Ruth Lovell of the Ontario Association of Police Services Boards, and Ted Johnson, Bob Morrison and Neal Jessop of the Police Association of Ontario.

With respect to the Ontario Provincial Police, my ministry will continue to work closely with the Human Resources Secretariat, which is examining political activity rights for crown employees. I am confident that the regulation which I am announcing today will strike a balance that ensures that Ontarians will receive impartial and politically neutral policing services while providing individual police officers with rights as members of their communities.

RESPONSES

WASTE REDUCTION

Mr Grandmaître: I would like to comment on the minister's green workplace program. I think it is very commendable that finally the government is realizing that much more is to be done if we are to accomplish what was initially started with the 3Rs program. I would have preferred the Minister of Government Services to stand in his place today and talk about the relocation program that was started with the Liberal government.

What would the minister have to say to the mayor of Haileybury in stalling the relocation program to his municipality, and also the mayor of Peterborough for again stalling on the relocation program? This is what we would like the Minister of Government Services to address in this House one of these fine days.

I said that the green workplace program is commendable, but I find it strange that the minister would stand in his place to announce a $3.2-million program and yet the Keele Valley and Britannia sites are being left wide open to accumulate millions of tons of waste. In his statement, the minister was saying "enough waste to fill the SkyDome to the roof every three weeks." If the Keele Valley site and the Britannia site are left open until 1993-94, the minister should just imagine that 80 SkyDomes will be filled.

Again, it is not much of a program, but not too much is expected from that government.

POLITICAL ACTIVITY BY POLICE OFFICERS

Mr Curling: Members may recall the Police Services Act that the Liberal government put in place. The regulation that the minister announced today came out of that Police Services Act which was passed by our government. We welcome the minister's announcement of the increased but really limited role of the police officers. From our very preliminary view, the regulations appear to be sound regulations based on work done by the previous government.

One concern we do have is that while the consultation was to have involved both the police and the community, the public, there is nothing in the Solicitor General's statement, if you examine it, that tells us of the public's participation in the process. Before we pass any final document, we would like to review the regulation. He should remember that in his days that was consistently the view he took. We want to view it entirely. More important, we would like to be assured of the community's support of the regulation.

I am a little disappointed, though, that the Solicitor General has not been able to demonstrate community support today. I am very encouraged, of course, that the police have taken this great interest in this, and I think they should. We were unable, of course, to bring any of the community support that he speaks of so highly.

I am also encouraged—I think we must give credit where it is due—by the new consultation approach of this Solicitor General. I presume that when the oath to the Queen was banned without consultation this government was really taught a good lesson, that consultation works. I want the government to continue to do that. I am sure the community will be watching very carefully. I think we have some wonderful police officers in our community and of course they should participate in the political process, but we would like to take a very close look at this regulation before it is instituted.

Mr Carr: It was interesting to note that in a day and age when we are now faced with an increase in crime of 37%, this Solicitor General is worrying about how to ensure that the political activities of the police force do not become a big problem.

In my riding we had 4,000 people out in the Take Back the Night walk because of the concerns about crime in the street. We had two murders in our community during that period. It has become the number one problem in my area. The number one problem for the people in Halton is safety on the streets. What does the Solicitor General do? He comes in and he is worried about people being able to organize.

One of the things we on this side are going to be grateful for, I tell the minister right now, is that when they do begin to organize and get politically active, the first thing they are going to do is try to put this government out of office next time around.

We have finally gotten through to this government. The members opposite talked about consulting. It is interesting to see they are finally listening to some of the fine folks who are here today, because when it came to the other regulation, when it came to the change in the oath to the Queen, they listened to no one. It happened in the dead of night with no consulting, and the people of this province are mad about that too. The next time around, the people who are concerned about things like the oath to the Queen and crime in this province are going to be the ones who are going to put this government out in the street.

1400

WASTE REDUCTION

Mr Turnbull: To the Minister of Government Services I would say first off, good effort, but I find it rather ironic that the most significant environmental initiative this government has made in the last year has come from the Ministry of Government Services. Unfortunately I do not think it is going to do anything to solve the mess that the Ministry of the Environment has created in the greater Toronto area. I would also say congratulations on an attempt to cut waste. I certainly hope it has more success than the Treasurer had in his statement yesterday.

Normally I associate this government with the 3Rs, and the 3Rs, as far as the members opposite are concerned, are review, recant and retreat. Hopefully it will do something to reduce the pile of garbage which has no place to go in the greater Toronto area. I am sure this will be the first of many efforts this government will attempt to regain its slipping credibility. The government may be a cleaner place, but what about making the government a more efficient place?

ATTENDANCE OF PREMIER

Mr Miclash: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I am actually quite disappointed that again we have a government here without the Premier. As we know, question period is very important to people on this side of the House. It is very important for us to ask the Premier what he is doing in terms of some of the policies he has and to get some of the honourable members' ideas across to the people of Ontario. There is a lot of dissatisfaction out there and I think the Premier should be here to answer some of our questions regarding some of that from my constituents.

Hon Mr Cooke: Mr Speaker, because this has been raised a couple of days in a row, I would like to point out to the House that on September 23, when the House resumed, the Premier was here. The next day he attended the funeral of a fallen OPP officer. On September 25, he spoke at a community college association. On September 26, he was here. Earlier this week he was in Milwaukee. He was also at the opening of the Bank of Montreal training centre, and today he is speaking to the international woodworkers. Today is the 81st question period for this government and the Premier has attended 66 of those question periods, or 80%.

The Leader of the Opposition is not here.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. Will members come to order, please? I am asking all members of the House to come to order, please.

The member for Kenora, and indeed other members who have raised a similar point of order, will know that there is nothing in the standing orders which will be of assistance to the Speaker in this situation. Of course the Speaker would very much like to see every member of the House in full attendance at all times, but there is nothing in the standing orders that speaks of attendance. I would ask that we continue with our business in a calm and reasoned way.

ORAL QUESTIONS

GOVERNMENT SPENDING

Mr Conway: I have a question for the Treasurer and it concerns his most controversial, much-troubled budget to which he administered some rather interesting plastic surgery in this Legislature yesterday afternoon. Would the Treasurer not agree that the people of Ontario understand the very dire straits in which this budget now finds itself? They understand that the expenditures are above what was projected and in fact many feel the expenditures are running out of control. Perhaps as important, evidence builds that revenues are not spot on, as the Treasurer would like us to believe. Given the not inconsiderable prelude to yesterday's midcourse correction, is the Treasurer not embarrassed that all he was able to do for the taxpayers of Ontario yesterday was to defer much and decide very little to deal with the budgetary haemorrhage in fiscal year 1991-92?

Hon Mr Laughren: The member opposite is being somewhat extravagant in his description of the state of the budget, but on the other hand, I have always enjoyed his extravagances.

I should remind members that what we did yesterday was announce a 1% correction or adjustment in our expenditures for this year. That is all; nothing more. Expenditure pressures have been building this year for reasons I explained in some detail in my statement yesterday. All we are saying is that in order to keep to our target on our expenditures, we simply must make some midyear adjustments. I think any large organization that was responsible would do the same thing. We have simply said that we are going to make this correction in order that we stick to our guns on controlling our expenditures. I think the people of this province expect no less and we are determined to do that.

Mr Conway: There is a Ronald Reagan-like calmness in the Treasurer's comments just delivered, and against that backdrop, I want to look specifically at what the Treasurer did yesterday on the expenditure account.

What the Treasurer did not do on the expenditure account is that he made absolutely no effort to restrain or constrain in this fiscal year some of the most protected, privileged and well-paid people in this province, namely, the doctors, the teachers, the union bosses and the public servants, good people all.

What the Treasurer did do yesterday, as he cowered at the prospect of that common front with which he made a happy alliance in the election campaign of 1990, is that in the fiscal year 1991-92 he cut back $13 million from the budget of the Ministry of Colleges and Universities. While he did not have the guts to deal with the doctors, the teachers and the public servants, he thought not a second about asking the college and university students to carry a disproportionate share of the restraint burden in the fiscal year 1991-92. As a social democrat, is he not embarrassed to stand in this House and defend that kind of iniquitous tax policy?

1410

Hon Mr Laughren: The member opposite has moved from extravagance to cruelty in his charges to me. I should say to the member opposite that he is not being fair either. On all counts, he is not being fair. This government has for the first time put a containment on the overall costs of the health care system. That has never been done before in the history of this province. We did it.

Second, we have sent a very strong signal out there that we are going to manage our expenditures very carefully, including our negotiations with the public sector, but that will be done through the collective bargaining process, which we respect unlike some other jurisdictions I could name in this country.

Finally, it is not accurate to state that we have simply moved the problem from this year to next year. There were two issues on which we did indeed move, not the problem but a pressure, from this year to next year because there is a retroactivity to them. One is the pay equity settlement of $50 million. We are going to have to pay that in the next fiscal year, absolutely. That was done because the amendments to the legislation will not be through. Second, the wage protection fund will not all be paid this year as originally we thought it would be. That will be paid next year. Those two numbers will be moved into the next fiscal year. The other numbers are effective savings for this year and for next year.

Mr Conway: The spin doctors would be happy with the headlines today which indicate that Ontario has lopped $600 million off its budget. When I look at what the Treasurer said and did yesterday for the fiscal year 1991-92, I see that $460 million of that $600 million was in fact deferred to next year. Would the Treasurer not agree that having regard to the expenditure part of his growing budgetary problem and haemorrhage, all he did yesterday on behalf of the beleaguered taxpayers of Ontario was to pay this year's MasterCard with next year's Visa?

Hon Mr Laughren: The member has returned to extravagant language in his final supplementary. I would simply say that is not accurate. The savings we are effecting, for example in the expenditures of the various ministries, will reduce the base for next year and in the next 18 months will effect a saving of about $300 million. That is real money and it is real savings. That is not simply deferring expenditure to next year. That is simply not the case. The member is not depicting it as it really is. Those are permanent savings in the expenditure base of this government. We are determined that we are going to carry through on those expenditure savings, because I believe that is expected of us and we are determined to do it.

TAX REVENUES

Mr Conway: I have a second question for the provincial Treasurer. I would like to leave the expenditure haemorrhage for a moment and now deal with the revenue difficulties. I must say, listening to the Treasurer respond yesterday to my colleague the member for Scarborough-Agincourt, I am increasingly persuaded that my honourable friend the member for Nickel Belt knows more about the revenue difficulty than he is yet prepared to announce to this House. Be that as it may, we must deal with what we have before us. He says that in the here and now his revenues are spot on.

The Treasurer's budget plan for the fiscal year 1991-92 anticipates a decline in retail sales tax revenues of approximately 2.5% over the previous year. Statistics Canada has indicated that in the first six months of this calendar year retail sales in Ontario were off by fully 8%. Can the Treasurer indicate whether or not his officials at Treasury have briefed him that the retail sales tax numbers, even though they were discounted by 2.5%, may in fact be seriously overstated as we speak?

Hon Mr Laughren: No. At this point in time, and that is as far as we can go, the numbers indicate that our revenues are as we forecast in the spring budget. I would put a couple of cautions there, which I tried to do the other day as well. Although there is no indication that there is going to be a decline in revenues, there are two major sources of provincial revenues, our own source revenues, whose numbers come in quite late. One is the retail sales tax revenues, and a big chunk of them tend to come in during January because of the shopping period in November to December. The other number is corporate income tax, which comes in even later than that, because of the way in which it is reported. Those are the only two numbers, and at this point in time we think our forecasts are accurate.

The final proviso I would put to the member opposite is that historically—and members of his party would understand this—the federal government's allocation or transfer to us of provincial income taxes, which they collect for us of course, has been somewhat volatile in the way it comes to the province. A couple of years ago they were almost $1 billion over, as I recall.

Those are the three provisos I put to the member opposite, because at this time I have no indication from anyone that our revenues are going to be less than we have forecast.

Mr Conway: I appreciate the response, but much of it was a pink herring. I am interested only in provincial retail sales tax revenues for purposes of this question, and I repeat, this budget plan for fiscal year 1991-92 anticipates a decline of 2.5% in retail sales tax revenue over last year.

The Statscan data already in for the first six months of this year suggest that retail sales taxes in this province are off by 8%. If anything like that trend continues, and those well-paid minions at Treasury must know this, the Treasurer's revenue figures for provincial retail sales taxes in this budget plan are overstated by anywhere from $300 million to $450 million. In light of that assessment, how can this Treasurer honestly and credibly tell us in this Legislature this late in the cycle that his revenue plan is spot on?

Hon Mr Laughren: I will be as direct as I can with the member. I have received no information that leads me to believe our forecasts will not be realized. The member opposite must know as well as anybody in this province that sometimes one's forecasting can be off.

Mr Conway: My final supplementary deals with the retail sales tax revenue. The Treasurer alluded to my next concern in his second-last answer, and that is, as I think all members would know, that a large portion of retail sales occur in the economy in the eight or 10 weeks prior to Christmas.

As the Treasurer of Ontario, the man who must defend this increasingly incredible budget where the revenue projections are overly optimistic, does the minister not feel the time is right to take some immediate action with respect to his government's wacko Sunday shopping legislation, to ensure that the retailers of this province are going to enjoy some kind of activity prior to Christmas, if for no other reason than that these very optimistic retail sales tax numbers on which this most controversial budget now turns in large part can be materialized?

Hon Mr Laughren: I think the member is not accurate when he implies that Sunday shopping would resolve any kind of retail sales tax woes that may or may not be there. I simply do not believe the world is that simple and that extending the shopping week from six to seven days somehow gives us a great big bonus in retail sales tax revenues. We remain committed to our position for a common pause day.

1420

SMALL BUSINESS

Mr Carr: My question is to the Treasurer. I understand today is his birthday, but when he reads the survey that just came out he is going to age very quickly.

This morning the Canadian Federation of Independent Business released a shocking result of a survey: 36%, over one third of the small businesses in this province, say they are considering pulling out of Ontario, taking with them 500,000 jobs. They are laying the blame squarely on this government and the Treasurer and the Premier. I quote:

"Mr Bulloch charged that Ontario Premier Bob Rae and his government, by virtue of the misguided policies based on rigid ideological philosophies, are responsible for a dramatic decrease in business confidence and threaten to turn much of this province into a rust belt."

My question to the Treasurer is very simple: What is he going to do about it?

Hon Mr Laughren: Mr Speaker, I wonder whether you would allow me to refer the rigidly ideological member's question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology.

Hon Mr Philip: Nobody is more aware than this government of the problems small business and business are being faced with as a result of the recession. The major problem small business and all businesses have had in this province has been the GST, which was imposed by the federal Conservative government.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. Would the minister take his seat, please. I imagine that the member for Oakville South, who posed the question, would like to hear a response. The Speaker is required to hear responses as well as questions.

Hon Mr Philip: The Conference Board of Canada has estimated that this province will grow this year at a faster rate than any other province in Canada. I can also point out that new industries are settling and expanding. Only last night I opened Dover Elevator, which is expected to create 800 jobs. It is in the riding just next door to the member's own riding.

Mr Carr: Businesses are saying very clearly that the problem is with this government. They cannot blame other governments and the Liberals. They are saying very clearly it is the responsibility of the Ontario New Democratic government that has been in for over a year. I give a quote from Susan Swift. This is what they are saying, and I hope the minister will listen, "It is very clear that the Ontario government's policies and its overall disdain for economic logic and business reality has become the major concern of small businesses." Not GST; the major concern is the minister and his government. For example, 94% call the government's last budget irresponsible. Only 2% say it was good and 94% say the government is irresponsible.

My second question is, is the minister prepared to admit the mistakes and change the course so we do not lose 500,000 jobs in the province?

Hon Mr Philip: Members of the Conservative Party were very anxious to have hearings on this budget this summer. An overwhelming number of people who appeared at those hearings, be they business, labour or community leaders, were overwhelmingly in support of this budget and overwhelmingly against the GST, I might add.

Let me just add that no Treasurer, Liberal or Conservative, other than this Treasurer, the member for Nickel Belt, had the courage to fight the recession instead of keeling over and dying before the recession.

The Speaker: Would the minister conclude his remarks, please.

Hon Mr Philip: There is a restructuring going on throughout North America. Some companies are closing some of their plants and opening others. Let me give you an example, Mr Speaker.

The Speaker: Quickly.

Hon Mr Philip: Keeprite has just closed its plant in Illinois to open up a larger plant in Brantford, which will create over 700 jobs in this province in the next five years. That is what is happening in business.

Mr Carr: The fact is that the statistics that come from them say 20% more businesses today than last March are thinking of leaving. The minister's problem is that he is taking one step forward, but he is taking two steps back. For every job that is coming in there are two saying they are thinking of leaving.

More shocking is the fact that 54% of Ontario's small manufacturers are thinking of leaving Ontario; one half are thinking of leaving Ontario. The minister can talk about some of the companies coming in, but 54% are saying they do not like what he is doing. They are thinking of leaving and they are thinking of voting with their feet. The minister cannot blame the federal government and he cannot blame the previous Liberal government. The jig is up. Business is calling his bluff. When is he going to start to react by trying to change the policies to help these companies that are saying if he does not they will not be around a year from now?

Hon Mr Philip: Business is calling the bluff of the Conservative Party. That is what is happening. Chrysler Canada in Bramalea was just selected to open its production site on a new model. This will cause the creation of 1,000 new jobs. That is what Chrysler Canada has said. Chrysler Canada has added another 1,400 jobs to Windsor. That is what business is doing. They are not thinking about leaving. They are creating jobs. They are doing things here.

If the member wants an estimate of what is happening—
Interjection.

Hon Mr Philip: I know the member does not want to hear and therefore thinks he can shout me. But if he looks even at today's paper, for example, the president of Imperial Oil describes the Premier as a pragmatic politician and says he is heartened by some of the new initiatives the Premier has taken. That is what the president of Imperial Oil is saying.

Mr Stockwell: If everything is so great, why are the unemployment rolls swelling so far? I do not think everything is great.

ONTARIO PUBLIC SERVICE SALARIES AND BENEFITS

Mr Stockwell: My question is to the Chair of the Management Board of Cabinet. Yesterday, as part of his—Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. It is very difficult to hear more than one question at a time. I realize people are very enthusiastic about this topic, but I would appreciate if I could hear the question. The member for Etobicoke West is the person who has the floor.

Mr Stockwell: Yesterday, as part of his spending deferral program, the minister said, "We are aiming for low wage settlements in forthcoming negotiations with bargaining agents in the Ontario public service sector."

The minister's predecessor at Management Board used to be an OPSEU negotiator, and she was so tough with these unions that when she had his job the Treasurer kept telling her it was the toughest recession we have faced, and the public service payroll increased by more than 14% and employee benefits went up by 20%. That was collective bargaining. That was no collective bargaining process; that was a love-in with his brothers and his sisters.

Now he wants us to believe he is prepared to play hardball. Why does he not tell the taxpayers the maximum pay increase he prefers? Why does he not tell the taxpayers exactly what kind of increase he is prepared to tolerate? Is it 1%, 2% or 3%? Is it a single digit? The taxpayers have a right to know. Why does he not let them in on the secret?

Interjections.

The Speaker: It would be very helpful if all members could co-operate so that the member who asked the question will be able to hear the response.

Hon Mr Silipo: First of all, let me say to the member something I am sure he is already aware of. He continues to talk about this 14% increase that was put in place last year and he knows full well, as do members of the House, that the 14% was a total amount that covered salaries as well as increased staffing that needed to be put in place to deal with increased pressures in the court system as well as the pay equity adjustments, and that the salary increases within that 14% were between 5% and 6%.

To answer his question in terms of what we are going to be doing, let me say very clearly that I said yesterday we are committed to the collective bargaining process. That means to me that we do not bargain collective agreements on the floor of the Legislature. We bargain them at the bargaining table.

I know very clearly, and this government knows very clearly, the kind of direction we need to follow. I think we will do our utmost and we will fulfil our responsibilities to get a negotiated agreement that is fair to our employees and fair to our taxpayers.

1430

Mr Stockwell: I understand exactly what came about to make up the 14%. Ask the unemployed worker or someone who is earning less than the average civil servant how much more it cost to run this government. The answer is that under this government, the payroll in this province went up by 14%. If the minister thinks that is acceptable, he is dead wrong.

The minister can understand the scepticism out there in the public. His estimates show that his operating expenditures are up by more than $1 billion dollars, and 65% of that hike is due to a $766-million increase in the amount the government is spending on salaries, wages and benefits.

Given the record, I doubt the public sector unions are exactly shaking in their boots with the thought of meeting the minister at the bargaining table, because it is not clear which side of the bargaining table he is going to sit on.

I ask the minister again, what is the bottom line on his public sector pay hikes? He should tell us the number and tell us exactly what he is prepared to give away. If he is going to hammer out a low increase, is he going to give up the right to strike? Is he going to cancel or postpone—

The Speaker: Would the member for Etobicoke West take his seat, please.

Hon Mr Silipo: I was trying to listen very intently to see how the question was different from the first time it was asked. I do not think it was, other than that of course the member has taken the opportunity to make a speech about various other bits and pieces.

Let me just say that we understand very clearly what we need to do. We understand and I think our employees understand very clearly the new reality, but we do not believe in resolving questions by coming in here and bringing in a maximum number. We also understand that there are other issues in terms of job security and various other issues that are going to be on the bargaining table. We will negotiate. We will negotiate hard. No doubt the unions will negotiate hard. And we will get, I believe, a deal at the end of that process that is a good deal for all of us.

Mr Stockwell: The minister refused to bring in a wage restraint program for 98% of his employees. He refused to bring in a restraint program for the broader public sector. He refused to tell us the maximum wage increase he will tolerate and pay for in the public sector. All we get from the minister are comments about the sanctity of the collective bargaining process.

The minister has a choice. He, personally, has a choice. He can either be a watchdog for the taxpayers or a lapdog for the public service sector unions. The choice is his. Why does he not stand up for once? Why does he not stand up for the people of this province for once and simply tell his big union friends that they have to live with a freeze? Other provinces have done it and it has not been the end of the world. Why cannot his government, with its special relationship with big labour, sell that idea? He can either fight for the taxpayers or fight for his union buddies who support his campaigns and work in his elections.

The Speaker: Would the member conclude his question.

Mr Stockwell: Who is the minister going to fight for?

Hon Mr Silipo: We are going to fight for the interests of the taxpayers and for the fairness to our employees that all of us, particularly we as government, need to demonstrate. That is the kind of leadership I think the people of the province expect from us, and that is what they are going to get.

I might add that we certainly have learned a few lessons over the last few weeks in watching the member's federal cousins and the way they have operated vis-à-vis their civil service. We do not intend to follow that example. We intend to deal with our problems fairly and equitably and to do it through the collective bargaining process, and I believe we can get to the solution we need through that process.

SCHOOL CURRICULUM

Mr Beer: My question is to the Minister of Education. Recently, the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development issued its annual report on the Canadian economy. It confirmed what thousands of Ontarians who have lost their jobs or have faced the anguish of unemployment or personal or business bankruptcy know, and that is that this economy is in serious trouble. In particular, the report underlined yet again the problem of a 30% dropout rate from our secondary schools.

What are the minister's plans to meet the needs of thousands of Ontarians who leave our secondary schools without adequate education, without appropriate skills and without hope for the future?

Hon Mrs Boyd: I want to assure the member opposite and this House that we take very seriously the situation in terms of retention in our secondary schools. We certainly agree that it is a major issue for us as a society to find a better way to, first of all, provide the kind of education our youngsters need as they go forward into a whole new era of economic circumstances.

There are a number of initiatives under way right now in terms of improving that, including the curriculum restructuring that is going on which concentrates on the need to emphasize maths and sciences and technological training, and finding ways in which we can shape both the curriculum and the way we deliver that curriculum to meet the varying needs of students throughout the province.

We also know that a lot of students drop out because of their social circumstances. They do not have the kinds of social and familial supports that make it possible for them to thrive in our school system. We are looking at the kinds of initiatives mentioned in the report Children First to try to give them those kinds of supports so that they are able to remain in school and to thrive in that system.

Mr Beer: I think, frankly, that answer indicates not only why our educational system is not serving those young people and why it is in difficulty, but also why the economy is in such trouble. Here we have a respected international organization, the OECD, identifying specific problems in the minister's educational system and calling for more funding and more training and more apprenticeship as the keys to economic renewal in this province. Instead, what we get back is a series of platitudes and a mumbo-jumbo of programs.

Yesterday we saw, through the Treasurer, that education is simply not a priority for this government. We saw it in terms of the $13-million cutback at the post-secondary level and we see it in the lack of action around jobs and training and apprenticeship at the secondary level. Last week, Janet Halliwell, the respected head of the Science Council of Canada, stated that our educational system "is out of step with the economy's need for a technologically proficient workforce." She said it is simply unacceptable that the secondary school system "produces as many dropouts as it does university entrants."

This is a crisis situation. The youth unemployment rate right now in Ontario is over 20%. The Minister of Education is producing an underclass of young people without hope.

Will the minister commit to this House today that before the end of the current legislative session she will introduce a specific, detailed plan to drastically reduce the 30% dropout rate from our secondary schools?

Hon Mrs Boyd: I can certainly assure the member that the issue of retention is one that is specifically important and is specifically mentioned in terms of our economic renewal plan.

We do not disagree at all with the kinds of criticisms that have been levelled about the lack of action that the member's government was able to take in terms of a problem that is not new. It has been occurring over a number of years, and we are very aware of the need for urgent action.

What we need to do is to work that action in with the kind of work we are doing in our communities so that we have a buy-in from all the players. Our work on the Ontario Training and Adjustment Board and our work with our business and labour communities is an important part of that. That work is ongoing, as is the kind of work we are doing on our retention policies. I certainly hope I will be able to bring that in by the end of the spring term. That is my intention at the present time, depending on how the legislative schedule goes.

Mr Beer: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: The minister would want to know that the former government took many initiatives to address this problem. This government has had a whole year and has done absolutely nothing to address this issue. I know the honourable minister would want to know that.

The Speaker: That is certainly a point of information, if not a point of order.

1440

ASSISTANCE TO DE HAVILLAND

Mr Carr: My question is for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology. When he quoted, he forgot the headline on the last quote from Imperial Oil. It said, "Imperial Oil Plans to Cut up to 600 More Jobs." That is the most important part.

Let's go on to another problem. Yesterday, as the minister knows, the European Community blocked the sale of de Havilland. Federal officials have been quoted as saying—

Interjections.

The Speaker: Sometimes I think it was quieter in the SkyDome last evening.

An hon member: They had something to cheer about.

The Speaker: Yes, and something for everyone to cheer about. Right now, however, I would like to hear the member for Oakville South, who is waiting patiently to place his question.

Mr Carr: It is a little quieter—except when they booed the Premier last night; that was rather loud.

As the minister will know, the European Community blocked the sale of de Havilland. Some of the federal officials have been quoted as saying, "There is no alternative buyer." De Havilland has already cost the Canadian taxpayers in the neighbourhood of $800 million. Will the minister promise this House that the taxpayers will not be forced to spend any more money on this company?

Hon Mr Philip: Numerous governments, both federal Conservative and federal Liberal governments, have spent a lot of money on this and other aerospace companies because they know that only through some government participation can the aerospace industry exist in any country, and we have seen that.

It is unfortunate that we have had an unexpected decision. We have been in contact with my federal counterpart in Ottawa. We are also in touch with the officials of Aérospatiale Canada Inc and Alenia SpA and we are assessing the situation. I will report back to the member when some decisions have been made on that.

Mr Carr: The problem is that now that the company, the unions, the banks, the suppliers know the government is going to put money into it, there are not likely to be very many concessions. Instead of the company, the union, the suppliers and the banks working out a deal, they are waiting now for the government to pile money into it. The taxpayers are worried about the amount of money that will be going into it. The Treasurer made it clear yesterday that at least with the $9.7-billion deficit, there is not enough money to go around. Yes or no: Will the minister get the stakeholders to get together or will the government be plowing more money into this company over this next little while?

Hon Mr Philip: The federal government, which has an even larger debt in percentage terms than the provincial government, was quite prepared to pour money into this company.

I can say that we will not walk away from this company. We are working with the original purchasers, we are working with the existing company and we are working with the federal government to do everything we can to save this important company and to save the aerospace industry in this province. We are not going to walk away from it.

ELECTROLYTIC EPILATION

Mr Owens: I was going to comment on the absence of the opposition leaders, but as they are usually not here when they are here, it does not really matter.

My question is for the Minister of Health. She recently announced that the—

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. It would be most helpful if the member could identify the minister to whom he wishes to address a question and then simply place his question.

Mr Owens: I was in the process of doing that, Mr Speaker. My question is for the Minister of Health. She recently announced that the procedure of electrolysis was being pulled from the OHIP billing schedule. Can she explain to this House what that will mean in terms of dollars to the taxpayers?

Hon Ms Lankin: The procedure of electrolysis will be delisted from the OHIP schedule of fee benefits as of November 14.

[Applause]

Hon Ms Lankin: I thank the opposition. I know this is an issue a number of members in the House have had concern about.

On the amount of money, I think it is important for us to look at it historically in terms of what it will mean in the next fiscal year as well. Back in 1980-81, there were 21 physicians who were involved in billing for electrolysis and at that point in time in the province we paid out about $16,000. That is not unlike the level of payments for this procedure in other provinces at this point in time, but that was in 1980-81, 10 years ago. In 1989-90, this had escalated to 121 physicians who were providing this service, many of those in the Metropolitan Toronto area, and the claims totalled over $6.5 million. In fact, in this fiscal year we had felt it was going to reach the $8-million mark. For next year, we believe we will save $11 million from our budget.

It is an example of where we are trying to be effective managers of the system. We will have to make some tough decisions about those services that continue to be paid for and reallocate dollars to higher-priority areas.

GASOLINE PRICES

Mrs Y. O'Neill: My question is for the Treasurer. Mayor after mayor and retailer after retailer across this province has begged the Treasurer, and indeed almost every member of this Legislature, to think again before implementing the second phase of the gasoline tax increase of the 1991 budget. Such an increase, as the Treasurer knows, is to come into effect on January 1, 1992.

I remind the Treasurer that the resulting $141-million revenue loss will drain the Ontario economy and that this gas tax directly and indirectly results in small business bankruptcies and an estimated 14,000 job losses. In Sarnia alone, six out of seven cars crossing the Blue Water Bridge to shop in Michigan include a purchase of gasoline during that visit. The direct impact of this has been the closure of more than one dozen gasoline stations in that city alone. Each member of this Legislature can point to dozens of such closures in their own communities, especially those members who represent border communities.

The Speaker: And the member's question?

Mrs Y. O'Neill: Will the Treasurer tell this House whether or not impact studies are being done? Has the Treasurer or the Minister of Revenue directed that impact studies, especially in border communities, be done before he imposes this second phase of what is a 30% increase in a regressive tax on a necessary commodity for businesses and consumers in this province?

Hon Mr Laughren: First of all, we did look at what we thought would be the impact of a gasoline tax increase when we were preparing the budget in the spring. While I understand the pressures in border communities and I understand the pressures in northern Ontario, where I reside myself, because of gasoline prices, at the same time it is my belief—as a matter of fact, I did a little bit of analysis on the taxes on gasoline—that we could wipe out every single penny of tax on gasoline and in border communities it would still be a lower price across the border in the United States communities. That would do what I think would be very serious damage to the revenues of this province.

I am sure the member was listening carefully to the member for Renfrew North a few minutes ago when he was expressing alarm about the potential loss of revenues in this province from retail sales taxes. We are not in a position to take action that is going to reduce revenues this year in the province, given the enormous pressures we have on expenditures.

1450

Mrs Y. O'Neill: There seems to be some difficulty talking about different sources of revenue. The Treasurer certainly seems to be ignoring the fact that gasoline tax revenue is very directly related to sales tax revenue and that certainly people are very seriously considering and are indeed doing their Christmas shopping in another place than Ontario.

Given the devastating impact of this latest gas tax increase and the Treasurer's statement that he has done "a little bit of an analysis," I am afraid the people of Ontario are going to find that less than useful. Before the Treasurer imposes the schedule for January 1, 1992, I wonder if he will seriously consider cancelling that second phase before the impact of another price increase adds further to the crisis in the cities of Cornwall, Windsor, Sarnia and St Catharines, in fact all Ontario communities, but as the Treasurer and I know, the border communities of this province are dying.

Hon Mr Laughren: I am very much aware of the problems in the border communities. That is why there was established, with the federal government and the municipalities, a cross-border shopping summit, I believe it was called, which examined the whole question of the problem of people crossing the border to shop—to be fair, not just to buy gasoline. I concede that a lot of that does occur, but I do not believe a 1.7-cents-per-litre reduction in gasoline is going to resolve the cross-border shopping issue. That is not what I think is a solution.

The three levels of government, the border community municipalities, the federal government and the province, came to an agreement among all three on a package of marketing and education in the border communities that we hope will go some way to resolving the problem by encouraging people to shop in this province, because when they shop in this province—I know members of the assembly understand this—and pay taxes in this province, they are helping to pay for the services they receive in this province.

HUNTING IN ALGONQUIN PARK

Mr McLean: Will the minister with dual responsibility for natural resources and native affairs confirm that he has a draft agreement or a final agreement prepared, ready for signing, that would permit the Algonquins of Golden Lake to begin hunting in Algonquin Park after Thanksgiving weekend?

Hon Mr Wildman: I appreciate the question. As the member knows, negotiations started on June 15. We are very close to finalizing an interim agreement that will allow the Algonquins to exercise their aboriginal rights to hunt for food. Those negotiations have been long and complex. We have reached a draft that I hope will be satisfactory to all.

The draft recognizes the aboriginal rights of the Algonquins of Golden Lake and improves the circumstances of their lives, and I believe it will take into account the concerns of non-aboriginal people in Ontario as well. I am committed to ensuring that the terms of the draft agreement will be shared with the interested parties prior to the province signing that agreement.

Mr McLean: Am I to take from the minister's answer that they may be able to hunt there after Thanksgiving? It is my understanding that he promised to involve third-party consultation in the process. There are many people I have talked to who have indicated that they have not been consulted, nor has the minister consulted, as he indicated he would, with third-party people. The ones I have contacted have said the process has not been creditable and were wondering how he justifies indicating that the process is almost complete when people I have talked to have said they have not been contacted.

Mr Wildman: Of course, I am not fully aware of and the member has not made clear the people to whom he has been talking. However, he will know that the ministry has conducted a series of meetings with third parties to discuss interim arrangements and other communications regarding interim arrangements have been carried out through mailouts, correspondence and key contacts within the interest groups.

The fact is that we are committed, as I said in my earlier response, to sharing the terms of the draft interim agreement with interested third parties before signing. We hope we will be able to involve them in a consultation that will determine what their views are with regard to the control of the amount of harvest, the areas where harvesting will be allowed, the dates on which harvesting will be allowed and the control of access using motorized vehicles. These are all issues that are very important to the people who consider Algonquin Park, as we do, the jewel of the parks system in Ontario and who also value the importance of resolving aboriginal issues in an equitable way.

The Speaker: The Minister of the Environment, with a response to a question asked earlier by the member for Brampton North.

FUEL SPILL

Hon Mrs Grier: I have a response to the question asked yesterday by the member for Brampton North. The member raised the issue of the response time from my ministry's spills action centre and said that "1,000 litres of gasoline leaked into the soil over the course of the weekend."

As I indicated yesterday, the spills action centre operates 24 hours a day and all calls are recorded. The first call received about the spill to which the member referred was at 1:56 on Friday, September 27. It was from Esso Petroleum and it reported that approximately 900 litres of gas had leaked on to the ground from a tank on private property. Esso indicated it had filled the tank with about 1,000 litres on August 28, 1991, and believed the tank to be corroded. At the time they called, they had a backhoe on site. The property owner subsequently confirmed to the ministry that indeed the leak had occurred over the past month and Esso has confirmed that at the time it reported the spill to the spills action centre the tank was empty.

Responsibility for fuel spills lies with the fuels safety branch of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations. The Ministry of the Environment informed them on Friday and indicated that representatives of both ministries would visit the site as soon as possible next week. MOE officials visited the site on Monday, September 30, sampled the well water and no odour was observed.

Mr McClelland: I appreciate the minister's quick response to the inquiry that was raised yesterday. I suppose it begs another question, and that is—I do not want to use the word "discrepancy"—the uncertainty in terms of facts as relayed today with the information that was given to the property owner in question. The property owner in question maintained to us that there was certainly unclear direction.

I think the issue here is that it is all well and good that the minister is talking about it in terms of whose responsibility it is, but at the end of the day what we have here is a person in the province who called and was not able to access direct, succinct information giving him the assistance he required.

The Speaker: Your supplementary?

Mr McClelland: The substance of my question yesterday was, is the minister going to address the issue? She states the action hotline is available 24 hours a day. We have a situation where an issue was raised and apparently the succinct, direct information she is able to offer here today, and advice, was not available.

The Speaker: And the supplementary, please.

Mr McClelland: The question remains, will the minister ensure that people who call that action hotline will have a direct response that will be helpful to them?

Hon Mrs Grier: It was Esso Petroleum that called. They indicated that they were on the site and that cleanup could commence. I think the underlying issue the member has pointed to is that the jurisdiction is split between the fuels safety branch of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations and the Ministry of the Environment for empty fuel tanks. That is something that certainly in opposition I shared the member's concern about. I still do and have discussed it with my colleague the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

In this situation we are not talking, as the member indicated yesterday, about an immediate leak. We are talking about soil cleanup and I certainly agree with him that there needs to be a clear understanding of jurisdiction and response wherever and whenever that occurs.

PUBLIC SAFETY

Mr Cordiano: My question is to the Minister of Housing. As the minister would no doubt be aware, as she is a well-informed minister, the residents of my riding, in particular the residents of the Metropolitan Toronto Housing Authority buildings at Jane and Falstaff and the surrounding residents, have been subjected to an increasing level of crime and violence. In fact, the minister would know that this resembles a war zone, not just at this location but right across Metro and other places in the province. What we have here are residents who have been subjected to problems that have erupted from the drug trafficking situation in the area and right across Metro.

I would ask the minister today to commit herself to making the realization of safe and secure homes a possibility for the residents of the area. Will she commit to specific steps to improve the situation at the MTHA buildings at Jane and Falstaff?

Hon Ms Gigantes: I will reply to the member that, as I come from Ottawa, certain areas in the city of Toronto are not areas I know like the back of my hand. I know there are many areas in Toronto, as there are in many cities, where we do have problems of the kind he has described.

Certainly within the city of Toronto the Metropolitan Toronto Housing Authority has put a good deal of effort into trying to address these problems in a reasonable and practical way, and the Ministry of Housing has been providing resources to communities where special problems have been identified. These are concerns I take very seriously, and I hope the member will feel assured that the ministry and this minister will continue to try to improve the situation.

1500

Mr Cordiano: The minister would like to know I have met with residents of the area on numerous occasions, and it is in fact a life-threatening situation for a number of residents. They are held hostage in their own homes by what is going on around them. They have been victimized. She would know that.

The previous government had committed funds to an in-house security project for the MTHA buildings at Jane and Falstaff, which apparently has been stalled by this government. I want to know from the minister if she is prepared to commit today to funding that program so that we can get that in-house security project moving. It is a model project for other MTHA buildings, and I want her commitment and assurance that she will do everything to make sure this moves along and will become a reality.

Hon Ms Gigantes: I think the member is mistaken to say that the Ministry of Housing has delayed any approvals of any allocations to proceed with the programs we are hoping to see in place in troubled communities. He certainly has my assurance that, as minister, I will do my best to make sure that the programs we are putting in place are going to be programs that will reassure people who have a right to feel that they are safe and secure in their homes.

Mrs Witmer: I would like to say, before I ask my question, that I am pleased that the electrolysis payments have been removed from OHIP, and I was pleased to bring forward the petition on behalf of the electrolysists.

LABOUR LEGISLATION

Mrs Witmer: My question is for the Minister of Labour. Earlier this week, the minister responded to my question regarding the proposed amendments to the Labour Relations Act by saying that he wanted to "involve workers and working people in the decisions that are going to affect them and the future of plants and jobs in this province".

I can assure the minister that I too strongly believe that all workers should have a voice in this important decision. That is why I would like the minister to tell us today why, in the preparation of the Burkett committee report, did he rely on union representatives to speak for workers in this province when in fact some 64% of Ontario's workers do not belong to a union and do not necessarily share the same views as union organizers?

Hon Mr Mackenzie: I think the answer to that is fairly obvious. The workers that are organized into unions had the expertise and the ability and the personnel to make their position with respect to the Ontario Labour Relations Act known, something that probably unorganized workers have not had the experience with, or indeed has ever been before the act, and it was the Ontario Labour Relations Act that we are taking a look at.

Mrs Witmer: I am very disappointed. The minister talks about equality and fairness, yet 64% of workers have not had a voice in this very important law. I can tell the minister there are many workers who have written to me and phoned or stopped me on the street to tell me they are very concerned about this proposal and the impact it is going to have on them. They are concerned about their individual rights and freedoms and their jobs.

What plans has the minister made to ensure that these workers who are not members of unions are going to have the same opportunity to participate in the consultation process as the members of the unions have already had? What assurances is he going to give these workers that their individual rights will be protected?

Hon Mr Mackenzie: I think the member is aware that there will be a consultation period and any group can appear before that consultation process. Following that, when legislation is actually drafted and brought into this House, I would be very surprised if the members opposite do not send it out to one of the committees. We will probably have a tour of the province by the committee dealing with any legislation as well. So it is fairly obvious there will be all kinds of ability to participate.

I would ask her, though, to tell us how we can assure who the unorganized workers she is referring to are going to report to and who they are going to represent, which is one of the reasons why you go with the organized groups in the deal.

PETITIONS

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

Mr Henderson: I have a petition which reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned residents of Ontario, loyal to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, Queen of Canada, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to resolve that His Honour the Lieutenant Governor in Council be requested to revoke Ontario regulation 144/91 and restore the traditional oath of service to Her Majesty for police personnel in Ontario."

That petition is signed by several hundred individuals and I will happily affix my signature as well.

TOBACCO TAXES

Mr Villeneuve: I have a petition signed by 974 people and it reads as follows:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the present high level of taxes on tobacco products are excessive and contrary to the interests of Ontario's two million smokers; and

"Whereas high tobacco taxes are contributing to retail theft and our province's cross-border shopping crisis; and

"Whereas the punitive taxes and resulting lost sales are contributing to inflation, as well as costing jobs in Ontario; and

"Whereas high cigarette taxes are regressive and unfair to low- and modest-income citizens;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That Ontario's tobacco taxes should not be increased in 1991, and further, that these taxes should be repealed and a new lower and fairer tax be introduced."

I have signed this petition and I agree with it.

Mr McLean: I have a petition with 784 signatures on it. It says:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the present high levels of taxes on tobacco products are excessive and contrary to the interests of Ontario's two million smokers; and

"Whereas high tobacco taxes are contributing to retail theft and to our province's cross-border shopping crisis; and

"Whereas these punitive taxes and resulting lost sales are contributing to inflation, as well as costing jobs in Ontario; and

"Whereas high cigarette taxes are regressive and unfair to low- and modest-income citizens;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That Ontario's tobacco taxes should not be increased in 1991, and further, that these taxes should be repealed and a new lower and fairer tax be introduced."

As I said, it has 784 signatures and some of them are from my riding. That was from the International Plowing Match.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

Mr J. Wilson: I am privileged to rise today to present a petition to the Legislature of Ontario that reads as follows:

"Whereas the Queen of Canada has long been a symbol of national unity for Canadians from all walks of life and from all ethnic backgrounds;

"Whereas the people of Canada are currently facing a constitutional crisis which could potentially result in the breakup of the federation and are in need of unifying symbols;

"We, the undersigned, respectfully petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to restore the oath to the Queen for Ontario's police officers."

I have affixed my name to this petition also. It is signed by several people from my riding of Simcoe West, from the townships of Adjala and Tecumseth and the village of Tottenham.

1510

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mrs Cunningham: I have a petition with over 3,500 signatures from people living in the London area which reads:

"We, the undersigned, petition the Parliament of Ontario, especially the newly elected members, as follows." It is a very long petition, so I am going to paraphrase it. Responsible government means listening to the people who have elected you. They are very concerned about the lack of proportional voter representation in Ontario. They are asking that Bill 8 be repealed and that the province have a referendum.

They want full disclosure of the costs of French education by local school boards versus the total cost of education by those same boards. They are asking for the total cost of bilingualism at all levels. They are asking that this government be prepared to deal with the unjust demands from Quebec. They are asking that it also be prepared to deal with possible Quebec separation. They also want the government of Ontario to prepare an economically sound working paper to deal with free trade.

I have paraphrased because it is very long, but I have signed it and I will turn it over for your perusal, Mr Speaker.

NURSING HOMES

Mr McGuinty: I beg leave to present a petition on behalf of some 14 residents of Ontario who have signed this form, and I have affixed my name. It reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned, request that the government of Ontario immediately rectify the inequity in funding between nursing homes and homes for the aged. We strongly support the Ontario Nursing Home Association in their efforts to provide better care for nursing home residents through increased funding."

ORDERS OF THE DAY

POWER CORPORATION AMENDMENT ACT, 1991
LOI DE 1991 MODIFIANT LA LOI SUR LA SOCIÉTÉ
DE L'ÉLECTRICITÉ

Resuming the adjourned debate on the motion for second reading of Bill 118, An Act to amend the Power Corporation Act.

Suite du débat ajourné sur la motion visant la deuxième lecture du projet de loi 118, Loi modifiant la Loi sur la Société de l'électricité.

The Speaker: By rotation, it should be a member of the third party. Did the member for Carleton wish to have the floor?

Mr Sterling: No.

The Speaker: Bill 118. We left off last day with the member for Renfrew North concluding his remarks on the debate. The member for Oakville South.

Mr Carr: This is a little sooner than I had anticipated, but I am pleased to rise and speak on this particular bill. I will not be speaking quite as long as the previous speaker did yesterday. It was rather enjoyable and, as I have often said, maybe at the end of my career I will be able to speak like that, though as my wife said last night, "Don't do it when I'm around." But it is quite a talent, and I am pleased to speak on the debate. For those who were tuning in to see the member continuing, I am sorry but they will have to watch the reruns.

I am particularly concerned about this bill. I, like many of the members, was immediately approached by some of the people who are involved in my riding in Oakville. The people at Oakville Hydro called me with some very, very serious concerns they had. They were so concerned about this piece of legislation that they in fact tried to schedule a meeting between some of the members from the Halton area and the people at Oakville Hydro to discuss some of the concerns they had about this piece of legislation.

Unfortunately, on the date that had been selected for it, my friend the member for Halton North was unable to make it. It was during that period of time when the Toronto Transit Commission strike was on, and in anticipation of the legislation to bring those workers back, we had to cancel that meeting. But hopefully we will get a chance to get together and hear some of the concerns, because the group involved in that are people who have been around many, many years and are extremely concerned about pieces of legislation such as this. They wanted to voice the concerns of the people who are in that area, I think principally to the NDP member who sits in the Halton caucus.

What they wanted to do was voice some of the concerns with all three of the parties so that we could bring them forward. So we have had some discussions and hopefully we will have some others.

One of the other reasons I am anxious to speak to this bill is because as the new critic for Industry, Trade and Technology I have had the pleasure of meeting with business groups and I will be meeting with labour groups and, quite frankly, anybody who wants to meet with me at any time to discuss some of the concerns that are out there.

When I sit down with some of the members of the business community, some of the major users of energy in this province, they are extremely concerned. I was quite surprised on where the supply of energy ranks with the business community in this province. It ranks very heavily with some of their major concerns that are going on in this day and age. Of course, they talk about all the other logical things—the taxes and the regulations—but they are very concerned about having a supply of energy in this province second to none. As you look at it, this is probably the single biggest factor in our history for having such large manufacturers come to our province. We did have a tremendous amount of energy to supply our industries.

Some of the tours I have gone on were interesting—the people at St Lawrence Cement, for example. I went and toured their facility in my part of the riding where they produce, in tremendous quantities, the cement that is needed for this province. I was amazed at the amount of energy they expend on a daily basis. It is their single biggest cost. When you drive by right now, you will see the piles of coal there. When you get in and get a chance to see what is happening in that industry, you understand very clearly why they spend so much energy. It is more than they spend on personnel or any other factor, even raw materials.

When you get in and see the furnaces, I guess we would call them, you see the tremendous amount of energy expended. We had an opportunity to put the masks on and go in and look at the actual operation. When you look in the furnaces, it is almost like looking at the sun close up; all the material inside is bubbling. It is very clear why businesses like St Lawrence are so concerned about energy, because that is in fact what allows them to make their products. While they have made some great strides, and companies like that are attempting to do even more to make themselves energy-efficient, in the long term they are concerned about what Hydro, and indeed as a result what the government of Ontario, will be doing. So it is also as a result of being the critic for Industry, Trade and Technology that I am so concerned.

In addition, I had a chance to meet with some of the people involved at Dofasco. Of course, in steelmaking as well energy is a very big factor in the cost of production.

When we look at it in a day and at a point in time where businesses, large and small, are doing everything they can to make themselves more productive and to reduce operating costs and to get more efficient, the supply of energy is going to be a critical factor in our ability to compete over the next few years. What we have to do as a Legislature and what this government has to do is make sure we have the energy and the supplies necessary. Quite often what happens with energy and the whole supply is that we take it for granted. When we realize how fortunate we are to have such an abundance in this province, as a result of that we tend to take it, like a lot of things, for granted, because it has been so prevalent in this province.

I think more of us who have not been involved have taken the energy of this province for granted, but the business community is saying very clearly that it is concerned. I have had a few calls. Some of the people have voiced concern about this bill, because in a day and age when people are a little sceptical of politicians and the political process, one of the comments people are making is, "In this critical period we would really like to have the people making the decisions the people who are the experts."

I thought this government would have seen it is almost natural that the people who can best decide what needs to be done are not the people who sometimes only look to the next election and look for narrow, quick fixes to problems. We should look to some of the people who have been in the industry for a long time. That is not the politicians. I guess politicians, if they have one fault, try to get involved in things that are beyond their expertise, and the worst part is they often come across and try to say they know more than some of the people who have been involved in it.

1520

So it is with this bill. At a time when the people of this province are mistrusting of politicians and the political process and parties, when it comes to energy and trying to encourage more confidence in the system by moving more of the responsibility to elected officials, the government is indeed hurting the confidence out there.

I think this goes to the root of some of the scepticism that is out there, that this government comes in and the first thing it does is attempt to tell the people at Ontario Hydro what is best for the people of Ontario. If you ask the average person, "Who would you like to make the decisions on your energy future?"—and let's be blunt about it, we are not talking about something long-term where if we do not make the right decisions we may have the lights dimmed for a little while; we potentially could have serious blackouts in Ontario as a result of decisions that are being made. They are critical decisions.

I as an individual would feel much more confident having the decisions made by some of the people who are the specialists in that area, some of the people who, when you look at the record of Ontario Hydro, have been with that corporation for many years. If anybody is to look at the statistics, he will know very clearly that people who work for Ontario Hydro stay there for long periods of time. It is ironic that we have a former Hydro employee coming up now as we speak about that, the fine member for Lanark-Renfrew.

The fact is that in Ontario Hydro we have a tremendous amount of expertise. It is not an area where there is a great deal of turnover. People come in there and progress and become knowledgeable, similar to my seatmate who got in there and now understands it more fully than, I suspect, anybody on that side of the House does or ever will. He has a tremendous grasp of what needs to be done and how it needs to be done. I was interested in listening to his comments as a former employee on exactly what needs to be done.

As I reflect on it, the confidence of the people of this province rests on this minister's shoulder. I can say clearly that I am very pleased to have my seatmate, the member for Lanark-Renfrew, here to be able to keep this government on its toes, because he will be doing that continually. I hope the minister will get a chance to reflect on some of his comments as a man of a great deal of experience. It is not only people like the critic for the Conservative Party but indeed all the people at Ontario Hydro whom we should be listening to more than the government of the day, which looks at things from the short-term quick fix, "How am I going to get elected next time?"

In fact, the problem is that when the lights go out and there is no more safe supply of energy in this province, the people who have made the decisions will be long gone, well off into the night—and so they should. I think what is going to happen is that some of the decisions they make now, in this field more than any other, will not affect us till down the road a little. In fact, it probably will be a few years until the actions that are taken by this government start to ring through.

The problem with the public is that the government of the day, when the Conservative Party is back in power, will be the one that is going to have to clean up the mess from this government's decisions made way back on June 5, 1991. That is a challenge we look forward to. It is not just in the energy field; it is in a lot of fields that we will be there to clean up.

When my friend becomes Minister of Energy, I suspect there will be a great deal more confidence in this province, knowing we have somebody making the decisions who has had a background at Ontario Hydro and knows what is happening. Because it is very scary to have the situation we have now, where this government is making major fundamental decisions that will be affecting the business community, affecting all the jobs—unionized and non-unionized jobs—and all the people of this province with their energy demands. There has been, over the last little while, no regard for some of the fine people at Ontario Hydro who are making the decisions.

If we look at what this bill basically is, it has a fairly simple intent. The bill is an attempt by the Minister of Energy to exert more control over the operation of Ontario Hydro. As my friend and seatmate the member for Lanark-Renfrew has said, it is a dark, dark day when that happens here in the province. He was right. This is nothing but an attempt by the Minister of Energy to exert more control over the operation of Hydro.

At a time when people are sceptical about politicians and their political ability to make the right decisions on very simple issues, when it comes to the complex decisions that need to be made to ensure that the lights stay on in this House the people do not trust the Minister of Energy as much as they do the people right across the street down at Ontario Hydro.

With regard to some of the decisions that have happened over the last little while since the government came in, the people at Ontario Hydro, I think to their credit, have said: "We're not going to sit back and take it. We're going to make some moves to ensure we have control." I had the opportunity to meet the former chair speaking at, I believe, the Canadian Club. Some of the people at Oakville Hydro had put together a meeting with him to discuss some of the problems. At that time, we had a chance to chat on some of the directions of the government. I remember him talking. It was very early on, because it was probably right around this time last year, if memory serves me correctly. They were just getting into it with the new Premier. I think he had already had the meeting with them and they were just getting to know one another.

As I sit back and reflect on it a year later, if someone had told me a year ago that this chairman would be out and that we would be looking at Bill 118, I would have been absolutely and positively flabbergasted. To all those people who are out there saying, "This government has moved fairly slowly; it's consulting," I say that when it comes to bills like this the government knows how to move very quickly.

The ironic thing is that unfortunately it is not quickly in the right direction and it is not what the people of this province want. We have very little input from some of the fine people of Ontario Hydro. We have a Minister of Energy taking over from the previous minister, who says that he now will be making the decisions. Quite frankly—and no reflection on the minister's ability—to have political people who are elected making decisions on the energy that is crucial to this province is a very scary thought indeed.

I notice the former Minister of Energy has come in. Again, it is no reflection on the individuals, because they have some talents in different areas, but when it comes to something as fundamental as the decisions that need to be done in the critical areas of energy, then I think most people of this province would say: "Thank you very much, politicians. Stay out of it and leave it to the people who have the better expertise to do that."

Because when it comes right down to it, a lot of the decisions that are made in this ministry are not even made by the minister. They are political decisions made by some of their assistants. Again, that is no reflection on the former minister, the member for Peterborough, or the present minister, but the fact is that fundamental decisions are being made in this province by people who are unqualified.

Instead of recognizing that and saying, "What we should be doing is trying to get more expertise"—it is going to be critical enough to make the right decisions. It is going to be tough enough to be able to meet the challenges with the most qualified and best minds of the men and women who work right across the street. Even if we did that and listened to some of those people who have years and years of expertise, it is still going to be very difficult to meet the demands as the province grows, as our demands grow and as the economy hopefully expands over the next few years. It is going to be interesting to see exactly what direction this government takes.

Maybe as a result of some of the things, we are not going to need as much energy. Some of the statistics that are out there today and the one we heard today about industry wanting to leave are very clearly the result of some of the policies of this government. Instead of recognizing that and saying, "At least in the field of energy we will leave it up to Ontario Hydro and to the experts who have many years of expertise," they just reinforce what people are saying about these people, that they do not care as much for long-term planning as they do short-term fixes.

Essentially what happened with this bill is that the government got in a fight with Ontario Hydro of the day, and as often happens in fights like that the rhetoric got moved up. Ontario Hydro said: "No, we're fighting for the people. We want a long-term secure supply of energy in this province, so we are going to do what is right." To those people I tip my hat and say, "Congratulations to you." That is what the people want. They want them to be able to stand up to politicians, because politicians need to know very clearly that they are going to be challenged on issues.

1530

But what happens as a result of some of the challenges is that the government of the day notches it up with this bill and says: "Okay, we're having a little bit of a problem with you. You're the ones who are kicking up some of the problems and embarrassing this government." It is ironic that it will embarrass them more by taking over control, which is what this bill does. When the lights go out, they are going to be extremely embarrassed by what happens in this province.

The rhetoric was moved up and lo and behold along came Bill 118, which will allow the Minister of Energy to issue policy initiatives to direct Ontario Hydro on what should be done in this province. When we talk about the hands-off approach and staying separate, between the elected officials and Ontario Hydro, the people want Ontario Hydro to make the right decisions. To all those people who went out on a bit of a limb—I guess they did, because some of them will be moving on—I think at the end of the day the people of the province will say, "They tried their best." As a result, this bill's coming in will be, as my friends from Oakville Hydro say, very significant. It is very scary to them.

The feuding that went on—I guess it was around last November—started with the speech from the throne. Instead of sitting down and consulting with the people at Ontario Hydro and saying, "This is what needs to be done"—in fact, in the past it has been the policy of the governments to do that. There have been more studies about what needs to be done for long-term viability of energy in this province than probably needed to be done, so they were all there.

Instead of trying to implement some of the solutions that were there, this government of the day decided to turn things around and change directions. When the former Hydro chairman left last March, I certainly would have loved to be a fly on the wall during the discussions between the Minister of Energy of the day and the former chairman.

Then we had the new chairperson come in. He came in and took over and moved very quickly in trying to get Ontario Hydro to change what is happening.

When we had our discussions with the people at Oakville Hydro, they said one of the things they wanted was for us to take a look at what some of the people from the Municipal Electric Association are saying. Of course, as the minister will know, they put together a very detailed brief on some of their ideas and concerns. That particular group is made up of some of the stakeholders who have literally generations of experience in this field. They are concerned about where this government is heading with this bill. I think as we reflect on some of the comments they feel are necessary at this time, we would do well to listen to some of the concerns.

Ultimately, I guess, at the end of the day the politicians will be the ones who will take the heat for the decisions. I am certainly not advocating that we listen to everybody all the time, but there are some very valid points that are being made by some of the groups like the Municipal Electric Association. As most of the members will know, they did a fairly detailed brief of what they see in this bill.

When I read it, very clearly I think their first line says it all. In the detailed brief that they put together, I think fairly quickly, they call the bill a flawed piece of legislation. They say—I agree with this—it will set a dangerous precedent and has the potential to turn electrical bills into a new tax grab by the provincial government.

In a day and age when we are a little bit cynical about politicians and the political process, instead of the government's coming out to the people of the province and saying, "Yes, we know we've got a deficit. We know it's at $10 billion and people are literally protesting in the street about it, but we still believe there are some changes that need to be done. Some of the programs that we want are going to cost some money and here is how we're going to do it," it attempts to hide some of the figures and some of the costs, buried in Ontario Hydro.

That is not the only area it is done. When we look at and get a chance to see some of the books, with things like the unfunded liability of the Workers' Compensation Board and some of the other costs, the fact of the matter is that this province is in worse financial shape than most people even realize with the big deficit as it is. I do not want to scare anybody, but when members get a chance to look at it and see where some of the problems are, it is even scarier.

That is essentially what some of the people in the field feel this government is attempting to do. As many of us know, Ontario has had a long-standing policy of power at cost. It is a policy that has worked very successfully and allowed the corporation and the people of Ontario to plan for the long term. That is really what we are talking about: long-term planning. Unfortunately in this day and age most politicians look at the short term and think more about the next election than they do about the next generation.

This long-standing principle will be changed, as I read the bill. There is no doubt it will force rates up. It not only will result in economic hardship for Ontario residents and businesses but will also discourage the much-needed growth. With all the factors that we heard business being concerned about today, this bill will do nothing to alleviate them. When people get a chance to really understand where this government is headed and what direction it is going with this, I think it will make them even more concerned than they already are. That is hard to believe in this day and age, because the confidence factor in this government is so low as it is.

One of the reasons we have been successful is that we have been able to plan for the future and we have been allowed to have power at cost in the province. I think it should be very much concern to everyone. There is no one who does not at some point in time consume some of the energy needs that are met by the province, so it will be one of the big, fundamental concerns of people over the next little while at a time when because of the high tax situation, it is more expensive to live in Ontario.

I guess now we go well into August, if you include the deficit, to pay taxes in this province. On top of that, the consumer bills, some of the things you pay for like energy costs, will be going up as a direct result of some of the changes in this bill. I do not think that is fair to the people of the province who have always counted on this special relationship of having power at cost.

Bill 118 changes the fundamental relationship between the provincial government and Ontario Hydro. There will be more government involvement at a time and a point in our history when many of the crown corporations are trying to be more decentralized and to move away from government control, certainly at the federal level, where they have attempted to say, "No, we're going to let the people with the expertise make some of the decisions."

That is probably as a result of some of the modern management techniques that are now prevalent, the decentralized approach where you try to get the decisions down at the lower level where the people who are best able to do it make the decision. That is happening right across this province, on the shop floor at the Ford Motor Co in Ontario, where they are listening more to the people and not making decisions at the head offices. That is the same for the small butcher shops that are out there that have people working for them. The decisions about how to operate are being made closer to the actual people making the decisions.

Here we are: all the modern management techniques that are out there and have been talked about for many generations, whether they be by the Peter Druckers or the Chester Barnards; all these techniques about decentralizing control. But when it comes to government, we do the reverse.

I think in this day and age there are not too many people who do not know that the old ways of doing things are out, some of the techniques that have worked in the past with regard to management and management style and management philosophy. Now people are learning very clearly at an earlier point in their career how to properly analyse situations, how to take corrective action, how to implement solutions and how to sustain them. That is happening on every shop floor right across this province by the well-run progressive companies out there.

1540

It was interesting that yesterday as we met with some of the people in the Ministry of Industry, Trade and Technology over the estimates, they actually put on some of the management programs that are out there for companies to help them worry about quality, to be more efficient and to look at their operations. Of course, you know what happens when you do that: The people become more involved. It goes right back to the fundamental principle of enjoying your job more. There were the old days of, "You go do this and report back to me in 15 minutes," and, "Here's how you do it; come back and then I'll kick you if you don't do it right." When it comes to the shop floor, when it comes to the businesses, progressive businesses are taking a different approach.

When it comes to government, though, we are centralizing everything. We are saying, "No, sorry." I hate to think how many years the employees with experience at Ontario Hydro would be there. Instead of saying, "No, you people have an idea," and "Yes, we are going to set the policy directive because it is an important function, but you people are going to be able to make the decisions," we try and bring it back into the government of the day. Regardless of the political stripe or which party it is, I think the people of this province believe it should be done closer to the source.

Here we have a government that comes in and says, "We are listening, we care and we have met with more business people than anybody else." I think the Treasurer said that this morning. At a time when people are being a little more decentralized in their philosophy, we go and do the exact opposite.

I have had a chance to have some very good discussions with some of the people on the government side when they were talking, and I think back to some of the discussions we had about getting more involved. I am thinking of the member for Chatham-Kent talking about more involvement. He was one of the representatives with the union. At a time when we are talking about doing that and getting more labour involvement with business and so on, when it comes to the government of the day, it is trying to centralize more control into the hands of the people who are least able to make the decisions.

I think that is what concerns me more than anything else with this piece of legislation. It is ironic that at a time when we are championing more involvement with people and on the one hand saying, "We are listening," on the other hand we are taking more powers back to us. As I look at it, I think that is more of a scare to me than any of the actual pieces of legislation, because it goes to the fundamental principle of this government: They believe very clearly they can make decisions better than some of the people across the road.

Bill 118 changes Hydro's mandate to include anything the government says. Regardless of what the programs would be, this government will, through the actions of this bill, allow it to have more control over what is happening. Some of the provisions are of concern to some of the people. As I flip through it and look at some of the sections, section 2 of the bill, subsection 9a(1), permits the government to issue binding policy directives to Ontario Hydro on any matter and basically says that it has, if I can use the term, carte blanche to do whatever it wants. At a time when we are talking about consulting and having more involvement from the people at the lower levels, it introduces this section of legislation which basically says: "No, that is not the way it can be done. This government will have final authority."

Also, section 6 of the bill will allow the government to change Ontario Hydro's mandate by decree. Regardless of whether they have confidence in the present minister, the past minister or any future ministers who might come along, the people of this province say they are concerned about anybody with that much knowledge having the ability to make the decisions. Quite frankly, I think that this comes to the centre of it, and I hope that other pieces of legislation will not come in other areas where the government of the day says it believes it has more control. As I pointed out earlier, the modern management techniques and the progress of the 1990s and all the things that some of the members opposite champion should be to get more involvement, not less.

One of the groups that is concerned, the Municipal Electric Association, has about 312 municipal electrical utilities representing about 75% of the electrical consumers in this province. I would encourage the minister and the parliamentary assistant and the former minister, who is here listening intently to my every word, to be able to point that out to the present minister, because I suspect that the parliamentary assistant has a great deal of influence with the present minister and we will use some of the year's experience of the member for Peterborough in passing that on to the minister. I hope they would be considered very seriously and, if this minister decides not to implement some of the things that have been recommended by some of the people like the Municipal Electric Association, he would say very clearly why not.

I personally would like to see them go through point by point in this Legislature in conjunction with all the people here, and if they are not going to proceed with some of the changes that have been asked for by some of these organizations, they should explain to us very clearly why not. I think they owe that to the people representing 75% of the consumers.

The association has worked hard for many years and, like the rest of the people of this province, it believes in the two long-standing principles that I think are fundamental to this whole question. That is that public power should be power at cost. To put it simply, the Municipal Electric Association believes in a system of municipal public utilities that will provide a safe, reliable supply of electrical power to the people of Ontario, the consumers, the businesses and the people using it. They are the ones who pay the rates based on the actual cost of producing the power, not as a result of some of the other programs that may be put in there.

I think, regardless of their political stripe, people are saying they do not want any more government involvement. As we sit back and reflect on what some of those changes will be, and I know the government's office has said it is not going to change that much—it is there but we are not going to use it—I say the public does not buy that. They know very clearly if the power is there, they are trying to grab the power for one reason and one reason only, because they would like to exercise the power. I think that is what is going to scare a lot of the people of the province.

The brief that came from some of the people in the Municipal Electric Association was an attempt to try to be constructive, to explain how the bill will influence and change the concept of power in Ontario, and I hope the members opposite will take a hard look at it. In this day and age, we need to be aboveboard and clear in our intentions because we do not want to see any taxation or any programs that are hidden go through the electrical bill.

Most people, when they see the hydro bills coming in, do not understand where the costs originate from, how all the costs are entailed or what the decisions are. They want to know something very, very plain. They want to know there is going to be a supply of power in this province and that they will be getting it at a reasonable cost, which is a cost that is not inflated by any other programs of the government.

If the government is going to do that, it should put it into the established programs that are there, start a new fund, whatever it wants to do and at least allow the people of this province to know exactly what it is doing. Do not hide it in electrical bills. That is why a lot of people are very concerned about this piece of legislation.

The act goes back for many, many years. We have been very well served. Changes have come about over the last little while, but the original intent was to really form a partnership between the municipalities in order to pay for some of the portions of the services rendered. Again, what we are saying is that in order to be successful and to have the supply of energy that is needed in the future, we need to have an era of co-operation, not confrontation.

Unfortunately, that is what this piece of legislation does. It does not do anything to alleviate the fears that are out there that when push comes to shove, this government will do whatever it needs to do in order to enact its agenda. I think that is a sad state.

1550

Most of the cost of Ontario Hydro has not been borne by the Ontario government. The electric utilities and the electric customers have, over the years, had a very, very prominent role in some of the decision-making process, and with some of the changes that are proposed here, that fundamental principle will change.

Members who have looked through it will know that Bill 118 contains about 11 sections, and three of them combine to fundamentally change the way that Ontario Hydro works. I think those three sections are very significant because they really do combine to fundamentally change the way Ontario Hydro works.

The people of this province and the members who may not have read this bill should know very clearly that this piece of legislation changes it fundamentally. We are not talking about a small cleanup piece of legislation here. It is going to change it fundamentally, and when you get into it and look into much of the detail—I will not spend too much time going through all of it today, but I would encourage some of the members to look at it, because when we talk about fundamentally changing something, I hope that all sides and all issues will be heard. Some of the points that have been made by the people at Oakville Hydro, the people from the Municipal Electric Association, should in fact and in deed be a part of the consultation process that is out there.

Some of the sections that concern a lot of the people and that I would encourage the members to look at very clearly are section 2 of the bill, section 9a of the current act, which was added to create the policy statement outlined. It is replaced with the following, and I will read it for the members who might not have had a chance:

“9a(1) The minister may issue policy directives that have been approved by the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

“(2) Before issuing a policy directive, the minister shall consult the board with respect to the content and effect of the directive on the corporation.

“(3) The directors shall ensure that policy directives are implemented promptly and efficiently.”

It is interesting to note what they mean by “promptly and efficiently.” With the wording in that, when I saw it for the first time, I thought when the government of the day snaps its fingers, the directors will have to act promptly, so it is interesting. Although they will consult, they also say promptly, and so the consulting process may be lost.

“(4) A director is not accountable for any consequences arising from the implementation of a policy directive under subsection (3) if he or she acted honestly and in good faith in relation to its implementation.

“(5) The board shall report to the minister whenever it exercises a power or performs a duty to which a policy directive relates.”

Again, where we had in the past a hands-off attitude towards it, the government wants to know what is happening.

They want to be continually looking over the shoulders of the people at Ontario Hydro to make sure that they are doing exactly what the government wants. As a result, what we may see instead of the long-standing practice of having power at cost and having an ample supply of power to meet the needs of this province, for whatever reason, whether it be through mistake or misguided policies or to be able to appeal to a particular special interest group, whatever the numerous reasons that may be out there, is that the government of the day may enact and direct Ontario Hydro to do something that really may not be in the best interests of Ontario Hydro and ultimately in the best interests of the people of Ontario.

I think that is who we are concerned about more than anybody else. In spite of the fact that we are obviously concerned about the employees who are now going to feel they do not have much input into what is being done, the real people I think we have to be worried about are the consumers, the people of this province who have been well served by Ontario Hydro.

This part of the bill, subsections 9a(1), (2), (3), (4), (5), means a provincial government can essentially issue policy directives that are binding on Ontario Hydro and they must be implemented.

It goes on to say that the Ontario Hydro board of directors, who are supposed to act in the financial interests of the corporation, will not be held responsible if the policy directives that are forced on them turn out to be not in the corporation's financial interest, and that is something that has been different from every other corporation.

As a director, supposedly what you are supposed to do is look after the interests of the corporation because if that prospers and flourishes, then in turn you make sure that your customers are happy, your suppliers are happy, the banks are happy, your employees are happy. Everybody is happy if the directors act in the corporation's interests.

I think that is one of the problems with this government. It had somehow thought that people at the top—in terms of the top I mean some of the directors—would not be acting in the interests of some of the people, whether they be the customers or the people working there. But very clearly, as a director, if you have the corporation's interests at the forefront, that is what will help the employees and ultimately your customers. I think we have learned something very clearly. If a corporation's financial house is not in order, then the people that suffer are the employees when that company goes out of business or cannot meet the bills. We have seen too much of that in this province.

It is kind of ironic that we are asking a government to become more involved in the financial interests of Ontario Hydro at a time when it cannot even get its own house in order. Some of us in the province would feel a little bit better if we thought that this government had the ability to manage properly, but as we saw through its management of all the things, whether it be the bills that were introduced going back or I think more fundamentally the budget and the financial matters—here they are saying, “We're going to have more control over Ontario Hydro,” yet when we look at what they have done with the province, they have thrown the province into bankruptcy in one short year."

We all know the statistics. In four years they are going to double the debt, but here they say: "Trust us with this. We are bad managers, yes. We're going to double in four years the accumulated deficit that the province had through its entire history and we're going to run up the biggest deficit in the history of the province, in the history of this country. But when it comes to Ontario Hydro, trust us because we're good managers." I think the credibility is very far stretched.

If this had happened a year ago, even before the budget and the fiascos and the mismanagement of everything from the oath to the Queen and some of the scandals that have been out there, then I think the people might even have been at that time willing to say, "Well, maybe they can manage it," but when they see one year later what this government has done in terms of being able to manage, then they are very sceptical.

Of course, people will remember what I said yesterday in my statement about the Minister of Community and Social Services, where we could not even get a letter to the minister to get an appointment. Three letters were lost. Here we are, in a ministry as important as that, which I guess has, combined with Health, well over half the spending in the province and we cannot even get things into the minister's office for the minister to get a simple reply out so people will know what the heck is going on. Yet they say: "But when it comes to Ontario Hydro we want more control. Trust us, because we're good managers."

I say very clearly the people of this province are sceptical and I suspect even their own people are very sceptical about the ability of this government to manage. When they came in, there was a wait-and-see attitude on some of the concerns out there for the management of this province by this government. Very clearly now that has changed and people are saying, "These people are having difficulty managing their own ministries, their own government, and we do not want them more involved through policy directives in Ontario Hydro." I think that is why people in the province are more scared of this piece of legislation.

The question I think everybody asks about this is, "If you're not going to use it, then why put it in there?" Very clearly the government wants to be able to force Hydro to carry out any of the government's directives, no matter what they are and whether they are financially sound or not. When the minister says "jump," Ontario Hydro will say, "How high?"

I hope that through all this the fine people at Ontario Hydro will continue to do what they believe is in the best interests of the people and not in the best interests of a political party and the government of the day, which may not be around four years from now anyway. I do not know how we can alleviate some of the fears and concerns of those who are working for Ontario Hydro, but very clearly this government is going to act and that is why it wants this in.

1600

Further, I think this section, if one were to reflect upon it, could lead the Hydro directors to refuse to act on anything that is not decreed through a policy directive, in order to protect themselves from liability. We have introduced confusion into it. Instead of worrying about long-term planning and what needs to be done to secure long-term viability of energy in this province, we now have directors, and the people at Hydro are questioning exactly what this government is up to. The situation we are facing nowadays is adding to the confusion out there and I suspect that is going to create in this province some very serious problems.

Section 6 of the bill adds a new section. For those members who have not read it, I will read it:

"56ba(1) The purposes and business of the corporation include the objectives set out in any policy directive issued under subsection 9a(1)." That, I talked about.

"(2) Compliance with a policy directive shall be considered to be in the best interests of the corporation.

"(3) The corporation may do such things as in its opinion are necessary, usual or incidental to the furtherance of the objectives set out in the policy directive."

Very clearly, if members read through that and try to go through it, it essentially says that the government of the day will have the final decision and will decide how it is going to act. In a day and age when we are talking about more decentralized control, when the people closer to the action should be making the decision, this piece of legislation is directly fundamental to what most of the modern and progressive businesses and companies and governments of the day are doing.

This section of Bill 118 changes Hydro's mandate to include anything the government forces Hydro to do under a policy directive, meaning that Hydro's mandate would be determined by government decree, not by its relationship to the original objective of the act, the supply of electricity. It also repeats the protection of Hydro directors from liability.

Ontario Hydro should only be able to exercise power and undertake duties that are authorized by legislation. However, this section of Bill 118 would mean that the essence of the Power Corporation Act can be changed by policy directive rather than through the democratic process of legislative debate and amendment. Any time that particular change comes in, there will be a great deal of debate from myself, because I think it is fundamental to the principles.

That touches on some of the other concerns that have been out there. I know my friend the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology, who has come in, talked about that at length, with the regulations during some of the Police Services Act; also, as I mentioned a couple of times before, the member for Welland-Thorold.

The concern out there is that this sets a dangerous precedent in that it allows the government to bypass the safeguards built into the legislative process and to change Ontario Hydro's mandate by decree. As much as we sometimes get a little critical of how the legislative process slows down changes, the reason we have the process is that before action is taken there is a tremendous amount of consultation. That is why all the members were elected, to do whatever they can to ensure that points of view are heard, some of which I am outlining today.

This gets by that. This gets by and says: "No, we want to act in any manner we believe necessary. We are going to do that." I think some of the people who may be on the government side should be concerned about that, because somewhere along the line they are going to be on this side, and I think the fundamental principle of how we operate should be that the legislative process allows input from all the parties concerned.

When Bill 118 was introduced on June 5, the government said the provisions were similar to some of the provisions in the federal Financial Administration Act, and therefore it had a precedent. When members take a look at it, I do not believe that to be the case.

The government also indicated that the policy directive would only be issued in relation to energy conservation and demand-management programs. However, the current wording does not say this. I think if the public realizes one thing, it realizes that the government will exercise the largest amount of its authority whenever it deems necessary. On the one hand, the government cannot calm our fears and say, "Don't worry about it, we're not going to use it," because in so many instances that has not been the case.

Section 7 of Bill 118 amends section 75 of the current act, which deals with what Ontario Hydro can include in the cost of power to municipal electrical utilities. It amends this section by adding the following to what Hydro can do under subsection 9a(1):

"(ac) the cost of complying with a policy directive issued under subsection 9a(1)."

This part of Bill 118 simply means that the cost of the government policy directives will be borne by the cost of power through the rates we pay and through the rates that electrical consumers pay. That goes to the very fundamental principle which this changes, that power will be at cost. That is the section that says the cost of the government policies will be borne out in the cost of power through the rates you pay. That is where we should be concerned, particularly at a time when we know that the government of the day has difficulty managing its affairs.

When we add all these critical sections up, section 2, section 6 and section 7 of Bill 118 combined will fundamentally change the way Hydro does business and destroy the principle of power at cost. That is what people are concerned about, that it changes the very way Hydro does business and it destroys the principle of power at cost. If these sections become law, Ontario Hydro and the consumers, through their electricity bills, will become the provincial government's new source of taxation revenue. Anything the government wants to do, any program it deems necessary in terms of regional development and in terms of some of the social programs, it can order Hydro to do, and you pay for it through your electricity bill.

As I said earlier, what I think should happen, in my estimation, is that regardless of what the government does, it should do it through Ontario Hydro—or in fact any other government agency or board. It should be aboveboard, it should be honest with the people, and I would hope this would happen.

Under Bill 118, anything the government deems necessary it can order Hydro to do. The poor people on the board who historically would have been able to say, "No, we're not going to do that because it isn't within the financial interests of the corporation to do that," can no longer say no. That is why they take the liability out from them. They say, "Do it, but don't worry, you're not going to be held responsible." In a day and age when people are saying they want more responsibility from their elected officials, from the people running the companies and from their fellow workers, we are in fact saying: "Take that away. You won't have any responsibility for your actions. Just rubber-stamp it through. You're not going to be hurt through any of the liability." I think that is why they did it. Very clearly, if they did not, there would not be anybody who would be interested in serving on the board, although I suspect that anybody who has to operate under this is going to feel very constrained by the actions of this government.

It may be used for extreme cases; it may be used in simple cases. It may be used once a year; it may be used a hundred times a year. That we do not know. Only time will tell, but the people of this province should be very concerned that indeed it is in there. The government of the day can use the long arm of Ontario Hydro to implement anything by issuing an order in council stating that Hydro would be authorized to do anything it deems necessary. It would have nothing to do with the supply of electricity, but they could do it. One of the concerns people have is that this exercise of great power could be used by a government for something other than ensuring that we have a safe supply of energy in the province.

There are some changes that I think will be proposed, and some people have heard the member for Lanark-Renfrew talk about them. I would encourage the members opposite and the government of the day to listen to some of the changes that have been proposed, because there are some very key ones. As opposition parties, we look at a piece of legislation that has some problems and attempt to add some things to make it better and take some things out that make it better. This bill certainly needs a great deal of work. I hope the members opposite and the government of the day will be listening. They talk about wanting to have more involvement from the opposition parties, and it will be there.

In this case, we not only have an expert in the field of energy as a critic and as a politician—and he will point out some of the safeguards—but we also have somebody who knows first hand. He was on the front line. He has served the people through Ontario Hydro and knows through contacts what needs to be done. He is the one who has had to face customers, he is the one who has had to face employees, and this government of the day would do very well to listen to the member and his comments in terms of what he has suggested. If most of the members have not had a chance to listen, they should. In particular, the minister, who is new to the position and does not have much of a background in this field, would do very well to listen to the member for Lanark-Renfrew, as well as the parliamentary assistant, the member who may know a little bit more about it after the year in power.

1610

I believe the debate that has gone on in this Legislature is important. I am concerned any time a government wants to act quickly. To quietly pass this piece of legislation—I can say the people at Oakville Hydro are on to them. I see my friend the member for Halton North has come back now. He was supposed to be at the meeting with the people from Oakville Hydro. We had that meeting and, as I mentioned earlier, when he was not here, it had to be cancelled. Hopefully, we will get a chance to hear the input and the member will be able to take that back or, more important, be able to defend the government's position if he does not. The people who were in that meeting were some of the people who have worked hard, some of the people who have run for the commissions. These are people who have had to put their seat on the line in the past when it comes to what they have done. As we get together with some of the members in our particular area, I would encourage some of the discussions to come out.

The members on the government side owe it to some of the people in their communities to explain very clearly why they are proceeding with this piece of legislation. I will be the first to sit and listen. I will help the member for Halton North if the people get too excited over this piece of legislation, because they are upset and angry. I will be there as support for him and any of the other government members who might need it. Very clearly, the people are on to them with this piece of legislation, and in this day and age the people who are going to be affected, the people who are working in the area, who have the expertise, are the ones who are going to be standing up and pointing out some of the flaws in this piece of legislation.

Ultimately, it is those people who are going to have the responsibility, because in this day and age when most of the other people are so concerned about some of the other pieces of legislation that affect them fundamentally, day in and day out, they are going to rely on the long-term decisions being made by the people who are associated in this field.

I have added a few points that I think would be helpful on that. I did have a little more, but I think those will be some constructive comments.

The last point I would like to make is that there is a tremendous number of people out there who know the situation, who are concerned about this bill. I would hope the government of the day will listen, because the future of the energy supplies of this province for consumers and for business is very critical. We as legislators should take our responsibility, as we all do, very critically on this piece of legislation, because what we do will have a long-term effect on consumers and business and ultimately in terms of jobs for the people of Ontario.

Mr Huguet: I listened with interest to the member for Oakville South, particularly to his comments around rate increases, current and future. I have to remind the member that the rate increase is really the result of decisions that were made in the past. More than half the rate increase is due to the nuclear program. The lower-than-forecast performance of the existing nuclear stations has increased Hydro's costs significantly.

Darlington alone accounts for about one quarter of the increase this year, and customers will face additional increases when the rest of Darlington is brought into service. Moreover, they will be paying for the $13-billion cost of Darlington over the next 40 years. The bill for past decisions must now be paid.

There is another point. In spite of the increases, Ontario's electricity customers face lower costs than customers in most other jurisdictions in North America. For example, the monthly average residential bill in Ontario is currently 29% below the average of other large North American electrical utilities. Even with the 11.8% increase for 1992, these bills are predicted to be 25% lower.

Ontario's industrial prices are also lower than US industrial prices. The government's goal, through its New Energy Directions, is to ensure that Hydro can keep future price increases as low as possible. Making customers more energy-efficient will also help lower customers' energy costs. The government has the ultimate authority to act in the public interest, and it will do so and ensure that the activities of Ontario Hydro are always in the best interests of the people of Ontario.

Mr McGuinty: I thank the parliamentary assistant for his statement and I thank the member for Oakville South for his contribution to the debate. One of the things that bothers me about this bill is the conclusion we have to draw, that the minister's conception of what power costs is somewhat different from my conception. Unfortunately his interpretation is purely subjective.

In particular we have to look at what happened at Elliot Lake. I keep coming back to this, but I think it is significant. Recently, as a result of a problem being experienced by the people of Elliot Lake, a problem which warranted consideration and attention from the government, this government directed Ontario Hydro to donate $65 million to the northern Ontario heritage fund. It did that at a time when the existing legislation was in place. That legislation provides that Hydro cannot be compelled to do anything unless it is within its ambit of providing power at cost, so somehow this donation is deemed to be within the ambit of providing power at cost.

If that is power at cost, then I say the ratepayers of this province have a great deal to fear from this bill because of the particular interpretation being put on it by this minister. Just so we know what happened to that $65 million, $10 million of it was directed to be used for job creation programs. Approximately another $10 million was used to pay off debts of two municipal councils, Elliot Lake and Blind River. Why are the Hydro ratepayers going to be saddled with those costs? Again, we are not against helping out the people of Elliot Lake in any way whatsoever, but that is an appropriate job for the government and not for Hydro.

Mr Stockwell: The first point I would like to make is that they cannot comprehend in the government that it was good business decisions and sound management that gave us a low rate, decisions put in place that guaranteed us a low rate. The changes the government is legislating today will not guarantee that low rate. It will not be able to stand up and claim superiority in pricing to neighbouring jurisdictions. That is the kind of intelligent and thoughtful process that went into the operation of this facility.

Second, they will pass on the cost and the cost will be passed on to the consumer and the manufacturer and it will cost them more to do business in this province, which is another incentive to leave. They are leaving at an alarming rate because they do not trust the government and do not believe it.

Third, this government is gutless and spineless. When they announced the cap for their 2,000 highest-paid employees yesterday, the gutless and spineless group that they are no longer accept responsibility for setting the chairman's and CEO's salary. Why? Because their dip friend wants to make $400,000 a year and they did not want to kick him off. Rather than setting the record straight and holding down the cost to Hydro and setting his salary at a reasonable rate during these recessionary times, they passed it off to the board, which he chairs and of which he is CEO. If the government is going to defend the decision it made yesterday it should defend it for all the bureaucrats, not just the people who do not happen to be NDP friends and affiliates.

1620

Mr Duignan: I have listened with great interest to the rhetoric coming from across the floor here. What we are doing is nothing different from what they did when they were in power, except for some very basic differences. What they did was in closed session, informal policy decisions with senior management. Who were those people? I believe they were Tory bagmen. We are opening up the process to the taxpayers of this province, making Ontario Hydro more accountable to the people for things that government failed to do, and when they had an opportunity, they failed to do so too.

The Acting Speaker (Mr Villeneuve): We now have had four participants, which is the maximum we are allowed. The honourable member for Oakville South has two minutes to reply.

Mr Carr: I would have liked to hear the member for Etobicoke-Rexdale, but he will probably get a chance to give it to me. I say to my friend the member for Halton North, who as I mentioned earlier was supposed to be at the meeting with Oakville Hydro, that I hope he will defend—

Interjections.

The Acting Speaker: The honourable member for Oakville South has the floor.

Mr Carr: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker. I hope my friend the member for Halton North will be prepared to say that to people like those at Oakville Hydro. He will be at the meeting. I say to the members I hope he has as much enthusiasm, because when I have talked to those people they have had as much enthusiasm as he does. Unfortunately it was against the bill. As I said earlier, I would like to be there to see the goings-on.

I hope he will be prepared to defend the bill before the people who really know, because those are the people who deal with it day in and day out. When he gets a chance to face them and defend the position, I would like to be there. I will be there to see it because I do not believe he is going to be able to defend it before the people who really know. It is a little ironic that the opportunity to defend it was not taken.

If I had been the member on the government side, I think I would have refused to meet with some of the people as well. I say they have a responsibility. It is part of the tough part of being in government. I think the members opposite have not listened to some of the points we made today in terms of trying to be constructive on some of the ideas. The ironic thing is that day in and day out the Premier champions that we want to hear from the people. They have one of the finest members who knows more about this field, having worked in it day in and day out on the front lines and yet nobody listens to him. This is a sad day. I just hope for my kids' sake the lights do not go out because of this government.

The Acting Speaker: I must remind all members that interjections are out of order, particularly when they come from members who are not in their own seats. Further debate, the honourable member for Niagara Falls.

Ms Harrington: I think it is very important for several reasons for me, as the member representing Niagara Falls, to make some comments with regard to this proposed amendment to the Power Corporation Act. First of all, Hydro historically for many decades, since the turn of the century, has been an integral part of our city. Also in a historical context, in 1987 I ran against the Minister of Energy, Vince Kerrio, the then member for Niagara Falls, on several issues with regard to Hydro, the matter of whether Hydro was out of control in Ontario and the costs of building the Darlington nuclear station, which are now reflected in the rates this province is going to have to pay.

I would like to start with the importance of Hydro to the city of Niagara Falls. Everywhere you go in Niagara Falls you see evidence of Hydro, whether it is the change in the flow of the Welland River—locally we call it the Chippawa Creek—in a reverse direction to the canal, whether it is the huge canal that is dug right through the heart of our city or whether it is the power stations along the face of the gorge. Hydro is very much a part of our city and owns much property within the city.

Of course it has affected the environment of the city. It has also affected the economy of the city, as it has very much affected the economy of this whole province. It is an integral and very important part of our economic future as well as our past.

In the 1920s the Sir Adam Beck No 1 station was built. In the 1950s the tunnel was dug and also the canal through the city, and I believe 10,000 workers were imported to the city. I guess many of them stayed. It was a great influx of money and economy to our city.

Even from the beginning of this century the abundance of power at Niagara Falls has caused our industrial base to prosper there. We have many abrasives factories which go back almost to the turn of the century. Of course the future of all industry across Ontario, as well as Niagara Falls, is dependent upon a reliable source of power.

Right now the rates we pay in Ontario are less than comparable situations in the northern and central United States; 70% of the power we produce in Ontario is industrial or commercial power, 20% is residential and the other 10% is for farm use and other uses.

The reliability of that supply is most crucial to our future. I believe all the members as well as the general public know we are now facing a jump in the increase in the cost of power. We did last year, we are this year and possibly will be next year. By 1994 the rate should stabilize for the next 10 years.

There is one thing the previous speaker, the member for Oakville South, said which was correct, that we certainly must plan ahead. The increases we are facing right now are a direct result of the plans that were made by previous governments, and especially the cost of the Darlington nuclear power station. Just last night's Peterborough paper says, "Hydro is hiking its rates by just under 12%, or an average of $7 per residential customer as of January 1. More than half the rate increase will go to pay for the $13.5-billion Darlington nuclear generating station," so it is common knowledge that what we are reaping today is the result of these decisions that have been made by previous governments.

Besides that historical context, I would like to set this decision to go ahead with these amendments to the Power Corporation Act in the historical setting of this Legislature during the 1980s. Although I was not here during the 1980s I have some quotes, and these are directly from the Hansard of this chamber. I think this will give us a good idea of what has been going on.

First of all, I mentioned the previous Minister of Energy during the previous government was Mr Vincent Kerrio, MPP for Niagara Falls. This is what he said in 1983 when he was critic for Energy for the opposition party during the Conservative government of 42 years leading up to 1985: "Ontario Hydro is not only out of control. It is not only not accountable to this Legislature; it is not accountable to anyone."

The Liberal leader, Mr Peterson, quoted in the Toronto Star, said in 1983: "Ontario Hydro has been allowed to run out of control. It now has a larger debt than the government of Ontario."

At the same time as that article in the Toronto Star, Mr Peterson also said, "Ontario Hydro has been allowed to slip through the cracks of the legislative authority." That applies directly to what this government is now trying to do.

Let me continue. I like this quote because it is from another MPP from Niagara Falls. I hardly remember; this is before I even moved to Niagara Falls. Mr George Bukator said, back in 1969, "Hydro has become a monster that cannot be controlled by this Legislature."

I have a further quote from Patrick Reid, who was the Liberal finance critic. This is from 1982, and if one remembers back that far, when my children were small, we did go to see Star Wars. He said: "Star Wars must surely have been inspired by Ontario Hydro. I can think of no other empire with the ability to strike back at the public with such impunity."

Further, in 1983, David Peterson said, "Hydro must be held to account and the direction of the monolith changed so that it will be a servant of the people rather than the master of its own fate." That is what we are attempting to do.

Vince Kerrio, again in that same debate in 1983 in this House, said, "The thing that Hydro does to justify its existence is to have nearly as large a staff in public relations as the Ministry of Energy has to run its whole operation." That is the context of Ontario Hydro.

Now we have a quote from the current Premier with regard to the environmental policies of Ontario Hydro. This was from 1983 as well. He said, "Ontario Hydro's decision to renege on its earlier commitment to put in scrubbers has created a credibility problem for Ontario and for Canada among some congressmen in the United States."

The government obviously was concerned about environmental policy—the Conservative government at that time, I believe, certainly would be concerned about environmental policy—and was trying, as I understand from this quote, to get Ontario Hydro to put in scrubbers at one or more of its plants within Ontario. The lack of will of Ontario Hydro to do that was at that time causing Ontario's government and possibly even Canada's government to not be credible with environmental people in the United States and, from this quote, congressmen in certain states of the US.

In effect, if Ontario Hydro does not believe that environmental policy, or whatever policy it happens to be, is important to the government of Ontario, it does not seem to feel that it has to go along with the policy. This is exactly what the amendments we are looking at now are trying to do.

Vince Kerrio again has a quote, "Ontario Hydro could be more aptly described as the Ontario Energy Enterprise Corp, probably under the mandate of Empire Builders of America." Also, "Hydro has done a very good job of frightening the people of Ontario into letting it do anything with threats—otherwise, the lights will go out." I think we have heard that a couple of times from the previous speaker this afternoon. It is very easy to threaten that the lights will go out.

Mr Kerrio concludes by calling it "a giant bureaucracy grown beyond any kind of accountability." This was in 1983 when he was the critic calling for the government of the day to bring some accountability to Ontario Hydro.

One other person, Jim Taylor, former Minister of Energy—and this is from at time even previous to that, in 1978—said Hydro's internal bureaucracy is so tangled that "often the chairman of the board doesn't have the decision-making potential you might think he has."

So there is quite a history involved before these amendments were put forward.

Finally, I quote from the Liberal leader of the day, David Peterson, in 1983, "The high cost of Hydro's nuclear plant construction is jeopardizing the very financial soundness of this province."

The rates, I have just read from yesterday's paper, are going up across this province, and it is due to what

Mr Peterson had said way back in 1983, what the previous speaker, the member for Oakville South, has said: that we reap down the road, years down the road, the results of the decisions that are made by Ontario Hydro.

I have shown from quotes from this chamber that these decisions by Ontario Hydro have not been controlled—maybe I should not use that word—they have not been as closely tied to the policy of the Legislature as they should be.

In the period between 1985 and 1987, Mr Kerrio was the Minister of Energy in this province. When I spoke with him in 1987, and we spoke publicly, I said: “Mr Kerrio, these are your quotes, when you were the critic for Energy in this province, about trying to bring Ontario Hydro under control. What have you done?”

Between 1985 and 1987, there was no piece of legislation in this House that had to do with Ontario Hydro. There was no attempt to answer the charges that had been laid in this House that Ontario Hydro was out of control. I think it shows very clearly that the time has come for the will, the determination, to do something about this.

I was going to mention one other angle on this, and that is the Ontario Energy Board, which is a board of people who are to be a watchdog, an adviser, to Ontario Hydro. What kind of role have they had?

Back many years ago, in the early 1980s, the board actually recommended directly to Ontario Hydro that it lower its public relations costs. Of course, we want power at cost, but do we get power at cost? No, we get power at public relations costs, plus many other costs. The public relations costs in 1981 were $10 million. They escalated by 1983 to $30 million. So what kind of input, what kind of advice would Hydro take from the Ontario Energy Board? It certainly does not look like much.

We asked, as many people asked, that the Ontario Energy Board have some say in the rates that would be set for Ontario Hydro. But no, it is only an advisory board.

In 1987, Mr Kerrio, quoted in our Niagara Falls Review paper, said, “If the board was in power to set rates, it would increase them to pay for the debt, and I wouldn’t want to see that shock on the system.”

We have to pay the debts, and we are paying them now. We have to face the music years later for the decisions that have been made before us. Because Darlington went way over cost, because policy was made behind closed doors instead of in the public domain, that is why we have higher rates now. I believe anyone looking at this whole situation rationally would have to reach the same conclusion.

It is now evident that this government, the New Democratic government, is the only government that can and will and is determined to bring this giant monopoly under control and stop the empire-building which has been going on for quite some time.

The whole reason for doing this is to better serve the people of Ontario. This bill will make Ontario Hydro more open, more accountable to the people, and will bring policymaking to the public domain.

I would like to finish with one further comment. With regard to the actual wording of the amendments in the bill, this is very important, because the future supply of electricity in this province is so crucial to our future and our economic renewal that I think every phrase of this bill, of these amendments, should be examined in public. It is very important to hear from everybody involved, all of the stakeholders, whether they be industry or business, small or large, especially, I believe, the businesses in Niagara Falls, which depend so much on a reliable and cheap source of power, a competitive source of power. I think it is very important that we as a government make sure it gets out to committee, that we hear how this bill can possibly be improved, but certainly not take away from any of the basic thrusts of this bill, which have been so long in coming and which are so needed.

1640

Mr McGuinty: I enjoyed the member’s historical references to other members of this House who have levelled criticisms, many of them very legitimate, against Ontario Hydro.

I note also with interest that her references were coming from a book which I believe to be Larry Solomon’s book, a fellow from Energy Probe, called Power at What Cost?

Ms Harrington: I didn’t quote the book. I quoted only Hansard.

Mr McGuinty: That is fine, yes. I am not concerned with that.

I have a question for the member. If she has read through the book, the member will undoubtedly understand that Mr Solomon makes the argument that it does not matter if we change the players, that is, it does not matter if we put Hydro’s directors in charge of Hydro or if we put governments in charge of Hydro, because he does not have much faith in governments. His recommendation is that Ontario Hydro should be privatized. I would like the member’s opinion regarding that particular approach advocated by Mr Solomon. The member may be aware that in a number of jurisdictions throughout the world at present there is a trend towards privatization, and Ontario Hydro in some ways is a bit of a holdover from an earlier day. I wonder if I can get the member’s thoughts with respect to that particular approach.

I might indicate as an example, and I am coming back to Elliot Lake, that when we have given government an opportunity—and other governments have abused this power as well—to manipulate or to exert influence over Ontario Hydro, it has often been to the detriment of the ratepayers.

Mr Jordan: I would just like to talk for a minute on the phrase that is being used so commonly on the government side, that Ontario Hydro is out of control. What bothers me is that the legislation we are being asked to put in place does not indicate a solution to a problem, if in fact the problem existed.

What is the definition of a corporation being out of control? I cannot think of any utility or corporation or company that has been so investigated by all governments over the years. After a lot of money and time and contacts with personnel of the utility who have the answers for the government, after they do the study, then they find out that in fact the utility has been doing the job that the people of Ontario have expected it to do.

I certainly agree with the member that there are departments in certain areas in any corporation that need to be turned around, that the management needs to be looked at, that the size of that division maybe should be scaled down, and that corporations, like the government with its 92,000 employees, are reluctant to scale down the staff. With Ontario Hydro, it is for the simple reason that it has a lot of very highly skilled technical people who I can assure members are not going to stay in Ontario unless we have work for them.

Mr Mahoney: I am a little concerned about some of the comments. I think it is always helpful to go back in Hansard and read comments made in days past. Hydro traditionally has been I guess what you would refer to as the whipping boy of the Legislature.

There is, I think, a general agreement that there is some need to get Hydro under control. I question how this particular act is doing that, really, when you think that the total debt of the corporation of Ontario Hydro is about $30 billion and when you compare that to the debt of the province when we left office, somewhat unceremoniously, I might add, it was $39 billion for the entire province. It is somewhat startling.

I recall many members of the NDP when they were on this side of the House—Mr Speaker, I am sure you will recall as well—saying that when the government states its debt position, it should include the debt for Ontario Hydro, yet past governments have been reluctant to do that. I assume this government, since we have not had a statement on it, is changing its position in that matter as well as the many other areas where it has changed and is not prepared to include the debt of Hydro into its total financial picture.

This government is using Hydro as a tool, as an instrument of social policy. When you take a look at the fact that they are using the dollars available in Hydro to solve problems of other social concern, whether it be in Kapuskasing or in Elliot Lake, instead of funding that openly and honestly with the people through the government debt, they are using Hydro as an instrument to solve social policy issues. I do not think we are going to see major changes under this particular legislation, and I wish the government would look at the debt financing.

The Acting Speaker: We can have one more participant.

Mrs Y. O'Neill: The member for Niagara Falls says that tying policies of Ontario Hydro to policies of this province is a good thing. I feel that is a very broad statement. I feel it could even be a dangerous statement.

Ontario Hydro's responsibility is to provide power at cost. That is what its responsibility has been to this province.

The member continues to reiterate that this whole bill is going to make Ontario Hydro much more accountable. I did not hear her once in her remarks mention the people who are on the front line in Hydro in this province, and they are the members of the hydroelectric commissions of this province, who are well represented and who are democratically elected in many communities. Many of them will be renewing their commitment on November 12 this year.

These people are accountable day after day in their communities.

To say that bringing Hydro's policies in union with government policies is the only way to go in accountability is in my mind some kind of misrepresentation of how accountability and responsibility in the provision of energy in this province has traditionally been provided.

The Acting Speaker: The honourable member for Niagara Falls has two minutes to reply.

Ms Harrington: It is difficult to touch on all the points that have been raised. First of all, I want to say that I believe there is a general agreement somewhere down deep here between all three parties, both historically and now, that we want to improve the situation with Ontario Hydro. I believe it is up to those people as well as us and the public out there to ensure that we have the best amendments possible, and I am looking forward to members' participation in all the ins and outs and intricacies of this bill.

The first member asked the question about privatization which was raised by Mr Solomon. That is a very broad and deep theoretical question, but we believe—at least I speak for myself—that there are some things that are so important they should be in the public domain.

One example that comes to my mind because I am from Niagara Falls is the Niagara Parks Commission, which was established 100 years ago. People realized way back then that if we let the private sector just take over, you would have hot dog stands and wax museums right at the very brink of the falls. So government, that is, the Niagara Parks Commission, is now in charge because it is important to the public of this province. There are many other examples of that and I believe Ontario Hydro should be the part of a system of public ownership that it is.

1650

The question of social policy: I did not state in my remarks—maybe someone else did; I am not sure—that social concerns should be part of Ontario Hydro. I believe it is an economic tool. It always has been and it will be in the future. I do recognize the importance of our local elected utility commissions. They are very important and we believe they should be part of this control in Ontario.

Mrs Y. O'Neill: I rise this afternoon to take part in the debate on second reading of Bill 118. This bill presents this House with certain fundamental changes to the structure and mandate of Ontario Hydro, and many of us, particularly on this side, have pointed that out very clearly.

These changes, I believe, will be detrimental to the people of Ontario. I would like to take this opportunity to add my thoughts to those this House has already heard from many of my colleagues. The riding of Ottawa-Rideau, which I represent in this Legislature, contains areas within three of Ontario's cities: Ottawa, Nepean and Gloucester. Representatives from the hydroelectric commissions in all three of these cities, which make up the riding of Ottawa-Rideau, have contacted me, have come to my office personally, to show me the reasons they feel Bill 118 is a regressive step.

In addition, I have received a copy of the position paper drawn up by the Municipal Electric Association, which outlines in detail its concerns about the proposed legislation, some of which I feel have been addressed in the amendments we are about to discuss. The Municipal Electric Association represents 75% of the consumers in Ontario. That is the group I just mentioned in my remarks. For that reason alone, 75% of the consumers being represented, I believe all and each of its statements, concerns, letters and telephone calls must be taken seriously.

The hydroelectric commissions of Ottawa, Nepean and Gloucester are unanimous. That is not always the case. They are unanimous in their objection to this government's attempt to meddle—the words “meddle” and “interfere” have been used by these informed people—and interfere with a long-standing mandate of Ontario Hydro, which is to supply power at cost to the citizens of this province. Compelling Ontario Hydro to comply congruently with government policy directives sets a very dangerous precedent in the relationship between Ontario Hydro and the government of Ontario—a unique step, but certainly not a progressive step.

As my colleagues have stated earlier in this debate, this directive power amounts to a very hidden, but again regressive form of taxation. This bill gives the NDP government the power to direct Ontario Hydro's spending on various matters of energy-related government policy. That is with the amendments. It was much more devastating before the amendments and the retraction made by the Minister of Energy in this House yesterday.

Here we have new directions on various matters of energy-related government policy. Bill 118 would restrict and limit the autonomy of Ontario Hydro to fund programs it believes to be in the best interests of Ontario's ratepayers. The first and foremost responsibility of hydroelectric commissions and Ontario Hydro is certainly their ratepayers.

The example of Elliot Lake is instructive here, and that is a recent example. The provision of financial assistance to that devastated community is, I think we can all agree, a most necessary function of government. This assistance, however, should properly have come from the Ontario taxpayer generally through the consolidated revenue fund and not directly from the Ontario Hydro ratepayer; a regressive tax, a hidden tax they did not know they were paying.

The Ontario Hydro consumer, both industrial—may I state that the industrial component certainly is very directly related to the recovery from the recession we all want to get out of—and residential, must use hydro. Many of them do not have any choice and they are going to pay disproportionately for regional economic subsidies, which are no doubt priorities for this government but which do not fall within the responsibility of Ontario Hydro.

There is a fundamental question of taxation policy, of revenue collection incorporated in this bill. It raises the question of whether this government recognizes the difference between regressive and progressive taxation. Certainly those of us who have listened to NDP members over the years have always been told that the taxation that has been in existence in this province has been regressive, that we want a more progressive form of taxation. To this date, I have not seen a change. I have seen regressive tax placed on regressive tax, and I mentioned that earlier in question period today.

Martin Montague has been chairman of Nepean Hydro for a long time. He is a very highly respected member of the community I represent. He is quoted in this week's Nepean Clarion: “The proposed changes to the Power Corporation Act will turn Ontario electricity bills into a new source of hidden taxation for the provincial government. This philosophy goes against the long-standing principle of power at cost and it must be strongly opposed.” Mr Montague has served his community on the hydro commission for 20 years. He knows of what he speaks. He goes on to say, “Hydro electricity bills will be higher in a time of economic hardship for Ontario residents and businesses and discourage much needed growth.” I remind the members Mr Montague is also a businessman in my community.

While Premier Rae says his economic goal is to be competitive in international markets, day after day, competitiveness seems not to be part of the intent of this government. High energy costs and a competitiveness spirit: they just do not gel. You just do not get people coming into a province when you have the highest energy costs and they are being directed by a government for purposes other than energy.

In a letter to me dated September 25, 1991, Mr Bisaillon, chairman of the Hydroelectric Commission of the City of Gloucester, said: “Under Bill 118, the provincial government would be able to issue policy directives that bypass the democratic legislative process,” and which “are binding on Ontario Hydro.... In addition, Bill 118 would force Ontario electricity consumers to pay for these policy directives through their rates”—the rates of the ratepayers of Ontario—“This is unacceptable,” says Mr Bisaillon, and I agree with this gentleman.

1700

This is not just a concern of eastern Ontario, Mr Speaker, although you know as well as I that this region has been particularly hard hit by the recession. Our leader and members of our caucus have had letters from all parts of the province expressing shock and outrage at the intention of this government to impose its policy objectives on Ontario Hydro ratepayers. This form of hidden tax grab—at its very best, a regressive tax—is particularly dangerous in that the government has no direct accountability to the ratepayers upon whom it is forcing higher and higher rates. Increases of 40% to 45% are projected over the next three years and may even be greater than that.

They are going to be tied to government policy that is now going on a $9.7-billion deficit, not knowing whether that is really going to be the final figure this year, let alone next year, a back-breaking increase of 40% to 45%. This whole policy and indeed Bill 118 itself have to be re-examined, should be resisted, at the very best reviewed. Hopefully this bill will be reconsidered further. Ontario cannot absorb costs of 40% to 45% in this time of recession and unemployment.

Ontario Hydro's chair, Marc Eliesen, announced on September 11 not only his salary but that Ontario Hydro rates for 1991 will be increased by 11.8%, and that was before Bill 118 had passed this Legislature. Indeed, it has not passed this Legislature. Thus this uncontrollable fire has already started. How much more can the beleaguered ratepayer pay next year, I ask again, when it is tied to government policy which has not got this budgetary process under any control? Certainly its forecasts are less than substantial.

The Treasurer is really calling the shots on Hydro rates and we have seen that the Treasurer has not been very successful in calling the shots on very much of the budget process to this point. "Spot on" means something different to this Treasurer than it does to me. We are talking here of an essential service, an essential part of every community and most people's homes, being priced beyond the ability of Ontario's businesses and Ontario ratepayers to pay.

These strongly voiced concerns that I have heard, and that no doubt members have heard, have been raised by the hydroelectric commissions all across this province and by many ratepayers across this province. Surely this government must see that this ill-conceived piece of legislation, which has already been changed drastically, is a mistake. It was changed drastically in the amendments presented in this House yesterday, before we really even began the debate, so it is ill-conceived. In fact, over the past few days we have seen this government backtrack on many important policies. On this one, the backtracking has been good. We hope they will continue to backtrack and withdraw the whole of the bill.

The criticism has been focused. It was immediate. Concerned Ontarians knew they were at risk. I urge this government again to withdraw Bill 118. I am delighted that the NDP government has agreed to public hearings. What I am not sure of and what I really hope will happen is that these will be full public hearings, that they will travel the province, because the communities across this province that will be affected are not within the very environs of the city of Toronto.

We as legislators have to go out to the communities to see how hard-pressed they are. We have to go to eastern and northern Ontario to see what these rate increases of 40% to 45% are going to do to these communities, to the businesses and residents of these communities. I ask again for full public hearings across this province for as long as it takes to hear the people who want to be heard on this bill. This bill deserves open and long debate, because we have to find a way to either withdraw it or make it more meaningful and accountable to the people of this province.

Legislation that removes the accountability, and this bill does that, of Ontario Hydro to provide hydro at cost, which again I reiterate is its main raison d'être, has to be more accurately looked at, more closely revisited, revised, recalled. The ratepayers of this province deserve nothing less. Indeed, all Ontarians will be affected by Bill 118, either in the price of the goods they buy or the services that are in their own homes. I ask this government and the government members to reconsider Bill 118, to continue to press for amendments to that bill and to ask for full public hearings across the province on this bill which is so important to this province.

Mr J. Wilson: In listening to the previous speaker from the Liberal Party, two thoughts struck me. One is that my message to the NDP government would be that even the Liberals, who tried to be all things to all people—and what we saw was mediocrity across the board—even they did not try to politicize Ontario Hydro. Shame on the government for its attempts with Bill 118 to politicize Ontario Hydro.

Second, I am a little confused. Perhaps when one of the members of the government has an opportunity to respond in the two-minute rebuttal, he or she could clarify the matter of whether the government has agreed to public hearings or not, because the Premier and his colleagues on the campaign trail themselves used to screech at every all-candidates meeting—I remember them very well—about how open the government would be and how accessible it would be.

That is striking, because I get calls every day to my office saying, "Bob won't talk to me on the phone." I say: "God, did you really believe the guy? You thought you were going to be able to pick up the phone and talk to the Premier of the province?" None the less, I have sent dozens of letters to the Premier's office saying: "Mr and Mrs So-and-so from my office have been attempting to talk to you, Premier. You've said in the campaign, you've said several times since, that you'd be available and absolutely open and accessible to the people of Ontario. Please give them a call." I have yet to hear back on the dozens of letters I have sent the poor guy, yet to hear back whether he has returned any of those calls.

The people of Ontario want input. This is extremely important legislation. In a few minutes I will have my opportunity to give the members some input on behalf of the residents of my riding and the concerned people in Ontario who have contacted my office. My good colleague the member for Lanark-Renfrew, our critic for Energy, has received dozens and dozens of letters from concerned people, and not just from individuals but from groups, from many public utilities commissions, that are very concerned about this bill.

Mr Mahoney: It is nice to have the Minister of the Environment here with us today.

I want to congratulate the member for Ottawa-Rideau on her speech and point out that when the members opposite get excited it really lends credence to our arguments because what we come to realize is that perhaps the people in the back benches of the New Democratic Party do not understand the hidden agenda of this government. The member is too much of a lady, I submit, to put forward the hidden agenda. However, I am not and I would be delighted to give the members my opinion, because the hidden agenda is very similar to the one in Environment.

The hidden agenda is that if the government drives the costs through the roof, people will conserve. If they conserve in energy, we will not need nuclear as an option. That is their hidden agenda.

1710

An hon member: There is nothing hidden.

Mr Mahoney: Sure it is. But there is a problem they do not understand: The reason we will not need nuclear, and indeed the reason we will not even need co-generation or any generation of additional hydro, is that this government is putting everybody out of business; nobody can afford this government. The members opposite do not think so. That is what is amazing. What is wrong with an 11.8% increase when they are paying the chairman $400,000 a year?

Does the government realize that what it is doing is making it absolutely impossible? There will be darkness in all the buildings in downtown Toronto and there will be darkness in the office buildings in Sault Ste Marie because there will be no businesses left to turn the lights on. The government should understand what it is doing: It is bankrupting the province.

Mr McGuinty: We like to engage in all kinds of esoteric and sometimes academic arguments in this House relating to a number of issues, including the energy issues, and we talk a great deal about supply and demand. But the people on the street, I can assure members, are not talking about supply and demand; they are talking about their hydro bills.

The question, of course, that I would have as a rate-payer is, what does Bill 118 do for my hydro bills? In the context within which we are operating, that is the crux of this matter. That particular context is this: We have been told by the new chair of Ontario Hydro that we are going to have increases, cumulative over the next three years, of 44% on our hydro bills. This past year our increase was 15.6%, taking into consideration GST. Next year, we have been told, it is going to be 11.8%.

What is this bill going to do for my hydro bill? Can I take comfort in knowing that this bill will ensure that my hydro bill will not be unduly elevated and, furthermore, will be controlled? I have to respond in only one particular way, and that is that the answer is—

Interjections.

The Acting Speaker: Order, please. The honourable member for Ottawa South has only two minutes.

Mr McGuinty: This bill will do nothing whatsoever to help control my hydro bill. In fact, given the track record of the government, given its propensity to involve Hydro in social policy initiatives, it only means one thing for my hydro bill, and that is that it is going to be further elevated. It will not be controlled. This bill will only exacerbate the problem, and I can take no comfort whatsoever as a hydro bill payer.

Mr Jordan: I would just like to comment on the input of my colleague the member for Ottawa-Rideau to this debate. I think she has brought out a very important factor. When we were talking about Ontario Hydro being out of control, she brought to the attention of the House that over 70% of the customers are covered by the Municipal Electric Association, which elects its membership every three years, the same as municipal councils, and these people monitor the operation of Ontario Hydro. It is done not only from this Legislature, it is done right from the grass roots, right up through to the chairman. The people have brought many concerns to the chairman and board of Ontario Hydro, and they have heeded them and they have acted.

The government cannot legislate good management. If they do not have good management, then they should hire it, but they cannot legislate management. They can issue all the directives they like, but they will not end up with an efficient, well-run utility.

This idea that we are going to have the power to direct Ontario Hydro and bypass this Legislature is going to do absolutely nothing for the people of Ontario and will do absolutely nothing for the cost of building future generation. It does not matter whether this government builds it in the next three years, but it is going to build it.

This thing of saying they are going to save 700 megawatts of energy is false. They are not going to save 700 megawatts of energy; they are going to transfer it into fossil fuels and put CO₂ into the air, and we will have far more problems than we will ever have from using nuclear energy.

The Acting Speaker: This terminates the debate. The honourable member for Ottawa-Rideau has two minutes to reply.

Mrs Y. O'Neill: I am very pleased that recognition of the Hydro commissioners has finally come to the floor of this House. These men and women who serve in our communities have done more for energy conservation in this province than any government. They are good managers, they are good communicators, and I have nothing but praise for the people who offer themselves in what is often a very humble position in the community but which is a very key position. Many of them get calls much more often than we realize. Whenever there is a storm, an ice storm in particular, these people are on the front lines, and they deserve our support.

I want to reiterate that tying Ontario Hydro's policies and decision-making to this government's policies and decision-making is dangerous, particularly when they are tied so closely to the decisions of the Treasurer and the decisions of the Premier in this government that has a $9.7-billion deficit this year.

Mr Mahoney: It is hard to say that, isn't it?

Mrs Y. O'Neill: It is hard for me to get out because it is hard for me to believe. It is a $9.7-billion deficit this year and we do not know what it will be next year.

We are asking ourselves to tie another agency's fiscal policies to a government policy that seems to be out of control, mismanaged. It has been changed within five months of its presentation to this House. That makes me very shaky about tying economic policies to a government that has not got an economic plan.

Energy costs are directly related to the recovery of this province. They certainly are related to the economic recovery of the commercial sector and to the recovery of many individuals who find the hydro bill is the thing that is breaking their backs.

The Acting Speaker: Further debate on Bill 118. The honourable member for Simcoe West.

Interjections.

Mr J. Wilson: I thank the NDP members. I know they always look forward to my speeches in this House because essentially they will learn something once again from the commonsense approach that I and my caucus colleagues on this side of the House take.

I am pleased to have the opportunity to join in this very important debate today. For one reason, it is a historic debate. It is a historic debate because the ladies and gentlemen who sit across from us, who form the government, have decided to implement socialism right in the heart of Ontario Hydro, and we are here to tell them that it is not a good idea.

The legislation we have before us, Bill 118, An Act to amend the Power Corporation Act, is significant for two other primary reasons. First, it will have profound and far-reaching consequences for Ontario Hydro and, second, it embodies the most critical faux pas this government continues to make; that is, this government continues to misinterpret its mandate when it won some 38% of the popular vote in the last election. While Ontario residents have given the NDP a mandate to govern, they did not surrender the NDP a blank cheque to implement its socialist agenda.

About 40 years ago, then British Prime Minister Winston Churchill—members of the government know who Winston Churchill was, do they not?

Mr Dadamo: Yes, I think we have heard of him.

Mr J. Wilson: They can read history. It is reassuring. I was not sure.

Winston Churchill, while touring the American Midwest, spoke of the Iron Curtain that was being drawn by the USSR across eastern Europe. Today, businesses and individuals in Ontario are coming face to face with the very same reality that Churchill spoke about four decades ago. It is amazing how history repeats itself when those who cannot read history and refuse to learn from history do not take the time to learn from history.

Bill 118 is one more act in a play designed by the NDP government to draw an iron curtain over economic growth in this province. Bill 118 is a shameless, senseless attempt by the government to control and politicize Ontario Hydro. This political coup comes at the worst possible time for a province attempting to lift itself from the throes of the economic recession. With Bill 118, the Premier and his merry band of business busters are once again short-circuiting the few remaining hopes held by industry and business that they can survive and prosper in this province.

1720

Bill 118 is not good legislation. It is self-serving, manipulative and ignores the economic realities that exist in Ontario, the economic realities that I and my colleagues on this side of the House try, day in and day out, to point out to this government, not what Marxist theory is, not what Stephen Lewis/Bob Rae socialist theory is, not the type of crap government members spewed at all-candidates meetings during the election, but realities—the men and women in this province who pay taxes, the highest-taxed jurisdiction in North America, the portables in our schoolyards, the lineups for health services. There are all kinds of issues—yesterday, nursing homes—that the government fails to address because it is spending time, wasting taxpayers' dollars, trying to politicize and implement a socialist agenda through Ontario Hydro, and I say shame.

Not only does this legislation signal a dark day for Ontario, but I fear that it blacks out any chance for economic recovery in this province. With Bill 118, the Premier and his government are in effect dimming the lights on the 18,868 Ontario workers who have been affected by layoffs and plant closures in the first eight months of this year. The government's House lights are on, but no one seems to be home for the thousands of people left unemployed by a recession that has seen unemployment rise in the second quarter of 1990 to 9.6%, when at the same time last year—the government may want to take note—the unemployment rate in Ontario stood at 5.4%. It was still a disgrace, but it was a heck of a lot better than the more than 9% we have now. For the past 12 months, this government's major economic initiative has been to criticize the federal agenda, while implementing social legislation that further distances this province from a full economic recovery.

Getting back to Bill 118, what does this legislation do? Bill 118 makes the chairperson of Ontario Hydro chief executive officer of the corporation, a point I will come back to, because it is important; Bill 118 increases the membership on the board of directors of Ontario Hydro from 17 to 22, another significant point, and Bill 118 allows the Minister of Energy to issue policy directives that would be binding on the corporation. There is the history on this bill, the unprecedented move by the Minister of Energy to grab power, as it were, unto himself, unto his cabinet colleagues, and dictate policy to Ontario Hydro that would be binding on the corporation.

Bill 118 allows Hydro to promote switching from electricity to fuels which, as my colleague the member for Lanark-Renfrew, our Energy critic for the Ontario PC Party, has pointed out, will cause greater pollution.

I note that my colleague the member for Wellington is over there trying to give the members some firsthand advice on how to get back on track. He is over there and I notice that he has been able to quiet down the government members so they can listen to my remarks, which I think are important and reflective of what real people out there—real people who are trying to create jobs and generate economic wealth, real people who pay taxes—are saying to the government.

They only got 38% of the vote. They should not fool themselves. They did not get a blank-cheque mandate, so I think they should be quiet for a few minutes and listen to what we have to say, because we think and we believe and we know we have some input. The Premier is always telling us he wants our input. The government members should listen; we are going to give them some input.

Most of us are aware of the tug of war that is being played out in the headlines of newspapers, pitting the NDP government versus Ontario Hydro. This tug of war is simply a skirmish to determine who should control the future of energy and energy policy in this province. In an effort to control Ontario Hydro, the Premier and his cabinet have installed an NDP political hack to run the largest corporation in Ontario. He has done this in the face of resistance from Ontario Hydro itself, which naturally feels that the corporation's chief executive officer should not have the initials NDP beside his name.

The question I put to this Legislature is this: Should the boss of Ontario Hydro be someone whose strength is loyalty to a political party? Should that be the criterion, solely? Or should it be someone who is uniquely qualified to guide one of Ontario's largest corporations at a critical time in the history of this province?

As has been pointed out by many members prior to myself here today and in the debate yesterday and the adjourned debate in days gone past, Mr Marc Eliesen, the CEO and chairman of Ontario Hydro, wants a salary of some $400,000. It is absolutely ridiculous. I do not know how the Premier, any of the cabinet, any member of the NDP could possibly try to justify that, not only to their own supporters, but to the people who reside in my riding and my colleagues' ridings who would not see that kind of money in years and years of accumulated salaries. It is absolutely astonishing that they would be contemplating giving the chair of Ontario Hydro, their political appointment, $400,000. I think that says something about socialism. I think that says something about socialists feeding at the trough, and I think it is disgraceful.

The importance of Ontario Hydro cannot be underscored enough. It is the cornerstone of our infrastructure, infrastructure that is vital to sustain and maintain our quality of life in this province. Decisions made by Ontario Hydro have profound and enduring consequences for all of us, for every citizen in the province. Simply stated, Ontario Hydro is too important to our society for a governing party like the NDP to strong-arm it. Its function is too critical for it to be imprisoned by a socialist ideology and pressured into performing the role of social welfare provider.

The decisions made by Ontario Hydro will echo for years to come, long after this government's mandate, and this government's decisions will have a profound effect on the future of this province. I know you are having a rough time governing. I know things have not been going well. I saw the Minister of Energy yesterday trying to paper over some of this bill and trying to make those people out there, such as the Municipal Electric Association, less worried about the thrust of this legislation. I know you are having a rough time, but to socialize Ontario Hydro and to pay its chair $400,000 is shameful, disgraceful, and if it were not so sad, it would be funny. I note that members opposite often take great humour in these things, but I do not think they are funny at all.

I know you are having such a rough time governing this province that you probably have figured out by now that you will not be the government next time. You probably have figured out you can do things like socialize Ontario Hydro and change its mandate and try to fool people that energy conservation alone is the ticket to the future, is the ticket to securing long-term energy for this province. You can try to fool the people of Ontario and you may get away with it for the next three or four years, you may get away with it before public opinion catches up with you.

But you will not be around when the blackouts occur, you will not be around when the brownouts occur. It will be the members of my caucus and our government at that time that will have to clean up not only your deficit mess, your fiscal disaster, but Ontario Hydro now, for goodness' sake, and we will probably have to give some huge severance package to the chair because he is making a $400,000-a-year salary.

Interjections.

Mr J. Wilson: Mr Speaker, it is unbelievably wild in here.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. It might assist the member for Simcoe West if he were to address his remarks to the Speaker.

1730

Mr J. Wilson: My pleasure, Mr Speaker.

It is all the more reason to invest the reins of Hydro with someone who is there for the long haul and not with someone who is unlikely to survive the demise of this government.

In order to further cement its hold on Ontario Hydro, this government has tabled Bill 118, which also proposes to increase the membership on the board of directors of Ontario Hydro from 17 to 22. More big government, the pay-them-more-money socialist philosophy.

Let's not fool ourselves. This government has flexed its patronage muscles in order to squeeze out any dissent from the policies it wants to implement through Ontario Hydro.

What is the cost to the taxpayer in order for the Premier to have his own way with Ontario Hydro, regardless of whether it is the best policy for Ontario? Because the NDP government needs to enlarge Ontario Hydro's board of directors for its own benefit, taxpayers will dig deeper for $25,000 each year, plus an extra $185 per meeting for each of the five additional board members.

It does not sound like a lot, but when members consider they are doing this in a number of areas, in a number of pieces of legislation, it certainly adds up to tremendous increases in administrative costs, not only to Ontario Hydro but of course ultimately to the one taxpayer of the province, each individual, who pays taxes. There is one set of pockets. These guys are tapping them dry. Surely this government should be more concerned with putting unemployed people back to work than lining the pockets of NDP hacks at the expense of the public.

Bill 118 is also the product of a feud between Hydro and the Premier and his cabinet. I would suggest that this government would be better served if it concentrated on getting Ontarians back to work and end its war with Ontario Hydro. It should withdraw this bill. It is the most sensible thing to do. It has heard that from thousands of concerned people across this province who are represented by the public utilities commissions, who have written to us, who have written to government members, who have written to the Premier, who have written to cabinet ministers. The government should withdraw the bill.

The people of Ontario could care less about who blinks first or whether the Premier thinks he is Gary Cooper. I quote from the May 21 editorial of the Kitchener-Waterloo Record. The member for Guelph, right next door, should be very interested in this. "Open confrontation between Ontario Hydro and the Ministry of Energy serves the interests of no one," something the government would do very well to remember.

I also feel the best interests of Ontarians will not be served by ramming through a bill that usurps the mandate of Ontario Hydro. Hydro's mandate has been and should continue to be the delivery of a secure, reliable power source at the lowest possible cost.

What is the principle of power at cost? We have heard it discussed a great deal today and in previous days in debate. I want to read from a backgrounder that was provided by the Municipal Electric Association, which I feel explains the principle of power at cost very succinctly and very clearly. Even the government should understand it.

"The principle of power at cost states that the people of Ontario should pay for the cost of generating and delivering electricity, and only those costs. Ontario has enjoyed the benefits of economic electrical energy since 1906, when Ontario Hydro was formed in response to the demand for public power at cost championed by 14 municipalities. This principle has significantly contributed to Ontario's economic growth. Electricity rates cover only the cost of operating the municipal utility.

"The principle of power at cost has been instrumental in attracting and retaining industry within this province. It has contributed to our quality of life and an economic standard of living that is hard to surpass."

That is from the backgrounder provided by Municipal Electric Association, which I think was very clear in explaining the power-at-cost principle.

This strong-arming bill is proof positive that this government wants to make Ontario Hydro an active agent of its socialist policies. Hydro has become the major financier for NDP policy in northern Ontario, and in particular Elliot Lake.

Also from the Municipal Electric Association, I want to quote what it has to say about the Elliot Lake community assistance package, which so many members in this House have mentioned in their remarks:

"On June 17, 1991, Ontario Hydro announced that it had renegotiated its uranium supply contracts with Rio Algom Ltd in Elliot Lake. As part of the renegotiated package, Ontario Hydro agreed to provide $65 million to the northern Ontario heritage fund"—hardly anything to do with Ontario Hydro's mandate—"in order to fund economic diversification within the community and to assist the communities of Elliot Lake and Blind River in retiring their municipal debt.

"Clearly, this initiative goes beyond Ontario Hydro's role of providing safe, reliable electricity at cost. The provincial government is using Ontario Hydro as a social and economic instrument, and is passing the hidden costs on to Ontario's electricity consumers." That is you and I, Mr Speaker. "The Elliot Lake assistance package which precedes the final passage of Bill 118 indicates the provincial government is intent on using our electricity rates as a new source of taxation in order to fund social assistance and regional development programs."

So you see, Mr Speaker, it is not just members of the opposition, it is the thousands of members and good people who make up the Municipal Electric Association in Ontario. These are people who know a lot about producing electricity and know a great deal about PUCs and Ontario Hydro. They are people who should be listened to. They are people who know better than this government does what is the proper role for Ontario Hydro and that Ontario Hydro should not be used as a socialist arm of this socialist government.

I would urge this government to look beyond its short-term political gains and begin to examine more closely the crisis that confronts Ontario Hydro. Hydro is faced with the imposing problem of a massive debt at a time when the utility is having serious trouble with supply. In fact, Ontario Hydro may soon be crippled by its astounding debt, which stands at $35 billion. Hydro is likely to fall short of the debt coverage ratio recommended by the Ontario Energy Board. It is not just the utility that should be frightened by this debt. As the Financial Post of July 16, 1991, points out, "Achievement of these targets is of primary importance to the financial community in Ontario."

Eradication of this debt seems to be the furthest thing from this government's mind, because it has been Hydro that has been forced to rescue Elliot Lake and Blind River. These multimillion-dollar settlements will be borne on the backs of hydro users, both residential and commercial. That is certainly worth repeating, because that is the point.

The point is that this government does not have the courage to bail out Elliot Lake, Blind River and Kapuskasing from its own budget, from general revenue, because it has a $9.7-billion deficit that the Treasurer admits over the last couple of days is soaring way out of control. There is no way he can bail out those communities through the general revenue fund, so he has to do it through the back door, through future hidden taxation that will be picked up in the hydro bills of the consumers of this province. That is the point.

When the government retroactively directs Ontario Hydro—and now it is asking for the legislative authority retroactively to do that, which is sinful in itself—to provide social assistance programs, job maintenance programs and job development programs, then it has gutted its mandate. It has missed the boat on what Ontario Hydro is supposed to do and has not been honest with the taxpayers of this province. How many lectures have we had from the Premier about honesty, open government and integrity? Well, they are failing the test miserably and Bill 118 is a prime example of an F they deserve on economic policy and the way they try to implement social policy through the back door.

1740

As I said, these multimillion-dollar settlements will be borne on the backs of residential and commercial hydro users. By now all members have heard of the anticipated double-digit rate increases for hydro users for the next three years. In fact, one of my local public utilities commissions in the town of Collingwood points out to me that compounded over the next three years the hydro rate increases for consumers, for members and me, people of Ontario, will probably be in the order of 35%, a 35% increase because Hydro is being asked to do things it should not be asked to do. The message this badly flawed piece of legislation sends is that the principle of power at cost for business and industry is a thing of the past.

I quote from a letter from the hydroelectric commission from the newly amalgamated town of Alliston, Beeton, Tecumseth and Tottenham, which has grave reservations regarding the impact of Bill 118:

"Bill 118 threatens to destroy Ontario's long-cherished principle of power at cost by making electricity rates a new source of tax revenue for the provincial government.

"Under Bill 118 the provincial government would be able to issue policy directives that bypass the democratic legislative process and are binding on Ontario Hydro and that could force Hydro to do things that are outside its current mandate, which is the provision of safe, reliable electricity. In addition, Bill 118 would force Ontario electricity consumers to pay for these policy directives through their rates. This is unacceptable.

"We also object to the sections of Bill 118 that permit Ontario Hydro to subsidize fuel substitution through electricity rates. This is unnecessary, as market forces alone are enough to encourage certain types of fuel switching.

"Bill 118 is flawed legislation that sets dangerous precedents and allows a new, hidden tax grab by the provincial government."

The government should bear in mind that the best form of social assistance is to make decisions and create a climate where social assistance becomes unnecessary, though if Bill 118 is allowed to pass as is, I assure the members we will be opening the pages of a newspaper to learn of yet another industry that has closed shop in Ontario and moved south.

It is critical for our industrial strategy and for the industrial strategy of the government, which I do not think has one, by the way. If it did have an industrial strategy, a critical component would be that power be provided at cost for industrial and residential consumers. Hence the current mandate of Ontario Hydro, which they are wishing to change.

This government seems more concerned with crossing wires with Ontario Hydro than plugging in the private sector to expand and grow in this province. The concerns I raise regarding Bill 118 are not just mine alone. They are shared by other members in business and industry, Ontario Hydro, the Municipal Electric Association and every community and person in this province that has suffered through this recession, been laid off and is burdened in the highest-taxed province and jurisdiction in North America.

The town of Collingwood is one such community. I have the distinguished pleasure to represent Collingwood in the riding of Simcoe West in this Legislature. That community understands completely the implications of Bill 118. This bill will short out the fuse of hope held by communities such as Collingwood which are desperately trying to dig themselves out from this recession.

Recently I met in Collingwood with the PUC manager, Mr Ed Houghton, and he outlined to me his deep misgivings concerning Bill 118. I quote from a resolution passed by the PUC for the town of Collingwood on September 10 of this year, referring to Bill 118:

"Whereas Ontario Hydro has been recently forced to make an unnecessary $250-million expenditure associated with the renegotiation of uranium contracts and the associated community assistance package for Elliot Lake; and

"Whereas this is a growing concern that Ontario Hydro is becoming an instrument for the provincial government's social policies instead of being the provider of safe, reliable, sufficient electricity at cost; and

"Whereas municipal electric utility consumers should not be financing the government's social assistance programs in their cost of power as a form of hidden taxation;

"Be it resolved that the public utilities commission of the town of Collingwood requests the province of Ontario to withdraw this section of Bill 118, dealing with policy directives, that would change the mandate of Ontario Hydro and force electricity customers to bear the costs of these directives in their rates; and

"Be it further resolved that the public utilities commission of the town of Collingwood requests the government of Ontario and Ontario Hydro to not finance social assistance programs, and other government initiatives unrelated to Ontario Hydro's mandate, through the cost of power."

It is worth noting that this resolution was also passed by the hydroelectric commission for the town of Innisfil, and similar concerns were expressed to me by the manager of the PUC in the town of Wasaga Beach.

I am sure that if all citizens of Ontario fully understood the intent of this legislation, which is simply to wrest control of Ontario Hydro, change its mandate and have Hydro implement social assistance programs in the name of the government, and that they as hydro users will be paying for this social assistance, I know they would cry foul en masse. The problem is, few are aware of the NDP plans to use Ontario Hydro as a tool to advance its own agenda while billing hydro users. That is the purpose of this debate and the purpose of driving home these points.

We all have better things to do than to drive these points home to the government, but to date it has not been listening. We are wasting a lot of hydro in this building and certainly a lot of hot air in trying to drive these points home. But it is important that the people of this province understand what the government is up to.

As I said, the problem is that few are aware of the NDP hidden agenda here. It is nothing short of indirect taxation and smells of the type of hidden political agenda the people of Ontario, when they are aware of it, will not tolerate. By passing Bill 118, this government will drive the final stake into the hearts of industry. I truly believe we are getting near the end of the slippery slope. We have had just about over a year of nonsense from this government, a total lack of understanding of the needs of business and of how wealth is generated in this province, who generates the wealth and who benefits. All the people benefit when wealth is generated in this province.

I can remember so well—it is like a bad nightmare—when the NDP candidate in the riding of Simcoe West used to get up and scream about corporate welfare bums. He screamed about people and corporations that did not pay taxes in this province. Because he did not have any idea whatsoever what he was talking about, I had to point out to him that corporations are made up of people. They are not buildings. They are not just the steel structure people picket in front of from time to time. They are made up of people in my riding, and in particular senior citizens who invest their money in corporations so that they can get a good return on their dollar. Otherwise they would invest the money in the bank on the corner.

Until this government came to office there was a level of confidence out there, and until the Liberals started to tax the heck out of Ontarians there was a level of confidence out there and people were investing in corporations in Ontario and in Canada and creating jobs in this province. The statistics show it. Sure they were making money. You have to make a profit to pay taxes to government. We have been a long time in explaining this to the government and having it come around to understanding this principle. In recent days the Treasurer does seem to understand that principle, although he really is not doing anything about correcting his errors of the past.

1750

The speeches in this Legislature, and fortunately ours on this side, have not really changed much either, because the government members, the NDP members—Bill 118 is a very good example of this—seem to believe their own socialist rhetoric. Maybe they were weaned on it or something; I do not know. But it does not reflect reality in this province. It is doing damage to the very people who at one time created jobs. Those people are telling me and my caucus colleagues in the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party that they very much want to leave the province. I have been told by more than one person, by more than a dozen people and by more than two dozen people with whom I have met concerning Bill 118 that they very much feel this may be the straw that breaks the camel's back.

They cannot really imagine in their heart of hearts, in their mind of minds, what other steps this government could possibly take to further drive business out of this province. The government has almost exhausted the list. Its imagination must be running out. At least I would like to believe that.

We ask it to listen to our comments and to accept the common sense we are bringing forward. It would be foolish for any of us to think that industry would want to locate in a jurisdiction that not only taxes initiatives into the ground, but cannot supply the lifeblood of industry, which is hydroelectric power at cost.

Bill 118 will reduce the quality of life for all of us in Ontario by diminishing any hope for industrial growth in Ontario. Hydro's debt and the NDP government's insistence that it fund the government's socialist agenda will contribute to ever-escalating hydro rates and will continue to make Ontario an unattractive place to do business. In fact, for consumers alone—these are not the large consumers; these are you and I, Mr Speaker, the people of Ontario who rent an apartment or own a house—we are expecting that our hydro bills will, on a compounded basis, rise by as much as 35% over the next three years.

By using Hydro as an agent of socialist policy, the Premier and his merry band will prevent the utility from addressing the major problem of supply in this province. Our current supply barely covers the current demand. The Premier will do so by the back door, by enabling the Minister of Energy to circumvent the Legislative Assembly, to issue policy directives, and in the process, silence the taxpayers of this province.

How can we expand our industrial and commercial base without the power to supply new industry or industries wishing to expand? We know how we can cut down on the need for future generation demand, because they are driving business out of the province. Frankly they may get away with their hidden agenda over the next three years, because the brownouts probably will not occur until another government comes in and starts to attract industry back.

Some of the primary questions will be: "Can we plug in our machines? Do you have reliable power at cost? Are you competitive with other jurisdictions?" Those are primary questions that certainly industry asks. I have a plant, the Lemmerz-Magna Industries plant—it is now owned by Reynolds—in Collingwood. It uses a tremendous amount of electricity and it is very worried. It makes aluminum wheel rims. I am told by local PUC officials that we have already had brownouts in the Collingwood area. I am told that Magna would like to expand, or at least up until a few months ago it was thinking of expanding, but it is very worried about whether it can be assured of a secure, reliable, relatively inexpensive source of power.

By having Ontario Hydro spend some $65 million towards the northern Ontario heritage fund and some $250 million in paying outrageous uranium prices in Elliot Lake, the government has taken money and created unemployment in our local areas.

I have two contractors located in my riding who for the last 10 years have been working on contracts that they tender for each year, upgrading the lines from Orangeville up through to Collingwood. We are badly in need of power in that part of the province. Ontario Hydro's long-range plan addresses that, but it is being thrown off track, and this year, what is the answer I get? Our local region had to give up. Ontario Hydro had to take $16 million out of a little region like the one I live in because head office said, "We have to pay $250 million to Elliot Lake and the northern Ontario heritage fund. We cannot let out the contracts this year." New contractors are out of work, because these people had specialized in upgrading hydro lines. They had been doing it for years. The contractors are out of work so that the members opposite can play political shenanigans in the north, so that they can spend $250 million saving 600 jobs. Meanwhile, they are putting people in my riding out of work.

I dare any one of the members opposite to come down and explain to contractors in my riding why they have to be out of work because the government has decided to use Ontario Hydro as an instrument of social policy.

Every year, and in fact I am told in about four weeks, a very large portable generator has to go up Airport Road and park at the side of the road—they put a fence around it—just so we can have enough power in the Collingwood area and up through to Owen Sound to get through the winter without brownouts. Every year they have to bring in this big portable generator, which is an ungodly sight, at tremendous cost, to get us through the winter up there, so that industries can continue to have power and so that I and the folks at home can continue to turn on our lights and heat our homes.

That would still be necessary this year. I will be honest about this. But it would not be necessary in the next few years if the government had allowed our region to continue to upgrade its lines.

Interjections.

Mr J. Wilson: But no. Without any consultation whatsoever, and now with a retroactive piece of legislation, they change Ontario Hydro's mandate.

Mr B. Murdoch: Don't be calling anybody a birdbrain. If anybody is a birdbrain, you are.

Mr J. Wilson: The government stops the good work Hydro was doing because it has a suspicion of professionals and a suspicion of large corporations, even if it is one that is accountable to the government of Ontario.

Mr B. Murdoch: Have you ever been out in the country? You ever been outside of Toronto, Charlton? You call somebody a birdbrain. You're the only birdbrain over there.

The Speaker: Order, the member for Grey.

Mr B. Murdoch: What an ass. Call people birdbrain. You ever been out in the country? They don't happen to have gas through the country. What kind of a birdbrain—

The Speaker: Order.

Mr B. Murdoch: Well, tell him to keep his mouth shut, then.

The Speaker: The member for Grey would please withdraw that remark. It is unparliamentary language.

Mr B. Murdoch: What remark? He said "birdbrain," not me.

The Speaker: I asked the member if he would not use that vocabulary.

Mr B. Murdoch: He said "birdbrain," not I.

The Speaker: What I heard was the member for Grey use that—Mr B. Murdoch: I will withdraw mine if he withdraws his.

The Speaker: The member for Grey, just relax. I did not hear the remark by the member to whom you were referring. If the member indeed said what has been suggested, perhaps the member would graciously remove the offending comment.

Hon Mr Charlton: If I have offended the member for Grey, I withdraw the comment.

Mr B. Murdoch: Same thing. If that is the case, I will withdraw my remark.

The Speaker: To the member for Simcoe West, perhaps this would be an appropriate place for him to break with his remarks. He of course will have the floor when we next resume debate on this matter.

The government House leader with the business for next week.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon Mr Cooke: Pursuant to standing order 53, I would like to indicate the business of the House for next week.

On Monday, October 7, we will resume committee of the whole consideration of Bill 70, the Employment Standards Amendment Act, and we will continue with that on Tuesday, October 8. If we complete work on Bill 70, we will move to Bill 118, the act we are discussing now.

On Wednesday, October 9, we will continue with unfinished business from the day before, and if we are lucky and finish Bills 70 and 118 we will go on to the Bill 83, the Income Tax Amendment Act, and Bills 84, 85, 86 and 130.

On Thursday, October 10, in the morning we will deal with private members' business, ballot item 35 standing in the name of Mr Mancini, and item 36 standing in the name of Mr Wilson, Simcoe West.

In the afternoon, we will continue with the same business we were working on the day before, unless it is all completed, and then we will go on to the tax bills.

The House adjourned at 1801.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor/Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon/L'hon Lincoln M. Alexander, PC, QC/CP, CR

Speaker/Président: Hon/L'hon David Warner

Clerk/Greffier: Claude L. DesRosiers

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Committees/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des comités: Smirle Forsyth

Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Journals/Greffier adjoint et Greffier des journaux: Alex D. McFedries

Sergeant at Arms/Sergent d'armes: Thomas Stelling

- Abel, Donald (Wentworth North/-Nord PC) government whip/Whip du gouvernement
- Akande, Hon/L'hon Zanana (St Andrew-St Patrick ND) Minister of Community and Social Services/Ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires
- Allen, Hon/L'hon Richard (Hamilton West/-Ouest ND) Minister of Colleges and Universities, Minister of Skills Development/Ministre des Collèges et Universités, ministre de la Formation professionnelle
- Arnott, Ted (Wellington PC)
- Beer, Charles (York North/-Nord L)
- Bisson, Gilles (Cochrane South/-Sud ND) PA to Minister of Northern Development and Mines, PA to minister responsible for francophone affairs, Vice-Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/Ap du ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines, ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones, vice-président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération
- Boyd, Hon/L'hon Marion (London Centre/-Centre ND) Minister of Education, minister responsible for women's issues/Ministre de l'Éducation, ministre déléguée à la Condition féminine
- Bradley, James J. (St Catharines L) opposition House leader/Chef parlementaire de l'opposition
- Brown, Michael A. (Algoma-Manitoulin L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on general government/ Vice-Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales
- Buchanan, Hon/L'hon Elmer (Hastings-Peterborough ND) Minister of Agriculture and Food/Ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation
- Callahan, Robert V. (Brampton South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Président du Comité permanent des comptes publics
- Caplan, Elinor (Oriole L) Chair, standing committee on social development/Présidente du Comité permanent des affaires sociales
- Carr, Gary (Oakville South/-Sud PC)
- Carter, Jenny (Peterborough ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales
- Charlton, Hon/L'hon Brian (Hamilton Mountain ND) Minister of Financial Institutions/Ministre des Institutions financières
- Chiarelli, Robert (Ottawa West/-Ouest L)
- Christopherson, David (Hamilton Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/Ap du Trésorier de l'Ontario et du ministre de l'Économie
- Churley, Hon/L'hon Marilyn (Riverdale ND) Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ministre de la Consommation et du Commerce
- Cleary, John C. (Cornwall L)
- Conway, Sean G. (Renfrew North/-Nord L)
- Cooke, Hon/L'hon David (Windsor-Riverside ND) Minister of Municipal Affairs, government House leader/Ministre des Affaires municipales, chef parlementaire du gouvernement
- Cooper, Mike (Kitchener-Wilmot ND) Chair, standing committee on administration of justice; deputy government whip/Président du Comité permanent de l'administration de la justice, whip adjoint du gouvernement
- Coppen, Hon/L'hon Shirley (Niagara South/-Sud ND) Minister without Portfolio, chief government whip/Ministre sans portefeuille, whip en chef du gouvernement
- Cordiano, Joseph (Lawrence L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on social development/Vice-Président du Comité permanent des affaires sociales
- Cousens, W. Donald (Markham PC)
- Cunningham, Dianne (London North/-Nord PC) Progressive Conservative chief whip/Whip en chef du Parti progressiste-conservateur
- Curling, Alvin (Scarborough North/-Nord L) opposition deputy whip/whip adjoint de l'opposition
- Dadamo, George (Windsor-Sandwich ND) PA to Minister of Transportation/Ap du ministre des Transports
- Daigeler, Hans (Nepean L)
- Drainville, Dennis (Victoria-Haliburton ND) PA to Minister of Municipal Affairs; Chair, select committee on Ontario in Confederation/Ap du ministre des Affaires municipales, président du Comité spécial sur le rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération
- Duignan, Noel (Halton North/-Nord ND) Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative, coprésident du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire
- Elston, Murray J. (Bruce L) Leader of the Official Opposition/Chef de l'opposition officielle
- Eves, Ernie (Parry Sound PC) Progressive Conservative House leader/Chef parlementaire du Parti progressiste-conservateur
- Farnan, Mike (Cambridge ND) First Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Premier vice-président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
- Fawcett, Joan M. (Northumberland L)
- Ferguson, Hon/L'hon Will (Kitchener ND) Minister of Energy/Ministre de l'Énergie
- Fletcher, Derek (Guelph ND) PA to Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations/Ap du ministre de la Consommation et du Commerce
- Frankford, Robert (Scarborough East/-Est ND)

- Gigantes, Hon/L'hon Evelyn (Ottawa Centre/-Centre ND)
Minister of Housing/Ministre du Logement
Grandmaître, Bernard C. (Ottawa East/-Est L)
- Grier, Hon/L'hon Ruth A. (Etobicoke-Lakeshore ND)
Minister of the Environment, minister responsible for the greater Toronto area/Ministre de l'Environnement, ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto
- Haeck, Christel (St. Catharines-Brock ND)
- Hampton, Hon/L'hon Howard (Rainy River ND) Attorney General/Procureur général
- Hansen, Ron (Lincoln ND) Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs; Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/Président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques, président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi privés
- Harnick, Charles (Willowdale PC)
- Harrington, Margaret H. (Niagara Falls ND) PA to Minister of Housing/Ap du ministre du Logement
- Harris, Michael (Nipissing PC) leader of the Progressive Conservative Party/Chef du Parti progressiste-conservateur
- Haslam, Hon/L'hon Karen (Perth ND) Minister of Culture and Communications/Ministre de la Culture et des Communications
- Hayes, Pat (Essex-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (agriculture)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (agriculture)
- Henderson, D. James (Etobicoke-Humber L)
- Hope, Randy R. (Chatham-Kent ND) PA to Minister of Community and Social Services/Ap du ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires
- Huget, Bob (Sarnia ND) PA to Minister of Energy/Ap du ministre de l'Énergie
- Jackson, Cameron (Burlington South/-Sud PC) Chair, standing committee on estimates/Président du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses
- Jamison, Norm (Norfolk ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology, responsible for small business/Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie, délégué aux Affaires des petites entreprises
- Johnson, Paul R. (Prince Edward-Lennox-South Hastings/Prince-Edward-Lennox-Hastings-Sud ND)
PA to Minister of Revenue/Ap du ministre du Revenu
- Jordan, W. Leo (Lanark-Renfrew PC)
- Klopp, Paul (Huron ND) PA to Minister of Agriculture and Food (food)/Ap du ministre de l'Agriculture et de l'Alimentation (alimentation)
- Kormos, Peter (Welland-Thorold ND) Chair, standing committee on resources development/Président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources
- Kwinter, Monte (Wilson Heights L)
- Lankin, Hon/L'hon Frances (Beaches-Woodbine ND)
Minister of Health, minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ministre de la Santé, ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale
- Laughren, Hon/L'hon Floyd (Nickel Belt ND) Deputy Premier, Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics/Vice-premier ministre, Trésorier de l'Ontario et ministre de l'Économie
- Lessard, Wayne (Windsor-Walkerville ND) PA to Minister of Colleges and Universities/Ap du ministre des Collèges et Universités
- Mackenzie, Hon/L'hon Bob (Hamilton East/-Est ND)
Minister of Labour/Ministre du Travail
- MacKinnon, Ellen (Lambton ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Legislative Assembly/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent de l'Assemblée législative
- Mahoney, Steven W. (Mississauga West/-Ouest L) chief opposition whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition
- Malkowski, Gary (York East/-Est ND) PA to Minister of Citizenship, responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ap de la ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales
- Mammoliti, George (Yorkview ND) PA to minister responsible for the provincial anti-drug strategy/Ap de la ministre déléguée à la Stratégie antidrogue provinciale
- Mancini, Remo (Essex South/-Sud L) Chair, standing committee on general government/Président du Comité permanent des affaires gouvernementales
- Marchese, Rosario (Fort York ND) PA to the Premier, PA to Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Ap du premier ministre, ap du ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales
- Marland, Margaret (Mississauga South/-Sud PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on estimates/Vice-Présidente du Comité permanent des budgets des dépenses
- Martel, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Sudbury East/-Est ND) Minister of Northern Development and Mines/Ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines
- Martin, Tony (Sault Ste. Marie/Sault-Sainte-Marie ND) PA to Minister of Education/Ap de la ministre de l'Éducation
- Mathyssen, Irene (Middlesex ND) PA to Minister of the Environment, government whip/Ap de la ministre de l'Environnement, whip du gouvernement
- McClelland, Carman (Brampton North/-Nord L)
- McGuinty, Dalton J.P. (Ottawa South/-Sud L)
- McLean, Allan K. (Simcoe East/-Est PC) Vice-Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Vice-Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux
- McLeod, Lyn (Fort William L)
- Miclash, Frank (Kenora L) opposition chief whip/Whip en chef de l'opposition
- Mills, Gord (Durham East/-Est ND) PA to Solicitor General/Ap du Solliciteur général
- Morin, Gilles E. (Carleton East/-Est L) Deputy Speaker and Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Vice-Président et Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
- Morrow, Mark (Wentworth East/-Est ND) Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman; Vice-Chair, standing committee on administration of justice/Président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman, vice-président du Comité permanent de l'administration de la justice
- Murdoch, Bill (Grey PC)
- Murdock, Sharon (Sudbury ND) PA to Minister of Labour/Ap du ministre du Travail
- North, Hon/L'hon Peter (Elgin ND) Minister of Tourism and Recreation/Ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs

O'Connor, Lawrence (Durham-York ND) PA to minister responsible for the greater Toronto area; Vice-Chair, standing committee on regulations and private bills/
Ap de la ministre responsable du Bureau de la région du grand Toronto, vice-président du Comité permanent des règlements et des projets de loi privés

Offer, Steven (Mississauga North/-Nord L)

O'Neil, Hugh P. (Quinte L)

O'Neill, Yvonne (Ottawa-Rideau L) opposition deputy whip/
Whip adjointe de l'opposition

Owens, Stephen (Scarborough Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Financial Institutions, government whip/
Ap du ministre des Institutions financières, whip du gouvernement

Perruzza, Anthony (Downsview ND) PA to Minister for Skills Development/Ap du ministre de la Formation professionnelle

Philip, Hon/L'hon Ed (Etobicoke-Rexdale ND) Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology/Ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie

Phillips, Gerry (Scarborough-Agincourt L)

Pilkey, Hon/L'hon Allan (Oshawa ND) Solicitor General, Minister of Correctional Services/Solliciteur général, ministre des Services correctionnels

Poirier, Jean (Prescott and Russell/Prescott et Russell L)

Poole, Dianne (Eglinton L) Vice-Chair, standing committee on public accounts/Vice-Présidente du comité permanent des comptes publics

Pouliot, Hon/L'hon Gilles (Lake Nipigon/Lac-Nipigon ND) Minister of Transportation, minister responsible for francophone affairs/Ministre du Transport, ministre délégué aux Affaires francophones

Rae, Hon/L'hon Bob (York South/-Sud ND) Premier, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs/Premier ministre, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales

Ramsay, David (Timiskaming L)

Rizzo, Tony (Oakwood IND)

Runciman, Robert W. (Leeds-Grenville PC) Chair, standing committee on government agencies/Président du Comité permanent des organismes gouvernementaux

Ruprecht, Tony (Parkdale L)

Scott, Ian G. (St. George-St. David L)

Silipo, Hon/L'hon Tony (Dovercourt ND) Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet/Président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement

Sola, John (Mississauga East/-Est L)

Sorbara, Gregory S. (York Centre/-Centre L)

Sterling, Norman W. (Carleton PC)

Stockwell, Chris (Etobicoke West/-Ouest PC)

Sullivan, Barbara (Halton Centre/-Centre L)

Sutherland, Kimble (Oxford ND) PA to Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet; Vice-Chair, standing committee on finance and economic affairs/Ap du président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement, vice-président du Comité permanent des finances et des affaires économiques

Swarbrick, Anne (Scarborough West /-Ouest ND)

Tilson, David (Dufferin-Peel PC)

Turnbull, David (York Mills PC)

Villeneuve, Noble (S-D-G & East Grenville/S.-D.-G. & Grenville-Est PC) Second Deputy Chair of the Committee of the Whole House/Deuxième vice-président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative

Ward, Brad (Brantford ND) PA to Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology with responsibility for trade and technology/
Ap du ministre de l'Industrie, du Commerce et de la Technologie et délégué au Commerce et à la Technologie

Ward, Margery (Don Mills ND) PA to Minister of Government Services/Ap du ministre des Services gouvernementaux

Wark-Martyn, Hon/L'hon Shelley (Port Arthur ND) Minister of Revenue/Ministre du Revenu

Warner, Hon/L'hon David (Scarborough-Ellesmere ND) Speaker; Co-Chair, special committee on the parliamentary precinct/Président, coprésident du Comité extraordinaire de l'enceinte parlementaire

Waters, Daniel (Muskoka-Georgian Bay/Muskoka-Baie-Georgienne ND) PA to Minister of Tourism and Recreation; Vice-Chair, standing committee on resources development/
Ap du ministre du Tourisme et des Loisirs, vice-président du Comité permanent du développement des ressources

Wessinger, Paul (Simcoe Centre/-Centre ND) PA to Minister of Health/Ap de la ministre de la Santé

White, Drummond (Durham Centre/-Centre ND) Vice-Chair, standing committee on the Ombudsman/
Vice-président du Comité permanent de l'ombudsman

Wildman, Hon/L'hon Bud (Algoma ND) Minister of Natural Resources, minister responsible for native affairs/Ministre des Ressources naturelles, ministre délégué aux Affaires autochtones

Wilson, Hon/L'hon Fred (Frontenac-Addington ND) Minister of Government Services/Ministre des Services gouvernementaux

Wilson, Gary (Kingston and The Islands/Kingston et Les Îles ND) PA to Minister of Culture and Communications/
Ap de la ministre de la Culture et des Communications

Wilson, Jim (Simcoe West/-Ouest PC)

Winniger, David (London South/-Sud ND) PA to Attorney General, PA to minister responsible for native affairs/Ap du Procureur général, ap du ministre délégué aux Affaires autochtones

Wiseman, Jim (Durham West/Durham-Ouest ND) PA to Minister of Correctional Services/Ap du ministre des Services correctionnels

Witmer, Elizabeth (Waterloo North/-Nord PC)

Wood, Len (Cochrane North/-Nord ND) PA to Minister of Natural Resources/Ap du ministre des Ressources naturelles

Ziemba, Hon/L'hon Elaine (High Park-Swansea ND) Minister of Citizenship, minister responsible for human rights, disability issues, seniors' issues and race relations/Ministre des Affaires civiques, déléguée aux Droits de la personne, aux Affaires des personnes handicapées, aux Affaires des personnes âgées et aux Relations interraciales

COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

STANDING COMMITTEES/COMITÉS PERMANENTS

Administration of justice/Administration de la justice

Chair/Président: Mike Cooper

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Mark Morrow

Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Jenny Carter, Robert Chiarelli, Derek Fletcher, Charles Harnick, Irene Mathysen, Gordon Mills, Jean Poirier, Gregory S. Sorbara, David Winninger

Clerk/Greffière: Lisa Freedman

Estimates/Budgets des dépenses

Chair/Président: Cameron Jackson

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Margaret Marland

Members/Membres: Gary Carr, Hans Daigeler, Mike Farnan, Paul R. Johnson, Wayne Lessard, Dalton McGuinty, Lyn McLeod, Lawrence O'Connor, Anthony Perruzza, Gary Wilson

Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Finance and economic affairs/

Finance et affaires économiques

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Kimble Sutherland

Members/Membres: David Christopherson, Norman Jamison, Monte Kwinter, Gerry Phillips, Norman W. Sterling, Chris Stockwell, Barbara Sullivan, Brad Ward, Margery Ward, Jim Wiseman

Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

General government/Affaires gouvernementales

Chair/Président: Remo Mancini

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Michael A. Brown

Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Gilles Bisson, Dennis Drainville, Margaret H. Harrington, George Mammoliti, Rosario Marchese, Bill Murdoch, Yvonne O'Neill, Ian G. Scott, David Turnbull

Clerk/Greffière: Deborah Deller

Government agencies/Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair/Président: Robert W. Runciman

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Allan K. McLean

Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Jenny Carter, Robert Frankford, Bernard Grandmaître, Pat Hayes, Rosario Marchese, Dalton McGuinty, Chris Stockwell, Daniel Waters, Jim Wiseman

Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Legislative Assembly/Assemblée législative

Chair/Président: Noel Duignan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Ellen MacKinnon

Members/Membres: Mike Cooper, Robert Frankford, Norman Jamison, Margaret Marland, Irene Mathysen, Carman McClelland, Gilles E. Morin, Hugh P. O'Neil, Stephen Owens, Noble Villeneuve

Clerk/Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Ombudsman/Ombudsman

Chair/Président: Mark Morrow

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Drummond White

Members/Membres: Alvin Curling, Joan M. Fawcett, Christel Haeck, D. James Henderson, Peter Kormos, George Mammoliti, Bill Murdoch, Margery Ward, Paul Wessinger, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer

Clerk/Greffier: Franco Carrozza

Public accounts/Comptes publics

Chair/Président: Robert V. Callahan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Présidente: Dianne Poole

Members/Membres: James J. Bradley, Sean G. Conway, W. Donald Cousens, Christel Haeck, Pat Hayes, Paul R. Johnson, Ellen MacKinnon, Lawrence O'Connor, David Tilson, Drummond White

Clerk/Greffière: Tannis Manikel

Regulations and private bills/

Règlements et projets de loi privés

Chair/Président: Ron Hansen

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Lawrence O'Connor

Members/Membres: Donald Abel, Mike Farnan, Derek Fletcher, Leo Jordan, Ellen MacKinnon, Frank Miclash, Tony Ruprecht, John Sola, Kimble Sutherland, Drummond White, Jim Wilson

Clerk/Greffier: Todd Decker

Resources development/Développement des ressources

Chair/Président: Peter Kormos

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Daniel Waters

Members/Membres: Ted Arnott, John C. Cleary, George Dadamo, Bob Huget, Leo Jordan, Paul Klopp, Sharon Murdock, Steven Offer, David Ramsay, Len Wood

Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

Social development/Affaires sociales

Chair/Présidente: Elinor Caplan

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Joseph Cordiano

Members/Membres: Charles Beer, Christel Haeck, Randy R. Hope, Gary Malkowski, Tony Martin, Lyn McLeod, Stephen Owens, Paul Wessinger, Jim Wilson, Elizabeth Witmer

Clerk/Greffière: Lynn Mellor

SELECT COMMITTEE/COMITÉ SPÉCIAL

Ontario in Confederation/

Rôle de l'Ontario au sein de la Confédération

Chair/Président: Dennis Drainville

Vice-Chair/Vice-Président: Gilles Bisson

Members/Membres: Jenny Carter, Alvin Curling, Ernie Eves, Charles Harnick, Margaret H. Harrington, Gary Malkowski, Irene Mathysen, Steven Offer, Yvonne O'Neill, David Winninger

Clerk/Greffier: Harold Brown

SPECIAL COMMITTEE/COMITÉ EXTRAORDINAIRE

Parliamentary precinct/Enceinte parlementaire

Co-Chair/Coprésident: David Warner

Co-Chair/Coprésident: Noel Duignan

Members/Membres: Dianne Cunningham, Remo Mancini, Kimble Sutherland

Clerk/Greffier: Smirle Forsyth

CONTENTS

Thursday 3 October 1991

Private members' public business		Political activity by police officers	2710
Unsolicited Facsimile Transmissions Act, 1991,		Mr Pilkey
Bill 134	2693	Responses
Mr Cousens	2693	Waste reduction	2710
Mr Kormos	2694	Mr Grandmaître
Mr Curling	2695	Political activity by police officers	2710
Mr McLean	2696	Mr Curling
Mr Frankford	2697	Mr Carr
Mr Harnick	2697	Waste reduction	2711
Mr Wessenger	2698	Mr Turnbull
Mr White	2698	Attendance of Premier	2711
Mr Cousens	2698	Mr Miclash
Agreed to	2706	Mr Cooke
Public Sector Food Services Act, 1991, Bill 133	2699
Ms Haeck	2699
Mr Cleary	2700
Mr McLean	2701
Mr Hayes	2702
Mr Cordiano	2703
Mr J. Wilson	2704
Mr Dadamo	2705
Ms Haeck	2706
Agreed to	2706
Members' statements		Oral questions
Anniversary of German reunification	2707	Government spending	2711
Mr Daigeler		Mr Conway
Toronto Blue Jays	2707	Mr Laughren
Mr Arnott		Tax revenues	2712
Arts festival	2707	Mr Conway
Mr G. Wilson		Mr Laughren
Toronto Blue Jays	2707	Small business	2713
Ms Poole		Mr Carr
Hospital financing	2708	Mr Philip
Mr J. Wilson		Ontario public service salaries and benefits	2714
Landlord-tenant co-operation	2708	Mr Stockwell
Mr Mammoliti		Mr Silipo
Shipbuilding industry	2708	School curriculum	2715
Mr Bradley		Mr Beer
Ontario Hydro legislation	2708	Mrs Boyd
Mr Jordan		Assistance to de Havilland	2716
Robert Middaugh	2709	Mr Carr
Mr Christopherson		Mr Philip
Toronto Blue Jays	2709	Electrolytic epilation	2716
Mr Malkowski		Mr Owens
Visitors	2709	Ms Lankin
The Speaker		Gasoline prices	2717
		Mrs Y. O'Neill
		Mr Laughren
		Hunting in Algonquin Park	2717
		Mr McLean
		Mr Wildman
		Fuel spill	2718
		Mr McClelland
		Mrs Grier
		Public safety	2718
		Mr Cordiano
		Ms Gigantes
		Labour legislation	2719
		Mrs Witmer
		Mr Mackenzie
Waste reduction	2709
Mr F. Wilson

Petitions

Oath of allegiance	2719
Mr Henderson
Tobacco taxes	2720
Mr Villeneuve
Mr McLean
Oath of allegiance	2720
Mr J. Wilson
Government policy	2720
Mrs Cunningham
Nursing homes	2720
Mr McGuinty

Second readings

Power Corporation Amendment Act, 1991,
Bill 118	2720
Mr Carr	2720
Mr Huget	2729
Mr McGuinty	2729

Power Corporation Amendment Act, 1991 (continued)

Mr Stockwell	2729
Mr Duignan	2730
Ms Harrington	2730
Mr Jordan	2732
Mr Mahoney	2733
Mrs Y. O'Neill	2733
Mr J. Wilson	2737
Adjourned	2742

Business of the House	2742
Mr Cooke

Lists of members

Members and their responsibilities
Committees of the Legislative Assembly

TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Le jeudi 3 octobre 1991

Affaires d'intérêt public émanant de simples députés

Loi de 1991 sur les transmissions par télécopie non sollicitées, projet de loi 134	2693
Adoptée	2706
Loi de 1991 sur les services d'alimentation du secteur public, projet de loi 133	2699
Adoptée	2706

Deuxième lecture

Loi de 1991 modifiant la Loi sur la Société de l'électricité, projet de loi 118	2720
Débat ajourné	2742

Listes des députés

Les députés et leurs responsabilités
Comités de l'Assemblée législative

64 1991

64 1991

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly of Ontario

First Session, 35th Parliament

Official Report of Debates (Hansard)

Monday 7 October 1991

Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

Première session, 35^e législature

Journal des débats (Hansard)

Le lundi 7 octobre 1991

Speaker
Honourable David Warner

Clerk
Claude L. DesRosiers

Président
L'honorable David Warner

Greffier
Claude L. DesRosiers

Table of Contents

Table of Contents for proceedings reported in this issue appears at the back, together with an alphabetical list of members of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at (416) 325-7400.

Table des matières

La table des matières des séances rapportées dans ce numéro se trouve à l'arrière de ce fascicule, ainsi qu'une liste alphabétique de députés de l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario.

Il existe un index cumulatif des numéros précédents. Les renseignements qu'il contient sont à votre disposition par téléphone auprès des employés de l'index du Journal des débats au (416) 325-7400.

Numbering of Hansard

Effective with the opening of the Second Session of the 35th Parliament, Hansard issues and pages will once again be numbered on a sessional basis. Hansard numbering therefore will become consistent with Orders and Notices and Votes and Proceedings, and with other parliamentary publications throughout Canada.

For the last two years Hansard has been numbered according to the calendar year. Under this system, the numbering of issues and pages was restarted with the first issue in the calendar year, regardless of session or Parliament.

Under the new system, the sequence of numbering started in January 1991 will end with the final House and committee sittings of the present First Session. A new sequence will begin on the opening day of the Second Session, and each succeeding session, which will be issue 1 and begin with page 1. Committee reports likewise will be numbered from the first sitting of each committee in a parliamentary session.

Numérotation du Journal des débats

A partir du début de la deuxième session de la 35^e législature, les pages et les numéros du Journal des débats seront de nouveau numérotés par session. La numérotation du Journal des débats correspondra donc à celle de Feuilleton et Avis et de Procès-verbaux, ainsi que celle des autres publications parlementaires au Canada.

Depuis deux ans, le Journal des débats était numéroté par année civile. Avec ce système, la numérotation des numéros et des pages recommençait au premier numéro de l'année civile, quelle que soit la session ou la législature.

Avec le nouveau système, la numérotation commencée en janvier 1991 s'arrêtera à la dernière séance de la Chambre et des comités de l'actuelle première session. Une nouvelle série commencera le jour de l'ouverture de la deuxième session et des sessions suivantes : numéro 1, page 1. Les rapports des comités seront également numérotés à partir de la première séance de chaque comité pour une session parlementaire donnée.

Subscriptions

Subscription information may be obtained from: Sessional Subscription Service, Publications Ontario, Ministry of Government Services, 5th Floor, 880 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 1N8. Phone (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 or toll-free 1 (800) 668-9938.

Abonnements

Pour les abonnements, veuillez prendre contact avec le Service d'abonnement parlementaire, Publications Ontario, ministère des Services gouvernementaux, 5^e étage, 880, rue Bay, Toronto (Ontario) M7A 1N8. Par téléphone : (416) 326-5310, 326-5311 ou, sans frais : 1 (800) 668-9938.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Monday 7 October 1991

The House met at 1330.
Prayers.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

CANADIAN FORCES BASE TRENTON

Mr H. O'Neil: Over this past weekend, Canadian Forces Base Trenton, which is located in my riding of Quinte, celebrated its 60th anniversary.

As part of this celebration, they were presented with the freedom of the city by the mayor and council of the city of Trenton. With colours flying, bayonets fixed and drums beating, all ranks from CFB Trenton marched over the veterans' Skyway Bridge Friday afternoon. At city hall, the mayor welcomed the assembled ranks and read the proclamation conferring their freedom of the city.

The proclamation was presented to Colonel Doug Wilson, the base commander. I was proud to present plaques from the Premier on behalf of the government of Ontario and from Lieutenant Governor Lincoln Alexander on behalf of the Queen, honouring them for their participation in the two world wars, the Korean conflict and the Persian Gulf crisis.

They have also distinguished themselves by their great humanitarian efforts worldwide, along with their ongoing peacekeeping and rescue missions.

I ask the members to join me in recognizing the men and women of Canadian Forces Base Trenton.

FOOD DRIVE

Mr Jackson: I wish to announce that today marks the beginning of Burlington's first ever city-wide food drive, which will continue until Wednesday October 16, next week.

In response to an increasing demand for food banks in our community, the Burlington food drive committee was established as a coalition to help raise additional food supplies to replenish dwindling stocks and to co-ordinate the community resources of the agencies serving the needy in Burlington. These agencies include the Salvation Army, Project Partnership, the Burlington East Emergency Food Bank, the Community Unity Food Bank and the St Vincent de Paul Society.

Special dropoff depots have been set up at a number of locations around Burlington for the collection of non-perishable food items. Several high schools are also participating with their own service projects. The initial response to the food drive by the citizens of Burlington, the corporate sector and service clubs has been very good.

As chairman of the Burlington food drive committee, I want to extend an open invitation to everyone in my community to consider the true meaning of Thanksgiving and give what they can to help the less fortunate.

On behalf of the needy in our community, I want to thank all those who will participate in our food drive this week. Your kind generosity will allow many individuals and their families to welcome Thanksgiving Day this year with a sense of hope and confidence which comes from knowing there are people like yourselves who are ready to help them in their time of personal need.

CITY PLANNING

Mr Frankford: We have been celebrating the 30th anniversary of the founding of the New Democratic Party this year. I want to draw to the House's attention another landmark 30th anniversary. It is 30 years since the book Death and Life Of Great American Cities, by Jane Jacobs, appeared. A few weeks ago I was very pleased to attend a symposium where town planners, architects, politicians and admirers in general paid tribute to this influential book.

I would like to think it is not necessary to tell members of this House what the book is about, but for those who may not have read it, it looks bluntly at the problems of urban life and city development and finds that most city planning has gone in the wrong direction. It is not negative criticism. Jane Jacobs puts forward rules for cities that will work.

Perhaps regrettably, a new approach is still needed 30 years later. We need cities that are livable, that have streets that are safe to walk on and that develop sturdy economies and cultures. We need the mixes of neighbourhoods and housing types that Jane advocates.

Jane and her family immigrated to Toronto and have now lived here for several years, within walking distance of this Legislature. I am sure members of this House share my pride that this eminent urban critic continues to find our city a livable one.

LIFE SCIENCES TECHNOLOGY PARK

Mr Daigeler: Last December I wrote to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology asking him to maintain the Liberal government's support for the Ottawa Life Sciences Technology Park. In his response, the minister said he wanted to review this plan and consult with the ministries of Government Services and Health.

The people of Ottawa-Carleton have now waited long enough. It is time for a decision by this government. Apparently the matter was supposed to go before cabinet in August. It is October, and we still have not received an answer. The Life Sciences Technology Park is an exciting industrial development project that has the potential for bringing thousands of highly skilled innovative jobs to eastern Ontario.

Major partners have worked diligently on this venture for several years: our two universities, the hospitals in the Ottawa area, the Ottawa-Carleton Economic Development Corp, the federal government and our own ministries of Industry, Trade and Technology, Health and Government Services. It is time to bring these efforts to fruition. Ontario's support will be the long-awaited final signal to start construction and to attract more biotechnology companies to Ottawa.

I call on the minister to exercise leadership among his cabinet colleagues and to gain their approval as quickly as possible for the Ottawa Life Sciences Technology Park.

AIDS AWARENESS WEEK

Mr J. Wilson: I rise to day in my capacity as Health critic for the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party to recognize AIDS Awareness Week in the province.

In response to a protest last month and a 10-kilometre walk yesterday, the government announced $2.1 million in funding to assist in the fight to conquer the AIDS disease. While any moneys that contribute to the war on this deadly disease are welcomed, members on this side of the House and the AIDS community and the AIDS community-based groups are still left with one overriding concern.

The struggle continues. My concern is that nothing in the Minister of Health's announcement yesterday addresses the real problem, that of research and finding a cure to combat the killer HIV virus.

While the minister's announcement yesterday provides an enhanced structure to treat AIDS, it falls silent in the one area that matters most to people living with HIV and AIDS, that is, it fails to strike decisively at the source of the disease. The announcement also offers nothing in the way of research into treatment and care for infected people who are living longer lives.

Thousands are living with this disease in Canada, and they are contributing to our society. As a people and as individuals, we have a moral obligation to find both a compassionate and an expeditious cure for the destructive HIV virus.

As the sand slips through the opening and a cure for the virus remains unfound, people are dying. By killing time we are contributing to killing people. We must not deal in platitudes. We must focus upon attitudes and develop the necessary will to wipe out this dreaded HIV killer.

That is precisely the role each of us has to play during AIDS Awareness Week, as legislators, as a government and as members of a community and a society, and I would urge strongly everyone to assume his or her role.

1340

WHITBY CENTRE RECREATION COMPLEX

Mr White: I rise today to congratulate the town of Whitby and its municipal council upon the opening of the Whitby Centre Recreation Complex.

This civic project reflects the vision of Whitby's town council over the past five years. It is a building which matches the architectural uniqueness and beauty of its neighbour, the town hall. At present, this attractively appointed structure houses meeting rooms, aerobic and exercise rooms, and the best-designed indoor swimming recreational centre I have ever seen.

This distinctive building may be expanded to include the main branch of the town library and also a second phase added to the recreational complex that would include gymnasias, community rooms and racket sports facilities. Accommodations have already been made to include those expansions onsite.

These buildings are sited to the north of urban Whitby and will increasingly become the hub of the town as it continues to grow. Whitby's population is expected to grow by tens of thousands of residents, close to 50% in the foreseeable future. The town council has shown the wisdom to anticipate that growth with such a building as will be a source of pride for generations.

I am proud to be a resident of Whitby and proud that I represent that town in the provincial Parliament. I invite members to visit my fine community and enjoy the many features that Whitby has to offer.

EMPLOYMENT EQUITY

Mr Curling: The August 1991 edition of the Equity Newsletter has these words from Carol McGregor, a respected human rights advocate: "Over the past few months, it has become quite apparent that the Rae government has backed away from their campaign promises. The next victim may well be the employment equity legislation that was this government's priority." Ms McGregor goes on to detail some significant reversals on employment equity by the NDP.

It is interesting to note that although Bill 172 followed two years of consultation by the NDP—with whom we are not quite certain—the Minister of Citizenship has been singularly unsuccessful in putting together a consultation process that would last a mere six weeks.

Last spring, to great fanfare and at great expense, it was announced that a consultation document would be released late August and that the consultation would begin mid-October. The document never appeared and the consultation process was put on hold.

There are rumours that the new date for these on-again, off-again consultations is some time early in November, but nobody really knows, and the minister has apparently decided that she does not have to explain why the previously planned consultations were so abruptly cancelled. What is going on here?

I remind the Minister of Citizenship that Bill 172, despite its flaws, received support from members of all three parties in this House. If it was good enough for the Premier then, surely it is good enough to serve as basis for discussion now.

KAY LIVINGSTONE AWARD

Mrs Cunningham: Yesterday, the Ontario region of the Congress of Black Women of Canada presented the Kay Livingstone tribute and award in London, Ontario. I had the pleasure of attending this ceremony, and today I am pleased to rise in the House to congratulate Verda Cook of Toronto, this year's winner of the Kay Livingstone Award.

The Congress of Black Women of Canada was established 20 years ago by Kay Livingstone, remembered for her work among minority groups and in the performing arts. Its mandate, through a program of education and service, will motivate black women to participate in the life of their communities, clarify and bring due recognition to the role of black women in Canadian society and improve the welfare of black women and their families in their communities.

Through educational films, panel discussions, guest speakers, social functions and field trips, they have begun to establish some of their goals. Gwen Jenkins, London chapter chairperson, stated: "Our congress feels it's very important to meet and help black women. We share a feeling of togetherness and sisterhood. We rejoice in our blackness."

Prejudiced attitudes towards ethnic people can only be changed through education. It is encouraging to see that the Congress of Black Women of Canada is pursuing its goals in the hope of making a difference. I congratulate them for their significant efforts in changing the attitudes of Canadians towards minority groups, and especially Verda Cook for winning this year's Kay Livingstone Award.

SHELTER FOR WOMEN

Mr O'Connor: On August 14, 1989, in the town of Georgina, Reta Alegretti was strangled and stabbed to death by her husband. On March 18, 1990, in Georgina, Donna Morris was stabbed to death by her husband. On May 2, 1990, in Georgina, Joan Nugent was shot in the back with a sawed-off shotgun by a man she had been involved with. On January 31, 1991, in the town of Georgina, Ellen Kavanaugh was stabbed repeatedly with a knife and then axed to death by her estranged husband.

Last Thursday, the town of Georgina celebrated the grand opening of an animal shelter. Three days earlier, the committee of adjustments in the town of Georgina rejected the proposal for a minor variance on property to be purchased for a women's shelter because there were not enough parking spaces.

I am saddened and sickened by this latest decision, in an area that has three times the rate of domestic abuse as all of York region. Of course, cats and dogs have to be taken somewhere to be protected from cruel treatment, but our daughters, our sisters and our mothers have to have somewhere to turn to escape life-threatening situations.

Friends of Ellen Kavanaugh have said she would have sought out the protection of a shelter if it had been available. We are talking about women's lives. Surely we can find solutions to parking spaces. I applaud and support the efforts made thus far by the Committee Against Domestic Abuse, CADA, and the newly formed Women's Shelter of Georgina Inc. I implore the people of Georgina to put aside differences that may stand in the way of this project going ahead and to work with Women's Shelter of Georgina Inc to make sure there are no more tragic deaths.

CORRECTION

Ms Poole: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I believe it is incumbent on all members to correct the record if at any time they inadvertently have misstated a case. On Thursday, in a member's statement, I congratulated the people from all four corners of this province and all regions who supported the Toronto Blue Jays so strongly. Inadvertently, I forgot to mention the far north, so my apologies to the member for Kenora and the member for Lake Nipigon for not mentioning the people of northwestern Ontario, who I know are avid Blue Jay fans and are there with the rest of Ontario.

The Speaker: Your point of order is well taken.

ORAL QUESTIONS

RETAIL SALES TAX

Mr Elston: It does not go without notice that this government continues to announce all of its major policies outside the House so that it does not allow us to provide some comment, but we will talk about that another day.

I want to go to my favourite minister and favourite storyteller, the Treasurer, who for the last couple of weeks has been leading us on a merry chase down a very winding and twisted road, if I might say so. I would like to observe that last week the Treasurer did not believe the Statscan predictions that said retail sales were declining by some 8% this year. He did not therefore take into account the impact of these declining retail sales on his budget and, as a result, retail sales revenue.

Could the Treasurer explain the difference between the 5.3% decline in retail sales predicted on page 43 of his budget and the 2.6% decline in sales tax revenues predicted on page 60 of that document?

Hon Mr Laughren: I do not have the document in front of me, so I will talk in terms more general than specific, if you will allow me to do that, Mr Speaker.

The budget forecast a decline in retail sales revenues this year. There is no question about that. We believe that forecast was reasonably accurate and we are not off the target of retail sales that we had forecast in the budget. If we look at the specific number, I believe the budget forecast a 2.7% decline in retail sales; I think that was the precise number in the budget. It was based on a retail sales decline of 5.3% in 1991. Members have to understand, of course, that there were some changes made in the budget that would increase retail sales revenues to us. For example, when you increase the price of cigarettes, alcohol, gasoline and so forth, there is a built-in increase in sales tax revenues for the province in that regard.

1350

Mr Elston: I want to thank the Treasurer for continuing my faith in him as a storyteller. There are some predictions that the Treasurer's revenues next year may be off by as much as $4 billion, thereby being below his projections, meaning a $13.5-billion deficit next year. Can the Treasurer confirm that there is in fact a $4-billion problem for him next year in his revenues and tell us what he intends to do about the problem he is faced with in trying to meet his $9-billion deficit for next year as a result of the softening revenue figures?

Hon Mr Laughren: I think the Leader of the Opposition is making some heroic assumptions that at this point in time are not appropriate.

Mr Elston: I am reading the press.

Hon Mr Laughren: That is the member's first mistake.

We do think that while some of the growth in revenues next year will be based on natural growth in the economy because of increased prices through inflation and so forth, when you factor out the rate of inflation and get down to real numbers, as the economists are wont to say, then the member is quite right: The revenues, without some kind of sales tax increases—I should not say sales tax; any kind of tax revenues—would be reasonably flat.

Mr Elston: The plot thickens, but I am not sure what the plot is other than to say that the Treasurer continues to get mired down in his inability to understand what is going on with his budget.

The Treasurer has already speculated publicly about new tax increases. Given his fairly flat revenues, can the Treasurer confirm that raising taxes may be his only option for maintaining next year's $8.9-billion deficit?

Hon Mr Laughren: I do not think so. The forecast that was in the budget, which laid out the three years following 1991-92, was based on a number of assumptions: (1) that there was going to be growth in the economy in those out years, as compared to the year we are in now, and when you get growth in the economy, you get what I would call natural growth in government revenues; (2) that there would be some tax increases during those three years, and I have never pretended otherwise; (3) that we will manage our expenditures to the best of our ability to ensure that we keep in line with what we forecast will be our revenues and expenditures, therefore leading to the deficits that are forecast in the budget paper.

Mr Elston: We will be unfolding the next page of this continuing story, which this man is trying to foist on the people of Ontario, at another date.

SOFT DRINK CONTAINERS

Mr Elston: I would like to talk for a moment to the Minister of the Environment, because she has had a long year of activity and she has had a chance to make a whole series of interesting speeches. I want to take her back to one of the first speeches she made. In opposition, she clearly supported refillables in the soft drink industry. In fact, during the election campaign, her leader stated unequivocally their party's commitment to a refillable system for all beverage containers.

A year ago, at the Recycling Council of Ontario's meeting, the minister, in her debut speech, announced she would require soft drink companies to sell 30% of their product in refillable containers. Is that still her position?

Hon Mrs Grier: Yes, it is.

Mr Elston: Having confirmed that, can she explain to us why soft drink companies are selling only 7.6% of their product in refillable bottles? If she is still willing to confirm that, can she tell us how she expects to make the 30% figure stick?

Hon Mrs Grier: Obviously I am very disappointed that the soft drink companies are not reaching the 30%. I said in the speech to which the member referred that I thought companies that had marketed their product worldwide and persuaded everybody to drink their soft drinks ought to be able to market their product in refillable containers. They made some efforts with advertising earlier this year, and they still have not.

There is a number of things that can be done. For example, in Europe there are refillable PET containers that can be used. There ought to be refillable single-serving containers. The industry has done none of those here in Ontario, and I regret that.

What we have done is say to the soft drink industry, "Give us your proposals on how we can resolve both the issue of getting to the quota of 30% and dealing with waste." I know a lot of people in the province feel the soft drink industry is a symbol of waste. The soft drink industry came back with an action plan which it gave to my ministry. It has been extensively discussed, does not yet provide a solution to the problem and is still being reviewed.

Mr Elston: I am glad the minister got back to the report which was given to her in June—not just to her ministry, but to her. There were some three days of meetings between the soft drink industry, herself, her ministry and the environmental groups to come up with a solution. In addition to those three days, she has had that program since June and still she is unable to tell us about any concrete steps she is taking to enforce what she says is her position of 30% refillables. When is the minister going to stop telling stories like her buddy the Treasurer?

Hon Mrs Grier: I reject the last statement by the member categorically. "Telling stories like her buddy the Treasurer" is, I suspect, not parliamentary and certainly not something that either of us do in this House.

Let me say to the member that the three days of meetings last June to which he referred were meetings of stakeholders called together by my ministry. We involved the trade union movement, we involved the industry, we involved the environmental groups, we involved the bottling industry, the canning industry, anybody who had an interest in this subject.

I had hoped after two days they might have come together for a consensus. When they asked for an additional day, I was even more optimistic they would come up with a consensus. They have not, and the investigations and enforcement branch of the ministry is continuing to enforce the regulation.

VISITORS

The Speaker: Before continuing with our business, I wish to draw to members' attention that we have been joined this afternoon by an official delegation from two of the newly independent Baltic states of Estonia and Lithuania. The delegation is seated in the east members' gallery. If members would please welcome them to our midst.

1400

LABOUR LEGISLATION

Mrs Witmer: My question is to the Minister of Labour. Last week a Canadian Federation of Independent Business survey revealed that nearly three quarters of small businesses in this province are extremely worried about the minister's proposed labour legislation. On September 23 my leader asked the minister to tell this House what impact studies on job losses have been undertaken. Since the minister failed to answer the question at that time, I will ask him again, has he or has he not done impact studies to determine how many jobs will be lost in this province as a direct result of his plans to change the Labour Relations Act?

Hon Mr Mackenzie: I would say to the member that until we have prepared and put out the discussion paper, it would not make an awful lot of sense, based on the information available, to try to conduct impact studies on what is at this point in time an unknown.

Mrs Witmer: This morning we spoke with Lanny Elliott, the general manager of Peerless-Cascade Plastics Ltd in Windsor. If these changes become law, Peerless is considering scrapping its plans to double employment over the next few years and may leave Ontario altogether. The president of Peerless has twice written to the Premier and he said he is "appalled and terrified of the certain disastrous consequences of the legislation." In a May 21 letter to the Premier he stated, "It is time to do what is best for Ontario and not just certain interest groups." What does the minister have to say to Peerless and its 270 employees?

Hon Mr Mackenzie: As we have done with any number of groups, we would be more than happy to meet with them, but I am not sure there is much merit in responding to speculation, or that the member really agrees we should not involve all the parties in the plans for the future of Ontario.

Mrs Witmer: I indicated to the minister last week that I feel it is extremely important for all people in this province to be involved and consulted. The survey last week indicated that 36% of the small businesses in this province are already considering packing their bags, and this was before the cabinet document was released. They would take with them 500,000 jobs. They are not blaming the federal government or the former Liberal government. They are blaming this government and its antibusiness agenda. Many people believe the minister's proposals are an effort to appease Bob White and the union leaders. Before we lose any more jobs in this province, will the minister agree to do an economic impact study and will he seriously consider the proposed changes to the Labour Relations Act?

Hon Mr Mackenzie: You cannot make changes to the Labour Relations Act when you have not decided finally what those changes might be. Also, it seems to me we have lost probably close to 250,000 jobs with the high dollar and the free trade agreement. I am not at all sure I would give as much precedence or credibility to the statement that we are going to lose 36% of the jobs. I do not know what that is based on.

Mr Runciman: Our second question is for the Solicitor General. I understand he is going to be in attendance today. Until he appears in the House, I would like to stand the question down.

The Speaker: The question will be stood down and we will pick it up in rotation.

Mr Callahan: Here he comes.

VISITORS

The Speaker: I would like to take this opportunity to invite members to welcome to our midst this afternoon, seated in the Speaker's gallery, a delegation from the embassy of Sweden in Ottawa headed by Ambassador Hakan Berggren and accompanied by Mr Mats Marling, the consul general of Sweden. Would you please welcome them to our midst.

PUBLIC SAFETY

Mr Runciman: My question is to the Solicitor General. It deals with growing concern within Ontario. Every time we open a newspaper it reads more and more like the Detroit Evening News, when we read items like a teen tortured with a drill for 15 hours. Throughout the news this morning we were hearing about a swarming attack in Scarborough where over $100,000 worth of merchandise was stolen, and we heard about a swarming attack in the Eaton Centre a couple of weeks ago.

I think the minister recognizes the fact—hopefully he does—that there is growing public concern with respect to public safety within this province and I am wondering how he is addressing this issue, how he is bringing it to his colleagues at cabinet. Could the minister give us an indication here today of the kinds of specifics he is recommending to deal with this growing concern?

Hon Mr Pilkey: I certainly do share with the member the concerns he has raised. They are circumstances that do not appeal to anybody in this province and are unwarranted actions that are not appreciated or desired. It is our hope, through the added involvement of community policing, that citizenry as well as those charged with the direct responsibility of law enforcement can work in an ever increasingly harmonious way to take an active interest in the protection of their communities and neighbourhoods. That will be pursued, coupled with the upgrading of police initiatives wherever they are appropriate and deemed to be beneficial to help stem this problem.

The basic question in terms of what motivates some individuals to these acts often is a mystery to all of us, but I can assure the member that through community policing we hope this initiative will help us to assist in this kind of difficulty.

Mr Runciman: I am sure his answer will give a lot of solace to women in Burlington or Metro Toronto who are concerned about even walking within their own neighbourhoods. We have a record murder rate in Metro Toronto. Crimes against women over the past few years are up 200%. In the last two years the robbery rate in Metro has gone up 84%. We have a policeman saying we have an astounding increase in violent crimes, street muggings and purse snatchings. That sort of crime is skyrocketing.

The minister gets up in this House and has a non-answer. I asked him for specific policies he has taken to cabinet. What kinds of recommendations is he taking to his cabinet colleagues with respect to this growing crisis? How is he dealing with it? Let's not have this kind of mealy-mouthed rhetoric. Let's have some specifics.

Hon Mr Pilkey: I appreciate the member's animated attempt at asking a question. These are societal problems. They are circumstances to which there is no easy answer in Ontario, in Canada and throughout the world. I simply want to indicate to the member that I believe our police enforcement to be one of the finest in the world, and there are our added attempts at community policing. If there are any particular suggestions the member has that will assist us, we are all too eager to have those as well so that we might incorporate them.

Mr Runciman: They have been in office for over a year and they are looking to us for direction. Obviously this minister has no ideas. He is not taking any specifics to cabinet. The Highway 401 corridor between Belleville and Quebec, for example, has hardly any coverage in the evening hours. My colleague the member for Simcoe West has expressed concern about the lack of 24-hour coverage. The member for Dufferin-Peel has talked about policemen having to drive their own cars. In eastern Ontario we have patrol cars tied down to their parking lots because they cannot afford repairs. The OPP is talking about cutbacks.

What has the minister done? He has taken away the oath of office, the Golden Helmets and the pipe band. What has he given them? He has given them Susan Eng and a commissioner in Peel region who thinks all policemen lie on the witness stand. This is a crisis situation. We are looking to the minister for direction. The police officers, men and women in blue across this province, are looking to him to stand up for them around the cabinet table, and the Treasurer is saying, "Cut, cut, cut." This is one area where we want him to stand up for policemen and policewomen. Let's hear some specifics today.

Hon Mr Pilkey: First of all, I congratulate the member for his absolutely wide range of opinions on this topic. He started with matters that are societal problems of a very dramatic nature and is now suggesting we might have solved some of these absolute tragedies perpetrated on victims by altering the Golden Helmets and the pipes and drum band.

I indicated that through community policing, adding court security to our very fine system of auxiliary policing, our drug abuse enforcement and our attempt at ever-increasing effective policing, we will try to challenge these crimes in our streets wherever and whenever we can find them. It was not a casual comment either that this government wishes to involve all members of the House on this issue or any other issue. In fact, if there are some suggestions forthcoming, I as a new minister in this portfolio would sincerely welcome them.

1410

ONTARIO ECONOMY

Mr Phillips: My question is to the Treasurer. Late last week we had more examples of economic bad news. I honestly do not think I have ever seen the confidence of the business community as low as it is today. Towards the end of last week we heard of the de Havilland layoffs of 1,300, at Philips Electronics of about 250 jobs and Maple Leaf foods another 150 jobs. We have here more than a full page of complete plant closures. We heard last week the Canadian Federation of Independent Business's very major concerns about the economy and the direction the government is heading in. There is virtually no support out there for the Treasurer's budget.

My question to the Treasurer is, when will he bring forward some specific plans, not the next budget, to get the economy rolling again and restore confidence in the business community?

Hon Mr Laughren: There is no question the last year has been an extremely difficult one for the Ontario economy. However, to put the blame on a government that came into office in the middle of the severest recession in 50 years is really being simplistic and unfair. That is simply not the case.

I believe virtually every economist in this country would attach a lot more blame—I do not say this for the purpose of finger-pointing. Virtually everybody out there who watches economies and analyses them would tell the member that the greatest damage that has been done to the Ontario economy is not from the policies of this government; it simply is not the case. Most of the damage, in particular to the manufacturing economy in Ontario, has been done through an excessively high-priced dollar and the high interest rates over the last year.

Mr Phillips: If I might follow up on that, the Treasurer really never answered my question.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Could we have order, please. The member for Scarborough-Agincourt is attempting to pose a question. The Treasurer is attempting to hear the question, as I am.

Mr Phillips: This is just to follow up on the need for some new economic plans. I was very disappointed in the hearings we had on the budget. In my opinion, the Premier's office phoned people, got them to come out and loaded those hearings. I do not think that can be denied. We did not have an honest debate on the budget. The government counted up the number of presentations and then said the people Ontario were in favour of the budget. The fact of the matter is that the people of Ontario are looking for a new economic direction from the government.

I am asking him the question, is he going to wait until April before he brings forward some plans to get the economy going? That is six months from now. Will he undertake to bring forward to this House quickly some economic plans that will get the economy of Ontario going? We cannot blame the federal government. We live here in Ontario. It is the government's responsibility to get the economy moving. We cannot wait until April. I hope he will commit today that he will bring forward to this House some plans to get the economy moving.

Hon Mr Laughren: I think the first part of the member's comments were most inappropriate. If the majority of people who came out to speak to the committee on the budget, which travelled this province in the summer, had been in opposition to the budget, the member would have been on his feet saying, "Look, no one supports your budget."

Because the majority of people who came out and made a presentation to the committee were in support of the budget, the member says we somehow arranged for that to happen. I am sorry but the member has to live with the fact that the majority of people who made appearances before the committee understood that the budget brought down in the spring was designed to fight the recession and to protect and create new jobs, not to make the recession worse. I hear the Conservative members of this Legislature calling for us to bring in policies that duplicate the policies of the federal government in Ottawa, and we are simply not going to do that.

I would say to the member for Scarborough-Agincourt that as this fall goes on, he can expect to hear from us some of our plans. I do not disagree with him that the economy of the province has been struggling this year. We are committed to the economic renewal of this province and we are determined to do what we can to make sure that happens.

BUDGET

Mr Sterling: My question is also to the Treasurer. I want to inform the Treasurer that businesses and people around this province did not hire people to follow the hearings around, as the Ontario Federation of Labour did. It had a person trailing the committee around, contacting labour councils ahead of time, contacting unions to make certain they would be out at the hearings. It was a disgusting display of power against what a committee is set up for in the first place.

Hon Mr Wildman: I have been here for 16 years and I have never seen that happen.

Mr Sterling: I had never seen it happen until this summer either. I have only been here 14 years.

The Speaker: The member's question?

Mr Sterling: In the Treasurer's spring budget, he was very specific about his forecasts for next year's economic recovery. He predicted that revenues would rise at a rate of 9.8%. Now we find out through the media, on Focus Ontario, that next year's revenues are going to be "flat" or "fairly flat." Those are his words from the transcript of Focus Ontario. What does "fairly flat" mean to him: 9.8%, 4% or 0%?

Hon Mr Laughren: As the member opposite did have in the first part of his question some reference to the budget hearings, I assume that was a part of his question to which he wants a response.

I would just respond to the member that he surely remembers back in the days of the Frank Miller budget when he expanded the sales tax base, and how Frank Miller, unlike us, stacked the committee hearings that were held in the Legislature. We did not do that.

When I indicated that I thought the revenues for 1992-93 were going to be somewhat flat, what I really meant and still mean was that for 1992-93, the numbers in the budget indicated fairly substantial revenue increases. Those revenue increases were a combination of two things. They were a combination of some new tax revenues, combined with a growth in the economy that would give us new revenues. There is nothing mysterious about it. That was what was in the budget document, not just for next year but for the two years following that as well.

Mr Sterling: What the Treasurer is telling me is that when he says "fairly flat," the revenues—I really wish he would make a statement on this in the House and not on Focus Ontario. The Treasurer is saying they are fairly flat if there are no tax increases; is that correct? Therefore, can we expect a 9.8% tax increase if he is going to maintain his revenue projections next year?

Hon Mr Laughren: As I recall, what I said was that the growth in the economy next year is going to be somewhat sluggish. We are not going to have the rebound from the recession that we had 10 years ago. So in the budget, when we forecast what was going to happen in the next three years, we determined that it was going to take a combination of some tax increases and some expenditure management to get us at the deficit numbers that are in the budget forecast.

If the revenue numbers in the budget forecast are not achieved, then of course we will have to take a look at our expenditures to make sure there is a relationship between the revenues that are forecast and the deficit forecast as well.

There is nothing surprising about that. It is a case of us being determined to manage our expenditures in keeping with the revenues, whether they are up, below, or higher or lower than what we forecast they would be.

1420

NON-PROFIT HOUSING

Mr B. Ward: I think it is common knowledge and no secret that we have an affordable housing crisis in the province. Last spring I was pleased to see that part of our government's attempt to deal with that issue was to announce funding for 10,000 non-profit and co-operative housing units.

My question is the for Minister of Housing. Prior to the present minister coming on board, the previous minister, the member for Windsor-Riverside, announced details of this initiative under the Ontario non-profit housing program. I would appreciate it, and I am sure everyone in this House would appreciate it, if the minister could give us a status report on this program.

Hon Ms Gigantes: It would be my pleasure. The Project 10,000 program announced in the spring by my predecessor, the member for Windsor-Riverside, is well under way. We have 3,300 units now committed for development, representing proposals from 60 groups across the province in 38 municipalities, so we are moving.

Mr B. Ward: In my riding of Brantford we have a number of applications from organizations and groups that are in the process of attempting to get allocations. One group in particular, the Canadian Slovak League, has a very worthwhile project under way that I fully support, that I know the people of Brantford support. Could the minister give us a status on this particular application?

Hon Ms Gigantes: The Canadian Slovak League project will move ahead. It is a project that will develop 150 units for families, seniors and singles. It is moving ahead. We expect that it is going to produce about 180 jobs, along with affordable housing, and the overall P-10,000 program is estimated to be creating 20,000 jobs as we move ahead.

SABRINA PANETTA

Mr McClelland: I have a question for the Minister of Community and Social Services. I notice she is just stepping on the floor right now, and I wonder if I might wait a moment for her to take her seat.

Last Tuesday in this House, the minister and I had what might be termed a somewhat emotional exchange with respect to the Sabrina Panetta case. I want to acknowledge that she took the courtesy of meeting with me privately, and for that I thank her.

However, at the time in her response, she indicated to me, and I quote from Hansard, "We have received a great deal of conflicting information." In response to my supplementary she said: "The important issue here, in terms of the confusion of medical information, is that we must be absolutely certain this child is not at greater risk if taken out of the hospital. We have no confirming information from the medical practitioner"—ie, I presume, the little girl's physician—"that will allow us to believe that." This was in response to what I had said. "We have asked for it repeatedly."

I saw the physician on network television on Thursday evening. I have spoken with the physician. He takes the position that this is not in fact the case, that he is very clear and unequivocal in terms of what he says is best for this child.

Since last Tuesday, has the minister reconsidered? Is she prepared to show some compassion in this case and sign an order in council that would provide the opportunity for this child to die at home?

Hon Ms Akande: I recognize the concern of the member. I too am extremely concerned about this. He is correct in that I did say I have no medical information which would allow me to be certain the child was not at risk. We have even since that time organized—I spoke to the member the day after and invited him to be a part of the meeting with us, an invitation which, I might add, he declined. Since that time my staff has been speaking to the doctor and has in fact received a change in the condition of the child, and we are concerned because the condition is unstable.

We have continued to draw upon our resources to design options and ways in which we could be certain that when the child goes home, she will not be at risk. One recognizes that it is difficult, in that we have to be certain the child will be safe at home, that when the child's instability occurs every three or four days, as we are told, she will not be at risk on her way back to the hospital in the ambulance.

I will be willing to complete the answer after the member asks his supplementary.

Mr McClelland: I thought we were doing reasonably well to begin this question today, and then the minister stands in her place and says I declined. Let's make the record very plain here. What I declined to do with the minister was negotiate a settlement—her own words. This is not a negotiable matter. I do not negotiate in terms of a young child's dying wish. The minister asked me to negotiate and I declined to participate in negotiations.

How does she square that with her so-called advocacy legislation?

Here is what the doctor says: The doctor says the government has lied and deceived. The government and the minister do not have any concern about this girl, in the words of the doctor. They want her to die before she gets home. Call her today. She will just die, probably before the minister makes a decision.

How does the minister square that in terms of how she stands in this House and talks about her advocacy legislation? She stands there and tells this House, might I say, a very liberal interpretation of what took place in our discussion. I was not going to talk about a private discussion. I did not decline. I met with her. I declined to negotiate. It is not negotiable.

Will the minister do the right thing: sign the document and give the child her dying wish? People are calling from all across the province. They are calling the Premier; they are talking to the Premier, trying to get through to his office. They are calling the minister. I know that because they are calling me as well.

The Speaker: Would the member conclude his question, please.

Mr McClelland: For the last time today, will the minister please respond and do what I know she can do and what I hope she would want to do?

Hon Ms Akande: As a matter of fact, the member was not invited to a negotiation. It was not a negotiation. I recognized the concern in his voice for this child. I recognized it and I thought as an advocate—

Mr McClelland: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I made an assertion in good faith in this House. I am not here to join in a debate with respect to the credibility of one or another. She knows she had a number of her staff there and the member for Willowdale. I ask the minister to go back and review precisely what she said. That is the operation, and those are the words she used—

The Speaker: We are obviously into a discussion about how events have been interpreted. It perhaps would be most helpful if the minister could conclude her response.

Hon Ms Akande: I do feel it is appropriate to respond to the member's statement. He spoke about being invited to a negotiation. It is not a negotiation. When a child is at risk, it is not a negotiation. When staff are involved in trying to find the very best program possible to make sure the child is not at greater risk at home, it is not a negotiation. When we put dollars into the support of children and the support of parents to make sure that child has the very best services at home, yes, indeed, it is not a negotiation. It is a heart-rending appeal and attempt to serve the needs of a child. This misrepresents—

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order, the member for York Mills.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order, the member for Willowdale. I ask the member for Willowdale to come to order.

Mr Harnick: The only people they feel sorry for are themselves, and they laugh. They sit and they smirk and they laugh.

The Speaker: I again ask the member for Willowdale to come to order.

Mr Harnick: You people are pathetic and incompetent and you couldn't care less.

The Speaker: I am asking the member for Willowdale and all other members to come to order, please.

Interjections.

Mrs Marland: The government House leader should resign. He thinks this is funny.

The Speaker: I am asking all members, including the member for Mississauga South, to come to order.

I realize, as all members in the House no doubt realize, that this is a very emotional and sensitive issue. It may be difficult to discuss it in a calm and reasoned way, but I do not know of any other way for us to do our public business properly.

1430

NOTICE OF DISSATISFACTION

Mr McClelland: Mr Speaker, on a point of privilege: You should review the record. I believe the minister used the terminology "misrepresent." I want you to review that and I am going to ask you to act accordingly.

Also, Mr Speaker, on a point of order: I at this time would give you notice, which I shall do in writing, of my dissatisfaction. I will be asking for a late show.

The Speaker: To the member for Brampton North: I am most pleased to review the record. I am sure the member will appreciate that the volume in here prevented me from hearing precisely what was said by anyone, including the minister, but I will be pleased to review the record indeed. I take it the member will file the necessary paper with the table.

BLUE-GREEN ALGAE

Mr Cousens: I have a question for the Minister of the Environment on the subject of blue-green algae, an aquatic plant that survives in sewage and organic waste. It is a highly toxic plant which has been known to kill cattle. It damages fish and fowl. It causes eye and skin irritations, muscular pains and flu-like symptoms to swimmers who ingest it.

On August 25 the Ministry of the Environment's labs confirmed the existence of blue-green algae in Musselman Lake in York region. On September 11, York region's public health department closed the lake and posted signs there because of the potential damage to human health by blue-green algae.

There was a 17-day delay from the time it was found in the Ministry of the Environment's labs to the time it was posted. Why did it take so long for the blue-green algae to be posted once the information was known, and what action is the minister taking to eliminate blue-green algae in other lakes and especially Musselman Lake here in York region?

Hon Mrs Grier: I regret that on this specific a question I do not have the answer for the member. I will certainly undertake to find out what date the posting went up on Musselman Lake, whose responsibility it was to put the posting on Musselman Lake and whatever else my ministry can tell me about blue-green algae, and I will get back to the member as soon as I can.

Mr Cousens: I am surprised that the minister does not know about it, because the people who have been involved have written her ministry a number of times, and I am told they have a meeting with her about it on Wednesday. Her mail has been delivered, so I did not think this would be a surprise question to the minister at all.

Three ministries are involved with this whole subject of blue-green algae: the Minister of Health certainly through the action that has been taken to close Musselman Lake; the Ministry of Natural Resources, I hope, is looking at the effect it is having on wildlife and animals, and now the Ministry of the Environment is involved as the minister co-ordinates the roles of the different ministries. None the less, we have great concern about Musselman Lake. The concern I also have is about every other lake across Ontario which has tested positive with blue-green algae.

I want to ask a question, and maybe the minister could postpone this with the answer she gets after she has looked into it further, but it has to do with when the Ministry of the Environment identifies the presence of blue-green algae in a lake. Would the minister give us some idea how quickly the action will be taken to inform the Ministry of Health, how quickly she will inform the Ministry of Natural Resources and how quickly she will inform local municipalities of the presence of this algae when it appears?

Hon Mrs Grier: As I said in response to the first question, I will undertake to gather as much information as I possibly can about blue-green algae and I will get back to the member.

HERITAGE CONSERVATION

Mr Winner: My question is directed to the Minister of Culture and Communications. On December 20, 1990, Bill 18 passed third reading with the unanimous consent of this Legislature. The City of London Act was drafted to confer more authority on the municipality in respect of the preservation of heritage buildings. City council would have to issue a building permit before demolition of a designated heritage building could occur. This meant that the Talbot Street Block, the best surviving example of Victorian streetscape in Ontario, could not be torn down without the approval of the municipality. Under the existing Ontario Heritage Act, the building would have been torn down by February 4 of this year after 180 days had elapsed from the date of designation.

Notwithstanding the efforts of this Legislature, London city council voted on September 16 to allow the demolition of the building for the construction of a parking lot. The demolition commenced early the next day. What active steps is the Ministry of Culture and Communications taking to protect our heritage buildings from demolition? Not only has London suffered irreparable loss, but other municipalities face the same threat of loss of their architectural and historical legacies.

Hon Mrs Haslam: I understand the member's concern because he has spoken to me on other occasions about this.

As the member knows, the current Ontario Heritage Act gives sole responsibility for the protection of heritage buildings to municipalities. The current act does not empower the government of Ontario to protect heritage buildings.

In the case of the Talbot Block, London city council failed to use the special powers given to it by the Legislature in 1990 to protect the heritage buildings. To address the obvious limitations of the current act, my ministry has developed proposals for new heritage legislation.

In answer to the member's question about steps, I would like to inform him that I have formed a ministry advisory committee on new heritage legislation so that I am able to—

The Speaker: Will the minister conclude her remarks, please.

Hon Mrs Haslam: I have formed a members' advisory committee on new heritage legislation. The advisory committee is made up of representatives from various organizations interested in new legislation, heritage conservation groups, ethnic and cultural groups, organized labour, municipalities and the development industry.

Mr Winninger: I understand that several other buildings in Ontario, including the opera house in St Catharines, may face possible demolition. How soon will these tighter controls under the heritage act be in place?

Hon Mrs Haslam: Both the ministry staff and the advisory committee I mentioned are working hard to assist in the development of the new heritage legislation. I expect new legislation ready for introduction in the fall of 1992, and I hope to receive the full co-operation of all parties in the passage of this highly important and complex legislation at that time.

AGRICULTURAL LAND

Mr Bradley: I have a question of heritage as well, but it is a different kind of heritage. In this case it is the heritage of our farm land in Ontario and specifically the farm land in the Niagara region.

After years of study and months of meetings, the Minister of Agriculture and Food will know by now that the regional council approved a new set of farm land policies that would allow hundreds of acres of Canada's best orchard land to be turned into building lots. The head of the Niagara North Federation of Agriculture, Arnold Lepp, said, "This decision is absolutely necessary to salvage what is left of the tender fruit industry and the irreplaceable lands it occupies."

I would like to ask the minister, since his leader has made an issue of this in years gone by when he was in opposition and since the New Democratic Party has stated that it is interested in saving agricultural land of a prime nature in Ontario, what he is going to do to ensure that this land does not fall into the hands of developers in the Niagara region.

1440

Hon Mr Buchanan: The regional council came up with a new land use policy, talking about allowing small lot severances as well as downsizing of existing farm land. They are talking about bringing that policy on line on November 1.

There are existing policies and procedural ways of handling severances and official plans that will be dealt with in the normal course of events, and I would say to the member that we do believe in consultation and talking to the region. As the member probably knows, I have had one meeting with members of the regional council, and I met with the farmers about two weeks ago. I think there is room for some negotiation without simply opening the whole area up to open season for severances.

In terms of allowing developers to buy up those lots, the last point in the member's question, it is a concern of mine, and certainly we will do everything we can to work with the region to see that this does not happen.

Mr Bradley: My supplementary involves keeping the farmers themselves viable and alive. The Minister of Agriculture and Food would know, since he has that particular position, and many members would know, that as soon as they start allowing severances to take place and they have urban folks moving out into the country, they have nothing but trouble. The Minister of the Environment and the Minister of Agriculture and Food and others are constantly going to have problems.

The minister announced last week a package which was supposed to assist all farmers in the province, but John Kirkby, whom he met with at Niagara-on-the-Lake, estimates that his costs will rise about twice as much as the program would provide to a person such as him just from the impact of higher minimum wages for farm help.

If the minister wishes to save the agricultural land, what further steps is he prepared to take to make farming in the Niagara region a viable operation so that those who presently occupy the land are able to have and maintain some kind of financial viability?

Hon Mr Buchanan: I think we are working on that. The announcement last week certainly targeted some monies for horticulture. Apples were mentioned in terms of providing money through a net income stabilization account type of arrangement, which was certainly directed to the Niagara area. We are concerned about the tender fruit land in the Niagara region, and we intend to come up with additional policies to support the tender fruit industry.

The farmer whom the member quoted in a newspaper clipping talked about the increases in the minimum wage. There are no increases this year because of the startup time on November 1. For next year's harvest this ministry intends to talk to the horticultural industry where there will be a few cost increases because of increases in wages, but we will deal with those concerns over the ongoing months in talks as to how we assist the horticultural industry.

CHILD CARE

Mr Jackson: My question is to the Minister of Community and Social Services. Her Premier has stood in this House and made speeches all across this province that he wanted to develop a working relationship with business and that his government was committed to that. Yet when it comes to the minister's discriminatory policies with respect to day care, it would appear that that statement is somewhat misleading.

In light of the fact that her Treasurer stood in the House last week and said there are going to be major cuts in both health and social services, can the minister please inform this House if she is prepared to change her government's offensive policies of discriminating against women workers in commercial day care centres? Is she going to listen to municipalities that are asking her to put the money into subsidized day care spaces rather than putting money into building new buildings that are only going to be half-full and compete and drive the private sector out of the day care business and support services in this province? Is the minister changing her position in light of the economic challenges that are facing this province today?

Hon Ms Akande: This government, as did the previous government, has certainly demonstrated a preference for non-profit child care. We are, however, fiscally responsible; we are, however, dealing with the constraints, and we are, however, very conscious of the fact that it is important to keep subsidized spaces out there so that people who need them, people who need to go to work and to retraining, have those spaces available.

Because of that, we had announced the 5,000 subsidized spaces and put them out throughout Ontario so that people would have them. The municipalities have picked up those spaces and have been very supportive of that. This government continues to emphasize that we do have a preference for non-profit child care.

Mr Jackson: I was not talking about the minister's announcement of a year ago; I was talking about the crisis that is facing her currently. It costs $18,000 for every space that her government assists with funding, taxpayers' funding, to open a non-profit centre. It costs $8,000 per space when the private sector invests that money in this province and creates those spaces. Those people in the commercial sector pay taxes. They put up their own risk capital. Many of these—80% of them—are women managers and owners. They put up their own homes as collateral and they are committed to expanding day care access in this province.

The minister has announced, just in April, May and June, $10.5 million in expanded capital dollars to build centres that, when completed, are sitting half-empty. The taxpayer has to pick up the operating deficits when the minister is forcing out of business a private centre that parents want.

The Speaker: And your supplementary?

Mr Jackson: So that the staff do not get uprooted and thrown out, I am asking the minister very simply, will she change her discriminatory approach with her funding preference for the non-profit sector to the exclusion of the commercial sector, when it is struggling to provide badly needed services for families in this province?

Hon Ms Akande: The member raises two issues. He raises the issue of subsidies we have provided. They are used in profit as well as non-profit spaces. He also raised the issue of our building or supporting the building of new centres or our supporting the initiation of new centres. Our support of the non-profit sector results from our belief that the non-profit sector has boards and people therefore have an opportunity to make their program and their preferences known for their children. It is much more accountable to the community.

In terms of the business dealings of the for-profit sector, when I enter a business I make it my responsibility to consider the ground on which I do so. I then make it my responsibility to address the needs of those who work for me. We support child care and people who require child care. We support them with the subsidies we provide, and they are used in the profit as well as in the non-profit sector.

AGRICULTURE PROGRAMS

Mrs MacKinnon: My question is for the Minister of Agriculture and Food. In Lambton county, farming is indeed one of the main industries, if not the main industry. Given that farming creates five jobs for every active farmer and farming is truly the basis of economic renewal, not only in Lambton county but throughout the province, can the minister tell us if the announcement by the Treasurer last week that all government ministries are participating in an adjustment of about 1% in this year's total budget is going to affect the much-needed programs and services delivered by the Ministry of Agriculture and Food?

Hon Mr Buchanan: It is a good question. In terms of when we are discussing mid-year adjustment targets, our ministry will indeed meet its target, through reducing operating costs and delaying purchases of vehicles, supplies and other equipment. We are also slowing the pace of our computer systems development; the pace of developing that system will be slowed down.

The most important part, though, of our mid-year adjustments in terms of meeting our commitment is the fact that we are not going to be cutting programs to our clients, the farmers and the food-processing industry. We will maintain all of those program dollars. The cuts will be made in other areas and will not be reflected in transfers to our clients.

The Speaker: Supplementary? New question. The member for Mississauga West.

Mr Mahoney: I note that with the time in question period having just run out, there is not even going to be an opportunity for a supplementary, which I find—

The Speaker: You may place a question, however.

Mr Mahoney: I am prepared to do that, but I would like to raise a point. Perhaps I will do that after I place my question.

1450

PROPERTY ASSESSMENT

Mr Mahoney: My question was going to be for the Premier, but once again the Premier decided to leave half-way through the business of the day, so I will direct the question to the Minister of Revenue.

I am in possession of a number of documents, letters from ministry staff to the minister, that seem to indicate her ministry staff—

Hon Mr Wildman: How could you come upon it?

Mr Mahoney: I came upon it from the person it was written to, actually, the clerk of the city of Mississauga. It is not a secret document. The government does not need to get the OPP out to investigate how I got this document. I have told members how I got it: The clerk of the city gave it to me.

The document seems to indicate that staff have taken a position that they will not support assessment adjustment requests based on airport noise in our city. In fact, they have even gone to the extent to say that if the Assessment Review Board grants any adjustments based on airport noise, the staff will appeal them to the Ontario Municipal Board and presumably even beyond that, to the courts. It appears that this decision by her ministry has prejudiced the rights of the citizens in Ontario who may wish to appeal their assessment, because the ministry has given clear direction to the board on what the decision should be.

It also appears that they have hamstrung the board's ability to be at arm's length from the ministry. They are simply telling it what to do. If this is true, the minister might as well abolish the Assessment Review Board and make all of the decisions in her office. Would the minister tell this House whether her staff have directed the Assessment Review Board and the Ontario Municipal Board in this way, whether she agrees with it and whether she is prepared to instruct her ministry staff to allow the Assessment Review Board to operate as an independent body and to return to the citizens of this province their rights under law?

Hon Ms Wark-Martyn: Yes, I do believe the citizens have the right to appeal any assessments. As members know, they do have the right to do that. I ask if the member could send me the letters he has so that I could review them and go and speak to my staff about them. I remember this issue vaguely when it came up a couple of months ago, and I would like to have the opportunity to take it back and review it with my staff.

USE OF QUESTION PERIOD

Mr Mahoney: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I wonder if you would consider reviewing something I think is of concern to all members in this House. During question period the member for London South asked the Minister of Culture and Communications a question. It took him something in the neighbourhood of six minutes to get out the answer.

Interjections.

Mr Mahoney: With the supplementary, I believe it did. The minister made an announcement about establishing a new board. I did not get it all—everyone was shouting and I could not hear it—but she should not be using question period to make ministerial announcements.

Question period is supposed to be an opportunity for the members of the opposition, on behalf of the people of Ontario, to ask questions of the government and hold it accountable. It is not to be a time when the government makes ministerial statements. I add for your edification, Mr Speaker, that we did not even have one ministerial statement today in the section that is normally reserved for that purpose. This is an irresponsible use of time in this House. I ask you to study it and give us a ruling.

The Speaker: I appreciate the point of order raised by the member for Mississauga West.

Interjections.

The Speaker: Order. I ask all members to come to order for a moment, please. The member for Ottawa West, come to order, please.

The member for Mississauga West has raised a point of order. I would be pleased to take a look at Hansard. I draw to the member's attention that the standing orders allow for a rotation of questions. Of course, regardless of which party has the floor at the time, the questions should be used to elicit information and an opportunity for a response.

I, of course, am always aware of the clock. The member will realize that. I attempt to get the members to respond quickly, both to pose their questions in an orderly way and to elicit a relatively brief response. But his point about making statements is one that I have referred to in this House on previous occasions. I will be most pleased to take a look at the record again.

PETITIONS

NURSING HOMES

Mr Daigeler: I have here a petition from some 59 residents of the Ottawa-Carleton area who have asked me to present the following petition which, despite the government's recent announcement, has not been fully responded to. The petition reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned, request that the government of Ontario immediately rectify the inequity in funding between nursing homes and homes for the aged. We strongly support the Ontario Nursing Home Association in their efforts to provide better care for nursing home residents through increased funding."

I have added my signature to the petition.

PORNOGRAPHY

Mr Carr: I am pleased to table a petition, signed by concerned residents of Oakville and the surrounding area, which reads as follows:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the undersigned oppose the presence of the adult-only video store in our community at Bronte and Speers and would like to see it and its material banned in Ontario, and more specifically in Oakville; and

"Whereas we find that such a store in our community does not promote anything of good moral value or help to build up and strengthen our children, youth, women, men and family units,

"We, the undersigned, would like to see that the licence of this store be revoked and removed permanently."

PARKING FACILITIES

Mr Wessenger: I have a petition signed by 613 residents of Ontario requesting that free parking be continued at the courthouse in Barrie and at the Barrie Jail.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

House in committee of the whole.

La Chambre en comité plénier.

EMPLOYMENT STANDARDS AMENDMENT ACT
(EMPLOYEE WAGE PROTECTION PROGRAM), 1991

LOI DE 1991

MODIFIANT LA LOI SUR LES NORMES D'EMPLOI (PROGRAMME DE PROTECTION DES SALAIRES DES EMPLOYÉS)

Resuming consideration of Bill 70, An Act to amend the Employment Standards Act to provide for an Employee Wage Protection Program and to make certain other amendments.

Suite du débat ajourné sur la motion visant la deuxième lecture du projet de loi 70, Loi portant modification de la Loi sur les normes d'emploi par création d'un Programme de protection des salaires des employés et par adoption de certaines autres modifications.

The Second Deputy Chair: When we last sat on this bill, on Thursday, September 26, debate on sections 1 to 4 was postponed. We had a deferred vote on behalf of the member for Waterloo North and another deferred vote on behalf of the member for Mississauga North, for the two opposition parties.

I believe we have a number of other amendments to section 5 standing in the names of both the Progressive Conservative Party and the official opposition.

1500

Mr Offer: Mr Chairman, I am wondering if you can provide some guidance. I understand that at the end of the last day on which we were discussing this piece of legislation, a section that had been moved by myself under clause 40b(2)(d) had been discussed. I think that is where we ended that day. I wonder if you and the table officers might be able to refresh our memories as to that.

The Second Deputy Chair: I believe an amendment by the member for Waterloo North had been debated, with the vote deferred. Also, one of your amendments to section 5 of the bill, proposed clause 40b(2)(d) of the act, had also been debated, with the vote deferred. We are now proceeding to a Progressive Conservative motion in the name of the member for Waterloo North.

Mrs Witmer moves that subsections 40b(4), (5), (6) and (7) of the act, as set out in section 5 of the bill as reprinted, be struck out.

Mrs Witmer: I would like to indicate that this is a companion amendment to our first amendment. In the first amendment we indicated that we wished to limit the definition of "wages" to "earned wages," so this would eliminate the holiday pay; obviously not vacation pay. This would eliminate the termination pay and the severance pay as well. We are concerned about the amount of money that is going to be spent on this program at this time.

We are concerned about the $9.7-billion deficit and the doubling of the provincial debt to $77 billion by 1994-95. We are very concerned about what the end cost of the wage protection program is going to be. It is projected to cost $175 million in the first 18 months. That is assuming 56,339 workers access the fund. It has also been predicted that by 1992-93—that is, if we have a return to normal economic conditions—there are going to be an additional 19,411 workers accessing the fund at a cost of $55.33 million. That cost was estimated before the average claim was increased from $3,254 to $4,200.

We are concerned that the cost of this program will be high. We feel very strongly that employees are entitled to recoup the wages that have been lost, but we would support the definition of "wages" being only "earned wages." That of course includes the overtime and the holidays.

Mr Carr: I want to support my colleague on this amendment. As has been mentioned, the major problem we are looking at without this amendment's being put in is that we would be looking at a substantially larger amount of money. I am a little bit concerned that what we are looking at really cannot be defined in terms of the extra amount this will cost the province, and as a result it is going to be very difficult to project what the amount will be.

As has been mentioned just now, over the last little while we have looked at a substantial amount of deficit in this province: $10 billion-plus. It will probably be heading closer to $11 billion or $12 billion, depending on how well the Treasurer can hold it back. As a result of that, we are going to be looking at a substantial amount of debt, going up easily to $77 billion by the end of the mandate of this government. I suspect that if they are off as much as they have been to date in the few short months since the last budget, we may be looking at substantially more. If members take a look at page 2 of the bill and go through it, subsections 40b(4), (5), (6) and (7), all the way down, I think they may be looking at a substantial amount. Again, the government is not sure how much will be put into it.

When they make their projections and they talk about the $175 million it will cost, that does not include some of the amounts that would be looked at here with the overtime pay and the termination. As we look over the last little while, the number of workers who have had to access this fund has gone up dramatically. The overall thrust of this particular amendment would be to restrict it to the wages earned.

I would feel a little more confident if the government had been able to show us what the projections were and if it had some credibility in its figures already. Unfortunately over this short period of time their projections on an economic forecast of what exactly will be paid out have been so far off that I suspect this one will be as well. In fact, over the last little while it has been dramatically off, so the total amount we are looking at for this entire package is something we do not know at this time.

As a result, I think the government of the day should be careful not to run up the amount that will be paid into this, because the amount that goes into this, as we have already heard the Treasurer say over the last few days, is going to have to come from someplace else. Whatever amount it ends up being, if it ends up being the $175 million the government says it will be, then that will be $175 million that is going to have to come from someplace else; where, we do not know. The Treasurer is going through it now. It might be the hospitals; it might be education, or it might be some of the other areas that are so critical to this province, but very clearly he is going to have to cut from someplace else to make that.

If we are talking about a substantial amount more than that, which I think we will be, then we might be looking at closer to $200 million or $225 million. When you look in percentage terms at how much they have been off in their budget projections, we unfortunately cannot trust the figures they are looking at. So this is a companion amendment to the other one we discussed earlier.

These have been some comments that I think would be important as people reflect on it. Very clearly what it boils down to is that we have a situation that is so far out of control we do not know how much this is going to cost and the last thing we need is more cost lobbed on to the people who are trying to make a business survive.

Ultimately the ones who are going to be hurt, if as a result this it costs more in terms of taxes, are the workers out there. Very clearly that has not been factored into this. What we should be doing is ensuring that the amount we spend on this program does not go up dramatically, because the amount that will have to be spent will have to come from higher taxes—payroll taxes, I suspect, is the way they would do it—or they will have to slash other programs. I think these are some things the government should look at. Hopefully the members will support this amendment.

Mr Offer: This picks up on the part of the debate we had on the last day this bill was discussed. I imagine the amendments by the honourable member are truly complementary to the first amendment to the bill put forward by the member the first day. Before I make some comments on this particular amendment, I wonder if the parliamentary assistant or ministry staff would be able to provide information as to what they anticipate the rate of recovery will be against directors of businesses under this piece of legislation.

1510

Ms S. Murdock: We can get that information for the member. The ministry staff will provide it to me, if I may give it to him later.

Mr Offer: I thank the parliamentary assistant. If that is all we are able to obtain, then we will have to be satisfied with that, but I hope that information is readily at hand in the Ministry of Labour, because it is important. It is important when we deal with not only this amendment but also the following amendments. We want to know specifically from the Ministry of Labour, as specific as it can be, what it anticipates the rate of recovery will be from the directors of businesses that are, for instance, declared bankrupt. We want to know what the rate of recovery will be in the event the government has to take action against directors.

We think that is important because of the message it sends out to business generally in the province, and we would like to hear from the ministry officials, first, that this work has in fact been done and, second, as a result of that work, what the rate of recovery will be.

Dealing with the amendment specifically, as I understand the amendment, it will in effect delete the severance-termination pay from the fund. When speaking about this earlier, I voiced some concerns that we had on this side about those deletions. The reason we have these concerns is that termination pay and severance pay, and in fact vacation pay if applicable, are areas which are determined by the Employment Standards Act. Those are areas which this Legislature has in the past seen fit to include. In fact, when the opposition was in government, we brought forward changes to the Employment Standards Act which in fact enhanced those particular rights. We should not forget that for a moment.

It is clear that if it was good enough for this Legislature to have debated these areas in the past, to have passed these areas into the Employment Standards Act, to have on occasion and on a continuing basis enhanced those particular rights, then I believe they should stand.

There are other areas in this legislation where we can deal with accountability and responsibility. I believe the business community fully understands and recognizes its obligations to its employees under the Employment Standards Act and indeed under the Ontario Business Corporations Act.

These amendments do not, in my opinion, deal with some of the concerns which were brought forward during our hearings. Though I understand the reason for the movement of these amendments, they are ones with which I am not in agreement. To do so means we are short-shrifting those rights and obligations already provided under the Employment Standards Act.

As we get in on this debate today, we have to recognize that this bill is really made up of two parts. The first part is the fund itself, how employees who are the victims of a bankruptcy or, in many ways, the recession can access this fund, can acquire reimbursement for their wages, vacation pay, termination and severance. I believe, as we heard throughout our hearings, the business community certainly recognized that right and obligation.

There is a second area to the bill, the enforcement mechanism. That is the government, through the employment standards branch, taking action against employers or directors and, as a result, an employee of that company or business receiving dollars.

We have to keep those two areas of the bill clearly distinct. I recognize that they have a certain relationship, but I believe there is the opportunity to make this bill better by changing one area of this bill which will not in effect impact on the other area.

We can make this bill better through changes which will not impact on the rights of an employee to have access to the fund. We can make amendments to this bill, we can make this bill better, while not eroding the rights given to employees under the Employment Standards Act in the areas of severance and termination or in fact vacation pay. The question will be, as we deal with this, whether the government-side members are ready and willing to agree to certain amendments. That is the question that members of the government side are going to have to ask themselves.

Earlier on, we went through a process very similar to this. Now we are commencing again. We have to realize that an awful lot of people were hurt by the recession, a lot of people who lost their jobs. There are a lot of people who had never lost a job before, but as a result of the recession and other areas and other factors, they did lose a job. They were out dollars. We can dress it up in terms of wages, vacation pay, termination and severance, but the fact of the matter is they were out dollars. They felt that and their families felt that.

That is why I am against the amendment put forward by the member, because those are areas to which the workers are entitled under the Employment Standards Act. If we agree that the principle of the legislation is designed to help those who have been and are the victims of a recession, then let us give them those rights which this Legislature has earlier provided to employees. But also let us make certain that there are ways in which this bill can be improved, that there are ways in which this bill can meet the concerns of the business community which we heard in the hearings, while at the same time not eroding the rights of those employees, those workers, who find themselves, many for the first time in their lives, out of work. The question will be whether the members of the government side are ready to accept some of these amendments.

1520

When ministry staff provide to us some of the facts and figures and estimates as to the amount of recovery against directors or employers, I believe we will find that rate of recovery is going to be very low indeed, that the amount of money the government, through the employment standards branch, will be able to acquire or be reimbursed is going to be very low and small. If that be the case—and I feel it will—then there is a tremendous opportunity here for the government. The opportunity is to provide those rights to the employees, but at the same time send out a more positive message to the business community. It will be interesting to see how the government responds.

On the last day, we spoke about areas of amendment. The government was very clear. It was not ready, it was not willing to respond. Now we will find out. Another day is here. Further amendments will be put forward, further opportunities will be given to the members of the government to take that step towards sending out a very positive message to the business community in this province, that community which creates the jobs.

It is not government that is going to create jobs. It is not government that is going to create high-paying, highly trained, good long-term jobs. It is going to be the business community; it is going to be the small business community.

I hear that some members on the other side agree with what I am saying. If that is the case, if my ears do not deceive me—and they do not—then I will expect that member, whom I have noted, to stand up in favour of the amendment, because the government members will now have the opportunity to put some substance behind some of those speeches they are making. They will have the opportunity to stand up and say, "That's the way in which it should operate."

I will be watching closely. I am somewhat heartened by the member saying that it is the small business community which creates the jobs. It is the small business community and the business community itself which creates high-paying, highly skilled, long-term jobs. It is the business community which creates the economic underpinnings of a strengthened economy and a strengthened future.

I will be looking forward to the member's support because I think there is a wonderful opportunity for that member to lead the way for his caucus, to show the way, to be a leader in terms of his caucus, saying, "I believe in the business community."

On this amendment, because these are rights which are founded under the Employment Standards Act, because these are rights which have been at length debated in this Legislature on numerous occasions, because they are rights which have been conferred upon employees as a result of committee hearings, consultation and a variety of other methods, I believe the amendment put forward by the member is one which cannot be supported. We cannot support an amendment which takes away rights which an act of this Legislature has given.

I look forward to continuing the debate. I look forward to talking about, in real ways, how this bill can be improved, how this bill could be strengthened, how this bill could be made more sensitive to all those who will have dealings with the bill.

Mrs Marland: I am happy to have the opportunity to support this amendment to Bill 70. Obviously, from all the concern that has been expressed around this province, everyone realizes what significant legislation Bill 70 is. When we look at the impact it is going to have on small business, the biggest employers in this province are small businesses.

Hon Mr Pouliot: Please protect the workers.

Mrs Marland: I hear the member for Lake Nipigon saying, "Protect the workers." The irony is that while this member of cabinet sits in his seat this afternoon spouting "protect the workers," what is it that he is actually saying? Is he really saying, protect the workers while their employers go into the ground? Do we protect the workers to the point that there are no jobs for those workers? If this member of the socialist government cabinet in Ontario today were really sincere about protecting the workers, he would make sure he protected their places of employment.

The only way you can protect workers is to protect the place where they work. It is very obvious with this kind of legislation that their jobs will not be protected, if that is this honourable cabinet minister's goal. They cannot be protected if we drive those businesses out of this province. Obviously an expanded definition of wages should include severance and termination pay. Wages are one thing. They are the cost of doing business. They are wages we are paid for our labour, no matter what it is.

Mr Mammoliti: All those workers are listening to you.

Mrs Marland: How interesting that this government has such absolute blinkers on, particularly the member who is interjecting now, the member for Yorkview. I realize he has been elected only one year. I would have thought that in one year the member for Yorkview would know a little more about what is going on in this province. I can forgive him for the fact when he was elected a year ago—I do not know the honourable member's background—perhaps he did not understand what small business does in this province.

Interjections.

Mrs Marland: Perhaps a year ago he did not understand what employment meant in this province. Perhaps a year ago this member did not understand common etiquette in this Legislature.

Interjections.

Mr Offer: On a point of order, Mr Chairman: The member for Mississauga South, quite rightly, though I disagree with the position, is putting forward her points of view on this matter and the members from the other side are interjecting to such a degree that I cannot hear exactly the points she is making. I think, Mr Chair—

Interjections.

Mr Offer: Even as I speak now, they are continuing to interject. It might be advisable that if those members have something, some small point to make, the opportunity will be there for them to stand in their places instead of interjecting. The question will be whether they have the guts to stand up and take part in this debate.

When the member for Mississauga South has finished, I will be watching to see if they have the courage to stand and make some recorded comment about this debate.

The Second Deputy Chair: Thank you. I want to remind all members that interjections are out of order. The member for Mississauga South has the floor, and you will have the opportunity. We have all afternoon.

Mrs Marland: Thank you, Mr Chairman. The comment of the member for Mississauga North is very apt when he refers to the fact that the member for Yorkview might have some small comment to make, because that is about the size of the comment that member would be able to make.

The Second Deputy Chair: Would the honourable member address the Chair, please?

Mrs Marland: Mr Chairman, I will address you.

Interjection.

Mrs Marland: Mr Chairman, I have a concern for this member for Yorkview, who, in one year, has not learned the rules of this House. He has not, in one year, learned that interjections are out of order. He is sitting in the House today and he does not even have the decency to have his jacket on. He is not even observing a code of dress in this House which I would suggest shows—

1530

The Second Deputy Chair: We are addressing Bill 70 and we are addressing some amendments to Bill 70, please.

Mrs Marland: Mr Chair, I am addressing Bill 70, but it is very difficult with the interjections from the member for Yorkview.

The Second Deputy Chair: Please attempt to ignore the interjections, and do speak through the Chair.

Mrs Marland: I do, however, expect the Minister of Transportation to know the rules of this House. He is sitting in this House making his own interjections this afternoon, which frankly none of us appreciate. It is just too bad this socialist government does not know how to behave. I hope the minister, for whose ministry I am critic, does not enter into this fray or else we will have the full theatrical display of our Shakespearean actors.

Anyway, on this amendment to Bill 70, I would like to point out to those members who are not aware—and I would guess the members of our socialist government in Ontario do not care what the Canadian Federation of Independent Business says. They have no concerns for anybody except workers, and what a narrow view. The very workers whom they would protect will be out of jobs, because this kind of legislation will drive business out of this province.

In creating such an uncertain economic climate with this kind of legislation, how can we possibly think there are going to be jobs for anybody? If they want the definition of wages to include severance and termination packages, then I say to them they have no concept of what business is about. Would they not rather have the highest wage settlement paid on a daily basis while they are working than be asking for the moon, which is what they are asking for in the kind of legislation that is before us?

This amendment is critical. This amendment is terribly important to all the people of this province, the workers and the employers. When those employers who are the largest employers in the province, namely, small business—if this socialist government thinks that small business can manage to absorb wages which include severance and termination packages, then it is more out to lunch than we thought it was.

Small business is hanging on by its fingernails in the kind of economy we have today in Ontario. How impossible it is to say to small business employers, "We want more and more for our workers." Why do they not go to Britain and see what happened to British Leyland? British Leyland went out of business. They should look at the businesses around this province that have been driven out of business by the union contracts their workers demanded.

It is critical that the amendment placed by our Progressive Conservative caucus is supported. Otherwise we are throwing this province into a further, deeper recession than it exists in today.

The Second Deputy Chair: Thank you. Anyone wishing to add comments, now is the time, please.

Mr Offer: I have a question to the parliamentary assistant or ministry officials on this point. I am wondering if they might provide to me, on the basis of the wages, vacation pay, termination and severance, what the average claim will be. It is a question I believe I asked last day, and I am wondering if the parliamentary assistant can provide that information.

Ms S. Murdock: As I stated on the last day we were in debate on this matter, the average claim is $4,200. In response to the question put before by the member for Mississauga North, we expect to recover between $440,000 and $380,000 in the 1992-93 fiscal year from directors. The member did not ask about employers, he asked about directors. If federal legislation is introduced, we expect then that the recovery from directors will be between $230,000 and $200,000 in the 1992-93 fiscal year. Generally, as a rule of thumb, you could probably use the figure of 40 cents per $100 which would be recovered from directors.

Mr Offer: On the basis of that response—I think this is crucially important information—the ministry is expecting to receive, as a result of the $175-million wage protection plan, approximately $440,000 as a claim-over from directors?

Ms S. Murdock: Yes. They would get $440,000, on average, from directors in situations where a claim has been made under the employment standards branch. Either the employer could be solvent or insolvent and subsequently they would be able to get that from directors. Out of the $175 million that is provided by the consolidated revenue fund, there would be a recapture of $440,000 from directors.

Mr Offer: My mathematics, poor as it may be, says that if there is a $175-million fund of which $440,000 is recoverable, that is nowhere near 40 cents on the dollar; it is probably somewhere in the vicinity of four cents on the dollar. It is a very small amount of money which is going to be recovered through directors as a result of the fund. The parliamentary assistant might want to clarify that matter. I can see she is nodding affirmatively, so I will allow her to do that at this point.

Ms S. Murdock: Since the directors, as the member is aware, are not liable for severance and termination, they are only liable for what they are presently liable for under the Ontario Business Corporations Act, that is why the amount does not jibe with the member's calculation.

1540

Mr Offer: Again on this point, there was a statement by the Treasurer last week that $85 million would be delayed. I am going to read actually from the words of the statement. This is from Hansard: "...$85 million as a result of the late startup of the wage protection plan due to a delay in legislative approval." I have two questions on that statement. The first is, where is the $85-million saving? The second I will reserve until the member answers the first.

Ms S. Murdock: The $85 million is in the fiscal year 1991-92 in which $90 million of the fund would be spent, and the saving would be because it would not be spent in this fiscal year, it would be spent in the next fiscal year.

Interjection.

Ms S. Murdock: The way it is working out in this legislation as it is, with the debate that is going on, it probably will not even be a law then anyway.

Mr Offer: I understand the Treasurer is using the legislative process in this way, but the fact of the matter is, when we talk about this bill, we all recognize it is retroactive to October 1. Here we are on this date of October 7, and it is not October 1, 1991, it is October 1, 1990. I am not certain why the Treasurer is cutting the funds from this plan when it is, in the words of the bill, retroactive to a time period in excess of 12 months ago, October 1, 1990. I wonder if the parliamentary assistant or ministry staff will be able to comment on that and be able to assure us that there is not some sleight of hand going on here, that an amount of money, $175 million, which has been allocated retroactive to October 1, 1990, has in fact been effectively reduced.

My second question is—and this is something I guess I am just sensitive about—"due to a delay in legislative approval" connotes some blameworthiness on this side. Maybe I am just sensitive to that, but if the Minister of Labour believes there should not have been public hearings, if the Minister of Labour believes that hearing from the business community, hearing from employees across this province, was not important, then let us hear that from the parliamentary assistant. If that is not the case, if as the minister's speeches indicate, he believes there is a necessity for consultation, then where was the delay?

The minister introduced this bill. He announced this bill in October 1990, at the same time that Verity was allowed to leave this province and have a reduced employment level. That was the same day, the same table, the same announcement upon the wage protection fund. He did not introduce the bill until the spring session. There was no opportunity on this side of the House to have second-reading debate or committee hearings until the summer recess.

I would like to know why the Treasurer now feels there is some delay, because if there is to be a delay, it is a delay caused by the Minister of Labour. He announced that this was going to be a piece of legislation. He could have introduced this bill in November; he could have introduced the bill in December. We could have had public hearings over the winter. The bill could then have been brought forward in last spring's session for committee of the whole House, third-reading debate and possible passage. I am one who can sort of count the members on both sides of the House. Where was the delay and why did the Treasurer use those words?

Ms S. Murdock: I will respond to the last portion first. We were the only committee—I say this proudly—that worked so well together that we finished clause-by-clause in the summer. The Treasurer used those words because the expectation was that when the House opened, we would be able to get this bill introduced for third reading. As we had already debated it fairly extensively in committee, we would be able to debate fairly quickly in the House, if necessary at all, and it would become law.

At that point the Treasurer expected that the bill would be legislation by the second week of October; we were hoping. At present people have applied to the fund for some $60 million, but by the time those are processed and so on—as we all know, sometimes you operate that although the application is made at this time, you may not receive the money and there is no actual cash flow. I am not an accountant, but I know you can hold moneys for certain periods of time, and on that basis $90 million could be "delayed." Basically it means there is not actual cash flowing, despite the retroactivity.

Hopefully we will get back to the amendment before us, but in response to the comment of the member for Mississauga North with regard to the delay, we brought in the bill as soon as we could. As we all know, the original bill was significantly amended because there were 40 to 50 substantive changes and amendments before we even went into committee to debate.

Mr Offer: I have a question dealing with the $60 million of claims the government has received and has somewhere in the Ministry of Labour. I have a letter from the Minister of Labour, who states that 55,000 workers are going to be helped by this plan in the first 18 months. Using their figure of $4,200 as an average claim, that would be something over $200 million; in fact, it would be getting close to $250 million. I wonder how the member can square her figure of $60 million with the minister's letter to me, of September 20, 1991, which states 55,000 workers would be helped during the first 18 months of operation.

Ms S. Murdock: As the member has already stated, we expect that in the first 18 months 55,000 workers may apply to the fund for assistance, but at present about 18,000 have applied. So far it has worked out that we will owe about $60 million when it is all paid out. We may not get 55,000. Our expectation is that we have erred on the side—hopefully, we will err on a lesser amount. That will be great if that is the case. That will mean fewer workers are doing without moneys they have earned.

1550

Mr Mammoliti: I have to respond to the member for Mississauga South. She made some comments earlier that I am particularly offended by. She wanted to know my background. My background is as a worker. I wore boots. I shovelled with my hands the stuff she dished out today quite extensively. I do not appreciate the comment she made. She gave me the indication she is not in favour of workers and rights for workers.

I had to say this. I had to stand up and tell you how appalled I am and how appalled, I am sure, about her comments today are all those construction workers and all those factory workers out there who wear the boots and do that hard work.

I could be wrong. Maybe I misread her, but I got the indication that she was not in favour of a worker and that her sole interest in this case is for the owners of the companies and profit. Frankly, I am a little appalled at that. I think we should be working together. I believe this government she has referred to is doing its best to try to work together with everybody and treat the workers as fairly as possible.

I know we are doing that. I will close by saying that I speak for all the workers who are watching out there today. Frankly, I apologize for the member's comments, because I think they are ludicrous, they are ridiculous.

Ms S. Murdock: I want to respond to the actual amendment, now that it seems the debate is done. As I stated earlier, we brought in a number of amendments prior to bringing the bill into committee. In those amendments the termination and severance liability of directors was removed. There is no difference between what we are suggesting under the employee wage protection plan and what presently exists under the Employment Standards Act, except that I think it makes enforcement a lot more likely and certainly easier and that workers will be guaranteed up to a maximum of $5,000, even if some are owed more than that.

To speak to the member's specific point, as we know, the $175 million is guaranteed under the consolidated revenue fund for the first 18 months. Unfortunately, we cannot guarantee for the member for Oakville South that it is going to be any higher, or make a prediction that it is going to be higher or lower. We just hope it will be lower as the economy improves. We are not expecting the amounts to go up dramatically.

With regard to the member for Mississauga South, and as the member for Mississauga North no doubt will be happy to hear, we recognize that small businesses make up the backbone of this province and that 63% of all workers come from small businesses in this province. But these amendments and subsections 40b(4), (5), (6) and (7) are not going to affect them, because it will be the insolvent small businesses which will not have the money to pay anyway. That money will come out of the consolidated revenue fund or the employee wage protection program, so the effect on small business is not as dire as predicted by the members for the opposition.

The Second Deputy Chair: This ends debate on the amendment brought forth by the member for Waterloo North. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry?

An hon member: Defer.

The Second Deputy Chair: If we are going to defer, we have to have five people stand and then defer, as we did earlier in the debate. No.

Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry?

All those in favour will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion, the nays have it.

Motion negatived.

The Second Deputy Chair: We now proceed to a further amendment, as proposed by the Progressive Conservative Party.

Mrs Witmer moved that section 40e of the act, as set out in section 5 of the bill, be amended by adding the following subsection:

"(1a) Despite subsection (1), an employee is eligible for compensation from the program only where his or her employer is bankrupt, is insolvent for an extended period or chronically fails to pay the employee's wages."

Mrs Witmer: This deals, of course, with the employee's eligibility for compensation from the program. As I have said earlier, we certainly recognize the right of all employees, whether you refer to them as employees or workers, to wages earned. We are concerned, however—and this was a concern was brought to our attention during the discussions on Bill 70 this summer and in a paper—and certainly some of the small business people in this province are concerned that as it is presently printed, there will be recourse to the wage protection fund even in the event of a small business failing to meet its payroll due to a temporary cash flow problem.

If there were an order to pay from the employment standards branch this could prematurely bring in other creditors and, as a result of this action taking place, the fund could inadvertently force small companies into bankruptcy.

We would very much like the government to consider this amendment. We feel it is an amendment that will protect jobs. It will prevent premature recourse to the fund and could prevent the forcing of small companies into bankruptcy and as a result it certainly could save jobs.

I think we in this House all agree that what we are most concerned about at this time in the province is the effort and the compromise that are needed in Ontario. We need to do everything possible to save jobs for workers who are losing their jobs daily. We continue to hear about companies that are moving south or out of this province to other provinces. If we support this amendment, I think in many ways we could be saving some small businesses from being forced into bankruptcy prematurely.

Mr Carr: I guess this particular amendment comes from the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, which was concerned about some of the provisions of Bill 70 during some of the hearings. It is kind of ironic that it was the federation that was involved with this because, as we know, it was only last week that the survey of the federation's members came in, talking about some of the concerns they have with this provincial government. One of the big concerns voiced was that of small businesses over this particular bill; for those who have not had the chance, I encourage them to take the opportunity to look at it. It is not lost on some of the small businesses that it will jeopardize some of the very perilous situations some of them are in.

1600

For those members who remember, the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology said he was listening to business and was going to be concerned about the concerns of some of the people. They said very clearly that the reason they were thinking of leaving this province is this provincial government, notwithstanding the fact that the Premier then came and said, "No, it isn't because of that; it's because of other reasons." The fact is that in a survey done by members, where they can tick off the reasons they are concerned and thinking of moving from this province, one of the big reasons is this piece of legislation and some of the other actions of this provincial government. This amendment will attempt to get some of the concerns on the table.

These are businesses that have in the neighbourhood of 10 or 15 employees. They are not the large multinational corporations that can withstand more pressures on them; these are the small operations that are finding it difficult to compete. If the Premier and the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology really believe some of the words that were said in the House last week, they will take a very hard, close look at this, although I suspect that the Minister of Labour has won the battle, that the fight has already been won by him at the cabinet table and that the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology has lost this battle.

As you look at the amendment, the purpose is very clear: to ensure that some of the small businesses remain viable. With the precarious situation many businesses find themselves in now, it is ironic that this government could inadvertently hurt those very people it wants to help. What may happen if some of these amendments do not go through is that the piece of legislation may come in and inadvertently force some of the small businesses, particularly, to close prematurely in order to bring in the creditors.

We continually hear the other side, even today on some of the justice issues, saying: "We want to listen to the other side. We want to hear. We're listening to businesses." Well, now is the chance to put it into action. If the members opposite do not implement any of this, all it will be is hollow rhetoric in this Legislature.

This is a chance to take some amendments that have been proposed in good faith by the opposition in consultation with the community. I quite frankly am one of the individuals who will say, if some of these amendments are not approved by the government of the day: "Stop saying you're listening. Stop saying you care about the small businesses." If some good amendments are brought through as a result of the consultation process, now is the chance to implement some of them. This is one that is very simple. It simply says that we do not want to force any companies to close prematurely. We want to give small business in particular a chance to work things out.

What may happen is they may force some of the businesses to close prematurely by forcing them out. This would be a proposed subsection of 40e, when you look at the piece of legislation that would be entered there, that would attempt to protect some of those small businesses that are fighting every day. What essentially happens now is that some of them are finding it difficult to meet the demands on small businesses today, whatever they be, whether it be taxes or the regulations that have been imposed on them higher than anywhere else, and quite often they also have the banks hounding them. If anybody is aware of what transpires when a company is heading down some of the difficult roads that many businesses face, there is a tremendous amount of pressure from the banks and from suppliers, as well as from the employees. We do not need added pressure put on them by the government, which may inadvertently hurt those very people we want to help.

It comes back to the fundamental principle. What a government should be doing is ensuring the prosperity of the small and medium-sized businesses in this province, and indeed the large ones as well. We often think large business is a bad word in this province, but it is not. Those produce jobs in record numbers as well, so it is all businesses. It is not a bad word in this province to be of any size.

What we have attempted to do is take some of the input from those very people who are saying, "We're thinking of leaving." The very ones who came and did that survey are the ones who, notwithstanding the Premier and notwithstanding what the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology said the other day about the reasons, are telling us very clearly that one of the reasons they are thinking of leaving is because this piece of legislation, on top of all the other regulations and taxes in this province, may drive them out.

The survey was not done as a result of any of the opposition parties. It was done by a group of businesses that took a look at their own members, and those members have voiced their concerns. I think that if they did not get a chance to take a look at this amendment beforehand, they may want to reflect upon what business is saying. One of the reasons businesses are potentially leaving is that they are not being heard by this government. If the members opposite will take a little bit of time to reflect on this amendment, I think they will be well served by that.

I think, however, that this one is like some of the other amendments that have been brought forward. I do not think it will go too far. I would hope the Minister of Industry, Trade and Technology and some of his parliamentary assistants, particularly the member who has responsibility for the small business community as part of his parliamentary assistantship, would be able to voice some of the reasons they will not be supporting this amendment, if they choose not to. I suspect from the look on the other side that they will not.

What we have is the business community saying: "This is a piece of legislation we are a little bit concerned about. Here are a few amendments that we think will make it a little bit easier on our members, and this government of the day has a responsibility to take a long, hard look at it."

Mr Harnick: I was interested a moment ago when the member for Sudbury stated the statistic of how many people are employed in small business. I think she said some 60%—

Interjection.

Mr Harnick: She tells me 63%. This amendment is strictly directed to that 63% of the workforce. It is a small amendment. It is only really three and a half lines long. It is a three-and-a-half-line amendment that can go to protect all those small businesses that employ 63% of Ontario's workforce.

The amendment is directed at a small businessman who is attempting to take the risks and keep his business solvent. It is attempting to protect that businessman and to protect the viability of his business. If the viability of his business is protected, then the workforce he employs is going to be protected. That is why I think this is an important amendment for the parliamentary assistant to listen to and consider. I hope she will consider it.

In terms of what this amendment does, let's take the example of a small businessman who has a major customer, and for whatever reason the end of the month comes and that major customer decides it does not need to buy that small businessman's product any more. All of a sudden that small businessman is in jeopardy and his business is in jeopardy and all the people he employs are in jeopardy. Come the next month when the cash flow has slowed down, he may well not have enough money to meet the payroll of the individuals who work for him. Those individuals who work for him may be the most understanding individuals of all, and they may say, "We want to save our jobs and we want you to be able to continue to employ us and to meet the payroll." Those individuals may wish to give the employer the extra time he needs.

Unfortunately this wage protection program will not give that extra time. As soon as the person is unable to meet the payroll, this wage protection program may kick in. As a result of that program kicking in, it may mean that other creditors of this business are going to petition the business into bankruptcy. How does that in any way help those employees?

This is in essence a good program. It is a worthwhile program to pursue, but let's not pursue it in such a manner that it is going to force people prematurely to see their businesses go down the drain. This very simple amendment is something that can protect that small businessman and those employees who are employed by him.

1610

It is interesting. Everybody makes light of these amendments and this process. If this process is taken seriously, we should look at whom we are protecting here. In this amendment, we are protecting the small business and we are also protecting the individuals who work for that small business who want the opportunity to continue in the employ of that small businessman.

It is a very interesting phenomenon that when someone owns a small business, he gets to know the people who are working for him and generally gets to know the families of those employees. No one is more concerned about the families and the individuals than the small businessman. The small businessman is someone who plays a very large societal role. This amendment takes a look at the relationship that should exist between the small businessman and the employee. I think it is an amendment that can help everyone very much.

I strongly urge the parliamentary assistant and the Minister of Labour and the other members here today to take a look at this amendment, because it in no way abrogates the intent of this bill. In fact, it would make this bill a much better bill in that it would protect the businesses that continue to employ 63% of the workforce in Ontario.

I urge the parliamentary assistant to convey to the minister, who is not here today, the importance of this amendment. I certainly applaud the member for Waterloo North, who has proposed the amendment, because it is a very sensible amendment. It should be passed. It will not in any way abrogate the bill that is before us right now; it will make it much better.

Mr Offer: This is an important amendment in so far as it clearly indicates that the principle of the bill is not what was originally stated. I think all members of this Legislature recognize that when this bill was initially announced in October 1990, it really was in response to those many people who had lost their jobs as a result of what was then the recession flaming throughout this province.

As we know, there was a great deal of sympathy for the need for this type of bill. There was a great deal of support for the principle, about those who lose their jobs as a result of the recession, for which they are in no way responsible, and who as a result of losing their jobs have dollars owed to them, be it in terms of severance pay, wages or vacation pay, very much found within the Employment Standards Act. The principle that says, "We are going to create and pass a bill that protects the $1,000, $2,000 or $3,000 owed to you," is something about which I think a lot of the members of this Legislature felt: "That doesn't sound too bad. It sounds right. It sounds proper."

But this bill is not that. I do not think anybody in this Legislature should think this bill just is that principle, because this bill is much more than that. It is much broader. It is much wider in its scope. It is almost intrusive in terms of its legislation. The amendment the honourable member for Waterloo North has brought forward is one that I must say I have concern with, but on the other hand it brings to the fore the fact that this bill and its principle are much wider than what was initially indicated.

